Fine Exibits And Fast Speeding At Belleville Fall Fair

Fine Weather Favored Opening Day But Attendance Not as Large As Anticipated on Account of Counter-Attractions and other Reasons— Good Program of Races— High Standard of Exhibits

Belleville Fair for 1918 opened yesterday, Labor Day, and the attendance was by no means what the management anticipated. Various causes were responsible for this fact. Many citizens and residents in the vicinity took advantage of the holiday to visit Toronto exhibition which is in full swing, and there were counter attractions of considerable magnitude held at other places nearby notably at Trenton. While the management of the fair no doubt did considerable to make the fair a success it was noticeable and commented upon by many that there were not the attractions which might have been conducive to a larger attendance. The principal feature of interest to the majority of those present were the two speeding events, which were well contested. The exhibits were very good. Considerable disappointment was felt by many owing to the fact that the display of war souvenirs which was to have been made by the Returned Soldiers' War Display Company of Beaverton was not upon the grounds. This was no fault of the management as a fire at Beaverton was responsible for the destruction of many of the exhibits.

THE EXHIBITS

By noon hour the exhibits were nearly all placed in their proper places, ready for the inspection of visitors. Upon entering the main gate and proceeding in a westerly direction, the first building to arrest the attention of the visitors was that where the poultry was shown. This department was under the auspices of the Belleville Poultry Association and the display made was a creditable one. Chickens of all varieties were to be seen in addition to other fowls.

The next building, which is the main structure, is utilized for various exhibits. On the north side the greater portion of the space was taken up with displays of fruit, grain and root crops and some excellent samples of the soil were to be seen. The south side of the building was devoted entirely to the display of ladies' work, which was most creditable. The handiwork of the exhibitors was greatly admired, and especially by the fair sex. Fine art work was also shown here. The display of roots was one of the best seen in this section for some time.

Passing from the main building along the western side of the grounds the stalls for horses were seen, the entries this year were not as large as former years, but the stock shown was of a superior quality. Mr. N. Vermilyea and Sons were among the chief exhibitors, with a fine showing of thoroughbred stock. A number of fine carriage horses were to be seen.

The display of cattle, sheep and swine whilst not large was of a superior quality and the animals shown were much admired.

About the grounds were erected a number of booths, which were fairly well patronized, especially that of the War Workers of West Belleville. An attractive booth was that of the C. W. C. A. where contributions for subscriptions for the Naval League were received.

FAIR OPENED

Shortly after 1 o'clock the fair was formally opened by His Worship Mayor Platt, who made a brief, but appropriate address. He stated that he was glad to welcome all to the fair and especially the farmers, who had, and were doing much toward winning the war by greater production. They had done wonderful things in providing supplies for the allies and the prosecution of the war. His Worship also referred briefly to the merchant seamen and the part they were doing for the protection of supplies shipped.

Rev. Rural Dean Swayne, Rector of Christ Church, being called upon made an earnest appeal for the Navy League. Were it not for the existence of the merchant marine it would not have been possible to have prosecuted the war as has been done. They have protected vessels carrying not only supplies but those carrying soldiers. To them we owe a great debt of gratitude. These men have no patriotic Fund to draw from and their allowance was only 12 pounds per month. 300,000 of these men were risking their lives for the merchant commerce. This week an appeal was being made to the people of Canada for the dependents of these brave men and he hoped the response would be made for such a worthy cause.

Mr. Wm. Carnew spoke a few words of welcome and stated that all hoped by this time next year the Germans would be licked and the terrible war ended.

SPEEDING EVENTS

This was next on the programme and the first event called was the 2.18 class in which there were four entries, namely Miss Charlotte M, owned by Mr. J. Lafferty, of Belleville; Dick Bryson, owned by G. Powell, Belleville; Pathseeker, owned by W. Smith, Belleville and Mantalvo, owned by W. Parks, Belleville. It was anticipated by many that Dick Bryson would be the winner and such proved to be the case as he took three straight heats, but was closely pressed by Charlotte M. The summary:

| | | | |
| Dick Bryson | 1 | 1 | 1 |
| Miss Charlotte M | 2 | 2 | 2 |
| Mantalvo | 3 | 3 | 4 |
| Pathseeker | 4 | 4 | 3 |

Time—2.17 1-4; 2.17 1-2; 2.17 1-2.

In the second half of the third heat Mantalvo, which was driven by Mr. Parks, stagered and fell on the turn to the eight mile post. Mr. Parks was thrown from the sulky, but fortunately escaped injury. The animal was not injured but the sulky was somewhat damaged.

2.30 CLASS

There were but three entries for this event and four heats were necessary to decide the winner. The entries were Danger, owned by Dr. Alvea, of Colborne; Bobby Hill, owned by M. Wade, Belleville, and Bobby Patch, owned by Wm. Orr, Belleville. In the first heat Bobby Patch passed under the wire first, but in the next three heats Danger won handily. The summary is as follows:

| | | | | |
| Danger | 2 | 1 | 1 | 1 |
| Bobby Patch | 1 | 2 | 2 | 2 |
| Bobby Hill | 3 | 3 | 3 | 3 |

Time 2.20; 2.19 1-2; 2.19 1-2; 2.25 1-2.

Mr. Wm. Carnew was the starter, and the judges were Mr. T. H. Thompson, M.P., for East Hastings, Ald. Curry of this city, and Dr. U. E. Simmons, of Frankford. Mr. H. B. Stock was the time keeper.

SPECIAL PRIZES

Mr. Charles Mills, of Thurlow Township, won Mr. W. C. Mikel's time race event, which was $5 cash. All competitors were compelled to drive once around the track and the time set was 2 minutes. Times pieces were taken away from the drivers so that they would be unable to time themselves. Mr. Mill's time was 2 minutes and 4 seconds.

Miss Reid of Sidney, won R. McCormick and Sons' prize of photographs for the best girl driver 18 years of age.

NOTES

The 15th Regimental Band under the leadership of Bandmaster Robinson was upon the grounds and rendered a programme of suitable music.

During the afternoon nothing whatever occurred to mar the proceedings.

Airplanes from Camp Mohawk hovered about the grounds attracting the attention of all spectators. One of the machine in which two aviators were seated, interested the spectators by making nose dives and looping the loop. The machine at one time came with 100 feet of the ground making it possible to discern the occupants who waved their hands to the crowd below, which salutation was acknowledged.

NEWSPAPERS HIT AGAIN.

Publicity Magazine.

All printing paper used to print newspapers is bought at the war prices f.o.b. at the mill, so the two recent increases in railway freight rates hit the newspaper publishers new blows. Besides paper and ink there are some one hundred and fifteen items of expense in publishing a newspaper. Of these, thirty have risen over two hundred per cent. twenty-five others have risen 150 per cent., eighteen others have risen 100 per cent., forty-two have risen over 75 per cent. Over 2,500 papers have gone out of existence, while over three hundred have raised their selling price. If the war continues another year every paper in all the countries will have gone out of existence, or have raised its rates.

CITY OF LENS EVACUATED BY ENEMY

BRITISH CAPTURED 10,000 PRISONERS

ENEMY DRIVEN BACK IN DEFEAT

BRITISH TROOPS ADVANCING ON TWENTY-MILE FRONT GAINED FOUR MILES OF TERRITORY THIS MORNING AND TOOK MANY PRISONERS — "EXTREMELY INTERESTING SITUATION DEVELOPING — CANADIANS TAKING ACTIVE PART IN BRITISH ADVANCE.

Special Despatches to The Intelligencer, Canadian Press, Limited.

LONDON, Sept. 3.—The British have captured the city of Lens. The town of Quecant also has been taken. Lens was evacuated by the Germans and the British are moving in. More than ten thousand prisoners were taken by the British yesterday. Additional prisoners were taken this morning.

In their push beyond the Drocourt-Queant line the British have advanced to a point just to the west of Buissy, two and one-half miles northeast of Queant. The British also hold Doignies, Velu, Bertincourt, and Rocquigny. An advance to a maximum depth of four miles on a twenty-mile front was effected this morning.

BIG DEVELOPMENTS PENDING.

In Flanders British forces have captured the town of Wulverghem, two miles southeast of Kemmel. Contrary to expectations the enemy have not reacted heavily with a view to the recapture of the Queant-Drocourt line, but has left the British in undisturbed possession of it. The British found Doignies and Velu unoccupied. The situation in the southern part of the battlefield is said to be extremely interesting but nothing more can be said for the moment.

CANADIANS ACTIVE IN NEW ADVANCE.

The British captured ten thousand prisoners in yesterday's advance and are taking many more this morning. New British lines have been advanced two and a half miles from Queant. Canadians are active in this new advance.

MANY VILLAGES CAPTURED.

With the British Army in France, Sept. 3.—(Associated Press)—In heavy fighting last night beyond the Drocourt-Queant line the British are reported to have made further progress on a front of 13,000 yards. The villages of Saudemont and Recourt, more than a mile and a half beyond Dury, the capture of which was announced last night, are reported to have been taken today. The village of Etaing, two miles north of Dury, fell late yesterday at about the same time as the British further south were capturing Villers-le-Cagnicourt. These captures were effected after most bitter fighting.

ENEMY RAIDS REPULSED.

PARIS, Sept. 3.—(Official)—Artillery actions on the Somme front and further south between the Oise and the Aisne are reported today. The enemy made big raids along the Vesle River, but they were repulsed with heavy loss.

ANOTHER BIG HUN RETIREMENT.

LONDON, Sept. 3.—Newspapers here believe that the breaking of the famous Drocourt-Queant switch line means another big retirement by the Germans as it was their only defence.

MOST IMPORTANT MOVEMENT.

French Army Headquarters, Sept. 3.—Reuter's correspondent cables that General Mangin's yadvance between the Ailette and the Aisne Rivers is the most important so far. He has reached to the Ailette Canal du Nord and Bethincourt, and has also advanced one mile to the south of Leuilly. The line now passes through the plateau of Bethincourt to the north of Crouy on the Soissons-Maubeuge road. The centre of the plateau is now cleared of the enemy.

Great fires are observed in the region of the Vaixaillon valley to the north of Laffaux. These are probably enemy dumps abandoned and destroyed in retreat.

DEFEAT FLOWER OF HUN ARMY.

The French and Americans met around Juvigny the elite of the German army—Grenadiers of the Prussian Guard, picked storming battalions and hardy mountain infantry. They defeated them decisively, taking an enormous death toll from their ranks and sending a goodly number of captives to the rear.

BRITISH OCCUPY LENS.

LONDON, Sept. 3.—The British have occupied Lens, Wulverghem, Queant; Tromville, Doignies, Bertincourt, Rocquigny. This reports an advance to a maximum depth of four miles on a twenty mile front this morning.

BERLIN, via London, Sept. 3.—South and east of Arras the British have succeeded with strong superior forces in throwing back our Queant line on both side of the Arras-Cambrai heights.

CANADIANS CARRIED ALL BEFORE THEM.

LONDON, Sept. 3.—General Haig's official statement says: "Undeterred by the strength of the enemy's defensive organization the Canadians, assisted admirably by British troops on the sides, carried all before them.

WAR SUMMARY.

The Drocourt-Queant defensive lines have been carried on a front of six miles from near Etaing to Cagnicourt south of the Scarpe by the Canadian Corps and English troops, operating in co-operation with the Canadians. No more important news than this has come from the battlefield since the Allied armies began to move forward in mid-July. The enemy was warned by the advance of Currie's men to within a thousand yards of his greatest defensive position between Cambrai and the Belgian coast that an attempt was to be made to breach the trench system, and so turn the main Hindenburg line. He brought up to the threatened sector several divisions of the finest men in the Germany army—Guards, Marines, Bavarian mountaineers—but in a few hours' fighting, after the bugles blew for the assault at five o'clock yesterday morning, the Canadians overran and occupied the Drocourt-Queant lines, and advancing to the east of them occupied the villages of Dury, Villers-les-Cagnicourt and Cagnicourt. Today they stand facing the last bit of high ground between them and Cambrai, which is slightly less than ten miles distant along the Arras-Cambrai highway.

The victory was won against an enemy who, the official report says, "was holding his trenches in strength, and opposed determined resistance to the advance. On the whole front of the assault this resistance was broken, with great loss to the enemy." On the left of the Canadians English troops fought their way forward through the German defences northeast of Eterpigny, toward the marshes of the Sensee, while on the right of the attack English and Scottish troops pressing forward in the direction of Queant, captured many strongly fortified positions, including the village of Noreuil. If the footing won within the German defensive system is used as a "jumping-off" place for further attacks, Cambrai may fall before long. It seems improbable that the enemy will attempt to base his defensive system south of Queant on the Hindenburg line, which has been turned from the north and laid open to attack from the rear as a result of yesterday's battle.

SPLENDID PHOTOPLAY PROGRAMMES AT BOTH THEATRES

If you missed Monday night's performance at Griffin's don't miss Tuesday or Wednesday, because if you do you are missing two fine pictures with two excellent stars that are both exceptionally pleasing in their picture, the first was George M. Cohan in his newest picture, in fact he only makes two pictures a year, and this is the second one to be sent out, of New York; the name of the picture is "Hit the Trail Hilliday" and Mr. Cohan intimates Billy Sunday, the well known Temperance advocate, in the picture he plays the part of a bar tender that plays the game straight and refuses to sell liquor to youths or incompetents for this he is one day fired and drifts into a Country Town seeking employment. The town is dominated by a brewing element until the drys get into action, and they are sixes and sevens when Hiliday appears on the scene, he meets the daughter of the leader of the prohibition party and from this point in the story their is many interesting events happen that all tend to show that prohibition of the liquor traffic was the best blessing that could have befallen the present generation and the generations to come, the story is logical and sensible and above all interesting from start to finish

Along with this photoplay was a News Film and the usual good chapter of the Eagle's Eye serial, and another good picture with Vivian Martin in the leading part, it was called "Unclaimed Goods" and is written in a very humorous style. It is a western picture with plenty of western flavoring, composed of bad men, gun play and other stuff so dear to the westerners of by-gone days, and which the present generation have seldom seen, but of which they have heard so much. The story is what might be called a novelty in as much as the theme takes a great many twists and at last finishes up with the natural outcome to all romances of love whether in life or on the stage or screen or book, and that is the hero married the heroine and they both lived happily ever after, this programme can be recommended and it is quality plus quantity at the usual admission prices.

At the Palace, Big Bill Russell is appearing in a fine picture called "My Fighting Gentlemen" and the usually good chapter of the "Woman in the Web" series and a good comedy completed a good programme of pictures.

Don't Trust in Luck

Success does not come by chance. The untrained, unskilled worker, who makes no preparation for his work and hopes just by good luck to win distinction and advancement, is doomed to failure because he lacks the essential qualification.

Training that imparts exact, religible knowledge is what is needed to make natural ability and honest effort productive of success. In business for example, success is within easy reach of those who are thoroughly trained in a knowledge of business principles, business practices and office work, including bookkeeping and stenography. Thorough, practical business education is in greater demand now than ever before; it is a necessity to those entering business life and is of very great value in the professions, in farming or any other occupation.

Ontario Business College training has placed many thousands of graduates on the road to success; it will do the same for any earnest, ambitious boy or girl, man or woman. Students may enter any business day in the year. ow is the time to efiwork the year. Now is the best time to start.

Orangemen Who Have Fallen In Battle

Memorial Meeting in Christ Church Commemorated Sacrifice of Members of Orange Order

In pursuant to the resolution unanmously adopted at the last annual meeting of the Loyal Orange Grand Lodge for Ontario East, that the first Sunday in September be commemorated as a memorial day in memory of brave brothers, who have made the supreme sacrifice, the day was observed in Belleville by the brethren of Benjamin Lodge No. 274 and Belleville Lodge No. 2519. In the evening the members marched to Christ Church, where an impressive and appropriate service was held, conducted by the Rector, Rev. Bro. Rural Dean Swayne, assisted by Rev. Bro. A. L. Geen. A large congregation was present. Three members of the local lodges have given their lives for King and Country ,namely Bro. Capt. W. H. Hudson, of Belleville Lodge and Bros. Privates Fred Cobourne and Ernest C. Brown, of Benjamin Lodge, whose names were read out by the Record. Special prayers were said and the hymns were in keeping with the occasion. During the service while the congregation remained standing, Mrs. Col. Campbell, organist, played the "Dead March in Saul."

The folowing members of Benjamin Lodge are at present on active service:

Privates Stanley Brown, J. R. Carr, Robt. J. McCoy, Willis Denison, Arthur McCoy, Geo. H. Barlow, Ernest G. Fleming, Chas. W. Thompson, Braden Anderson, Fred Clark, Norman Price, Ernest A. V. Carr.

The members of Belleville Lodge, who enlisted, a number of whom are on active service were as follows:

Lt.-Col. A. P. Allen, Lt.-Col. M. K. Adams, Major A. C. McFee, Major Proctor, Captain W. H. Hudson, Captain Fay Wills, Capt. B. L. Hyman, Capt. Percy Geen, Lieut. H. A. Fish, Lieut. E. A. Geen, Bomb. Ed. Blaylock, Private A. Ray, Private Roger Porter, Wireless Operator W. Harold Reid Private Jose, Jacobs, H. A. Rogers and R. A. Rogers.

The Rector, Rev. Rural Dean Swayne, preached a sermon befitting the occasion. His subject was sacrifice and the text was from 1st Corinthians, 15th Chapter, 57th verse:

"But thanks be to God, which giveth us The victory through our Lord Jesus Christ"

The Divine in his opening remarks stated that every great achievenment which had been attained was accomplished by sacrifice. This was true in the lives of individuals, nations and empires. Great sacrifices in the end produce great results for liberty and justice. Christ wrought a great victory for mankind over sin and death. Man was incapable of communing with God on account of sin. When Christ came upon He made it plain to man who God was. In his teachings, works, and life, He showed mankind what God was. When we speak of Calvary we are not speaking of the crucifixion of a man we are speaking of the crucifixion of the Son of God. His was not an ordinary resurrection, but He was raised up by the power of God. The resurrection becomes the key stone of the Christian faith. The Lord rose triumphant over death. It was a glorious victory, through sacrifice. In the great world's conflict going on at the present time sacrifices must be made to defend the liberties, which we enjoy and are fighting for. The loyal sons of Canada have rallied to the cause of right and justice. We are called upon to defend the principles Christ died for. No more righteous cause was ever defended. The members of the Orange Order have responded nobly to the call, 100,000 members having enlisted of whom 6,000 have made the supreme sacrifice. We are proud of this and other organizations. We cherish the memory of those who have made the supreme sacrifice. "Therefore, my brethren, be ye steadfast, unmoveable, always abounding in the work of the Lord, forasmuch, as ye know that your labor is not in vain in the Lord."

Brother of an M.P. Killed In Action

War's fateful telegram—"killed in action"—awaited Mr. W. A. Buchaaan, editor of The Lethbridge Herald, and Liberal Unionist M. P. for Letabridge, Alta., on his return to his home yesterday after a trip overseas with the Canadian editors. On Sunday last as the Canadian field forces were making their gallant advance, his brother, Lieut. Roy W. Buchanan, youngest son of Rev. William and Mrs. Buchanan, now of Lethbridge, but formerly residents of Ontario, fell a victim to German bullets.

The late Lieutenant was 26 years of age, and had served with the Canadian forces since the early days of the war. He was an Ontario boy, who went West with his parents, and enlisted in the 31st Alberta Battalion for overseas service.

(Helps to Beauty)

Here is a simple, unfailing way to rid the skin of objectionable hairs: With some powdered delatone and water make enough paste to cover the hairy surface apply and in about 2 minutes rub off wash the skin and every trace of hair has vanished. This is quite harmless but to avoid disappointment be sure to get the delatone in an original package.

SHORTAGE OF WOOLENS HITS CANADA TAILORS

The tailors of Canada are going to be hard hit this season to obtain woolens to meet the demands of the custom tailoring trade, for the simple reason that the British mills are not producing the goods. The situation in the British woolens market is very grave and the Canadian requirementss are going to be obtained with the greatest difficulty—if indeed at all—and at any price. The shipping is very uncertain, marine insurance is greatly advanced, the war and freight rates have increased abnormally. At the mills the expert weavers and spinners have been unremittingly "combed" for military service. Operations are practically being carried on by unskilled labor, and it is hard to make even a guess at what the ultimate issue will be unless conditions change. It may yet be a case of being compelled to wear the plain grey standardized cloth that Great Britain is using herself. Just for the present Canadian people will have to be satisfied with just what there is to be had and will have to pay the maximum prices at that.

Second Son Killed in Action

KEENE, Sept. 3.—Mrs. Benjamin Jones of Apsley has received word of the death of her second son. With her four daughters, she has been carrying on the work of a 100-acre farm while her sons were fighting in France. The one brother, Hugh, fell at Vimy Ridge, when the Canadians went into action in August. Pte. R. D. Jones fell wounded on August 6. Now word has been received that he has died of wounds. The mother and her daughters had been carrying on in order to have the farm for him to come back to.

The happy couple left for a trip to Michigan and upon their return will make their home in Tyendinaga, where the groom is a prosperous farmer.

Henrietta frowned.. "Follow a leader's flag for some years before you think of raising one of your own—follow my husband."

Chester bowed his head. "I have the greatest admiration for the Duke as a statesman," he said quietly. "I endorse all his views. Only, perhaps, in some matters I go a little farther than he goes."

"What matters?" She flung her cigarette away, here languor and listlessness had vanished; she was all the politician for the second—the statesman's wife to her finger-tips.

For over half an hour she discussed politics and the political situation with Chester, and he felt, as he listened to her voice, that he was in the presence of the most brilliant woman of the century, and he envied the Duke of Berkshire. What ought not a man be able to do who could call such a woman as this his wife?

"Do you know that you are wonderful—absolutely wonderful?" he murmured, and it was evident that Chester spoke with perfect sincerity.

Henrietta laughed lightly, then flung herself back amongst her cushions. "I love statecraft," she answered. "I was born with a passion for intrigue, with a love of dominion. It fascinates me to feel that I'm having my share in the making of the history of my day. I love power." Her cheeks flamed, her eyes shone, her whole face lit up. She was not so much a mere woman for the moment as some strange passionate child of destiny, with an unquenchable thirst for empire over the souls of men.

'I adore Napoleon,' she continued, with flashing eyes. 'The little Consul is my hero, for see what he did. From nothing he rose to the giddiest heights of imperial greatness. He loosed the powers of life and death over the lands. He crowned and uncrowned kings."

"He died at St. Helena," returned Chester thoughtfully.

"His body, perhaps," she flashed her eyes at him. 'His soul died at Waterloo."

"To my mind, he was an evil man," exclaimed Chester after a long pause. "Treacherous, brutal, and unscrupulous. No, I would not care to gain greatness at the price of Bonaparte paid for it. I like a clean conscience."

"A conscience? A man who wants to get on is not able to afford such a luxury," she laughed lightly. "No great man—no successful man—is ever conscientious. You must realize that, my friend, from the start."

She smiled at him in mocking and provocative fashion.

"Throw your conscience away at once, Mr. Chester, before it becomes too heavy a burden. Throw it away—now."

She looked at him. What did he read in her eyes? He dared not think—he would not allow himself to guess. All that was best and cleanest in his nature rose up suddenly in arms. He remembered Susan. His honest middle-class rearing stood him in good stead now, in this second of temptation and trial and perplexed surprise.

"A conscience is too valuable a possession to be thrown lightly away," he retorted steadily. "Besides, I don't altogether agree with you, Duchess. Surely a man can be a good man as well as a great man?"

'Study history!" She stretched herself out on the sofa and surveyed him through half-closed eyelids. "I'm afraid you have too much of the Puritan about you. It's a pity—such a pity."

She sighed softly, and as she sighed the boudoir door opened, and a lank dark-haired child walked clumsily into the room. Chester recognized her with a start of surprise as the girl he had found crouching in the conservatory at the Riddells'. He glanced at the Duchess with sudden and sharp suspicion. Could it be possible that this girl was her daughter?

"Good gracious, Vivienne, what brings you here?" Henrietta spoke in tones of sharp annoyance; her face gained a somewhat cruel expression.

The child standing in the doorway faltered and hesitated, then big tears began to drip down her sallow, ugly little face.

"I thought you were alone, mamma," she whispered, "and I haven't seen you for two whole days."

She snivelled. It was pathetic to see the poor little ugly creature, shuffling from one foot to the other, the picture of contrite unhappiness; but it was easy to guess at the same time what a thorn in the side such a daughter must be to a beauty-loved like Henrietta, Duchess of Berkshire.

"Don't stand in the doorway making that wretched noise," exclaimed the Duchess angrily, "and please remember another time, Vivienne, not to come to me till I send for you. You've got your governess and your nurse. Good gracious, child, what do you want with your mother?"

"May I come back?" The child choked a little as she asked the question, and put up her hand to brush away two big rolling tears.

"No," returned her mother, "I can't have you fidgeting about in my rooms; but I tell you what, Vivienne, I will come to the schoolroom for a few moments before I dress for dinner. But run away now—run." She clapped her hands sharply.

Vivienne turned on her heel and left the room. She sniffed again as she closed the door. It was obvious that her little heart was full to bursting.

A long pause fell. Henrietta glanced hard at Chester. He was surveying her with a curious expression in his eyes, and she felt that he condemned her in his heart.

She laughed uneasily. "Tell me that I'm an unnatural mother—no more worthy to have charge of Vivienne than to have the charge of Racket. Insult me—scold me." She poured out the words with a certain defiance, but her eyes looked strained and unhappy.

Chester bent his head. What was he to say? How could he, the guest at Helmsworth, presume to criticise his hostess? The thing could not be done.

"The child loves you," he said at last, "loves you with her whole heart and soul. Is it nothing to have such a wealth of affection poured at your feet, and from your own little child?" His voice was very soft, very tender.

Henrietta bit her lip. "Vivienne is so hideous—so impossible ugly," she muttered. 'How can you expect me to love a daughter I feel absolutely ashamed of? It's a terrible thing—a horrible thing," her breast heaved passionately as she spoke, "to feel ashamed of your own flesh and blood. I should have loved a beautiful child—I know I should. But Vivienne——" She paused and gave a harsh, dry laugh.

"You think I've got everything I want in the world, I suppose?" she asked. 'But I can tell you, Mr. Chester, I have not. I yearned for a boy—an heir—a son to be proud of—to work and scheme for, and Vivienne was born. I nearly shrieked when I saw her ugly little face for the first time, and I can't love her, try as I will. I have tried—but I can't." She lowered her voice. "Oh, it's a terrible thing to have to say," she continued, 'but I have never really loved any one—any one, that is, except myself, and I've got so tired of myself lately.'

"I'm sorry for you," muttered Chester. "But your husband—surely you love your husband?"

She laughed recklessly. "As much as the Duke loves me, oh, quite as much as that perhaps. But he is always the Duke, don't you understand—always and eternally the Duke. Pompous to himself as he is pompous to the world, eaten up with pride, for all his gracious condescension to his inferiors; you can't expect a woman to be very much in love with a tin god, can you, even though she happens to be a tin goddess herself?"

Chester made no answer. He was wondering why Henrietta had chosen to speak to him so intimately, to lay bare her soul. He was oppressed with a sudden sense of pity for her.

"Mine is such an empty life," she continued, "for all that it is such a brilliant one; for I've missed the greatest thing of all—I've missed love." Her voice trembled a little as she said the last words, and Paul Chester trembled too. 'Shall I ever find love, do you think?" She raised her eyes, and they were the eyes of a pleading, beseeching woman.

"There's your husband," he muttered, "the Duke and Vivienne."

He felt she would mock him for such a speech, and she did.

The Silent Heroes of the War

THE men of the Merchant Marine—do you ever give them a thought? The whole submarine campaign is aimed to frighten this non-combatant force off the seas. For then—

Britain, France, Italy would face starvation.
The fight for liberty would be lost.

Yet governments make no official recognition of this heroic body of 300,000 men who toil day and night in danger of death. No provision is made for pensions, or relief for their dependents.

We must admit our debt to the widows and orphans of the 15,000 men of the Merchant Marine, who have gone down, victims of the U-boat. Our cry must be—

"They Shall Not Want."

In his famous speech of August 8th, 1918, Premier Lloyd George said:

"During the past two years Germany has made two distinct attempts to force a decision—one on the land and one on the sea. The land offensive might have been disastrous, but the sea offensive, if it had succeeded, would have been final. If the submarines had succeeded, our armies in France would have withered away. No Americans could have come over to assist us and the French troops. Ammunition could not have been shipped and we could not have sent the necessary coal and material to enable France and Italy to manufacture munitions.

"If France, Italy and Great Britain were threatened with starvation the war would have been over before this stage had been reached."

THE soldier is rightly remembered with gifts, separation allowance and pension. He is honored, as is his due.

The men of the Navy are provided for and their dependents are not allowed to suffer want.

But the seamen of the Merchant Marine—facing death in a hideous form at their daily work, risk all at the call of duty.

It would be a lasting disgrace to allow the widows and orphans of the noble 15,000 to suffer hardship, other than the loss of their dear ones. Those who died on the sea are calling to you now.

THE EDUCATION AND PERSUASION OF QUEBEC.

Hon. Dr. Beland in his address at the Toronto Exhibition last week expressed the opinion that if a good campaign of education and persuasion had been conducted in Quebec there would not have been a man there who would have refused to take up arms in defence of his home, his fireside, and his lands.

Hon. Dr. Beland was a prisoner of the Germans four years and learned by bitter experience that the German menace to Canada, sarcastically derided repeatedly as a myth by Sir Wilfrid Laurier, was a reality more horrible than had ever been dreamed of.

They have a sort of song down in Quebec to the effect, more or less, that if some one had come back from the dead to instruct the French Canadians as to their duty, the recruiting stations would have been besieged by applicants eager for overseas service. Sir Wilfrid Laurier also voiced the strange doctrine that if he had been Premier of Canada Quebec's contribution to Canada's war effort would have been entirely satisfactory. Does Sir Wilfrid mean that Quebec was so sore and sulky at his defeat that the French Canadians were willing to risk national suicide by taking a course which could not but prove helpful and pleasing to the Hun?

Whatever Dr. Beland means by "a good campaign of education and persuasion," it is a notorious fact that there was a very bad campaign of "education and persuasion" conducted by prominent French-Canadians, who, if they had followed Dr. Beland's advice, could have rendered much useful service to the nation instead of misleading the people of Quebec as they did.

Quebec had ample opportunity to become familiar with the facts and the danger which menaced Canada but did not rise to the duty of the hour. The attempt to blame the Government of Canada or the other provinces for Quebec failure in war effort is foolish—the blame rests entirely with the people of Quebec themselves, swayed by petty parochial politics and the feeling of being separate in aims and ambition from the rest of Canada.

Dr. Beland is quite right in intimating that there was something wrong with the campaign of "education and persuasion" in Quebec. It was all wrong as far as Quebec was concerned.

WHERE THE MONEY WENT.

The German-Americans who invested money in the bonds of the German empire, upon the reasonable assumption that their money was to be used for the prosecution of Germany's war in Europe, long ago had their "rude awakening," says the Syracuse Post-Standard. They have learned through disclosures of the busy Mr. Becker, continues the Post-Standard, that it was spent in subsidizing German propaganda-newspapers in the United States, in paying German spies, strike-makers, and political workers, and in making munitions, not to be fired at Russians, Frenchmen and Englishmen, but to blow up American ships and factories.

Mr. Becker adds still further testimony to the evidence of German duplicity towards her misguided supporters in the United States. The money which German-Americans and thousands of other well meaning Americans contributed to the Red Cross and other German war agencies, under pledge that it would be used for the care of the wounded and the relief of the afflicted and impoverished did not get out of America. It was deposited to the credit of the hypocrite Bernstorff, who redeposited it to the credit of the snivelling Albert, who was paymaster of the German spy system in the United States, and director-general of the bombers, incendiaries, and strike organizers. He who gave his money out of impulse of mercy for those wrecked in the hell of war, may instead have furnished the means for the bombing of a factory or the burning of a ship and the destruction of the lives of his own friends.

Wouldn't it be fine business to take the word of such a government to a treaty of peace?

Toronto is somewhat excited over the fact that the hired baseball team tagged Toronto are jockeying for leading place in the series just closing. The members of the Boys' Naval Brigade are busy accepting contributions to Ontario's Million Dollar Fund for the widows and orphans of sailors of the Merchant Marine. It is a labor of love and the boys should be met everywhere with a cheery smile of welcome for it should be esteemed a privilege to have such an easy way of "doing our bit", making our means fight for us; no mud, blood or noise to bother us—"carrying on" de luxe, as it were. The call is to "Dive Down Deep for the sailors." Who can refuse the call?

W. F. Herman, proprietor of the Saskatoon Star and the Regina Post, has acquired the Windsor Daily Record. The purchase marks the culmination of a rather interesting train of events. Several weeks ago, acting through F. M. Sclanders, secretary of the Border Cities Chamber of Commerce, Mr. Herman laid plans for the establishment of a new daily in Windsor to be known as the Border Cities Star. Arrangements went so far as to reach the point where a news franchise was sought. This application having been turned down by Canadian Press Limited, Mr. Herman turned around and started negotiations for the purchase of the existing paper, the Record. A deal was finally arranged with John A. MacKay, owner of the latter, the purchase price being in the neighborhood of $150,000.

OTHER VIEWS

Let Her Keep Them.

New York Herald.

Dr. Solf, in his latest issue of German peace conditions lays down the proposition that Germany must retain her colonies. This, no doubt, is perfectly satisfactory to the Entente Powers. The colonies Germany has on hand one might with a little dexterity "put in one's eye with a fork."

Non-Partisan Newspapers.

William Jennings Bryan.

Professedly non-partisan newspapers are the worst kind because no newspaper is worth anything which does not have convictions in favor of a party or policy.

The Next News.

Toronto Star.

The next news that may be looked for is that the American army has sprung an offensive on another part of the front and is rolling forward sensationally.

No Nightcaps Needed.

Toronto News.

In the Seven Years' War, the Austrian populace threw into the carriage of General Daun's wife hundreds of nightcaps, a metaphorical reference to the general's somnolent campaign. Neither Mme. Foch nor Lady Haig will be so troubled.

The Premier's Return.

Toronto News.

Sir Robert Borden will be warmly welcomed back to Canada. He has returned from the most important Imperial gathering in the history of the Empire. Not only have momentous decisions been taken affecting Canada's part in the war, but vital constitutional changes have been made. Next to Mr. Lloyd George, Sir Robert Borden has been the most outstanding figure at the Imperial War Conference. He has been careful not to interfere in British domestic policies, he has safeguarded Canadian autonomy, and he has stood always strongly and with determination for every policy which will mean the effective winning of the war and the strengthening of the British connection.

The Returned Soldier.

Toronto Star.

No man who is really a returned soldier from the front needs to be in want. There may be too much red tape sometimes and things may go wrong, but even so, the man who limps home from the war need but get in touch with the organizations that exist and he will be put in the way of having his needs looked into. The best friends of the soldiers are those who have set themselves the task of seeing that the veterans of this war shall not have to go from door to door in quest of a living.

All Over a Ball-Game!

Hamilton Herald.

"Big, brave, handsome Babe Fisher," "Babe Fisher just leaned on that old apple with all his manly strength," "Red Fisher was the hero of the hour," and "Good old Red." Those are some o fthe expressions used in the columns of the Toronto papers in describing the feat of "Red" Fisher in scoring four runs by a home-run "wallop" in a recent game. One would almost imagine from the fuss made about it that he had "walloped" the kaiser.

The Poet's Corner

ILLUMINATION.

Open my eyes, that I may see
Glimpses of truth Thou hast for me;
Place in my hands the wonderful key
That shall unclasp and set me free.
Silently now I wait for Thee,
Ready, my God, Thy will to see;
Open my ears, illumine me,
Spirit divine.

Open my ears, that I may hear
Voices of truth Thou sendest clear;
And while the wave-notes fall on my ear,
Ev'rything false will disappear.
Silently now I wait for Thee,
Ready, my God, Thy will to see;
Open my eyes, illumine me,
Spirit divine.

Open my mouth, and let me bear
Tidings of gladness everywhere;
Open my heart and let me prepare
Heavenly visions thus to share.
Silently now I wait for Thee.
Ready, my God, Thy will to see;
Open my heart, illumine me,
Spirit divine.

A Laugh or Two

We've never known a man to get very far up the ladder of success by being a lady-killer.

The trouble with some people is that they don't seem to understand that they have to give consideration to other people in order to get consideration for themselves.

The stay at home must work or fight. The boys over there have to do both.

Lucky Man.

"I know just about everybody in this town," remarked the prominent citizen.

"Lucky man!" replied Miss Cayenne. "No matter what wrong number the telephone operator gives you you can always find some one to talk to."

Taken on Trust.

"Our product is thoroughly tested before leaving the factory. No man can sell stuff today that has not been tested."

"We manage to sell our product without testing it."

"That's odd. What do you sell?"

"Dynamite."

A spark from a passing railway engine yesterday morning at 11.30, ignited the shingles on a barn situated near the G. T. R. Canifton Road Crossing. The blaze was extinguished before the fire brigade arrived upon the scene. The barn was situated in rear of Mr. John Kenney's residence and is owned by Mr. Tom Smith of this city. The damage done was trifling.

The machine was damaged to a considerable extent. This morning an auxiliary truck from the camp conveyed the machine back to the repair shop.

GERMAN AT TRENTON WORKS

Robert H. Wagner, alias Warner, aged twenty-five, has been apprehended at the munition works, Trenton, as a defaulter under the M.S.A. He claims that he did not register because he is an American citizen, but has no papers to show that such is the case, and the United States Consul declines to take any action in the matter. It has since been learned that his proper name is Wagner, and that he was born in Germany. Since the war began he says he has been employed in Government munition plants and at bridge building.

WON AT TORONTO EX.

The exhibit of grain and sheaves from the standing field crop competitions of the agricultural societies of Ontario surpasses anything shown since the inception of this exhibiton some years ago. The exhibit occupies one side of the centre wing of the government building at the Toronto Exhibition, adjoining which is the magnificent display of vegetables from the field crop competitions conducted by the Ontario Vegetable Growers' Association. Both these exhibits are in charge of J. Lockie Wilson, superintendent of agricultural and horticultural societies. The prize winners from Belleville and vicinity were as follows. Mr. C. H. Ketcheson of Sidney, secured two 1st prizes for barley, and a 2nd prize for oats. Mr. Colin McGregor of Coe Hill, secured 4th prize for oats. In the vegetable display Mr. George Harris, gardener of this city, won 2nd prize for celery and 3rd prize for tomatoes.

LOOKING FOR DOPE

Some three weeks ago a drug store situated on Front street, this city, was entered during the night and it was evident that the uninvited guests were in quest of drugs as only cocaine and morphine were taken. Last night another drug store was entered by the taking out of a pane of glass at the rear of the premises. When the police officer made his inspection of the premises at a late hour everything was all right. Drugs appear to have been what the party or parties were after, as nothing else was disturbed in the store. The affair was reported to the police, who are making every effort to locate the burglar.

Birth Notices

Called By Death

MR. JESSE CARR.

There passed away in Frankford on Monday morning, September 2nd, one of Sidney's oldest residents in the person of Mr. Jesse Carr. About three weeks ago deceased had a stroke, and in spite of the best medical attendance and nursing he passed peacefully away. Deceased was born in Norfolk, England, and was in his 77th year. We doubt whether there is a person in the county of Hastings more widely known than the late Mr. Carr. His genial disposition and kindly ways made lasting friends for him wherever he went. For the past four years he carried His Majesty's mail in Frankford village and he will be greatly missed in that capacity. He was one of eight brothers all of whom have passed to that Great Beyond, and three sisters, two of whom are still living. The sisters are Mrs. Mary Ann Sandal, of Buffalo, and Mrs. John Whitten, of Renfrew. His wife predeceased him fifteen years ago. Surviving him are three sons and four daughters. The sons are Harry of Belleville, Fred of River Valley, and Robert of Toronto. The daughters are Mrs. H. Smith, Frankford; Mrs. G. Hearns, of Frankford; Mrs. W. Edwards, Toronto; and Mrs. Arthur Thomas, of Toronto. In religion deceased was an Anglican and in politics a staunch Conservative. The family have the heartfelt sympathy of a wide circle in this their hour of bereavement.

WESTERN CROP DAMAGE REPORTS GREATLY MAGNIFIED—WANT 10,000 HARVESTERS AT ONCE.

Reports previously published regarding the damage by frost to the crops in Saskatchewan were unduly pessimistic. Frequent showers and favorable weather have changed the outlook and it is apparent that the great province of Saskatchewan will have a normal crop. This is evidenced by Western demands for farm laborers, as not less than 10,000 are required immediately for harvesting.

Every young man and those more mature, in every community in Ontario, including our own, should get away and can make this a great opportunity to serve the country in a practical way, and at the same time be of invaluable benefit to himself. It means an interesting, long-distance journey at low fares, and a chance to see and study the immense new country served by the Canadian Northern—the People's Road.

Final excursions by Canadian Northern trains leaving Toronto 10.00 p.m. August 29th, 30th, September 4th, and 11th. Harvesters from outside points to use connecting trains to Toronto.

Young Man Was Badly Scalded

(From Our Own Correspondent)

TRENTON, Sept. 3—Alfred Allore, a young lad of sixteen years met with a serious accident at his place of employment in Trenton on the 30th ulto, by falling on a slippery board and getting his leg badly scalded from the knee down by coming in contact with a boiling substance around which he was working. Medical attention was promptly given however, and no more serious results are anticipated.

Monday the 26th a quiet and pretty wedding was solemnized in Trenton when Miss May Talmadge, daughter of Mr. Arthur Talmadge of Stoney Point Beach, was united in marriage to Mr. Don. Smith, of Belleville Immediately after the ceremony the happy couple left for a trip westward, stopping for a few days at the Exhibition at Toronto. Upon their return they will take up their residence in Trenton, where they are both very favorably known.

The funeral took place in Trenton at ten o'clock on Monday, Sept., 2 of one of the oldest citizens, Mr. Lawrence M Laurenson, at the age of 87 years. Mr. Laurenson came from Scotland when a young man and settled in Newfoundland where he was for many years a contractor, and where he filed several important positions. About 18 years ago he came to Ontario and settled on a farm near Brighton where he was a successful and prosperous farmer, until the death occurred of his wife Mrs. Agnes Laurenson and his own failing health caused him to retire from the active farm life about two years ago, when he moved into East Trenton and has since been a guard at one of the crossings of C.N.R. until about eight weeks ago when he had to give up work because of the serious illness that resulted in his death on Saturday last.

A serious fire occurred in Trenton on Friday last in one of the small bungalows along the river bank of East Trenton, which are occupied principally by foreign employees of the British Chemical Company. It appears that two Russians were using gasoline freely, apparently unware of its explosive tendency, as at the same time they had a blazing fire in the stove in the same room which caused an explosion and the room was immediately a mass of flames. The firemen were upon the scene promptly but Kozinewsky, one of the Russian's clothes became ignited and as he rushed from the building the wind fanned the blaze and before he could be given assistance and the fire smothered he was most severely burned and small hopes are entertained for his recovery.

SOLDIERS' EPITAPHS FOR WAR MUSEUM.

London Sept. 4.—For the proposed national war museum here, a collection of war epitaphs is being made. Here is one from a British graveyard in France:

"When you go home tell them of us and say
'For your tomorrow they gave their today'."

From the graves of men who went down at the battle of Coronel, the fowing is taken:

"If life's best prize be to end life well
Then envy us; we died at Coronel."

From a war memorial in an English city:

"These in the glorious morning o their days
For England's sake lost all but England's praise."

The following is an epitaph for soldiers who died in the first battle o Ypres:

Here a few English stood, and he wastayed."

Jupiter Pluvious Interfered With Success of Belleville Fair

Attendance at Second and Final Day of Fair Was Small on Account of the Rain— Speeding Events Cancelled— Interesting Address From Provincial Superintendent of Fairs

It was anticipated by the Management of the Belleville Fair that there would have been a large attendance of spectators at the second day of the exhibition, but the elements interfered. Early yesterday morning clouds gathered and about 11 o'clock rain commenced to fall and continued for about two hours. Shortly after one o'clock the rain ceased, but the track at the grounds was left in such a condition that it was impossible to have the speeding events and as this became generally known it deterred many from visiting the fair. Despite this condition of affairs a goodly number of spectators were on the grounds and some $300 was taken in at the gate. The receipts for the two days were, however, not as large as the first day's receipts of a year ago. During yesterday afternoon those in attendance were interested in the judging of live stock, which took place in an enclosure in the centre of the grounds. In some of the classes especially horses the competition for the prize money was keen. This was also the case in some of the cattle classes.

The 15th Regimental Band of this city rendered an excellent programme of music which was enjoyed by all present.

CO-OPERATION URGED

Mr. J. Lockie Wilson of Toronto, Superintendent of Agricultural Societies, was a visitor during the afternoon and was induced to give an address. He spoke briefly, but to the point. The speaker referred to the war and the valued assistance farmers were giving by producing food to feed the Allies. This year they had made special effort to produce more from the land and their efforts had been crowned with success. He regretted that the weather had mitigated against the attendance at the Belleville Fair, and stated that this fair should be one of the best in this section of the country. He urged united action on the part of the citizens and especially the merchants of the city in co-operating with the management of the fair in providing better buildings and making a better exhibit. While competition was keen there was no reason why Belleville should not have a splendid fair. The Government was prepared to assist materially in making every fair a success, and he hoped Belleville would take advantage of the opportunity to improve the building and make the fair what it should be for this district.

The address was attentively listened to by those present and the speaker was loudly applanded at the conclusion of his remarks.

Shortly after 4 o'clock the removal of exhibits was commenced and by six o'clock the grounds presented a deserted appearance.

Ontarions Win Great Glory In Smashing Foe's Line

Canadian Assault on Drocourt-Queant Switch Line Supported by Greatest Artillery Barrage of the War— Germans Were Overwhelmed by Fire

With the Canadian Forces, Monday. —Supported by what is said to have been the greatest artillery barrage put on in this war, the Canadians after the seeming desultory fighting of the past few days, went into action in force this morning with other British troops south of the Scarpe. The kick-off was at five o'clock, and by half-past six the enemy line was pierced at several points opposite to us. Our left stormed Dury and in the centre pushed out along the Cambrai road as far as the outskirts of Villers-les-Cagnicourt. Our right penetrated the wood of Cagnicourt and thrust itself into the village. These points lie well behind the Queant-Drocourt lines.

Enemy Was Overwhelmed.

Our own losses in the first days' fighting were light. The enemy was overwhelmed by the volume and intensity of our fire, our counter-battery work smothering his return fire. The men went in quietly confident, taking their time to secure the victory of which they were sure. Thousands of prisoners came in during the day, and our men say they encountered heavy machine gun fire, but as soon as they stormed the trench system the enemy surrendered.

A British force on our right also rushed forward. The weather was clear and cold and the roads were in fair shape. The pursuit was pushed forward by tanks and the machine gunners.

Honors to Ontario Battalion.

The honors of the first day went to an Ontario battalion, which made an advance over hard going of over one thousand yards mopping up 760 prisoners, most of whom were captured in dugouts.

Exactly a week ago the battle opened at three o'clock in the morning with a concentrated barrage fire, under a curtain of which the Canadian troops engaged carried their first rush through the famous Hindenburg line. On Tuesday the advance was continued. Wednesday we were held up by strong enemy reserves, thrown in with orders to hold the line at all costs. They were supported by hundreds of machine guns.

A Systematic Reduction.

Resuming their advance on Thursday the troops concerned, including some first-rate Imperials, settled down to a systematic reduction of the advanced enemy strong posts, with the view of establishing a solid line that has been fully accomplished. The jumping off positions this morning were all that could be desired. The objectives of the first phase were thus fully attained.

The fighting of last week was on a relatively minor scale, confined to a limited number of our troops, but it was tough and bitter throughout, every foot of ground being stubbornly contested by the best troops this enemy could throw in. From his reserves at Douai and Cambrai he sent in wave after wave of counter-attacks, thus suffering very severe losses.

During the week the Canadians captured over five thousand prisoners and a number of guns, with hundreds of machine guns. His dead strew the hillsides.

Double Drowning in St. Lawrence River?

Circumstances Point to Tragedy In Which Ward ot Marchmont Home Was Victim

One night recently cries for help, apparently from a man and woman, were heard, coming from the vicinity of the Sister Islands, in the St. Lawrence River, near Brockville. Rescue parties were unable to locate anyone as the night was dark and the water rough but the next day an empty boat partly filled with water was found floating near the scene. Recent developments lead to the belief that a double drowning took place and that the victims may have been John Fobert, aged 60, and Gladys Vincent, aged 16, recently of Lancaster, Ont. The girl is a ward of the Marchmont Home of Belleville, and Mr. A. Drummond, superintendent of that institution is taking a keen interest in the case. The Brockville Recorder refers to the disappearance of the couple as follows:

"Imigration officials all along the border have been on the alert for some time to prevent the entry to the United States of the couple. According to Chief Robinson, they were turned back at Nyando, N.Y., opposite Cornwall and later they went to Prescott. A report was received at the Ogdensburg Immigration Office that they were on their way to Ottawa but it later developed that they might attempt to cross at either Brockville or Cape Vincent. Chief Robinson immediately wired the officials at this place to keep a keen lookout.

Girl Ward of Belleville Home

"That the Vincent girl was a ward of the Marchmont Home, Belleville, and that she had frequently spoken of the attractions offered by big city life are facts brought out by a communication received by the local police from A. Drummond superintendent of the institution mentioned. It appears that she is 16 years of age and was brought to Canada under the auspices of the Marchmont Home the Canadian Branch of the Liverpool Sheltering Home and of the Manchester Boys' and Girls' Homes England four years ago. She had previously been in Liverpool. The girl was placed with Mrs. D. R. McCrimmon, R.R. No. 1, Lancaster, and had been there until Sunday night, Aug. 25, when she went off with the hired man, John Fobert, aged 60 or 70, widower. The couple left at elevn o'clock at night in a rig, the ownership of which is not known by Mr. Drummond.

"Gladys Vincent is fairly tall for her years has prominent dark eyes and hair and is generally time. She had sometimes spoken of the big wages secured in cities, the news of which she had seen in newspapers.

"The matron of the Home has been in Lancaster and reports that Mr. and Mrs. McCrimmon are quite willing to receive the girl back into their home.

Auto Plunged Into the River

Former Residents of Belleville Had Narrow Escape From Death

KINGSTON, Ont., Sept. 4.—Mrs. F. G. Lockett and her daughter, Miss Edna Lockett, and niece, Miss Irving, had a miraculous escape from death when their auto went over a 10-foot embankment into the river near Millhaven. The car was travelling on a narrow piece of roadway, and Miss Lockett, who was driving, backed up the car to avoid an accident with another car. Miss Irving jumped just as the car made the plunge, but Mrs. Lockett and her daughter remained.

Mrs. Lockett and daughter were former well known residents of Belleville, Mr. Lockett having been for some years a member of the firm of Haines & Lockett, shoe merchants. Their many friends in this city will be pleased to learn they escaped injury.

HEAVY LOSSES INFLICTED ON ENEMY

BRITISH-CANADIAN ADVANCE CONTINUES, SMASHING THROUGH ALL RESISTANCE AND DRIVING HUNS BACK—CROSS CANAL DU NORD—MANY IMPORTANT POSITIONS CAPTURED — FRENCH ADVANCE CONTINUES — CROSS VESLE RIVER AT MANY POINTS AND TAKE MANY PRISONERS — BRITISH APPROACH NEUVE CHAPELLE.

Special Despatches to The Intelligencer, Canadian Press, Limited.

LONDON, Sept. 4.—(Official)—In their push beyond the Drocourt-Quecant line British troops have reached the line of the Canal du Nord. North of the Arras-Cambrai road they have occupied the town of Ecourt-St. Quentin. North of Peronne the advance has carried the British through Vaux Wood, above Moislans. A slight advance has been scored at other points.

FRENCH CROSS VESLE RIVER.

PARIS, Sept. 4.—(Official)—French troops last night continued to push back the Germans east of the Canal du Nord and between the Ailette and Aisne rivers. They have taken Chapitre Wood and have approached Croiselles, Puvencourt, Clamecy and Braye. On the Aisne River the town of Bucy de Long was taken with 1,500 prisoners. They have crossed the Vesle river at many points.

BRITISH MARCH ON NEUVE CHAPELLE.

LONDON, Sept. 4.—In the Lys sector further progress was made by us yesterday and last night, both south and north of the river. Our troops are approaching Neuve Chapelle.

BRITISH CROSS CANAL DU NORD.

LONDON, Sept. 4.—The British have secured a hold on the west bank of the Canal du Nord by taking Rumaucourt, north of Sains-les-Marquion. Further south along the canal they are reported to have captured Inchy-en-Artois, Demicourt, east of Doignies, and Hermies, three miles northwest of Bertincourt.

GERMANS IN FULL FLIGHT.

LONDON, Sept. 4.—The Germans are in full flight in the region of the Canal du Nord and many brigades are badly disorganized.

ALLIES CLOSE TO THE WINNING POST.

LONDON, Sept. 4.—A Canadian Press Despatch from Reuter's states that Paris papers print the following semi-official statement: "The hour seems close at hand when the superb efforts of the Allies will begin to bring fruit. One of our great chiefs said yesterday 'We are on the last lap and close to the winning post'."

THE WAR YESTERDAY.

Following fast upon the beaten enemy, British troops advancing toward Cambrai have reached a point at Baralle, scarcely seven miles from the limits of the city. This advance along the Arras-Cambrai road is somewhat more rapid than that along the Bapaume-Cambrai road, but on it also there has been remarkable progress since the capture of Bapaume. In a couple of days ,if the movement continues, the Canadian and British troops engaged will come up against the only remaining entrenched line between them and Cambrai. This is a switch paralleling the Drocourt-Queant lines and about six miles to the east of them. It swings around to the west and southwest of Cambrai at a distance of about five miles from the city. The villages of Moeuvres and Graincourt, taken by Byng's army in the attack upon Cambrai in November, 1917, are on the line of the trench system. Its strongest features are probably the unfinished Canal du Nord, a deep cutting in which there is no water, and which was crossed in November only after hard fighting, and Bourlon Wood, where there were in November, and doubtless are still, many well-concealed machine-gun and artillery emplacements. A second battle for Bourlon Wood must precede the occupation of Cambrai, but this time Canadian and English troops advancing along the Arras road will be in a position to outflank the wood from the north after breaching the trench lines to which the enemy is retiring east of Baralle.

All along the front, from the Scarpe to a point well south of the Bapaume road, the enemy continued to withdraw yesterday. His rearguards suffered heavy losses at the hands of the pursuing infantry. The Canadian and British artillery also inflicted many casualties. Near Equancourt, east of the old Somme battlefield, large numbers of the enemy, retiring in close formation, came under fire of British guns on the open heights. That must have involved serious losses. The capture of over 10,000 prisoners in Monday's fighting must have left several German divisions minus a large part of their infantry, and made an organized counter-attack impracticable.

"COME ON, CANADIANS!"

Canadian troops showed the greatest skill and courage yesterday in storming the Drocourt-Queant line. The lines had been perfected by the enemy in the past eighteen months. They provided the most formidable obstacle, as they had been furnished with every device of modern engineering. Undeterred by the strength of his defensive organization, the Canadians, assisted admirably by the British troops on the left, carried all before them.—Sir Douglas Haig.

"Stand Fast" Say The Canadian Soldiers to Folks at Home

Sir Robert Borden Conveys the Message in Speech at Toronto Exhibition— Outlined Work of Imperial Conference

TORONTO, Sept. 3.—"This is the message I bring you from the Canadian army. "Stand fast to your purpose, abide the issue, and vindicate the cause of justice and humanity."

In these words Sir Robert Borden, Premier of Canada, concluded a stirring address yesterday afternoon before representative men of all classes, gathered at the Labor Day luncheon of the Canadian National Exhibition directorate. It was the Premier's first speech since his return from the Imperial Conference in the Old Land, and his utterances were received with great interest.

At the luncheon Sir Robert dealt largely with the deliberations of the Imperial War Conference, the Dominion's policy of railway ownership and the spirit of Canada's soldiers overseas. The Premier intimated that in the control of newly acquired railways there must be absolutely no party political influence. The Government's proposals for such control will be made shortly and be based on the considerations mentioned.

Sir Robert, in discussing the Imperial conferences, spoke particularly of the immigration arrangements between India and the Dominions. The principle of complete control by any part of the Empire of the composition of its population, by restriction, if necessary, should be adhered to. One departure from previous practice, is that Hindoos already domiciled in other British countries shall be permitted to bring one wife and minor children to this country. This had previously been prohibited in Canada.

The Cost of Advertising

Pertinent Observations from the Vancouver World

When a merchant decides to increase his expenditure for advertising he does so with the purpose of reducing selling costs, not increasing them

If we admit that advertising expense is a part of selling cost, it may be reasonably asked as to how selling cost is to be reduced through adding to it?

A merchant has an overhead cost to meet which does not vary greatly in periods of dullness and activity. He has about the same operating expense to meet in a week when he does business to nearly maximum of capacity as in a week when he does half as much business. His profits must come through keeping his stocks moving—through frequent turnovers—through the greatest possible volume of sales in a given period.

Failing to make a certain volume of sales, the merchant's overhead must be earned by a highen profit on each sale—or it cannot be earned at all. With the volume of sales falling below the margin of safety, low prices become impossible.

In the same manner, as the volume of sales climbs to nearly the maximum capacity to handle, profits on each sale may be steadily reduced—and yet a proper profit above operating costs.

An increase of advertising expenditure is always made in order to develop a larger volume of sales. Increase of advertising expense, up to the point where turnover is at full capacity, works logically toward steadily reduced profits on each sale. It is through this process that the consumer profits through a merchant's increased "selling cost."

In war tim wsench, z z z zz

In war times, when buying is done with more forethought than in normal times, it is the duty of every merchant to keep his business working at maximum capacity. Unless his turnover is as large as he can manage, his overhead expense—which must be earned from the profits on sales made—will enforce higher prices than he would be compelled to fix of running to capacity.

The merchant who can manage a larger volume of trade can secure that larger volume—through adequate advertising. And unless he is striving for a maximum volume, he is not placing himself in a position to accept minimum profits on each sale.

"HIT THE TRAIL HOLLIDAY"

For the last time to-night George M. Cohan, the only Irishman in the world having a Jewish name, will appear in his newest photoplay called "Hit the Trail Holliday." Billy Sunday, the great apostle of religion revivals, was never better than Cohan in his actions in "Hit the Trail Holliday" and no doubt should Sunday see Cohan in action sometime he would be able to get a large number of tips as to the proper way of getting his oratory to his audiences in impressive style. In this photoplay Cohan has the part of an ex-bartender, fired for being too particular as to who he would sell booze to, so he happens into this small town right on top of a big fight between the wets and the drys and he immediately allies himself with the dry faction and through his very very clever way knocks out the plans of the brewing interests o the town to corner the vote. The many antics that Cohan goes through are very humorous and his stinging criticism of Old John Barleycorn is very well done. The picture if of the usual Cohan humorous style and was well received. A News Film showing the big preparation of America for war are very interesting and the usual good chapter of the serial "The Eagle's Eye" and another good feature picture called 'Unclaimed Goods' with Vivian Martin in the leading part completes a very good program of pictures.

AT THE PALACE

At the Palace William Russell is appearing in a good picture entitled "My Fighting Gentleman." It is a story of the south about the time of the Civil War and many exciting battle scenes pleased a fine audiences. There was also a good chapter of the "Eagle's Eye" serial and a good comedy that completed a good programme of pictures.

How to Save Coal "Use Buckwheat"

Top Dressing Over Larger Size Holds Draught, Aids Combustion

OTTAWA, Sept. 4—Ho wplaces using the larger sized heating plants, such as school, churches and apartment houses, can help the coal situation this winter, when Canada will have to get along with much less than the normal supply of anthracite was explained in an interview by Mr. C. A. Magrath, the Dominion Fuel Controller.

"It has been demonstrated that in using stove or larger sixes of anthracite coal in the larger sizes of heating plants, whether they are hot air or low pressure steam, or hot water, it is not only possible, but it is beneficial, to use to proportion of No. 1 buckwheat," said Mr. Magrath. "In some cases involving the use of egg and broken coal it has been found that as high as 50 per cent can be used to the best sort of advantage.

"The No. 1 buckwheat is used as a top dressing over the body of the larger size coal during the moderate weather of the first and last portions of the winter, and during the night in all weather except the most extreme. This top dressing No. 1 buckwheat tends to hold the draught, and to aid in the proper and economic combustion of the coal body as a whole. These places, by this scheme, could take 25 per cent of their total fuel requirement in No. 1 buckwheat. It must, of course, be kept separate from the larger size, and should not be used as a mixture, but as a top dressing."

Mr. Magrath said a further advantage is that such use conserves domestic sizes for the householder and for purely domestic consumption.

Continuing, the Fuel Controller said:

"I have in my cellar a fair percentage of my year's needs of soft coal, because I know Canada will not receive a full supply of anthracite. The soft coal I can either mix with the hard coal, or use [illegible] itself, until Christmas, and then again as the spring is approaching. If necessity should demand, I could use it throughout the entire winter, and keep my family comfortably warm. It would be well if every person put a percentage of sofe coal in his cellar."

Mrs. Hutchinson Suffers 10 Years

Was Actually Afraid to Eat—Finds Relief At Last

"It is a positive fact that Tanlac brought me the very first relief I was ever able to get from anything I have taken during the past ten years," said Mrs. Lizzie Hutchinson, a life-time resident of Toronto, now living at 418 1-2 Spadina avenue, the other day.

"I first noticed my trouble about ten years ago," she continued, "and till I started on Tanlac a few weeks ago I was never free from that terrible indigestion. I had no appetite and what little I forced down soured on my stomach and formed so much gas that it pressed up against my heart till I felt just like I was going to smother. Many a time I have rushed out of the house gasping for breath and someone would have to pound my back to get the gas off my stomach. I suffered such agonies at times that I became actually afraid to eat anything. I lost over twenty pounds in weight and was in an awful condition when I started on Tanlac.

"I took all kinds of medicines, but nothing helped me at all, and I finally decided to try Tanlac. I have taken several bottles and have a splendid apetite now, I can eat most anything I want, am never troubled the least bit with gas and for the first time in ten years I am perfectly free from indigestion. I have gained several pounds and nearly every day some friend tells me how much better I am looking. I certainly do feel fine, for Tanlac has relieved me entirely of that terrible stomach trouble and I think so much of this wonderful medicine that I have already recommended it to many of my friends."

"Tanlac is sold in Belleville by Ostrom's Drug Store, in Trenton by J. H. Dickey, in Deseronto by W. J. Malley, in Stirling by J. S. Morton, in Frankford by W. J. Lettimer, in Madoc by J. Will Vince, in Marysville by T. T. McAlpine, in Ormsby by Jas. Campbell and in Thomasburg by J. H. Blakely."

BEEF PRICES ARE AN OUTRAGE.

Winnipeg, Sept. 4.—A Federal Government official in Winnipeg asserts that "beef prices in Winnipeg are an infernal outrage. All that the people are getting is light second-grade stuff, and they are being made to pay prices for it which must be netting a tremendous profit to somebody." None of that stuff should cost the housewife more than 20 cents a pound on the average. Instead of that, I find rump roast 30 cents a pound, round steak 30 cents, rolled roast 36 cents, sirloin at 35 cents and porterhouse at 38 cents and 40 cents.

"I don't know who is to blame," he added, "but there is a scandalous rake-off somewhere, and there ought to be an investigation which will let the light of day in on this whole question.

The chief cattle supply for Winnipeg market today comes from Alberta and parts of Saskatchewan. The remarks have provoked a sensation.

SARTORIAL PROBLEM.

Toronto, Sept. 4.—The tailors of Canada are going to be hard hit this season to obtain woollens to meet the demands of the custom tailoring trade for the simple reason that the British mills are not producing the goods, according to the statements of men who should know. It may yet be a case of being compelled to wear the plain grey standardized cloths that Great Britain is using herself. Just for the present Canadian people will have to be satisfied with what there is to be had, and will have to pay the maximum prices at that.

WESTERN CONDITIONS ARE NOW EXCELLENT SAYS C. P. R. OFFICIAL

W. E. Duperow, General Passenger Agent, Tells of Steady Stream of New Farmers Pouring Into Valley Lands

MONTREAL, Sept. 4.—"In spite of some discouraging reports, conditions in Western Canada just now may be truthfully described as excellent," said Mr. W. E. Duperow, General Passenger Agent of the Grand Trunk Pacific, and Canadian Government Railways, on his arrival here from Winnipeg. "The call for ten thousand additional hands to help in the harvest work is an indication that the fears regarding crop shortage are not going to be realized to the extent which appeared possible at one time."

"One of the most encouraging features of the 1918 season in the West is the splendid volume of homeseekers flowing into the newly opened up lands in Central British Columbia," continued Mr. Duperow. "The number of settlers, particularly from United States points, seeking farm lands, is well in excess of previous years. The Grand Trunk Pacific colonization department has just taken in to the rich Nechako and Pulkley Valleys of the coast province several carloads of young American farmers of the best type. They are moving in with their families, and are well supplied with capital, necessary farming implements and high grades live stock. In the connection a special train with settlers effects has just moved over the Grand Trunk Pacific line to Vanderhoof, B.C. We find that the valley lands of British Columbia present attractions to the young and ambitious farmers that cannot be found in the United States, the Canadian lands being lower in price and excellent in quality."

The action of the British Columbia Government in throwing open to settlers many thousands of areas of the best land in the province, hitherto idle, will undoubtedly give a great impetus Mr. Duperow believes, to settlement In all probability these lands will be available to settlers on November 1st, 1918, the government officers having surveyed the areas, appraised the values and made the necessary arrangement with the present owners for the transfer of the lands to active settlers who will place them under cultivation without delay. The British Columbia lands are proving especially attractive to settlers just now owing to their ready access to railway and marketing facilities. As a matter of fact the produce of these valleys finds a ready sale right in British Columbia, where the mining and lumbering developments are leading to striking increases in the population of the territory with a consequent demand for supplies of all kinds.

Mr. Duperow reports that tourists and general commercial traffic on the Grand Trunk Pacific and on the Transcontinental line is building up in a very satisfactory way.

Court Clerks Ask For New Fee Scale

TORONTO, Sept. 3.—The Division Court Clerks' Association, in session in Toronto, decided to petition the Government to increase the jurisdiction of the Division Courts from $200 to $400 in the case of signed documents, and from $100 to $200 in the case of open accounts. The public, it was felt, would benefit, as the costs in the Division Court are lower than in the County Court. The association also appointed a committee to ask the Board of Judges to authorize an increased scale of fees in cases where the amount involved is over $20. The present scale was adopted six years ago when the cost of living was much lower than at present. F. M. Clark of Belleville, was re-elected President, C. H. Peebles of Hamilton, and James Spence of Brantford, Vice Presidents, and A. McLean Howard of Toronto, Hon. Secretary-Treasurer of the association.

THE TEMPTING OF PAUL CHESTER.

BY

ALICE AND CLAUDE ASKEW

AUTHORS OF "THE SHULAMITE"

"I asked for bread, and you gave me stone." She laughed, then rose up from the sofa, and stood up, a tall, gleaming figure, in her wonderful teagown, with its rich draping lace. "Come—we've talked long enough about serious things," she remarked lightly, "and I've no doubt that you think be very mad to discuss such intimate subjects with a stranger. But somehow I don't quite look upon you as a stranger. I want to think of you as a friend."

"Yes," he answered, "as a friend—your friend."

Their eyes met—met in a glance of long and searching inquiry.

Henrietta held out her hand. He bent over it and kissed it. It was an unconquerable impulse.

Dinner was served that night—not in the great dining room—the room rarely used except when royalty honored Helmsworth with their presence—but in a smaller oak-panelled room.

A small, a very small party. Henrietta and her husband, Paul Chester, the Duke's private secretary, a certain Mr. Rupert Temple, and an old clergyman, the household chaplain.

"We are quite 'en famille,'" sighed the Duchess, and smiled as she took her place at the table, wonderful to look at in the sea-green dress, and with great pearls hanging round her neck.

Chester bowed and smiled. A curious shyness had come upon him in the presence of the Duke, a strange and unaccountable restraint. He fancied that his host eyed him curiously, as though questioning his right to be at Helmsworth at all. And then the secretary, Rupert Temple, surely his eyes had flashed as he gave his limp, beautifully shaped hand to Chester—flashed—and with sinister fire.

Temple was an extraordinarily handsome man, and could hardly have passed his thirtieth year. Blond, with heavy blue eyes, and a drooping moustache, he possessed remarkably fine features, and his lips were moist and red. He was very tall and carried his inches well, the lines of his body were perfect. He was faultlessly dressed, and had a very cultured and beautiful voice, yet it struck Chester, as he glanced at him, that there was a good deal of latent savagery and strong primitive passion in this man's nature, for all his languid pose.

He noticed, too, the look Temple gave the Duchess as she sank down in her chair, a strange and inexplicable look. He appeared, however, to be afraid to stare at her long, for he soon averted his eyes and glanced intently down at his soup-plate.

He did not talk much during dinner, and the Duke rallied him once or twice on the subject, till at last the young man pleaded a headache.

"A headache or a heartache, Rupert?" laughed the Duchess from her end of the table. She was holding up her lick-glass as she spoke, a rare piece of Venetian workmanship

Rupert Temple flushed, then, his eyes lit up with a flicker of blue flame. "I thought you didn't believe in hearts or heartaches, Duchess?" He stroked his fair moustache; his long, beautiful fingers trembled.

Henrietta made no answer, but addressed herself to the old chaplain. He was a fine-looking man with clear-cut, ascetic features—a man who looked as if he had suffered much.

The dinner wore on. It was a studiously short and simple meal; then, when dessert came, after Henrietta had played with a few grapes, she rose to her feet and moved slowly towards the door.

Chester sprang to open it, but as she passed her husband she paused, and laid her hand lightly upon the Duke's shoulder.

"I want you to talk seriously to Mr. Chester whilst you all smoke," she said softly. "He is a man we must help—a valuable recruit to our party."

She passed on, her frock trailing and rustling, a delicate perfume hovering about her neck, her arms, her hair.

Chester shut the door behind her, then came back and took his seat at the table.

The three men who sat round glanced at him critically, scrutinisingly, and he felt that they were weighing him in the balance. And he was conscious at the same time that they regarded him with secret animosity.

A bitter smile played on Rupert Temple's lips, the old chaplain's face had gained a cold severity, and even the Duke himself glanced at Chester with puckered brow.

"I ought never to have come here—on a woman's invitation," Chester thought bitterly to himself; yet the next second the Duke was addressing him with a gracious smile, and Rupert Temple proffering his cigarettes. He was once more an honored guest—a welcome guest.

But the chaplain still sat aloof—watching him, judging him.

CHAPTER X.

A Wife Deserted

"Well, and what does Paul write?" Lady Milly Carteret danced lightly into Susan's boudoir, and glanced at her elder sister, who was sitting in front of a writing-table.

Milly was a pretty girl of about eighteen, a true Carteret, fair like all her family, and with the same soft, flaxen tresses as her elder sister, and vivid forget-me-not blue eyes.

"Paul?" Susan glanced up from a heap of letters, for she was busy with her correspondence. "How did you know I had heard from him?" she asked. And there was a curious note in her voice. A wiser and more experienced girl than Milly would have recognized the unmistakable note of pain.

Susan was dressed in a short tailor-made coat and skirt, as though she meditated a walk, and her hat rested on a chair by her side. She looked very pale. There were dark purple shadows under her eyes, and her hands were unnaturally thin and white

"I happened to have the curiosity to peep into the letterbag myself this morning," Milly said, "and it wasn't difficult to recognize the handwriting of your lord and master on one of the envelopes. What a strong, decided hand it is, too!"

"Paul is a very strong and decided man!" Susan spoke rather coldly, though she was passionately fond of her young sister whom she had invited to stay with her whilst her husband was visiting at Helmsworth—laughing, light-hearted Milly, who did not appear to have a care or sorrow in the world.

"H'm! I suppose he is," remarked Milly, "and a little bit of an icicle as well. Paul always strikes me as such a fearfully superior person," she went on. "Of course, I know he is too reserved, too self-contained to suit my taste I wonder what the Duchess will make of him," she added, casting a swift look at her sister, "the fascinating, wicked Henrietta. Perhaps she is trying to get up a desperate flirtation with Paul at the present moment. I wonder you let him go alone to Helmsworth."

"Millicent!" Susan sprang up from her writing-table, and faced her sister with flaming cheeks and flashing eyes. "Be quiet," she muttered hoarsely. "Don't speak to me in that way; I don't like it."

She rested a shaking hand on the writing-table, and tried to smile easily and naturally as she noticed the look of astonished dismay which crept over Milly's face.

"I'm not cross," she explained, "not really cross, but your suggestion that the Duchess might be flirting with Paul annoyed me. My husband doesn't flirt."

Millicent hung her head. She was beginning to feel afraid of Susan, who had changed so much since her marriage and was no longer a light-hearted chatterbox, like the rest of her sisters, and the girl's voice was distinctly apologetic as she asked timidly—

"I suppose Paul is coming home in a few days now; he has been away a week already."

"He's staying on for another week," returned Susan shortly. "Come, Milly, let's go out. I want to speak to the bailiff, and I promised to meet him at the home farm by twelve. Will you be long putting on your hat?"

"Gracious, no!" laughed Milly; then she ran out of the room, leaving her sister alone.

Lady Susan stood stiff and upright for a moment, then she dropped into one of the armchairs and covered her face with her hands.

"Another week! He is going to stay on at Helmsworth another week, and with that woman!"

She muttered the words aloud, and a long shudder shook her from head to foot.

"He never loved me, he never loved me," she muttered. "He only married me for the sake of my title and connections—that's all."

She rose from the chair and walked impatiently to where a mirror stood on a side-table, then bent down and examined her pale, pretty face in the glass.

"I was too proud when I found he didn't really love me," she sighed, "to try and make him; to charm him, to tempt him as any other woman would have done. And now I'm reaping the harvest of my pride, I suppose. For what's my poor prettiness"—she turned from the mirror resolutely—"to the beauty of a woman like the Duchess? Every man who meets Henrietta falls in love with her, they say. Old or young, married or single. She's like a beautiful witch—a treacherous siren and she's weaving her spells round Paul now—round my husband."

The door opened, and Milly ran in. She had put on a short red coat and red motor cap, and the girl looked absolutely delicious. There was a radiance about her, an inexpressible joy, which seemed to set her apart from the rest of the world—the world of shadows. She appeared a thing of joy as well as beauty, and yet, Susan reflected with a sigh, she herself had once faced life as gaily and happily as Milly did, only that was years ago.

A brisk walk in the sharp November air helped to raise Susan's drooping spirits, also there was some business which had to be transacted with the bailiff which claimed her attention.

She felt a little tired, however, before long, and was not sorry when Milly suggested that they should return to the house, adding, with a bright flush—

"I had a note from Cousin Robert this morning. He said he would be in this part of the country motoring and suggested that he might drop in about two o'clock for lunch." She paused, then added with a pretty smile "Why don't you ask him to stay the night if he does turn up, Sue? It would be rather nice."

Stomach Troubles Are Due To Acidity

Tells Safe, Certain, Speedy Relief for Acid Indigestion.

So-called stomach troubles, such as indigestion, gas, sourness, stomach-ache and inability to retain food are in probably nine cases out of ten, simply evidence that excessive secretion of acid is taking place in the stomach, causing the formation of gas and acid indigestion.

Gas distends the stomach and causes that full, oppressive, burning feeling sometimes known as heartburn, while the acid irritates and inflames the delicate lining of the stomach. The trouble lies entirely in the excess development or secretion of acid.

To stop or prevent this souring of the food contents of the stomach and to neutralize the acid, and make it bland and harmless, a teaspoonful of bisurated magnesia, a good and effective corrector of acid stomach, should be taken in a quarter of a glass of hot or cold water after eating or whenever gas, sourness or acidity is felt. This sweetens the stomach and neutralizes the acidity in a few moments and is a perfectly harmless and inexpensive remedy to use.

An anti acid, such as bisurated magnesia which can be obtained from any druggist in either powder or tablet form enables the stomach to do its work properly without the aid of artificial digestents. Magnesia comes in several forms, so be certain to ask for and take only Bisurated Magnesia, which is especially prepared for the above purpose.

MARRIAGE IN ONE SENTENCE

There were married in the city of Wills Point last Saturday afternoon, on Fourth street, in front of the J. C. Mason Co. dry goods store, by Rev. J. F. Grizzle, an employee of said firm, in the presence of many witnesses, there being a large number of people in town on the day mentioned, as it was the last of the week, the time usually devoted to shopping, especially on the part of those living in the country, who remain with their farm work until Saturday afternoon, there being such a scarcity of labor, due to the inroads of the draft on the man-power of the country for war duty in foreign lands, and the certainty of still further calls for fighting men before the world can be made safe for democracy, Mr. Dewey Mann and Miss Lee Allen, both parties residing in the Turner community, near here, where they have many warm friends who wish them a long and happy life.—Wills Point (Texas) Chronicle.

Missing Officer Found in States

KINGSTON, Sept. 3.—Although no official information has been given out, it is understood that Major J. S. Sharpe, the former casualties officer for military district No. 3, has been located by the military authorities, and that he will be back in the city within the course of a few days. From what can be learned, Major Sharpe was located across the border. The police have been working on the case ever since the mysterious disappearance of Major Sharpe several weeks ago, and from the very start no faith whatever was put in the suicide theory.

"If You Divide, You Will Perish"

Hon. Dr. Beland's Ringing appeal at Quebec for Unity

QUEBEC, Sept. 4—Hon. Dr. H. S. Beland was given a warm welcome at the Quebec Exhibition by the officials of the Fair, by the commercial travellers, and by hundreds of people, who, despite unfavorable weather, gathered to welcome the former Postmaster-General.

Dr. Beland expressed his gratification at the warmth of the reception and in the course of his address impressed upon his audience that the future of the Province of Quebec was closely united to that of Canada at large.

"A few days ago," said Dr. Beland, "I spoke at Toronto, before a gathering of at least 20,000 people, and what I told those people then I now repeat: The extremists of the Province of Ontario may hurl insults at the people of this Province of Quebec: the extremists of the Province of Quebec may hurl insults at the people of Ontario; as for me, that is beneath my dignity. If you insult one another, if you divide, you may rest assured, you will perish."

Dr. Beland reminded his hearers that the object of the fight of the allies was to crush militarism. He expressed the hope that a League of Nations would be formed which would succeed in settling by arbitration all international difficulties. The speaker then related his experiences in Germany and told of his arrest at Anvers in the first days of the war.

He was cheered to the echo by his audience and a vote of thanks was moved by Mr. Geo. Morisset, Secretary of the Exhibition.

Chinese Minister Shot in Victoria

VICTORIA, B.C., Sept. 4—The motive for the murder here last night of Tang Hui Lung, Minister of Education for China, by Mah Chew, a Chinese barber, is thought to have been political. The barber committed suicide.

Tang Hui Lung, former Chinese Minister of the Interior, was leaving the Chinese Club, where he had been dining, when Mah Chew, waiting outside with a revolver in each hand, fired two shots at the Minister. One penetrated his jaw and the other his breast. Tang Hui Lung died within fifteen minutes. The murderer took to his heels and after running several blocks turned one of his weapons upon himself, dying in the street as his pursuers came upon him. Minister Tang, who had been here since August 26, had been in Washington on a secret mission for the Chinese Government, it was said. Well-informed local Chinese said today it was known he had avoided going home via San Francisco because he had been warned he was marked for killing there.

Mr. Tang was fifty-one years old. He was educated in the United States.

French Marriage Law Made Simpler

PARIS, Sept. 4—The Chamber of Deputies recently voted to bring about various simplifications in the traditionally old-fashioned French marriage law. Thus it no longer will be necessary to publish the banns on two Sundays. Parental consent between ages of 21 and 30 is no longer needed. A notary's notification suffices, and this is unnecessary above the age of 25. Two witnesses instead of four are now ample and the marriage ceremony, which hitherto has taken place exclusively in the Mayor's office of the local arrondissement, can be in the future, in case of illness be performed at house of one of the parties by the Registrar at the instance of the Procurer of the Republic, or without this functionary's intervention if there is urgency.

This news will come as a great relief to not a few Americans who have known the Paris marriage law many years. It has always been fashionable for Americans to be married in Paris, and the reason why many more Americans have not been married here is attributed to the antiquated laws which made of a wedding a horible ordeal.

U. S. RUBBER EARNS OVER $21 PER SHARE

New York, Sept. 4.—United States Rubber in the first six months of this year earned $10,242,365, against $7,239,966 last year. This is at an annual rate of improvement of over $6,000,000 against $5,000,000 in last year's extraordinary report.

Gross sales, if maintained at the volume of the first six months, would mean for the full year close to $220,000,000 against $176,000,000 for 1917. But the final figures are likely to run closer to $210,000,000, since January to June is always Rubber's big half year. Curtailment of tire production and further transition to a war basis will also figure to some extent.

After $2,500,000 for preferred dividends for the half year, there is a balance for common of approximately $7,700,000, or well over $21 a share.

Rubber common is earning at the rate of nearly $43 per share, which means at the rate of 70 per cent. on its market price.

ENEMY BATTALIONS REDUCED TO 880 MEN.

French Army Headquarters, Sept. 4.—Captured documents show that the German high command on the 1st of July, owing to casualties incurred in the March to May offensives, had reduced the strength of a battalion to 880.

HOW TO AVOID BACKACHE AND NERVOUSNESS

Told by Mrs. Lynch From Own Experience.

Providence, R. I.—"I was all run down in health, was nervous, had headaches, my back ached all the time. I was tired and had no ambition for anything. I had taken a number of medicines which did me no good. One day I read about Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and what it had done for women, so I tried it. My nervousness and backache and headaches disappeared. I gained in weight and feel fine, so I can honestly recommend Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound to any woman who is suffering as I was."—Mrs. ADELINE B. LYNCH, 100 Plain St., Providence, R. I.

Backache and nervousness are symptoms or nature's warnings, which indicate a functional disturbance or an unhealthy condition which often develops into a more serious ailment.

Women in this condition should not continue to drag along without help, but profit by Mrs. Lynch's experience, and try this famous root and herb remedy, Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound—and for special advice write to Lydia E. Pinkham Med. Co., Lynn, Mass.

MEN WANTED AT NOTHING PER YEAR.

Three thousand positions at nothing per year are waiting for those who can fill them. The call has been sounded in United States periodicals for "3,000 Red-Blooded Men" to take charge of Y.M.C.A. huts in France. There is no salary attached—"nothing per year" the advertisements read—"nothing but the thrill that comes to the man who does his part—nothing but the tingle of blood that squares his shoulders and makes him say to himself: 'It was my part and I did it.' "

This call for real men is but one feature of the magnificent manner in which the people of the United States have grasped the significance of the war and the urgent necessity of subordinating every minor thing to the duty of the hour, specializing and centralizing, as it were, on the big job in hand, to the end that every possibility of failure is eliminated. Providing for the comfort and well-being, spiritually, physically and mentally, of the fighting men, is recognized, and rightly so, by the people of the United States as one of the most important departments of successful war effort, and the making of soldiers who will win honor and glory on the battlefields of Europe.

The call for Y.M.C.A. men for "over there" at nothing per year reads:

> "There is no Railroad President, no Corporation Director in America too big for the job of handling one of our huts in France. Here is a chance for you men whom war has skipped. There's a need in France right now for such as you to take charge of Y.M.C.A. huts. These are the unarmed soldiers, nerve-proof under a shower of shells, willing to sleep where they can, eat when there's a chance, able to work eleven hours a day, good mixers, ready to be preachers or friends—yes, and at need, game to the core."

This call for three thousand red-blooded men willing to serve without salary in the great cause of humanity is made confidently in the sure and certain knowledge that the spirit of the American nation which is backing up wholeheartedly the sending of millions of soldiers overseas, the extension of the draft age to include all fit men between eighteen and forty-five years of age, and the expenditure of billions of dollars, will respond with eager enthusiasm to this opportunity for national and world service. The span of life is short at best and opportunities to take an active part in this Great Adventure will not be available much longer, so it is more than possible that there will be keen competition in the United States for these three thousand positions for men to whom the opportunity to serve and the reward of doing a man's part is greater than any money consideration could be.

Long hours, discomforts, dangers and hardships at nothing per year but the consciousness of helpful service to humanity and the freedom of the world—and they say that every man has his price. This war has uncovered multitudes of men beyond price—and for that alone the great sacrifice has been worth while.

DR. BELAND'S GOOD EXAMPLE.

Hon. Dr. Beland is setting a good example to the men of Quebec who are looked upon as leaders of the people, in giving the young men good and straight advice as to their duty in regard to the war. He does not mince words but strikes hard at the defaulter. Dr. Beland will no doubt accomplish much good, but a great deal of harm has already been done which it is too late now to undo. Quebec leaders preached an altogether different doctrine to that of Dr. Beland—a doctrine of separatism, of hate and resistance and the harvest has been very detrimental to the best interests of Quebec. However, there are signs now of regeneration, or at least of re-adjustment of views and actions, more or less encouraging.

Hon. Dr. Beland, speaking at St. Hyacinthe, Quebec, is reported in La Tribune as follows:

> "Young men, think of your family, your village, and your Province. This, indeed, is worth while. While you are hiding in the woods your brothers are advancing with their heads high, and as they illustrate the honor of their name and that of their mother they shed a bright light on their country. Are you not as brave as they? Can you not do as much as the others? Surely for the reason that you are of the same blood and of the same race. Good blood never lies. You have been negligent, and you are now afraid of being punished in entering the barracks. Do not be deceived, as you are absolved in advance, and you will take upon yourself your character of free men if you report yourself within the prescribed time. You have the right to be treated like the others. A little good-will! Report yourselves for the honor of your name, your prestige, and for the glory of your Province."

If the young men of Quebec had been counselled like that from the beginning of the war there might have been a different tale to tell of French Canada's war effort. Unfortunately the campaign of "persuasion and education" of their natural leaders was the reverse.

.·. CRISP COMMENT .·.

Now that the school bell summons the children back to their studies after the long vacation that vacant look in the coal bin assumes a more sinister appearance, and visions of winter lose that far-away look so comforting heretofore.

Let us not forget the sacrifices of our sailors in this great struggle for world freedom. This is the week set apart for Canadians to show their appreciation in a substantial manner of the heroic sacrifices of the brave men of the merchant marine who have given their lives for the success of the Allies and the prosperity of Canada. There are many calls upon the patriotism of Canadians but none more insistent than that the widows and orphans of Canada's sailors should be cared for.

A Vancouver magistrate has decided that it is not illegal for a dentist to advertise: "If it hurts, don't pay me." And quite right. A dentist who can dent without hurting should be encouraged to advertise the fact to the limit, says the Hamilton Herald.

A despatch from Ottawa intimates that the Government has under consideration a plan to make Canada's war effort better known both in Canada and the United States. Part of the plan includes a campaign by public speakers, it is said. Inasmuch as the newspapers have been faithfully keeping Canada's war effort before the public it would seem that better result could be obtained by a campaign of newspaper publicity than by platform speeches. The people are too busy to attend public meetings in any great numbers and the surest way to reach them is through the newspapers which enter the homes and never fail to deliver the message.

This Mr. Kidd who claimed to have been left a ten million dollar fortune by a Chicago man ought to come across with some new evidence of the reality of his inheritance. Until he does we shall continue to think that Mr. Kidd is a kidder and has been kidding himself all along. Even at that a man may get more fun out of an imaginary fortune than some others do out of a real one.—Toronto Star.

OTHER VIEWS

Helping the Allies.

Mail and Empire.

Every tenth man was shot in a German regiment that refused to go to the front. This saved the Allies some ammunition.

No Peace, Then.

New York Herald

The Berlin Lokal Anzeiger says peace is impossible so long as the views of Senator Lodge hold. What the L. A. means is that a German peace is impossible. It is, for, the Lodge views "hold."

A Valuable Book.

Vancouver Province.

The public information department of Ottawa knows how to make a war book. A small publication has been issued called "Canada's War Effort, 1914-1918." Besides the title pages, table of contents and preface, it contains only twenty-five pages. But more information is crowded into that space than many compilers get into a 300-page handbook.

Every editor of a newspaper who has this record in his hands suddenly becomes well informed on the military, naval and financial achievements of Canada in the war period, so far as they are expressed in statistics. Readers will know about munition production, shipbuilding, war trade, food control, transportation, voluntary war organizations, women's work, national registration, liquor regulations and rehabilitation of returned soldiers. Some light is thrown upon the work of the war records, war archives and war museums.

It would be a natural thing for a newspaper office to keep this book on hand and use it when necessary without acknowledgment. But from pure benevolence we suggest that every person who can get hold of the book speedily acquire a copy and read it over and over again. Then he will know better than he is likely to learn elsewhere what Canada has done in this war.

A Laugh or Two

Contribution boxes seldom get full.

Patience is the most essential ingredient of genius.

Count the day completely lost if you have not laughed.

To the gentleman every woman is a lady by right of her sex.

A woman with a three-inch tongue can make a giant feel like a midget.

Progressing

Dix—How are you making out on your resolution to economize?

Nix—Fine; I've got my running expenses slowed down to a walk.

Not Worth It.

Friend—(leaving the office with the boss)—I say, old man, you didn't lock your safe.

Boss—No, I never do. It cost three hundred dollars, and I don't want burglars to ruin it for the little I have in it.

Different

Sweet Young Thing—Ai'm awfully glad the waw's ovah in Fwance.

Her Escort—What are you talking about? The war isn't even beginning to end.

Sweet Young Thing—Ai didn't say it was. Ai merely said Ai was glad it was ovah in Fwance.

Easy Magic.

Wigg—Young Gotrox is a mighty entertaining fellow. He can perform a lot of tricks of magic.

Wagg—Yes, when I have been out with him I have frequently seen him make a $20 bill look like 30 cents.

Pretty Soft Job.

At the lunch hour he heard this conversation between the office boy and his evidently unattached friend.

"Gee, how long you been workin' here?"

"Ten days already."

"Good job?"

"Swell."

"When do you hafter ter get to work?"

"Any time I want to."

"Aw, go-wan! Whatcha tryin' to do, kid me?"

"Nope, I can go to work any time I feel like it, just so I ain't no later than 7 o'clock."

Inquisitive.

Mr. Brown—I had a queer dream last night, my dear. I thought I saw another man running off with you.

Mrs. Brown—And what did you say to him.

Mr. Brown—I asked him what he was running for.

All in the Taste.

"Can any little boy," asked the teacher, "tell me the difference between a lake and an ocean?"

"I can," replied Edward, whose wisdom had been learned from experience. "Lakes are much more pleasant to swallow when you fall in."

DANGEROUS ANTISEPTICS AND GERMICIDES ARE UNNECESSARY

A dependable antiseptic has come to be considered a necessity in most homes. Especially is this true since Absorbine, Jr., has had such a wide introduction, because this liniment is not only a powerful antiseptic and germicide but it is absolutely safe to use and to have around the house. It is not poisonous and it cannot do harm even if the children do get hold of it. That is a big point to consider.

Absorbine, Jr. is concentrated and is therefore economical. It retains its germicidal properties even diluted one part Absorbine, Jr. to 100 parts water—and its antiseptic properties, one part Absorbine, Jr., to 200 parts of water.

The antiseptic and germicidal properties have been repeatedly tested and proven in many prominent chemical laboratories. Detailed laboratory reports mailed upon request.

Absorbine, Jr. combines safety with efficiency. $1.25 a bottle at most druggists or postpaid.

Send 10c for liberal trial bottle. W. F. Young, P.D.F., 457 Lymans Bldg., Montreal, Canada.

The Poet's Corner

AFTERMATH.

. . . unto the third and fourth generation of them that hate me.

The hand of God is holden,
 The lips of God are still;
Freely His creature chooses
 To cherish or to kill;
And you laugh as the altar crashes
 And the wine of the cup is spilt,
And you shout that your sword shall answer
 To a pagan god for your guilt;
But when this night is ended,
 But when new days begin,
Bitterly shall your children
 Pay for their father's sin.

The wrath of many nations
 Shall drive you to your place,
Man's soul is risen against you,
 Man's judgment you shall face—
When the blood has dried in the valley,
 And the guns come down from the hill,
And the armies melt in the vineyards,
 And the harvest goes to the mill.
Then, when the men are sowing,
 Then, when the women spin,
Bitterly shall your children
 Pay for their fathers' sin.

The gates of life shall open,
 The feast of love be spread,
Joy shall come in with music,
 Bringing earth's wine and bread;
And the nations shall draw together,
 And the peoples shall be as one,
But you shall come in unwelcomed
 And you shall sit down by none
Slowly man's heart shall open
 His doors to let you in;
Bitterly shall your children
 Pay for their fathers' sin.

The eyes of all shall mark you,
 Lips as you pass be dumb,
Into the path you follow
 No other guest shall come;
You shall sit at the feast unfriended,
 You shall go from the house unstayed,
You shall be on the earth a stranger
 Till the debt that you owe is paid.
Hardly to man's forgiveness
 Shall Belgium's slayer win,
Bitterly shall your children
 Curse for their fathers' sin.

—Harold Begbie, in The Observer.

REEVE HESS ASSISTED

In the account of The Belleville-Trenton Highway in yesterday's issue the name of J. W. Hess, Reeve of Sid- was unintentionally omitted from the deputation which was appointed to interview the Minister of Public Works. Mr. Hess was one of the most important members of the deputation and it is regretted that his name was omitted.

FRACTURED HIS SKULL

A lad named Asselstine, whose parents have quarters in the old O'Brien Hotel apartments, on Saturday evening while sliding down a bannister slipped and fell to the floor below. The victim was taken to the hospital where it was ascertained his skull was fractured.

ENJOYABLE EVENING

Miss Mabel Clarke last evening entertained about twelve guests at her home Cedar street. Numerous games were played, including euchre. Supper was served and the party broke up in the wee hours of the morning, every one enjoying themselves and declaring Mabel an ideal hostess.

SECURED PRIZES FOR CHEESE

Mr. E. E. Diamond, cheese maker at the Mountain Factory, Tyendinaga Township, succeded in securing three prizes at the Toronto Exhibiton. For August make of white cheese he secured 2nd prize; 4th prize for July make of white, and 8th prize for June make of white.

FURTHER CUT IN ALLOWANCE

Something drastic in sugar regulations for those who have to dine out in restaurants and hotels is announced in a circular just issued by the Canada Food Board, and received by restaurants yesterday. The circular says that no more than two pounds of sugar must be used for each 90 meals, and restaurants figure that this means one teaspoonful for each meal. If a man or woman now orders coffee and a cereal for breakfast, the person must make the one teaspoonful do for both.

OPENING OF SCHOOLS

There was a large attendance of pupils at the opening of the High and Public Schools in the city yesterday after the summer holidays. The morning was taken up in the arranging of pupils in their classes and the schools were closed in the afternoon in order that the children might procure the necessary books and other supplies a list of which they were provided with. In consequence the book stores yesterday afternoon were beseiged with children. This morning the classes were resumed as usual.

COBOURG BANKER THE VICTIM

The gypsy woman, who a few days ago was arrested in this vicinity on complaint of the Chief of Police of Cobourg, was taken back to the latter town. She was charged with stealing $50 from a banker of Cobourg, and the usual mode of performance was carried out. The victim was instructed to hold a few bills in his hand, the gypsy woman holding the hand. A tap on the victim's body is given, and after the tap the money is missing. The gypsy woman made her getaway in an automobile, instead of the old fashioned caravan. The woman was compelled to return the $50 and was fined $20, which was paid.

AUTOS COLLIDE

Monday night a McLaughlin car bound for Picton and a Ford enroute to Toronto collided on the bridge at Gage's Creek, near Port Hope, and the Ford was turned over the embankment. There were four passengers in the Ford and three were badly cut and shaken up, while the little boy escaped injury. The eldest gentleman of the party was recovering from an operation for appendicitis and his injuries are probably the most serious. The returned soldier, who was driving the car was badly cut about the face and head but his injuries are not serious. The party in the car going to Picton escaped injury and it is claimed that they were entirely responsible for the smash up. The name of the owner of the car was secured and he will be called upon to settle.—Port Hope Guide.

CUMMINGS—GAY.

Everett Reginald Cummings and Norah Bell Gay, both of Sidney Township, were quietly married at the Holloway Street parsonage Tuesday evening by the Rev. J. N. Clarry. The young couple will reside in Sidney Township.

TAG DAY RESULT

In spite of the bad weather on Saturday the proceeds of the Belleville Branch of the Canadian War Contingent Association tag day, were $530 00. As the C. W. C. A. has to depend entirely on donations as a source of revenue for overseas work, the above sum is most welcome for Christmas work, which is now on hand.

MORTALLY WOUNDED

Mr. James H. Davidson, who resides on the Kingston Road near Herchimer Avenue, just east of the city limits, received word from Washington that his son, John Davidson, was on July 16th, 1918, mortally wounded. No further particulars have been received. He enlisted with a U. S. engineering corps after he had endeavored to enlist in Canada at Calgary and Edmonton. Another brother, a member of the Canadian contingent, is somewhere in France. Mr. Davidson, Sr., is an old U. S. veteran, having fought through the Civil War and every quarter, through Col. Ponton of this city, is in receipt of a pension. The patriotic spirit of the family is thus apparent in the father and sons. John Davidson, who was mortally wounded, was 38 years of age, and was born here, and was a plumber by trade.

MISSING BAG RECOVERED

A lady residing in east Belleville, this morning reported to the police that she visited a bank in the city and when she left forgot to take a handbag which she was carrying. When she returned to the bank she could not find the missing article. The police investigated the affair and found the bag beneath a desk, where the lady was seated while transacting some business.

CHEVROLET CAR STOLEN

A Chevrolet car with the marker 89264 attached, was some time during last night stolen from Mr. George Little's garage at Trenton. The body of the car is dark green and it is a 1918 model. The police of Belleville have been notified of the theft and requested to be on the look out for the car.

Increased Wages For 30,000 Canadian Railway Shopmen

Railway War Board Orders That Wage Schedules Conform To McAdoo Award—Additional Annual Outlay of Fifteen Million Dollars

MONTREAL, Sept. 4—An agreement was reached yesterday between the Canadian Railway War Board, through its Labor Committee, and the representatives of the Railroad Shopmen's Federation, in regard to demands made for increased wages. The men will be given the McAdoo ward offered to United States railway employees, and all its amendment. Thirty thousand men in railroad shops all over Canada are affected, and the increases in wages will total $15,000,000 per annum. All the Canadian railways are touched by the decision.

By this agreement the threatened trouble with the employees of the mechanical departments of the roads is removed. The agreement goes into effect either from the date of the expiry of recent agreement or not later, in the case of unexpired agreement, than August 1st. The men's pay is calculated retroactively accordingly. Fourteen basic trades are concerned in the agreement. For the conclusion of the negotiations is said to be an epoch-making event as this is the first time in Canadian railway history that all the roads have negotiated as one with such a large complex body of workers.

BIG STRIKE AVERTED

There has been marked unrest in this division of railway labor in Canada for some time and it threatened to come to a strikel ast May. Negotiations had begun in April, but were broken off when the men declined to accept the same rates of pay as were being offered under the so-called McAdoo schedule in the United States. The Canadian Railway War Board stated that it would direct the railways to pay the McAdoo ward. The amendments were then in process of settlement, but the workers here stopped negotiations on the grounds that the Board's offer was too vague. They asked in the meantime that the scores of different workers included in their organization should be divided approximately into three groups. First, the skilled tradesmen, for whom seventy-five cents an hour was demanded, second, the less skilled workers, for whom sixty-two and a half cents a hour was asked; third the helpers, for whom fifty-six and a quarter cents an hour was asked. The old rates were roughly, 45 to 54 cents for the first class, 30 to 40 cents for the second and 25 to 30 cents for the third. The new agreement represents a compromise. The railways, under the direction of the Canadian Railway War Board have made concessions in regard to classifications, and are to pay the men in the three classes 68 cents instead of 75 asked, 58 instead of 62 1-2 asked, and 45 cents instead of 56 1-4. The board has since put the McAdoo scale in force in all departments.

GET EIGHT-HOUR DAY

The eight-hour day is adopted but in such a way that the day shifts will work eight and a half hours for five days a week, and four and a half hours on Saturday, making 47 hours per week, as compared to 55 hours per week, as hitherto, and 48 hours in the United States. The American workers do not take Saturday afternoon off, and therefore work eight hours a day for six days full.

The new agreement is subject to termination on thirty days notice from either side.

One important point lies in the wiping out of a class formerly known as "specialists." These were men who had not served an apprenticeship but who were doing semi-skilled work. They were treated separately from the qualified tradesmen who had served an appreticeship. These "specialists" will now be able to work up to the an apprenticeship. These "specialists" fourth year of service subject to certain conditions specified in the agreement.

IN THE UNITED STATES, TOO

WASHINGTON, Sept. 4—Nearly one million men, or half the railroad employees in the United States share in additional wage increases approved today by Director-General McAdoo for track laborers, watchemn and other maintenance-of-way employees, clerks, station agents and other classes of employees drawing relatively low pay.

The new increases, the second granted in supplement to the Government's general wage order, will add nearly $100,000,000 to the annual railroad pay rolls, it is said. Most of the increases range from ten to thirty per cent. above present wages.

French Kill Prussians Hun Dead Piled Up

With the French Armies in the Field, Sept. 4—The battle on the plateau north of Soissons has used some of the best divisions remaining in the German army. Monday's fighting between Crecy-au-Mont and Leuilly and between Tuvigny and Terny was particularly severe.

This was evidenced this morning by the field being strewn with the dead of the Prussian Guards. They are piled one on top of the other in some trenches and long lines of them show where the guards counter-attacked five times in a vain effort to stem the tide of battle which was running against them.

Each one of these added largely to the losses of the Prussians in wounded as well as in dead, while after each rush a lot more of unwounded prisoners remained in the hands of the French. More than 1,200 Germans were sent to the rear in the course of the battle.

Both tanks an dair squadrons contributed to the rout of the Guards. Aviators, flying low over the fields, met the attacking forces with a galling machine gun fire and pursued the decimated lines as they retired before the unflinching French troops.

Tanks drove into the enemy's lines, machine gunning and shelling the assaulting waves and opening big gaps in the German lines.

Lad Injured At Napanee

NAPANEE, Sept. 4.—On Monday afternoon about two o'clock the firemen were called to a small blaze at Casey Denison's, Centre street. During the rush of people towards the fire, several children on bicycles were also in the crowd. On rounding a corner an automobile and wheel came together, throwing the boy off, and before the auto could be stopped the front wheel was on the boy, and when liberated it was feared he was badly injured. When examined by a doctor no bones were broken but it is feared that there may be internal injuries. The boy's name is Melville Wagar, a son of Charles Wagar, Deseronto. He was visiting relatives in Napanee.

W. Grothier, for the past two years cashier in the Merchants Bank, Napanee, left yesterday for Little Current. Nursing Sister Eleanor Baker surprised her father by walking in without announcing her arrival, and the surprise was a glad one. Miss Baker is home on a month's furlough. She has been overseas and in France almost two years.

The name of Pte. Albert Nunney appears in the casualty list. Pte. Nunney was born in England and enlisted in the 80th Battalion at Belleville in 1915, proceding overseas with the unit in 1916.

Nursing Sister Ruby E. Hamilton, C. A. M. C., has been appointed temporary matron at Drummond Military Convalescent Hospital, Montreal.

The Royal Canadian Horse Artillery, which has been in training at Petawawa Camp during the summer, returned to Kingston Saturday morning. Preparations had been made for their reception at the barracks at Tete 'u Pont, and the morning was spent in unloading the guns from the flat cars of the C. P. R. station. Only one accident occurred, and it was not serious. One of the guns was overturned at the foot of Brock street, when a sharp turn around the corner was made and a batteryman was thrown into the mud, but escaped with a few scratches on his face and hands.

WESTERN CROP DAMAGE REPORTS GREATLY MAGNIFIED—WANT 10,000 HARVESTERS AT ONCE.

Reports previously published regarding the damage by frost to the crops in Saskatchewan were unduly pessimistic. Frequent showers and favorable weather have changed the outlook and it is apparent that the great province of Saskatchewan will have a normal crop. This is evidenced by Western demands for farm laborers, as not less than 10,000 are required immediately for harvesting.

Every young man and those more mature, in every community in Ontario, including our own, should get away and can make this a great opportunity to serve the country in a practical way, and at the same time be of invaluable benefit to himself. It means an interesting, long-distance journey at low fares, and a chance to see and study the immense new country served by the Canadian Northern—the People's Road.

Final excursions by Canadian Northern trains leaving Toronto 10.00 p.m. August 29th, 30th, September 4th, and 11th. Harvesters from outside points to use connecting trains to Toronto.

SENSATIONAL FINISH.

Baseball history does not record any more sensational finish to a pennant race than that staged in the New International League for the season of 1918 when Toronto grabbed the honors from Binghamton in the dying moments of Labor Day afternoon after the Bingoes had apparently the championship well within their grasp. The Toronto victory caused great jubilation among the thousands of fans at the game and the thousands of other followers of the team who were not so fortunate as to see the finish. Seldom have the "breaks" happened so quickly and to such an advantage to a team. It was about ten minutes to six when the news arrived at the Island Stadium that Binghamton had lost the second game to Baltimore, and the Leafs had a chance for the pennant provided they could win from Buffalo. Five minutes to six the whistles were blowing, the crowd was in a frenzy on the field, and the championship had been won by Toronto. The nearest approach to such a situation was at Diamond Park in 1902 when Toronto had to win two games in an afternoon to win the pennant from Buffalo, but Jersey City made the task easy by beating the Bisons in the first game of a double-header. Last year Larry Lajoie's men had to win the first game on the last day to cinch the honors.

Foe Perilously Near Disaster in the West

Retreat on Virtually 50 Miles of Front Forced by Allied Hammer

NEW YORK, Sept. 4—The Associated Press issued the following:

On a front of virtually 50 miles, from just below Ypres to a point near Peronne on the Somme, the German armies are in retreat. This retrograde movement is not a voluntary one on the part of the enemy, but has been forced by a series of unre- Foch in the past six or seven weeks. It is has now been accelerated by the notable victory won by Field Marshal Haig yesterday in breaking through the strong defensive lines protecting the railway centres of Douai and of Cambrai and threatening to outflank even the main Hindenburg line south to St. Quentin.

Fired on Boats When Help Arrived

Eight Men of "Tycho" Killed by Callous Hun Action

Absolute lack of all the generous qualities is shown in the despicable treatment of the crew of the "Tycho" blown up by a German U-boat off Beachy Head. Immediately the torpedo struck her, the vessel started to go down by the head. The order to abandon ship was given ten minutes after the ship was truck, and was ordered out without casualties. The "Tycho" went down ten minutes later, and the crew pulled toward the steamship "Porthkerry" which had seen the explosion and was standing by about 200 yards on the port beam.

As the "Tycho's" boats came alongside her another torpedo was discharged by the submarine. This blew up one of the boats, killing the master and 14 men, and capsized the other boat. The "Porthkerry" was abandoned with eight casualties, the vessel going down in three minutes after being struck by the torpedo. The survivors of both ships were picked up at 7 o'clock that night by a small coasting steamer and landed at Newhaven at midnight.

These 14 men had dependents for whom the Navy League of Canada is raising a fund during "Sailors' Week" September 1st and 7th.

40,000 Alleged Slackers Arrested

Big Military Drive in New York City Mops Up Gay Broadway

NEW YORK, Sept. 4.—Federal officials estimated shortly before midnight that more than 40,000 suspected slackers had been arrested yesterday, in New York and nearby cities in the great round-up of draft-evaders conducted by 25,000 soldiers, sailors, police and Government agents. Semi-official estimates of the number of "wilful slackers or deserters" ran from 50 per cent. of the men arrested in certain districts of the Bronx to 5 per cent. or less in outlying cities or towns. Most of the prisoners, it was said, come from other parts of the country.

According to Charles F. DeWoody, Chief of the Local Bureau of Investigation of the Department of Justice, who directed the drive, from 10,000 to 12,000 men had been taken to the 69th Regiment Armory alone, while police stations in Manhattan were literally filled to overflowing, so that prisoners had to be placed under guard in school yards.

While many arrests were made in the morning, the noon hour and at the close of the business day, a great percentage of them occurred last night when the theatre crowds on Broadway came in for an almost micrascope inspection. Cabarets and amusement places at Coney Island also were raided.

Stop Sunday Motoring at Niagara Falls

NIAGARA FALLS, N. Y., Sept. 4.—The way of joyrider is hard in Niagara Falls. Federal Administrator Garfield last week issued a request that no automobiles be used for pleasure on Sundays. It was a step to conserve the gasoline supply for war purposes. It was only a request and no means were provided for enforcing it. But the patriotic folk of the Falls took the enforcement of the request into their own hands and found the means of reaching the end. The Sunday crowds stopped every automobile that appeared in Falls street—the city's main thoroughfare. If the car was found to be used for pleasure the air was let out of the tires and the gas out of the tank. Garage men refused to haul the stranded cars away and the street was filled with abandoned machines at midnight. Every garage in the city was closed on Sunday. They will close every Sunday while the ban on Sunday joyriding is in effect.

Fine Weather For World's Series To-Day

Special Despatch to The Intelligencer, Canadian Press, Limited.

CHICAGO, Sept. 5.—With clear and warm weather predicted the Chicago Nationals and Boston Americans this afternoon were scheduled to make a start in their battle for the baseball championship of the world. Despite the fact that the present series marks the swan song of baseball until after the war, interest was a lower ebb this year than ever before, in the opinion of world's series veterans. Following is probably the batting order today:

Boston—Hooper, r.; Shean, 2nd; Strunk, c.f.; Ruth, l.f.; McInnis, 1st; Scott, s.s.; Coffey or Thomas, 3rd; Scott, c.; Mays or Bush, p.

Chicago—Flack, r.f.; Hollocher, s.s.; Mann, l.f.; Packert, c.; Merkle, 1st; Pick, 2nd; Deal, 3rd; Killifer, c.; Vaughn or Tyler, p.

WESTERN FRONT CUT DOWN.

Paris, Sept. 5.—The entente allies have reduced the length of the western battle front by nearly 60 miles since July 18 by pressing back the Germans from the territory which they conquered in their offensives of March, April, and July. This places at the disposal of the entente allied commander-in-chief a large number of divisions which heretofore have been engaged in holding the line.

MURDERER HANGED IN WEST.

Prince Albert, Sask., Sept. 5.—John Stanke was hanged here yesterday morning at seven o'clock for the murder of Michael Nerowski at Elstow on March 28 1918. He walked to the scaffold without a tremor.

"Moresby Sank In Ten Minutes

Was Torpedoed by Unseen German Submarine

Struck by a torpedo from an unseen U-boat, the British steamship Moresby sank within one and a half minutes and precipitated its crew into the water. The chief officer, his wife, one A.B. and 29 Chinamen were lost. The master, second mate, second and third engineers, one A.B. and seven Chinamen were saved.

To protect the dependents of the men of the Mercantile Marine who gave their lives in the service, the Navy League of Canada is urging the people of Ontario to contribute $1,000,000 during "Sailors' Week, September 1st to 7th.

WINDSOR'S NEW PAPER

Border Cities Star Inaugurated—First Sales for Patriotic Fund

WINDSOR, Sept. 5.—The Border Cities Star, Windsor's new afternoon daily, was formally launched under auspicious circumstances, when half a score of prominent business men of Windsor, Walkerville, Ford, Sandwich and Objibway, after witnessing the starting of the presses, took charge of the street sales and turned the receipt over to one of the patriotic funds. The Star is owned by W. F. Herrman of Saskatoon, who purchased The Windsor Record from J. F. McKay a month ago, and renamed the paper, changing it to an eight-column sheet.

FAIL TO SEE WHERE ENEMY CAN MAKE A STRONG STAND

LONDON, Sept. 5.—The British critics express the belief that the Germans would not be able to hold the Sensee and Nord Canals and, with the Germans losing more of the Hindenburg line every day, the experts fail to see where the Germans can make a strong stand after their recent severe defeats and their lack of reserves.

Daughter of Prince to Wed Private

LONDON, Sept. 5.—Lady Louise Mont Batten, daughter of ex-Prince Louis of Battenberg (formerly First Sea Lord, now since the abolition of German titles in England the Marquis of Milford Haven), is to be married to Pte. Hall, a young Scottish painter doing orderly work in the same hospital in France where Lady Louise is employed.

It is quite a romantic love match. The consent of the parents was obtained, and Pte. Hall has been received in Buckingham Palace, where King George assented to the marriage. Hall is a clever painter, good looking and cultivated. His father is engaged in the fish trade in Aberdeen.

Lady Louise is a niece of the former Czarina and of Princess Henry of Prussia, and first cousin of the Queen of Spain. As an example of the obliterating effects of the war on caste feeling this match is the most striking yet recorded and was impossible in the days before the war.

Munitions Chief Under Suspicion

CHATHAM, Ont., Sept. 5.—William Wecker, superintendent of the local munitions plant, charged with being a German sympathizer and failing to have proper papers as provided by the M.S.A., was remanded in Police Court until Friday for trial. It is charged on the information that Wecker said: "I am a German and proud of it. I would sooner have Germans work for me than these d—— Englishmen." Wecker denies he ever made the statement attributed to him. His employers have engaged counsel.

Siberian Force Is Progressing

Mounted Police Cavalry Squadron Mobilized at Regina

OTTAWA, Sept. 5.—The organization of the force to be raised in Canada for service in Siberia is making satisfactory progress, according to an official statement which says:

"The cavalry, a squadron furnished by the Royal North-West Mounted Police, is being mobilized at Regina; the artillery, comprised of a field battery and an ammunition column, at Petawawa; the engineers, a field company and a signal company, at St. John's Que., and a machine-gun company at Toronto.

"Of the two infantry battalions, one is being raised in the Provinces of Ontario and Quebec, with component companies, one at London and Kingston, one at Toronto, one at Montreal, and one at Quebec city.

"The other battalion is being raised in the Maritime Provinces and in the West, component companies at Halifax, Winnipeg, Regina, and Calgary and Victoria."

Barbed Wire Along Beach Near Venice

VENICE, Sept. 5.—That part of the population that fled is gradually drifting back to Venice since the victory on the Piave, in spite of a slight renewal of activity by Austrian airmen after a lapse of seven months. More than 10,000 people who went away have returned already and the bathing season has started again at Lido, which is the island seashore of Venice. It must be the oldest seashore place in Europe, for the big bathing establishment which used to be, in peace time, the paradise ground for the most daring bathing costumes which the tastes of feminine visitors from Austria could devise, now lies in the midst of the Lido defences against an enemy landing. The sand is dug into trenches and a thick barbed wire entanglement runs right across that part of the beach where the bathers bask in the sun after their swim. It is odd to see this throng of people in bright bathing costumes, sitting under gay sun umbrellas, with that belt of sinister barbed wire passing among them, and sentries, with fixed bayonets, watching their water frolics from each corner of the enclosure and from the boats around.

Sometimes even the Venetians are obliged to take their pleasures seriously, for there is a notice in each dressing cabin that the sentries have orders to fire on any bather who goes beyond the limits of water fixed for the establishment. Since the season opened the sentries have recalled three or four heedless swimmers by sending bullets to splash up the water beside them.

As one leaves the bathing place, too, there is a scrutiny by military police to be undergone, perhaps to defeat any attempt by the Austrians to land troops disguised as bathers.

From The Volga To Vladivostok

LONDON, Sept. 5.—According to The Daily Mail's Harbin correspondent, the allies' forces have established uninterrupted connection between their forces across Siberia from the Volga to Vladivostok.

The despatch, which is dated Monday evening, says the vanguard of the Czecho-Slovak forces from Verkat-Udinsk, 80 miles east of Lake Baikal, have joined hands with General Semenoff's forces on the Onon River, and General Diedrichs, the Czech Commander at Vladivostok, already is in telegraphic communication with the Trans-Baikal Czechs.

'From Pensa to Vladivostok, on the Volga," the correspondent adds, "there is now an uninterrupted chain of allied troops.

KINGSTON SOLDIER DEAD

KINGSTON, Sept. 5.—A private cablegram received by relatives announces the death in action of one of Knigston's best-known young men in the person of Capt. Stanley Cunningham, who went overseas in 1916 with the 21st Battalion. Previous to his enlistment he was practising as a civil engineer in the city.

A sentence by court-martial at London of five years' penal servitude on a deserter was reduced by the authorities in Ottawa to 42 days'detention.

Officers Felt Death Was Near

KINGSTON, Sept. 5.—In connection with the death of Capt. Stanley Cunningham, as with the death of Lieut.-Col. Elmer Jones, of the 21st Battalion, there is a peculiar fatality and one that shows how premonitions and presentiments on the part of the brave soldiers at the front often prove only too well founded.

As evidence of this, W. R. Givens, editor of the Kingston Standard, tells the following story of a meeting with Lieut.-Col. Jones about two weeks before his death, and of the conversation that followed:

"We had," said Mr. Givens, "just left Sir Douglas Haig, the commander-in-chief of the British forces, whom we had visited at his headquarters, and we then proceeded to a near-by city, (which it were better not to mention since that would, indicate where Gen. Haig's headquarters are —though perhaps they have been moved by this time) when I met Col. Jones in company with some other officers, and lunched with them.

After lunch Col. Jones took me aside and asked concerning various people in Kingston and Brockville, after which he proceeded to talk of the 21st Battalion, of which he was so proud. I notice then that he seemed, for him—for he was a man of wonderful spirits—to be unduly depressed, and hoping to cheer him up I made some joking remark.

"Ah, that's well and good, Givens," replied the Colonel, "but you don't understand the situation. We have just come out of the trenches and, as you know, we are going in again in a few days for a much bigger fight than ever—and glad to be in it, too, to give the Huns a further taste of Canadian 'push.' But it's a bad business. I've just left Major Harry Pense and Stanley Cunningham not more than an hour ago—as brave boys and as fine officers as ever stood in shoe leather, with hearts of oak and a courage of steel—and while Pense sought to cheer us up I am frank to say that Stanley and I were depressed. To tell you the truth, old man, we both have felt uneasy about this coming affair and while I can't speak for Stanley I have a presentiment that I'm going into this fight probably to be killed."

Imagine the feelings, then, of those who heard this remark when a few weeks later the announcement came that Col. Jones had been one of the first to be killed—shot through the chest and instantly killed.

And now comes the sad news of Capt. Cunningham's death, as though to emphasize the significance of the presentiment which each of these gallant officers had that the "next fight" would be for them perhaps the last fiht. It is tragic and sad beyond expression.

Canada to Make Linen Threads

OTTAWA, Sept. 5.—Steps are being taken by the Government through the Canadian War Trade Board to secure the establishment in Canada for an industry for the manufacture of linen threads and yarns.

At the present time a variety of commodities are produced from flax grown in the Dominion. Hitherto, however, linen thread and yarns have not been manufactured. Canada has depended upon Great Britain and the United States for them. Of late it has been difficult to secure supplies. Only small and irregular shipments have been received from Britain and exportation from the United States has been stopped. Hence it becomes necessary that a thread and yarn spinning industry be encouraged in order to meet the demand for thread for the boot and shoe manufacturing industry, for the making of harness and other leather goods and equipment, for the weaving of nets for the fisherman of the country and for many other purposes. This problem has been engaging the attention of the Government and has been the subject of a number of conferences. It has been decided that encouragement shall be given to firms in Canada to engage in the industry. An order-in-Council has been passed, it is understood, empowering the Canadian War Trade Board to carry on the negotiations and make the necessary arrangements. The new industry will supply the needs of many manufacturers in Canada and will afford a new use for flax grown on farms in the Dominion.

The increases recently granted to postal employees in the outside service will involve, it is estimated, three million dollars more than the salaries hitherto paid.

BRITISH TAKE 16,000 PRISONERS IN FOUR DAYS AND MORE THAN 100 GUNS

HUNS IN FULL RETREAT ALONG WHOLE LINE

TIDE OF VICTORY STILL BLESSES ALLIES WITH ABUNDANT SUCCESS — ENEMY ATTEMPTS TO STEM THE ADVANCE OF THE ALLIED ARMIES ARE COSTLY AND FRUITLESS—NOW IN GENERAL RETREAT AND BURNING MUNITIONS AS THEY GO — BRITISH AND CANADIANS ARE CLOSING IN ON CAMBRAI — BRITISH HAVE DRIVEN ENEMY BACK TO LINE OF APRIL 9—AMERICAN TROOPS DOING SPLENDID SERVICE WITH FRENCH FORCES.

Special Despatches to The Intelligencer, Canadian Press, Limited.

PARIS, Sept. 5.—Victory still smiles on the Allied arms. The enemy is in retreat along the whole line from Ypres to Rheims. Honors yesterday were with the French and Americans of the allied right wing, which at last gained the reward of several days' persistent effort. Exactly how far they advanced it is difficult to say for the line moved forward hourly. The enemy, who has lost heavily in men, announces by the hurried destruction of material, his intention of abandoning—if he has not already done so—Chauny, Jussy, La Fere and probably Ham. The British also continue to make very important progress today.

GERMANS IN FULL RETREAT.

PARIS, Sept. 5.—(Official)—The German retreat before the French northeast of Noyon continued during the night. The French troops kept in touch with the enemy rearguards and pushed after the retiring foe east of the Canal du Nord. French-American forces pursuing the Germans north of the Vesle have reached the line of the Aisne river. Advancing north of the Vesle French and American troops reached the crest of the ridge dominating the River Aisne.

FRENCH ADVANCE CONTINUES.

In the region of Nesle on the Somme front French troops crossed the Somme Canal near Voyennes and Offoy. Just to the south they have reached the region beyond Pombleux, Emmery, Hallon and Flavy-le-Meldeux. Between the Ailette and the Aisne the towns of Clamecy Braye and Missy-sur-Aisne have been captured. The operation on the Vesle river has been extended to the east and the crossing has been effected between Venteaux and Jonchery on a two and one-half mile front.

BRITISH VICTORIES ON FLANDERS FRONT

LONDON, Sept. 5.—(Official)—Marked progress was made by the British last night along the Flanders front. Ploegsteert village has been captured, as has Hill 61, southwest of Messines. On the Lys front the British hold the general line of Voormezeele, Wulverghem, Ploegsteert, Nieppe, Laventie and Givenchy.

From Neuve Chapelle southward to Givenchy the British have reached the line they held up to the German attack of April 9th last, while to the eastward of Givenchy sections of the old German positions have been taken.

CLOSING IN ON CAMBRAI.

On the battle line in front of Cambrai an improvement in the British positions south of Moeuvres is reported. Positions to the east of Permies, near the Canal du Nord, just to the south, also have been improved. Still further south the British have captured the village of Neuville-Bourjouval, east of the Canal du Nord.

16,000 PRISONERS, 100 GUNS.

More than sixteen thousand prisoners and more than 100 guns have been taken by the British in the past four days.

THE GERMAN VERSION.

BERLIN, via London, Sept. 5.—Between Ypres and LaBassee in the Lys salient the British yesterday pressed forward against new German lines, the German War Office announced today. Between the Somme and Oise rivers, the statement adds, the Germans continued their movement out of the region of Roye. Rearguards which had been left behind to retard the French, followed the Germans slowly.

THE WAR YESTERDAY

Cambrai is to be developed from the southwest as well as from the northwest and north, where the Canadians are operating and where several bridges across the unfinished Canal du Nord have been seized and held by General Currie's advancing-guards, pending preparations for the crossing of the canal in force. The attack on the southwest has been entrusted to English and Welsh troops, the latter probably the Fusileer Division which swept over the old Somme battleground at amazing speed. Sir Douglas Haig's report of last night states that yesterday, in the region to the northeast of Peronne, the Tortille River and the Canal du Nord were forced on a wide front in the face of the enemy, who held the east bank and attempted to arrest the advance with machine-gun and artillery fire. The village of Manancourt and Etricourt were carried with great dash, and the victors now hold the rising ground to the east of the formidable barrier presented by the canal excavations.

Still farther north excellent progress was made by troops from the north of England and New Zealanders, who reached the outskirts of the Inportant Wood of Havrincourt, east of the canal line. Moeuvres also was entered from the north, and fighting on this part of the front continues among the old Hindenburg line defences.

The general effect of these advances has been to bring pressure to bear against the Germans defending Cambrai all around a semi-circular front—from the north to the southwest—of about ten miles. The Canadians, who are advancing along the Arras road from the northwest, are still somewhat nearer the city than their comrades to the south, but the capture of Moeuvres yesterday will enable the English troops there to join with the army of General Currie in an enveloping attack against Boulon Wood, the only important defensible position that remains to the enemy on the West front of Cambrai. It may take two or three days to bring up and transfer to the east side of the Canal du Nord the guns and tanks required for an operation so important as the capture of Bourlon Wood. Its occupation would force the Germans to withdraw from Cambrai, for guns emplaced on the wooded height of Bourlon would command not only the roads leading into Cambrai from the west but the roads from the city to the east and south.

WIFE'S AFFECTIONS VALUED AT $25,000

NEW YORK, Sept. 5.—Luigi Curci, husband of Mme. Amelita Galli Curci, prima donna, yesterday began suit against Charles L. Wagner and Homer Samuels, manager and accompanist, respectively, of the noted soprano, alleging alienation of affection and seeking $250,000 damages.

Bomb Outrage At Chicago

Four Men Killed and 75 Others Injured by Explosion in Federal Building

Special Despatch to The Intelligencer, Canadian Press, Limited.

CHICAGO, Sept. 5.—Fourteen men were held today out of scores seized by Federal agents and police as the result of the explosion of a bomb yesterday in the Federal building which killed four persons, injured more than thirty others and did considerable damage to property.

Chicago, Sept. 5.—Four persons were killed and more than seventy-five others injured by the explosion of a bomb in the crowded entrance to the Federal building at 3.10 o'clock yesterday afternoon. The explosion, which not only wrecked the entrance to the building, but shattered every window of the first three floors of the building across the street, was attributed to the I.W.W. by Philip J. Barry, in charge of the local officers of the Department of Justice.

Raids on two headquarters of the I.W.W. within fifteen minutes after the explosion resulted in the arrest of nine men. Several more were taken into custody within the Federal Building, and a woman, whose name was suppressed, was arrested in a nearby building. Last night more than 1,500 Government agents and the entire city police force were seeking the perpetrators of the outrage.

Late Telegraph Briefs

The Government has assumed complete control of the purchase and sale for export and of the methods of export of wheat.

Waterloo Council ordered its Town Solicitor to resign, alleging inefficient service and not attending all the Council's meetings.

Miss Ruth Walker, B. A., of Woodstock Collegiate Institute staff has, after competitive examination, been asked by the Dominion Government to join the Civil Service Commissions at Ottawa.

Henry Hamilton, the dramatic author, died yesterday in London.

The British postmen, it is reported, are about to demand an increase of wages and better ararngements of working hours.

Arab forces under the King of the Hedjaz continue to make harassing raids upon the railway in the hands of the Turks.

In addition to forcing the Germans to retreat north of the Oise and on the Vesle front the French made big gains northwest of Noyon. The greatest gains were made north of the Vesse River which had been crossed on a front of twenty miles. The French have reached a point six miles from Vailly on the Aisne River.

The Canal Du Nord and Tortille River have been crossed on a wide front north of Moislanins by the English and Welsh troops. The Canadians are reported as having reached the west bank of the canal on a front of two thousand yards. Excellent progress is being made toward Cambrai.

CANADIAN FORCES CAPTURED ABOUT SIX THOUSAND PRISONERS

With the Canadian Armies, Sept. 5.—The Canadian corps captured between 5,000 and 6,000 prisoners on Monday, but it was only by intensive and sanguinary fighting. More than ever the enemy relied on his machine-gun nests.

AVIATOR IS BADLY HURT.

Toronto, Sept. 5.—While attempting a "vertical bank," which suddenly turned into a "spin," Aviator Cadet A. Jamieson sustained serious injuries at Leaside Camp yesterday. His next of kin is A. Jamieson, 25 Adelaide Street, St. John's Nfld.

Letters From Overseas

FROM W. D. M. SHOREY.

Seaford, Sussex, Eng., Aug. 18.

Dear Mr. Bowell,—I have been in England four weeks tomorrow and although we are still in quarantine, I like it fine and am putting on some weight. We were taken first to Faversham Pond camp in Surrey, the place, I believe, where Lord Kitchener trained his first 100,000 men, and after being there a week were brought here, where we will stay until we go to France. Sergt. Lorne Green is one of our instructors and Capt. Gilmour of Picton, who came over with the 155th, is one of the officers attached to our drafts. I am sleeping in the same tent with Green, and the first person I saw when I left the train at Seaford was "Chinnie" Vermilyea. The other night the 6th Reserve band gave a concert here in the segregation area and I had quite a chat with Frank Sills, who plays clarinet. So you see there are plenty of Belleville fellows about us. One of our instructors whose name I believe is Morrison, was manager of Davies' store in Belleville and another chap, now a corporal, worked in the rolling mills. One thing that struck me the day we landed was the reception the people gave us as our troop train passed along. For more than an hour we ran through the suburbs of London and the people rushed out of their homes and waved and cheered, and as we went through one railway centre where the yard was full of engines the whistle on every engine was blown. Quite a difference to the lack of enthusiasm of the people at home, or perhaps I should say lack of demonstration. The harvest, a bountiful one, is being gathered by old men and the women, and we saw girls dressed in overalls working in factories. My observations of course are those gleaned from our train trips, for we have been in quarantine since our arrival, but we saw few men. I did see three men standing together: one had a leg off, one was minus an arm and the third, in khaki, had his arm in a sling. The coal problem promises to be an acute one here this year though I believe the food situation is better. They feed the soldiers well, but of course there are many things to which the boys have been accustomed as everyday necessities at home that are not to be had here. But one would never appreciate the fact that there is a shortage of foodstuffs here by staying in Canada. You have to come over here to realize it. However I am glad I am here and glad I am at last to have a chance to do my bit. I have wanted to come for three years, but couldn't—but if I wasn't in at the start I will likely be there at the finish. Remember me to Phil. Harrison and the boys, and with kind regards to Mrs. Bowell and yourself.

Sincerely,
W. D. M. SHOREY.

Music and Drama

"THE FIREFLY OF FRANCE"

Wallace Reid, who is the screen idol of millions will appear at Griffin's tonight in a fine new picture called "The Firefly of France." The story deals with a wealthy young American about 20 years old, who determines to join the American Ambulance Corps in France, and while dining with his guardian, Peter Dunham, the night before he goes away, he is attracted by a pretty young woman seated nearby. A reporter calls on him asking for a photograph, and he goes up to his rooms to get one. In this room he finds a German rummaging in his trunk but the latter turns out the lights and escapes from his rooms, the man is seen to enter a room on another floor and when the officers knock at the door they are confronted with the pretty young woman. She grants permission to search her room but this he declines to do, but calls attention of the police to the fact that all the hotel staff is German. From this on many happenings crowd quickly, and a very interesting story develops, which has a very novel finish that seems to bring the audience right out of the seats with expectancy. There will be the usual good chapter of the serial, "A Fight for Millions," and other good pictures that will complete a high class photoplay program.

"A DAUGHTER OF THE SUN"

'A Daughter of the Sun," telling the story of an Hawaiian Butterfly, by Lorin Howard and Ralph Kettering, will be the attraction at Griffin's Tuesday evening next, under the direction of Mr. Ed. W. Rowland.

It is said to be one of the most spectacular production of the season. There are three acts and seven scenes, each a distinct creation in the scenic art. Opening with a reproduction of the Patio at Honolulu just at dawn, the audience witnesses the gradual flooding of the distant mountains in the riotous colors of the rising sun. From that time each scene offers a new delight in the depicting of the beauties that have made the Hawaiian Islands famous the world over. The eruption of a volcano furnishes one of the sensational incidents of the drama. Along the effective scenes are a radio room, a wireless room, lotus garden, cane brake and a coral beach.

Red Cross Penny Bag Collection

The penny bag collection for August, while not quite reaching our average monthly collection, was very good in view of the fact that so many of our citizens are away, it being ten dollars in advance of the August collection for 1917.

We hope, though, that those who have been enjoying holidays will on their return double up their usual giving and so help us to make good this month's deficit. Let us not grow weary in well doing, for the money is badly needed for our soldiers, and any sacrifice entailed by our giving is very small in comparison to the sacrifices they have made and are making for us. Ketcheson ward stands first this month, and both Murney and Coleman wards show an increase over last month.

THE TEMPTING OF PAUL CHESTER.

BY

ALICE AND CLAUDE ASKEW

CHAPTER X.—Continued

Susan glanced at her sister thoughtfully. It was not like Milly to blush or to suggest that any stray young man, even a cousin, should be offered hospitality at Amphlett Court. Could it be possible that she and Lord Robert had fallen in love with each other, and that the young man had transferred his affection from the elder sister to the younger? Such a thing had often happened before, and there was no reason why it should not happen now—no reason at all.

"Robert coming to lunch? Why, I had no idea he was in the neighborhod even. He didn't tell me where he was going when we said good-bye at the Riddells' a month ago."

Susan spoke very slowly, studying Milly's face the while; then a tender, whimsical smile played about her lips.

"I'll ask Robert to stay here for a night if you like, Milly," she added softly. "Have you seen much of him lately?"

"He sometimes comes and stays with us," returned Milly demurely. "I think he is awfully nice; don't you?"

"Yes, awfully nice," answered Susan thoughtfully.

"There's the motor-car—Robert's come, you see." Milly spoke in tones of mild triumph, for a sudden turn of the path had brought the sisters in full view of Amphlett Court, and of a great white motorcar, which panted in front of the house.

'Oh, let's hurry, Sue, let's hurry!" Milly continued, taking little dancing steps of joy, and Susan, remembering her own courting days—those wonderful days when she had realy believed that Paul loved her—glanced at her little sister with a sudden rush of most womanly tenderness. For she questioned in the deep depths of her heart if Robert really loved Milly. She remembered the look in his eyes when he had last gazed into hers—she remembered the tone in his voice as he had pronounced her name Oh, it would be terrible, terrible, she reflected, if she herself stood between Milly and the happiness the other desired, and she wondered wistfully if it were going to be her fate all through her life to bring misfortune and sorrow on those she cared for most.

Lord Robert was standing by his motor-car, giving some instructions to the leather-coated chauffeur, but when he saw the two young women approaching he hurried forward to meet them, making breathless apologies to Susan for his unexpected descent upon Amphlett Court, pleading in cheery fashion for a few hours' hospitality.

"A few hours?" smiled Susan; "indeed, we are going to keep you longer than that, Robert. Paul is still away, staying with the Berkshires"—she winced a little as she said the words—'a'nd Milly and I are getting woefully tired of being all by ourselves. Won't you stay the night, Bob?" She gave the invitation slowly, a little disconcerted by the steady way in which the young man stared at her, for he ought to have been gazing at Milly, who looked so pretty in her red coat and cap.

"Of course, he'll stay, Susan," interrupted Milly hastily; then she patted her cousin's shoulder with a pretty air of approbation. "Do you hear, Bob, you have just got to stay." She glanced up smiling and dimpling. "Grasp the fact that you are 'commandered,' and yield with a good grace."

"Yield? I am only too delighted—only too honored!" answered Robert. But as he spoke his eyes rested on Susan instead of on the younger girl, on the wife, instead of the maid.

'I'm glad,' returned Susan. Then she glanced over her shoulder at her sister.

"You and Bob must entertain each other till lunch-time,' 'she said, 'for I've got to write some letters for the afternoon post-bag—I've got to write to Paul."

She walked up the wide stone steps as she spoke. Robert's eyes followed her wistfully—yearningly.

'How shall we entertain each other, Bob?"

He started a little as Milly's clear young voice fell on his ear—started and flushed.

"Let us talk about your sister," he answered quietly. "I'm glad you are with her—she oughtn't to be alone."

Milly opened her eyes. There must be more interesting subjects to discuss than Susan, she thought—Susan, who was a married woman and had a husbnad of her own. Then she reflected, with a smile of complacent vanity, that Robert's interest in her sister might be prompted by the fact that she and Susan were kin. It might be only another case of "love me—love my dog!"

With rustle of petticoat she led the way into the house—into the big hall—found a seat for Robert by the wood fire, sat down herself on the fender rail. Then she began to tell him how she and Susan passed the wintry days, the man listening with real attention, leaning his face on his hands.

All at once he startled Milly by a sudden question.

"Do you think Susan is happy, really happy? She looks to me like the shadow of her former self. Wonderfully pretty, of course, but startlingly delicate."

Millicent glanced up. There was a note in Robert's voice when he spoke of her sister that made her vaguely alarmed and uneasy. She had heard rumors of his old infatuation for Susan, but it wasn't possible—oh, surely it couldn't be possible—that he cared for Susan still?—Susan, who, as every one knew, was so cold, so calm, and who appeared contented enough with her destiny. And as to his thinking that her sister was ill and delicate, why, that was all nonsense, too.

"There's nothing the matter with ed with emphasis; "and Milly remarked with emphasis; 'a'nd as to her not being happy—why shouldn't she be? She and Paul are very fond of each other in their own calm, unemotional way. Oh, I'm sure Sue has got everything on earth that she wants."

Milly spread out her hands to the warm blaze of the fire, and spoke with some decision.

Robert shook his head. "I'm worried—I'm worried about Sue," he said slowly. "She's nursing some secret sorrow. I doubt if Chester makes her a good husband; but, of course, she would be too proud to complain of him—far, far too proud."

Milly shrugged her shoulders.

'But what could we do, you and I, Bob," she asked protestingly, "if we found that Paul didn't make Sue happy? Not that I believe he doesn't for one moment."

AN UNDIVIDED PEOPLE.

Only unprofitable discord can arise from the assumption that the rural and the urban populations of Canada have conflicting interests, says the Toronto News. Any effort to stimulate production, whether agricultural or industrial, is of advantage to the whole country. The present time gives a shining example. Everyone will admit that the growth of the munitions industry in Canada has had a great part in bringing the lively prosperity we now enjoy.

According to the demagogues who seek to set the farmer against the factory man, the latter is getting all the advantages. Yet actually the farmer was never in a better financial position. Prices are high, and despite the cost of labor the experienced man upon the land is "doing well." There is accumulating evidence to show that in an economic sense this is one people. Men who produce have no complaints. They find a ready market and exalted values. Whether their production is from a factory or a farm the same rule applies.

GOOD CITIZENS AND OTHERS.

The many Good Citizens revealed by obituary notices would seem to indicate that municipal management is one happy dream. There is more dream than reality to this view, however, for while dead citizens are all Good Citizens, apparently, it is an unfortunate fact that all live citizens are not Good Citizens in the best meaning of the term.

Good Citizens are willing to do their part in the city council, school board, and other civic departments, giving their time freely for the benefit of the whole community.

Good Citizens help to elect competent men to fill the various offices and give them a helpful and hearty support during their term of office. Indifferent citizens fill public offices with indifferent officials and the public business suffers accordingly.

Good Citizens insist upon a progressive administration, upon a policy which will promote growth and discourage stagnation, and there are enough Good Citizens in Belleville to make radical changes for the better, looking toward the present and future prosperity of the city. These Good Citizens, however, must get together and work together in order that the cobwebs of a drift policy be swept away.

Good Citizens have many attributes which distinguish them above their fellows. One of the places where Good Citizens leave a strong identifying mark is the office of the City Tax Collector. The Good Citizen pays his taxes promptly and thus assists the city officials to finance the business of the town. The tax slips are going out now and until October 20 are payable at par. From October 20 to November 20, two per cent. is added on unpaid taxes; from November 20 to January 1, 1919, four per cent. will be added, and after January 1, five per cent.

It is conceivable that sometimes Good Citizens are not always able to pay their taxes as soon as the bill is rendered; that is understood, but it seems to be a fact that a number of citizens who could easily pay their taxes promptly are the last to pay, causing the municipality extra expense in interest on bank overdrafts caused by taxpayers retaining money which is rightfully the property of the city.

As the finances constitute a vital part of the civic machinery the prompt payment of taxes is one of the most distinguishing points about the really Good Citizen, and makes a good starting point for many other helpful endeavors which go to make up the Good Citizen and help to lay the foundation of future progress and prosperity for the municipality.

Are you a Good Citizen?

Now it is the oyster's turn to get stewed, but while it is easy to be a lobster few can be oysters. Don't be a clam was good advice in the days before the dry wave licked up all the spirituous and vinuous beverages, but who wouldn't be an oyster occasionally in these dry days?

The success or failure of the Belleville Fair this year should only be an incentive to united effort on the part of the citizens of Belleville and vicinity to have an exhibition next year which will far surpass all previous efforts and mark the beginning of a series of Belleville Fairs which will attract interested visitors from all parts of the province.

The police in various cities have been given the following instructions: "Men who look to be between 19 and 34 should be asked for their papers. If in any doubt as to the right of exemption the citizen should be taken to the nearest police station." It is cheaper to carry exemption papers or marriage or birth certificate than to be detained in a police station.

A Laugh or Two

Neighborly sympathy often turns out to be about nine-tenths curiosity.

Too many men look upon education as a sort of loophole through which to escape work.

A conceited woman dubs a man a woman hater just because he doesn't happen to admire her.

Friendship means more and at the same time less than any other word in the English language.

Not Necessary.

"Do you tell your wife everything?"

"It isn't necessary. My wife knows everything."

Right on the Head.

There was quite a crowd of people on the Strand, causing a partial block in the traffic. The lagging of a particularly pompous old gentleman roused the ire of a held-up cabby, according to Tit-Bits. "Now, then, 'urry up there, can't yer?" he shouted. "Am I not hurrying, cabman?" mildly expostulated the old man. "'Urryin'" snorted the cabby with a flick of his whip, "you're a-jumpin' abaight like a bit o' stickin' plaster."

Haying With Farmerettes.

"Pardon me madam—I am aware that we have not been introduced, but I hope that you will not object to my mentioning the fact that this is the second time you have stuck your fork into my leg."

Life in Washington.

After a recent pay day at Washington a Government clerk was wandering aimlessly down Pennsylvania avenue, hugging his pay envelope when he was held up by two footpads. He held up his hands, but began to plead:

"Don't take my money. Blow out my brains, if you must, but please don't take my money. It doesn't take any brains to live in Washington, but it does take a lot of cash."

Changed His Tune.

A tramp went into a farmhouse recently, and seeing no one but a very old woman, he said in a fierce tone:

"Give me a good drink of milk, or else—"

But Pat Fahey, the owner of the house, came behind him suddenly and catching him by the neck said:

"Else what?"

"Else water," said the tramp humbly.

From the Chestnut Tree.

"Ever hear the story of the peacock?"

"I never did—I swear it."

"A beautiful tale."

OTHER VIEWS

Jews in the British Army.

Hamilton Times.

Hundreds of New York Jews have joined the Jewish battalion of the British army serving in Palestine. They will come to Canada for training, it is stated.

The Irony of It.

Manitoba Free Press.

If it be true, as reported in a despatch from Amsterdam, that von Hintze, the German foreign secretary, has sought to buck up the morale of the German people by urging them to emulate the fortitude of the people of France, there could be no more ironical development of the war. Consider the plight of the Prussian superman in being driven to cite the once despised "decadent" French as exemplars of courage and endurance.

Remember the Lusitania

The Navy League of Canada
Ontario Division

CAN you ever forget the stark horror when the newspapers spread the word that on May 7th, 1915, the unspeakable Germans had sunk the Lusitania, murdering women, children, and non-combatants?

¶ The horror is very fresh in the minds of the widows and orphans of the heroic crew.

¶ To their mental distress is added the torture of threatened poverty. Governments do not make recognition of their needs,—makes no allowance as in the case of dependents of the men of the Army and Navy.

¶ The widows and orphans must rely on your benevolence, as do the families of 15,000 merchant seamen lost in the war, victims of the U-Boat and the floating mine.

¶ Surely no life was ever more nobly given than by these unsung heroes who go down to the sea in ships.

¶ What shall be said to their dependents? Let your cry be "They shall not want!" and make your offering as large as a worthy sacrifice will allow.

PETERBORO' COUPLE WANTED

The local police force has received word from Peterboro police to be on the lookout for Joseph Geo. Bowell, age 38 years, height 5 ft. 6 in., weight 145 pounds, dark hair, upper front teeth filled with gold; and Emily Elizabeth Hanrahan, aged 36, height 5 ft. 3 in., complexion fair, dark hair mixed with grey, pale face, thin and slight, false teeth in upper and lower jaws. It is thought that they will be living as man and wife and they are charged with incest and theft.

WERE NOT DROWNED

Further investigation by immigration officials at Ogdensburg and Prescott has uncovered evidence that John Fobert, aged 60, and Gladys Vincent, aged 16, who left Lancaster, Ont., together recently and have since disappeared, were not the victims of a drowning accident in the St. Lawrence River as supposed. On the night that the drowning accident was supposed to have occurred, a couple answering their description registered at a Prescott Hotel. The Vincent girl, as reported in yesterday's Intelligencer, is a ward of the Marchmont Home in this city.

WELLINGTON MAN SHOT.

The most serious accident at this year's Toronto Exhibition occurred yesterday afternoon in the Midway when Bert Davidson, aged 50, of Wellington, was shot and seriously wounded in the left shoulder. The injured man was examining a Ross rifle in the tent occupied by returned soldiers exhibiting war relics. Not knowing the rifle was loaded he handled it freely and the charge exploded. Davidson was rushed to the Emergency Hospital on the grounds, where first aid was given. The men in charge of the tent believed all the rifles were unloaded.

A MUCH MARRIED MAN

On August 9th Sergt. Harman of the local police court, acting on advice of the Chief or Police Ruse of Cobourg, arrested Allen H. Mitchell on a charge of non-support. While awaiting here for transportation to Cobourg Mitchell more than once asked if that was the only charge preferred against him, and appeared to be contented when answered in the affirmative. It transpired that Mitchell had two other aliases, namley Sisson and Wilson, and is a much married man, having gone through the marriage ceremony with five women and has 16 children. Yesterday at Cobourg he was convicted of bigamy and sentenced to three years at the Kingston penitentiary.

A WELCOME RAIN

The heavy rain last night and this morning was very welcome in the agricultural sections, as the ground was so hard that it was difficult to get a plough beneath the surface. The rain will make the fall work much easier.

LEFT FOR CALGARY

Mr. Harry P. Ellis, of the local Y. M. C. A. staff, left this morning for Calgary, where he will take over the duties of Y.M.C.A. physical director. Mr. Ellis during his residence in Belleville, has made many warm friends by his genial disposition and manly Christian character, and his departure is deeply regretted.

LIEUT. R. COOPER WOUNDED.

Mr. L. B. Cooper, residing on Moira street, yesterday received a message stating that his son Lieut. Reuben Cooper, was wounded on August 31st. Lieut. Cooper was previously wounded on November 6th of last year but was soon able to return to the trenches. He left here with the 254th Battalion and has been in France almost a year. At present he is an officer in the 2nd Canadian Battalion. His many friends will hope that he is not seriously wounded.

BURGLARS AT PORT HOPE

Burglars entered the Ontario House at Port Hope Tuesday night and got away with fifty-two dollars and a gold watch. Fred Ager and J. Baldwin were roming together and both young men left their money on the dresser. On rising the next morning they found a clean sweep had been made. Ager was a loser to the extent of twenty dollars and Baldwin lost thirty-two dollars and his gold watch and chain. The front door of the hotel was not locked, neither was the room in which the young men were sleeping.

BANKER TRANSFERRED

At a meeting of the Cobourg Board of Trade J. W. Spragge was appointed Secretary-Treasurer in place of J. K. Fraser, manager of the Standard Bank, who has been transferred to the branch at Trenton, Ont. President A. L. Jex, on behalf of the Board of Trade presented Mr. Fraser with a leather club bag and walking stick.

JOINED U. S. FORCES.

Roscoe O. Bonisteel, son of Mr. and Mrs. M. F. Bonisteel, former residents of this vicinity, has entered the service of his country. Mr. Bonisteel accepted a Captaincy in Americanization work of aircraft production, Signal Corps, at Portland, Oregon. Captain Bonisteel's wife and two daughters, Jean and Betty, accompanied him as far as Jackson, Mich., and after a short visit there and in the east will join him in Portland. Until recently Capt. Bonisteel was a prominent manager of War Board of Washtenaw County.

KINGSTON UNION TERMINAL

It is reported that the haymarket site is being considered by the railways for a city terminal in Kingston. This change would leave five street crossings free for traffic without danger, including the approaches to all of the wharves. The proposed site is an ideal one and affords ample room for working out the union system of tracks to be used by the G. T. R., the C.P.R., and the C.N.R., the freight sheds of the G. T. R. are already located there.

STOLE BUTTER AND FRUIT

Sereno Parks, a young man whose home is in Madoc Township, was this morning on trial before Judge Wills on two charges of theft. It was alleged that he assisted in the stealing of a number of articles from a shanty belonging to Mr. James Hunter, also of stealing some butter and fruit from the residence of Mrs. Lloyd in Madoc Township. Parks was acquitted of the former charge, but was convicted of stealing butter and fruit from Mrs. Lloyd. Sentence was reserved until Saturday. Mr. Carnew for Crown and Mr. A Abbott for the accused.

PAY THE BOYS.

The local branch of the Navy League of Canada has decided that it will be more convenient for contributors to the Sailors' Fund to have the boys of the Naval Brigade take their subscriptions. Many have already paid the boys and those who have signed the slips but not paid as yet will be called upon again by the boys who will start out tomorrow after school to call upon contributors. Any who prefer to do so can leave subscriptions at the office of Mr. Alexander Ray, Front street.

THE SAILORS' FUND.

The teams of Boy Scouts who were engaged in canvassing the city for subscriptions for the Merchant Marine fund did their work well, visiting every home in the city. From Mr. A. Ray, chairman of the Navy League of Belleville, it was learned that up to last evening about $1600 had been subscribed, $600 of which was in cash. This has been deposited in a local bank. One citizen gave a cheque for $200 and other subscriptions of a substantial nature are anticipated. The boy canvassers are still carrying on their work and when the end of the week is reached good results are expected. The City Council will be asked to make a grant to the worthy object.

NOTED AUTHOR REVISITS CITY

Mr. Thomas O'Hagan, the well known Canadian author, poet, journalist and traveller, was in the city today renewing friendships of many years ago, when he was a school teacher in this vicinity. One of his close teacher friends of those days was Gilbert Parker, since famous as an author, knighted, and a member of the British House of Commons. Mr. O'Hagan has become prominent in the world of letters and has only recently finished several months research work at Cornell University. He is busily engaged at present upon a new volume which he hopes to make of compelling interest to scholars and others who prefer the instructive to the entertaining in their reading.

MILITARY WANT HALL

Col. Smart and Major Lawson of Kingston, were in the city yesterday conferring with the civic authorities in the matter of securing a place for the accommodation of some fifty-five clerks, who will be connected with the military depot to be established in the Armouries here, as reported in The Intelligencer last month. Several places were looked over and the officers were decidedly in favor of securing the accommodation at the Y. M. C. A. building, but this was out of the question as the space required was more than the management could possibly spare. As six sets of offices will be required the room required is necessarily large. The City Hall was looked over and the officers were in favor of it being used for the purpose required. Tables, chairs, etc., could easily be installed. A special meeting of the City Council will be held this evening to consider the matter of offering the City Hall to the military authorities for the purpose required.

ELECTED COUNCILLOR

W. C. Mikel, K.C., of this city, was elected one of the Councillors of the Canadian Bar Association at the annual meeting in Montreal this week.

WOMAN SENT TO JAIL ON BIGAMY CHARGE

Toronto, Sept. 5—While her husband was in the firing line at the front Annie Foster, wearied of single blessedness and in June, 1917, at Port Hope went through a form of marriage with Joe Casteele, to whom she has since had a child. Before receiving from Judge Denton in the Criminal Court yesterday a sentence of six months at the Jail Farm for bigamy, Mrs. Foster told a confused story about a letter she received from a Government official stating that her husband had denied having married her. Subsequently she was told that Pte. Foster, having heard she was dead, had married again, and believing this entitled her to remarry, she joined up with Casteele.

Cereal Food That Contains Its Own Sugar

Grape-Nuts

is uttrley unlike any other prepared cereal.

Take a handful of its golden-brown granules and hold it in a strong light. You will see little shining particles on each granule—a result of the Grape-Nuts process of cookery, which turns the starch of wheat and barley into actual sugar.

The sweet, nutty flavor of Grape-Nuts requires no added sugar and where fresh milk or cream is not obtainable condensed or evaporated milk fits in finely.

No sugar is needed, and but little cream or milk, and this makes Grape-Nuts a very desirable cereal these saving days.

Sergt. Major White Was Killed Instantly

The following letter was received by Mrs. Ellen E. White, 78 Gordon St., city, from Lieut. A. W. Asseltine, in regard to the death of her husband, killed in action:

France, Aug. 13, 1918.

My Dear Mrs. White,—It is with the deepest of sympathy I take this opportunity of writing you re Charlie's death, which occurred on the morning of August 8th. I was not with him at the time when he was killed, but I was informed by the officer who was with him that he was killed instantly by a rifle bullet. Charlie was acting Company Sergt.-Major at the time. I feel more acquainted with him than any other officer of the company as he was in my platoon, No. 15, for a long time. I still have the picture of our group taken last year. Sergt. Bill Reid, whom he may have mentioned to you, who was also in our platoon, was killed on the following day. Charlie is greatly missed by us all, always a gentleman, and to me he spoke very often of his wife and kiddies whom he loved very much. As a soldier and N.C.O. in this company he had no equal. I feel sure that the hand of Him who took your beloved husband from you will also heal the wound that his loss has caused. Trusting that the children and yourself are in the best of health, I remain,

Yours respectfully,
A. W. Asseltine, Lieut.

How You Can Remove Every Trace of Hair

(Toilet Talks)

A stiff paste made with some powdered delatone and water and spread on a hairy surface about 2 minutes will, when removed, take every trace of hair with it. The skin should then be washed to free it from the remaining delatone. No harm can result from this treatment, but be sure it is delatone you get and you will not be disappointed.

BEER TOO STRONG AGENTS PAYS FINE

WELLAND, Ont., Sept. 4.—A prosecution in the Welland Police Court under the Ontario Temperance Act brought from the magistrate the expression of a desire to have no more cases of a like nature brought him and a powerful condemnation of the system of carrying out the act from the counsel for the defence.

The defence, John Fritz, a local man, who had recently been appointed agent for an alleged temperance beer brewed by a firm in Montreal, held a guarantee from the firm that the beer was made in strict compliance with the requirements of the Temperance Act. In fact the magistrate asserted the evidence showed that Fritz had acted in good faith and done all that was posfine on Fritz of $200 and costs with the Act.

Nevertheless, the statement laid before the magistrate by the Provincial Temperance Inspector and the several policemen he brought forward to corroborate that statement, left him with his hands tied by the act and he had no alternative to inflicting a fine on Fritz of $200 and ocsts with the provision that he go to jail if the fine be not paid.

The evidence was that the provincial inspector had decided to test the temperance beer in question. He did not apply to the agent, Fritz, for a sample, but in company with police officials, visited a restaurant where the beer was being sold with meals and seized a bottle. This bottle he sent to Toronto to be analyzed. The Toronto official analyist reported it to be three per cent. Against this was produced by counsel for Fritz a report on sample taken from the same consignment. The report was signed by Louis Bourgoin, chemist- engineer and professor of chemistry at the Polytechnical School and Laval-University of Montreal and declared the alcoholic contents of the beer to be 2.6 per cent.

Counsel claimed, in addition to the admission of this counter analysis, that the prosecution should have been taken against the brewery company and not against the innocent agent. The defendant, he also argued, should have been asked for a sample, if he was to be dealt with, and not one taken from a retailer in whose hands it had been since Fritz received the consignment.

The provincial inspector declared he could not take action against the brewer. Though given an opportunity of consenting to the fine being reduced to $50 under a section of the act, he said he had no power to do so, but he promised to make a truthful report to the license board if they communicated with him.

BANK SUBSCRIBES $10,000.

Toronto, Sept. 5.—It was announced at Navy League headquarters by Sir John Aird that the Bank of Commerce had subscribed $10,000 to the Sailors' Week Fund. Sir William Mulock also visited headquarters and left a check for $500.

Navy League headquarters announced yesterday afternoon that the Standard and Imperial Banks had each contributed $5,000 to the Sailors' Week Fund.

The officials of the league report a number of small subscriptions, from $1 to $10, each bearing an anonymous letter. One of those in particular is signed "Companions' Club," and tells how the "club," composed of five little tots, five years of age, gathered together their pennies to make the respectable total of $3.50. A postscript expressed regret that they were unable to contribute more to the sailors.

Gasless Sunday For Canada

Movement to Cut Out Motoring For Pleasure During Next Four Sundays

An appeal to Canadian motorists has come from the automobile club of Canada to observe the next four Sundays as "gasless." This of course is a patriotic appeal and not as in the States a direct request from the Fuel Controller to conserve gasoline.

The Ontario Motor League, which is affiliated with the Automobile Club of Canada, when questioned on the matter, said there would be no doubt at all, about the members of the league being willing to adhere to such a request. But, out of twenty thousand or so motorists in Toronto, only about six thousand are members of the Ontario Motor League. Mr. Robertson secretary of the League, pointed out that this number off the roads would be but a drop in the bucket and hardly be noticed if they did not use their cars. A request from the Government would be the only way, in Mr. Robertson's opinion to induce people to conserve gasoline.

The appeal from the Automobile Club of Canada will be sent throughout the length and breadth of the Dominion.

Last Sunday in New York, where a "gasless" Sunday was observed, those who were brazen enough to run their cars for pleasure were jeered at and such names as "Kaiserite," "Hun-lover," "Slacker," were hurled after them by newsboys and others. Those who did venture forth in a car seeking pleasure were possibly the most unhappy and unpopular citizens of New York last Sunday. Mr. John D. Rocefkller ordered out a team to drive him to church at Tarrytown.

Allies to Increase Efforts in Russia

WASHINGTON, Sept. 6.—Allied military efforts in Russia will be meterially increased. Events in Siberia as well as in European Russia are such as to increase the importance of this angle of the allied aid program—and the economic feature is rapidly becoming more a question for future disposition.

America's recognition of the Czecho-Slovak belligerents unites the allies in the intention to give full support to these forces—money, men and ammunition. Simultaneously this Government definitely dismisses any thought of recognizing the Bolshevists against whom the Czechs are fighting.

Thus an important modification of the American course in Russia is seen and more and more the allied program centres on the military.

Because American and allied efforts are to be centred on the west front the position of Japan in Siberia takes an increased importance. She will send more troops—a course favored by the allies.

MARINE JOY-RIDE MAY PROVE COSTLY

NEW YORK, Sept. 6—Captain Leeland P. Hawkins, of the steamship Yadkin, and five officers of his ship, were found guilty of conspiracy against the Government in Federal Court. The maximum penalty for the offence is two years' imprisonment and $10,000 fine.

The men, after taking food supplies to the allied on the Yadkin, took the ship for a marien "Joy-ride" in the Mediterranean and financed the cruise by selling the ship's stores and coal from the bunkers. They were arrested on their arrivel at an American port. They will be sentenced on Friday.

The important railroad junction of Ham is nearly surounded and it is only a question of a short time until it will be in the allies hands.

RETREATING ENEMY GIVEN NO REST HARD PRESSED BY ALLIED ARMIES

ADVANCE CONTINUES WITH UNVARYING SUCCESS

FRENCH AND AMERICAN TROOPS MAKE NOTABLE PROGRESS — ADVANCE CONTINUED ON ENTIRE LINE BETWEEN THE SOMME AND VESLE RIVERS — AMERICAN FORCES ADVANCING ON EIGHT-MILE FRONT—GERMANS ARE DRIVEN FROM MANY MORE TOWNS — BRITISH ARE ESTABLISHED IN POSITIONS OF OLD GERMAN FRONT LINE EAST OF NEUVE CHAPELLE — CANAL DU NORD CROSSED BY BRITISH IN FORCE.

Special Despatches to The Intelligencer, Canadian Press, Limited.

PARIS, Sept. 6.—French troops last night continued to push forward on the entire front between the Somme and Vesle rivers.

With the American Army in France, Sept. 6.—French and American troops reached the south bank of the Aisne river last night between Conde and Veilarcy upon an eight-mile front. American forces occupied the towns of Dhuizel and Barbonal without opposition.

FRENCH PRESS FORWARD.

PARIS, Sept. 6.—South of Peronne French troops made a further crossing of the Somme River in the region of Epenancourt. Further south the Ham-Peronne road was reached at several points.

South of Ham the towns of Le Plessis, Pattedoie and Berlancourt were occupied and still further south French pursuing troops pushed beyond Guivry, Caillouel, Crepigny and Abbecourt.

AMERICANS MAKE NOTABLE PROGRESS.

In the region of the Ailette River the French have reached the outskirts of Singeny and the plateau north of Landricourt, and south of the Ailette advancing forces are along the Vauxaillon Ridge. The American troops advancing from the Vesle have captured the town of Glemies, southeast of Revillon and have advanced their lines as far as the outskirts of Vellers-en-Prayeres on the Aisne river.

BRITISH OCCUPY OLD GERMAN FRONT.

LONDON, Sept. 6.—On the Flanders front the British are established in portions of the old German front line east of Neuve Chapelle and in the old British line in the Fauquissart sector. British troops also have advanced northwest of Armentieres. North of Peronne British forces are in possession of the town of Buissy and are in the immediate vicinity of Templeux, LaFoss, Caurlit and Equancourt. Southwest of Peronne the British have reached Athies and Mons-en-Chausee. They have captured the village of Doingt.

CANAL DU NORD CROSSED IN FORCE.

The most important of this morning's despatches is that the Canal du Nord has been crossed by the British on the whole front except from Havrincourt to the River Scarpe, and that the French have secured a footing on the eastern side of the whole water line down to Ham. The Entente allied forces are now about four miles from Ham and they still are making progress.

BRITISH CAPTURED NEUVE CHAPELLE.

LONDON, Sept. 6.—British troops today captured Neuve Chapelle and Buissy. Field Marshal Haig's forces crossed the Canal du Nord on the whole front, except from Havrincourt north to the Scarpe River. Between the Somme and the Oise French troops have captured Blockhalais, three miles from Chauny. The French have secured a good hold on the north bank of the Ailette and on the terrain between that river and the Oise. British troops have captured the villages of St. Chryt-Briest and LeMesnil-Bruntel, with prisoners.

GERMANS REMOVE ARTILLERY.

With the British Army in France, Sept. 6.—Along the whole front from its southern extremity to the Bapaume-Cambrai road the fire of the enemy's big guns is dwindling. This indicates that the Germans are making strenuous efforts to get their artillery behind the Hindenburg defences. In many places north of the Sensee river the Germans are firing thousands of gas shells indiscriminately.

FOUR GREAT FRENCH ARMIES.

PARIS, Sept. 6.—Four great French armies in the field against the Germans are today practically in touch with their objectives. General Debeny's army has encircled Ham, General Mangin is within ten miles of Laon, General Berthelet has reached the Aisne on a wide front, General Humbert has driven the Germans from within gunshot of Noyon.

LARGE TERRITORY GAINED.

LONDON, Sept. 6.—Continued progress by British, French and American troops is reported in late despatches this afternoon. Several more towns were taken with prisoners and guns and large territory gained.

THE WAR YESTERDAY

"The German rush which menaced Paris and Amiens has been broken. We shall continue to pursue the enemy implacably."

In these words Marshal Foch, replying to the congratulations of the Municipal Council of Paris on the recent Allied victories, declares his intention to continue the battle and prevent the enemy from obtaining the time and opportunity required for reorganization. German official despatches take credit for stealthy withdrawals on various parts of the front.

It is no empty promise. On the front between the Oise and the Aisne, where the chief bastion of the enemy's lines—the Forest of St. Gobain—has now come under the French guns, there has been during the past twenty-four hours a collapse of the enemy's resistance almost as complete as in the Cambrai sector earlier in the week. The French official bulletin states that "along the whole Ailette front the enemy, exhausted by hard fighting since the 20th, began about three o'clock this afternoon to give way before our troops. Pursuing the German rearguard our troops made rapid progress. Thirty villages; the greater part of the lower Forest of Coucy; the ruins of the ancient Norman Keep of Coucy-le-Chateau, majestic even in its decay; the entire region between the Vesle and the Aisne as far east as Piont Arcy, and the plateau above Soissons on the Heights of the Aisne as far as Fort de Conde are all embraced in the territory recovered on the twenty-five-mile front along which the Germans were driven back. Far more important than the recovery of the villages is the footing obtained in the hilly region near Fresnes, on the edge of the High Forest of Coucy, which is part of the Forest of St. Gobain. An advance of less than three miles more here would bring the French to the very highest points of the Laon Plateau at St. Gobain—the natural battlements from which for four years the Hun looked down upon the Valleys of the Oise and the Aisne and the roads down these valleys to Paris. The victory of Mangin on the Ailette is one of the geratest of this season's triumphs.

Monday's Great Exploit Canadians' Finest Deed

LONDON, Sept. 6.—The Times says editorially: "The Canadians have many glorious achievements to their credit, but they never surpassed the great deed Monday when they pierced the defensive system which even the most sanguine experts believed would take much time to subdue. We seem confronted with possibilities which would have seemed a month ago fantastcal. It is permissible to speculate, but not as yet to count upon any developments suggested. What we know is that far more than the Wotan line was pierced Monday. The reputation of German arms was vitally pierced. We can see their great army in the west crumbling before our eyes."

Five Billion Dollar Revenue Bill

Special Despatch to The Intelligencer, Canadian Press, Limited.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 6.—The House today began the consideration of the greatest revenue bill ever presented to the American Congress, in the making and carrying a total of five billion dollars. It is offered by Chairman Kitchen of the Ways and Means Committee as providing a special method of raising funs for the successful prosecution of the war.

155 British Ships Carrying Yankees

Allied Navies Are Doing Tremendous Work in European Waters

LONDON, Sept. 4—Some idea of the work of the Entente allied navies in European waters is shown by interesting figures on the part taken by American destroyers from one base in April, May and June of this year, which the Asociated Press is now permitted to disclose.

These destroyers, which form only a part of America's fleet in European waters, escorted 121 trdopships convoys, consisting of 773 ships, in that period. At the same time they escorted 171 merchant convoys, consisting of 1,763 ships.

When it is considered that the American navy in that period did only 27 per cent. of the convoying and that the figures represent only the work of destroyers at one base, it may be seen what a tremendous task the allied navies is performing.

There are at present 155 ships flying the British flag carrying American troops exclusively.

In August more than 250,000 American troops arrived in Europe. Of this number the American navy convoyed 34 per cent., the British 65 per cent and the French 1 per cent.

An average of 2,000 personal letters daily are now arriving at the United States naval headquarters in London. Ninety per cent of these letters have to be re-addressed.

It is understood that American naval aviators have begun seaplane operations from bases on the Irish coast.

Canadian Chaplain Captures 48 Germans

Poking About With Walking Stick, He Makes a Fine Haul

With the British Army, Sept. 6.—German machine guns are industrious, indicating the intention of the enemy to hold the canal line, temporarily at least staving off the threat against Cambrai.

In the meantime the British cages have taken in another 3,000 prisoners from several points.

General Byng's patrols in Manancourt (southwest of Cambrai) encountered heavy shell fire.

There is a striking difference between the present German retirement and the enemy threat last year. Then there was almost continuous contact; yesterday some of the fast moving British pursuers complained that they couldn't fight the enemy because the enemy would not wait for them.

Air men who have had a bird's-eye view of the long front report that there are no Germans at many points this side of Canal Du Nord. One air squadron flew at a height of 200 feet clear to the canal before it was fired upon. Other air men located enemy troops massing at Obigny-Au-Bois and bombed them.

Among the incidents reported following the Canadian attack on the Drocourt-Queant line was the capture of 47 men and one officer by a Canadian chaplain. The chaplain was poking about in captured positions with his walking stick as his only weapon. He poked it into a dugout, and was surprised to see a German crawl out, surrendering. The chaplain called some soldiers, and by the time they arrived on the scene the dugout had yielded up 47 more Boches.

Fight's Second Phase Ends And Foe is in Full Retreat

First Phase was One of Preparation and the Second of Victory —Deeds of Canadian Corps Brilliant in the Extreme

With the Canadian Forces, Sept. 5—The second phase of the battle of Arras is over. It was decided within twenty-four hours. The enemy is in full retreat and the British army on the right of the Canadian Corps is marching unopposed through villages, which yesterday were in the hands of the enemy. It has passed over the famous Hindenburg line with little opposition.

The first phase of this battle, now concluded, was that of preparation, the second, of victory. It is difficult to write with becoming modesty of the deeds of the Canadian Corps during the past few weeks, but the Canadian people are titled to know the facts.

On July 30, the last great trek in the silent watches of the night began. At twenty minutes past four on the morning of August 8, the Canadian Corps in the centre between the Australians and the English and directly in front of Amiens opened the battle of that name. They are up against an enemy flushed with victory and preparing a new offensive. All his guns were in forward positions and two thousand rounds lay behind them. They were waiting the word to push ahead and thus is accounted for the great captures of artillery.

By August 20 the battle was over and won so far as the Canadians were concerned. Those two weeks of fighting dealt a tremendous blow at the enemy's morale. Von Hutieh the German commander in that area is a brother in law of Ludendorff and the great general staff sought to make excuses for him by publishing the statement that he was up against the elite of the French army and the celebrated Canadian Corps. Now excuses must be made for Von Below. It will suffice that he too was up against the Canadian Corps fresh from that victory.

Five days later the Canadian Corps went into action in front of Arras. One credit must be given to those gallant British troops including famous divisions, who during the eight days' battle fought alongside the Canadians.

The battle opened at three o'clock on Monday of last week. The first drive carried our troops through the Hindenburg line in front of Arras and within grappling distance of the main line of enemy resistance, known by them as the Wotan line.

Boston Red Sox Won First Game

CHICAGO, Sept. 6—Less than 20,000 people saw the Boston Red Sox of the American League beat the Chicago Cubs of the National League 1 to 0 in the first game of the World's Series yeserday, thus setting a new attendance record. Never before has there been such a small crowd at the inaugural game at the big classic. There were many empty seats in the grand stand, pavillion and bleachers. There was no field for the ticket speculators, thousands of tickets being unsold because of the lack of interest in the games.

International League fans will be interested in knowing that two of the players who were chiefly instrumental in the achievement of the Boston victory are former Barrow-leaguers, who would not now be in the majors at all, not to say the World's Series, were it not for the fact that so many of the stars are now fighting for world democracy or preparing to do so.

Yesterday's battle was perfectly-played game, in which the best left-handed pitchers in the major leagues were opposed. Vaughn had a shade the better of Ruth even in the face of defeat. A careful analysis of their work shows the Chicagoan to have outshone the Boston star somewhat. Ruth was better in crises than Vaughn.

Canadian Cyclists Played Gallant Role Near Pelves

LONDON, Sept. 6.—Corp. A. W. Mitchell, Engineers, who enlisted at Valcartier in September, 1914, has been awarded a bar to the Distinguished Conduct Medal for carrying messages as a motor cyclist under heavy fire into positions almost surrounded. The handles of his machine were shot away and himself badly shaken, but he obtained new handles and continued to carry messages. The Canadian Press learns that a small force of Canadian cyclists during the present operations in conjunction with trench mortar batteries formed a defensive flank east of Pelves, enabling Scotch troops to straighten two thousand yards. The cyclist beat off two attacks fronting Jigsaw wood, capturing prisoners and machine guns. A Canadian officer returned yesterday says a majority of the new prisoners declare they have been told there are only half a million Americans in France, nearly all employed on railways and lines of communication.

New Air Force Patrolling Coast

Royal Canadian Naval Air Service Already in Operation

OTTAWA, Sept. 4—Hon. C. G. Ballantyne, Minister of Naval Service, authorizes a statement on the Royal Canadian Naval Air Service, the organization of which was decide dupon some weeks ago. The statement says:

"The establishemnt of an air service in Canada, intended primarily for the defence of the Canadian coasts during war, has been under consideration for some time, but various difficulties, chiefly concerned with the supply of the necessary material, have prevented this being formed before. Early in 1918, however, the Government considered that the formation of an air service for coastal defence was of vital and immediate importance to Canada. As it was felt that this service should be of a naval character and should work in conjunction with the R.N.C., the matter was brought strongly before the notice of the British Admiralty.

"They were in complete agreement and sent out an airship officer, Flight Commander Barron, ex-R.C.N., in March, 1918, to enquire into the general possibilities. The U.S.A. lent the services of an experienced civil engineer, Lieut. Johnston, U.S.N., and, acting on th reports of these officers, the Admiralty and Air Ministry consented to send out further officers, including one for general organization, assisted by a small staff, together with two experienced seaplane officers for command of the stations. These officers arrived in the country on Dominion Day, and have, up to date, been settling details of the preliminary organization in conjunction with the Director of Naval Services, Admiral Kingsmill."

"Machines are flying on the Atlantic coast ready to bomb hostile submarines and to escort convoys, and perform other efficient services. This has been accomplished with the splendid aid and assistance of our ally, the United States.

Premier Thanks Gallant Troops

OTTAWA, Sept. 6.—The Prime Minister has sent the following telegram to Lieut.-General Sir Arthur Currie, commander of the Canadian Army Corps:

"Warmest congratulations to yourself and gallant troops under your command, on magnificent achievement in breaking famous Queant-Drocourt line. All Canada recognizes with thrill of pride and gratitude tremendous significance of this latest triumph which must bring dismay to the heart of the enemy. While mourning for those who have fallen the nation will be inspired by their example to yet greater efforts in emulating the dauntless spirit and determination of the Canadian army."

Sir Sam Against Tax Free Bonds

OTTAWA, Sept. 6.—Lieut.-General Sir Sam Hughes, who arrived in Ottawa yesterday, declares that he is opposed to exemption of bonds of the next domestic war loan from Federal income taxation. His objection, he says, he will express in the House of Commons when Parliament is again convened. Exemption of the income of Dominion war bonds from taxation he considers a "penny wise pound foolish" policy. The wealthy, he believes, will be able to invest considerable portions of their fortunes in these securities, and so secure immunity from taxation for themselves and throw the burden of taxation in the period following the restoration of peace upon others.

Not long ago Sir Thomas White gave a detailed explanation of the reasons which had induced the Government to issue the war loans free of taxation. He pointed out that that course had been followed in respect of all war loans to date. It had enabled the Government, he argued, to market the bonds at a better price and a lower rate of interest than would have been possible had they been taxable.

Aleali In Shampoos Bad For Washing Hair

Don't use prepared shampoos or anything else, that contains too much alkali, for this is very injurious, as it dries the scalp and makes the hair brittle.

The best thing to use is just plain mulsified cocoanut oil, for this is pure and entirely greaseless. It's very cheap, and beats anything else all to pieces. You can get this at any drug store, and a few ounces will last the whole family for months.

Simply moisten the hair with water and rub it in, about a teaspoonful is all that is required. It makes an abundance of rich, creamy lather, cleanses thoroughly, and rinses out easily. The hair dries quickly and evenly, and is soft, fresh looking, bright, fluffy, wavy and easy to handle. Besides, it loosens and takes out every particle of dust, dirt and dandruff.

FOR POSTAL INCREASES.

Ottawa, Sept. 6.—Three million dollars over and above ordinary salaries, it is estimated, will be required to meet increases recently granted to postoffice employees in the outside service. Of the 5,917 employees in Eastern Canada, 4,880 get a total increase of $350 a year, including the increase granted in the appropriation of last session; of 3,015 men in Western Canada, 2,771 get a total additional grant of $300.

AMERICAN DRIVE FOR METZ MAY BE NEXT MOVE OF FOCH

London, Sept. 6.—Special interest attaches at the moment to the eastern part of the battle front because of an impression which is growing stronger day by day that Marshal Foch is preparing for some new and greater operation and that possibly it will be in the so-called American sector, running easterly from Verdun and crossing the German frontier near its end. The distance to the Rhine and to Metz is not great.

BRITISH BOMB TURK CITY.

London, Sept. 6.—Constantinople was bombarded on four successive nights in the latter part of August, the Admiralty has announced. The arsenal, the dockyard, the Turkish War Office, the airdrome at Galata, the seaplane base at Gallipoli, and Chanak were attacked.

The raids, which were carried out by the Royal Air Force, occurred on Aug. 25, 26, 27 and 28.

On Aug. 26 and Sept. 1 the Royal Air Force, co-operating with the navy, carried out successful bombing raids on Ostend and Zeebrugge, on the Belgian coast. Thirteen tons of bombs were dropped and large fires were started.

OUR WEEKLY SERMON

BY REV. A. M. HUBLY

CONSTRAINING LOVE.

II. Cor. v:14.

In the physical world there are astounding forces that bear testimony to an almighty, intelligent, controlling power directing, in perfect order, all phenomenon of the material and elementary world.

If we look at that which lieth above how wonderful are the precision and constancy of the great forces of the universe, which rule the planets and determine the orbit in which each one of them must move. And if we look at that which lieth beneath there are just as great forces at work. The wonder-working powers of the vegetable kingdom are seen turning the little brown seeds into various forms of life and beauty, grains and grasses, roots, and fruits, and flowers to perpetuate animation, and activity in the breathing, moving animal kingdom, and to gladden the senses of men. Acorns become great oaks, and orange seeds, trees laden with fragrant blossoms and golden fruit.

Fields which are sterile, bleak and barren in winter, by spring and summer influence are covered over with waving grain to feed the millions. There seems, everywhere, in this lower and less intelligent form of life a responsiveness to a divine ministry of a love that meets its need with unstinted prodigality. This is naught but the love of God for His creatures. The intelligent personal director is the Son of the Father, by whom the worlds were made, and Who upholdeth all things by the word of His power. His love streams from Him to the remotest bounds of His universe.

It flows as the river of life from His immutable throne to the uttermost circumference. As the creator of all things He is the author and giver of all good, and all things, unimpaired by sin, are constrained to swell the chorus of His praise.

The birds fill the morning hours with song, because they cannot help doing so. They sing for joy, their Creator constraining them.

The waters laugh in the sunshine and join in the merry music as they dance and flow, because He has made the sun so bright and the sky so blue. "The trees of the forest clap their hands and sing for joy, and the little hills rejoice on every side." In the spiritual realm there is a force just as real though less comprehensible.

Some souls respond to it as surely as the flower to the sun or the day to dawning. The strong, self-willed Saul of Tarsus found it an irresistible force and yet a most gracious necessity to his successful grappling with the problems which confront the soul as it struggles toward its higher destiny.

The goal of a successful life can only be reached by the way of service. To meet the requirement as power is needed that is more than human. That power is provided. The apostle defines it. It is the love of Christ. The heart of the truth expressed is, that the love of Christ, having redeemed us from death, the normal condition of the life so redeemed is consecration to Him in service.

We speak of the love of Christ from three premises: His love to us; our love to Him; His love for the race found in us. The whole three constitute a unit. We must not separate the one from the other, but unify them. These three forms of the Christ-love must ever abide as the trinity in unity. They must never be disassociated in our thought with regard to our identification with a redeemed life. The third form however must always be kept uppermost—His love for men found in us. This grows out of the first and second, His love for us, and our love for Him. This duly developed love left in the apostle no choice as to what he should live for, but brought him under a controlling power, hedging him in on every side, and binding him to a conformity to the divine law of service in the kingdom of his Lord, as the law of the solar system binds the Pleiades in constellation and guides in special orbits the planets in their rotation around the sun. In this constraining force we have first, an abiding motive. Not fancy, nor sentiment, nor spasmodic emotion, but a principle, calm and steady. Stripes, bonds and imprisonment may await him, but when the interest of Christ's kingdom called him to Jerusalem "none of these things moved" him to step aside from the way that leads to the Holy City. It was once a problem in mechanics to find a pendulum which should be equally long in all weathers, which should make the same number of vibrations in the summer's heat and winter's cold. Now the desideratum is an accomplished fact. By a process of compensation the rod is made to lengthen as much on way as it contracts the other, so that the centre of motion is always the same. The pendulum meets the conditions of temperature and swings the same number of times in each moment, whether in heat or cold.

We Christians should, with the uttermost diligence, guard ourselves against susceptibility to changes of temperature in the spiritual atmosphere. Our motive in Christian service should be like the compensating rod, which neither lengthens in the oppressive heat, nor shortens in the brisker cold.

Great is the compensation of the pilgrim who meets the changeful exigencies of the way with unflinching zeal, whether the icy winds whistle or the simoon blows. Of all principles of constraint which hold the life true to its polar star, there are none that can be constant but that which begins and ends with Christ.

"The love of Christ constraineth us." Other motives for action lose their influence or disappear altogether with the disappearance of the object which prompts them. The smile of a loved one or cherished companionship of dear friends may compensate for the sacrifice made in their behalf. But human friendship is often false and fickle. It may be that Death's cold mantle wraps the beloved form and bears it hense, and the motive for action ceases. A living friend may repel acts of kindness and so wound or chill to the death! The constancy of a dead friend cannot be enshrined nor enriched by cultivating flowers upon his grave. Loved ones that remain with us may not continue the same. The magic light has faded. The mysterious interest which hovered round earlier associates may go, like the morning mists, beautiful with the rising sun, but leave us in a wintry coldness.

If the love of fame constrain us to action there may be compensation for a time in the applause of the assembly or in the praise of newspaper paragraph. The hero of the hour is often left upon a pinnacle of a temple of fame from which a fall is sure. If the love of money constrain us to earnest effort, this too, is the root of many evils. If our money box is the metropolis of our affection, the moth and rust will play havoc with it. Fortune is fickle. She may for a time smile upon us, but at the last she spreads her wings and flies, we know not whither.

Brethren, in all our effort for doing good let us make sure that the motive power centres in the love of Christ. Then shall it be glorious and eternal in good results. From the veriest trifle to the sublimest enterprise from the tying of a shoe lace on the foot of a street arab, to preparing a highway for the Lord, if we are conscious of thus doing what He would have us do then we can rest assured the final result will be most blessedly satisfactory to all concerned. The constraining love of Christ keeps the soul and its rate of action for good, constant. No man ever set the Lord before him always and lived to say "What a fool I am!" None have made the pleasing of God the work of life and lived to say "My life has been wasted."

"What vanity and vexation has Christian service been!" has never been spoken by one who has experienced such service. "If I could live my life over, how different I could make it!" can never be the dying declaration of one constrained to action by the love of Christ. Rather it will be :"I have fought a good fight I have finished the course, I have kept the faith."

Lawyers Favor Uniform Divorce

Pass Recomendations at Montreal Session— Exempt Soldiers' Estates

MONTREAL, Sept. 4—Recommendations for the adoption of a uniform divorce law, so far as such a law could be made applicable to the various Provinces of Canada, were passed this afternoon by the Canadian Bar Association, following the previous adjourned discussion on the question. It was specified that the law should be placed under the jurisdiction of the Supreme Court of the respective Provinces that desired to take advantage of such a law.

Another prolonged discussion was precipitated on a paper read by J. E. Martin, K. C., of Montreal, on Sucession Duties, in which Mr. Martin dealt with the injustice at present caused by double taxation of estates owing to various Provinces taxing such estates both within and without their borders. The question was finally referred to the Standing Committee on Uniform Legislation.

It was moved by Mr. Tupper, of Vancouver, and seconded by Mr. Wilson and unanimously adopted: "That in the opinion of this association, legislation should be passed by the several provinces exempting from taxation the estates of those soldiers who have fallen in the present war, up to $10,000.

British May Dig A Tunnel to Erin

LONDON, Sept. 6.—Great Britain is considering another mammoth tunnel project in addition to that connecting Britain and France. It is a proposed channel tunnel between Britain and Ireland.

Sir Arthur Fell of the Channel Tunnel Committee (the British-French tube), recently put the proposals for this project before the International Parliamentary Commercial Conference, in London, and the conference recommended that work be started at the earliest possible moment.

The project also was urged upon Premier Lloyd George recently by Gershom Stewart, M.P., and Lloyd George in a letter promised to consider the scheme just as soon as he could spare the time from urgent war work.

"Do?" returned Robert, with a short laugh. "Why, we could do a great deal Milly."

"You can't interfere between a husband and wife,' remarked the girl rather primly; then an anxious look came into her eyes, and she gazed at her cousin scrutinizingly.

"No, you can't interfere between a husband and wife who love each other,' retorted the man. 'I grant you that; but what if they don't happen to love each other, my little cousin, what then?"

'Why, they are married, and that's the end of it," retorted the girl, color flushing her cheeks, for she was dismayed by the turn the conversation had taken.

"Oh no! Marriage isn't the end of everything always," Robert replied slowly, stroking his moustache as he spoke, "not the end by any means."

Milly made no answer, but sat staring into the heart of the fire. She loved her cousin; she loved him better than anything in the world. He represented to her young fancy all that was finest and best in manhood. He was the fairy prince of her dreams and she believed that he cared for her. She had cheated herself for months with the fond fancy, and now the knowledge slowly dawning on her that she had a rival in her own sister was painfully sharp and bitter. It dashed all her bright sense of joy, her innocent belief in the goodness of the world—in the honor of men and women.

A step on the stairs made Milly start and turn her head, and she flushed rosily as she saw Susan coming down. Then she noticed that her sister had changed her short, tailor-made coat and skirt, and wore one of the long, traling robes she generally affected—an emerald green velvet gown trimmed with some fine old yellow lace and touches here and there of rich brown sable.

Susan looked exquisite. There was no doubt of that, and her fragile appearance only accentuated her delicate charm, and gave her an air of rarify and distinction, though she resembled nothing so much as a frozen rose with her colorless face.

She carried a letter in her hand—a letter addressed to her husband. Milly noticed this as the pale woman paused for a second and held out her thin, white fingers, to warm them at the blaze.

"So you have written to Paul?" Milly asked the question with some challenge. 'I hope you told him not to stay on at Helmsworth," she added, "and have warned him against the designs of the beautiful Henrietta."

Susan drew herself up and glanced down with some hauteur at the impertinent little questioner.

"You are mistaken, Millicent," she said slowly, and her voice was like ice—as frozen as her face. I have advised Paul to stay on at Helmsworth; and please don't make any more ill-bred insinuations about the Duchess of Berkshire."'

She moved away as she said the words—moved out of the glow of the firelight, and dropped her note into a letter-box standing on one of the hall tables. It fell with an ominous thud, and she sighed bitterly.

CHAPTER XI.
In The Picture Gallery

"Le roi est mort—vive le roi!"

Rupert Temple hummed the well-known words as he entered the large picture gallery at Helmsworth, and the Duchess, who was standing at the extreme end of the gallery, gazing out of a side window which commanded a view of the long drive, turned her head impatiently at his entrance, and a frown puckered her forehead.

It was a fine November day, and brilliant sunshine lit up her face and shone on the white cloth gown which draped her beautiful figure in loose, heavy lines, and was confined at the waist by a curious gold girdle, obviously of Eastern workmanship.

Henrietta always looked her best in a white dress, for it enhanced the flame of her hair, and the curious amber blue of her eyes, and Rupert, even though he hated her at the moment, could but admire her splendid, her magnificent lovliness. There was no woman's portrait on the walls, no dead-and-gone Duchess of Berkshire, who could touch Henrietta for beauty, yet the Berkshires had been proud of their wives, and not without reason; but Henrietta reigned queen above them all.

'What are you doing here in the gallery at this hour, Rupert?" the Duchess asked rather imperiously.

Rupert Temple was a far-away cousin of hers, but she always addressed him by his Christian name.

"Doesn't the Duke want you this morning?" she went on. "It is twelve o'clock. I have been thinking of you both, hard at work in the study."

Rupert gave a mocking bow, and his eyes glittered dangerously, for there had been a time, and not so long ago either, when his cousin would have been pleased enough to have seen him enter the gallery, and not reminded him that he was her husband's secretary.

"The Duke has other business to attend to this morning, ma belle cousine, than letters or letter-writing. Affairs of the farm are occupying his attention; he is discussing the purchase of fat beasts with the bailiff. I was given my conge an hour ago."

"Oh, and so you came here," interrupted Henrietta. "I wonder you did not go for a walk or a ride," she continued, 'instead of prowling about the gallery such a lovely day."

Her annoyance at his presence was very evident.

"I preferred to come here," returned the man, a faint smile crossing his lips. "I am fond of the gallery—it holds a good many associations for me I have been happy here—happy above my dreams."

He gazed at the woman steadily as he spoke, and there was a veiled reproach in his look, but she threw back her head and laughed scornfully.

'Happy beyond your deserts, you mean. I was a fool in the past." She moved back to the window, opened it, and leant out, kneeling on the wide window seat, richly cushioned in red brocade, her eyes fixed upon the terrace beneath.

Rupert strolled languidly up, and gazed out over her shoulder. A curious expression came over his face as he noticed Paul Chester, who was walking moodily up and down the terrace, evidently deep in thought, and careless of the biting November wind, for he wore no greatcoat, heedless also that the Duchess was watching him from the window, apparently lost in some day-dream of his own.

Rupert Temple was no fool, and he grasped the situation well enough. Henrietta had ararnged to meet Paul Chester in the picture gallery that morning. The man had forgotten the appointment, but the woman had remembered. He smiled to himself delightedly as he appreciated the temper his cousin must be in, then for the first time since he had made Chester's acquaintance he began to like the man.

What a jaw he had—what a square, determined jaw—what a strong self-reliant face! But he would be fooled as other men had been fooled before him, if he trusted overmuch in Henrietta. She would rob him of all he had to give—honor, ambition, soul—then spurn him with her foot and mock at him with her tongue.

It semed a pity—so Temple thought as he gazed down at the other man, his rival, the man who had so much true greatness about him—and a curious desire came upon him to save Chester from Henrietta and her toils. So a shipwrecked mariner might have desired to rescue a brother-seaman from the wiles of a siren—to warn him of the danger of listening to her song, and that her kiss meant death.

"I wish you wouldn't stare out over my shoulder," Henrietta muttered impatiently. "Can't you see that I want to be alone—that your presence annoys me?"

She spoke her mind with the frank rudeness that always distinguished her.

A red flush mounted to Rupert's forehead at her words, and he bit his lip under his heavy blonde moustache; then he sought to administer a pin-prick in return for a stab.

"I am absolutely aware that you want to get rid of me, that my society is only a bore—an annoyance," he answered suavely, "but I don't fancy you want to be left quite to your own companionship all the same Shall I run downstairs and tell Mr. Chester that you are waiting here for him, waiting somewhat impatiently? "

'How dare you?' She turned on him furiously, her eyes flashing, her whole body quivering with indignation. "You had better not insult me, Rupert," she continued angrily, "or I will make you suffer for it. Do you hear me—suffer?"

She clenched her little hands tightly together. Her whole attitude reminded the man of a tiger-cat ready to spring—a lithe, cruel, but most beautiful tiger-cat.

'Henrietta." He pronounced her name easily, lightly, yet a year ago his tongue had hung upon it with tenderest worship. "How can you hurt me now—how can you possibly hurt me? Haven't you done me all the harm that a woman can do a man—even a woman like yourself? No, I am out of your power at last, callous to anything you can do or say. For you can't injure me," he went on, with a sharp and determined click of his white teeth, "without hurting yourself. What would you do, for instance if I told your husband the truth—as I often feel sorely tempted to do?"

She turned pale, and leant back against the rich crimson brocade of the curtain.

"What do you mean?" she cried. "You wouldn't dare to hint anything even. Why, you would be cut by every body who knows you; you would be hounded out of society."

'Society!" he laughed bitterly. "What do I care for society or the approval or disapproval of my fellows? No, you must try a more convincing argument than the judgment of men of you want to persuade me never to give you away—something more subtle, more personal."

She gazed at him steadily, her eyes flashing into his.

"Rupert," she said slowly, her voice wonderfully low and magnetic, "you are talking great nonsense. You would never say anything to hurt me. You couldn't—because of the love I gave you one."

She opened her arms a little as she spoke, and swayed her body towards him, her lips parting in a strange and wonderful smile.

quiver passed over the man's face and he glanced up helplessly.

Longest Mail-Carrying Trip on North American Continent Completed

TORONTO, Sept. 5.—The longest aerial mail carrying trip on the continent of North America was completed last evening, when Pilot E. C. G. Burton returned from Ottawa. He left Leaside at 8 a.m. yesterday carrying mail and reached Toronto again at 7 o'clock last night.

Considering the indifferent weather of yesterday, the trip was made in just half an hour over the schedule time. Letters were taken to Ottawa and answers brought back. These with special delivery stamps on them were delivered in Toronto last night. The machine used was 'The Winnipeg," one of the gift airplanes, and the distance covered was 540 miles.

LET US GIVE THANKS ON MONDAY.

Toronto Presbytery will request the Dominion Government to name the first Thursday in November as Canada's Thanksgiving Day and will suggest that an effort be made to have the same date observed as Thanksgiving Day in the United States. As the United States has a fixed date for Thanksgiving Day, the last Thursday in November, and Canada's Thanksgiving Day is a "movable feast," it would seem rather cheeky asking our neighbors to change the date of their Thanksgiving Day to conform with our vagaries. The observance of Thanksgiving Day in Canada was changed to October on account of the climate and fixed on a Monday to make it easier for business man, commercial travellers and others to whom a mid-week holiday means considerable inconvenience. A good many people prefer a Monday holiday as it affords an opportunity to make an out-of-town trip from Saturday to Tuesday; but perhaps that is one reason why the Presbytery prefers the mid-week holiday.

SAILORS STARVING TO DEATH.

For more than a year there were 4,000 sailors of the Merchant Marine prisoners-of-war in Germany and no one knew that they were there. They were peaceful sailors following a peaceful occupation. They were taken prisoners and the knowledge of their capture kept from the Allied nations. Upon them has been heaped every indignity. As members of an unofficial service there has been no Government aid; they have not received the usual prisoners' pocket money to help eke out a miserable existence.

When their plight was discovered they were starving to death. Today the Navy League is sending them food and paying them the same grant given to sailors of the Navy. But for this they would have succumbed to the ill-treatment and privation. There are many Canadian sailors among them.

Their lot is almost as pitiable as that of the dependents and the families of those Merchant sailors who have died during the war. Will you help these dependents to get enough to eat and to clothe themselves? "Sailors' Week" is a Dominion-wide campaign to help Canadian seamen and their dependents, and is held from the 1st to 7th of September. Remember the date and give generously. Ontario is asked to contribute $1,000,000. Ontario has never failed.

THE KAISER'S FINISH.

Much speculation has been aroused as to the meaning of the apparent collapse of the German military machine in the face of the sudden allied offensive which has swept all before it and astonished by its force and effectiveness the entire world. The German offensives were preceded by a studied campaign of boastful publicity intended to intimidate and weaken the morale of the allied nations. Events have proved how empty that boasting was. Foch remained silent but when he hit the Hun line he hit it hard and continuously and under successive blows the enemy has been driven back in confusion and has thus far shown none of the powers of reorganization and resistance which were naturally expected. All theories of military experts, supposed to be well versed in the situation, have been upset until the stage has been reached where close observers of the progress of the war will not be greatly surprised to find that the Hun military power has been smashed beyond the possibility of any strong and permanent re-organization. In this connection the following opinion, written by a member of the Toronto Telegram staff who has been "over there" is interesting:

> Pessimists in these days of glorious news are apt to gloom over the war map. Pointing to the vast area of France and Belgium still groaning under the Teuton heel, these Sad Sammies shake their heads. Is not the enemy, they ask, still from fifty to one hundred miles beyond the boundaries of Germany? And have we not some four hundred odd miles to travel ere we can reach Berlin? Then they cite the sacrifices we have made to push the Hun to his present position, and figure lugubriously on what it will cost to drive him clear out of the conquered territory.
> Their logic is all wrong. It is unthinkable that we should have to contest every foot of ground to the German frontier as bitterly as we are doing in the present fighting. The enemy can't stand much more of the gruelling he is getting. It seems reasonable to conclude that the Germans will be actually beaten right on the soil of France, and that their retirement will be in the form of a defeated rabble or as a surrendered army marching home. Doubtless various sectors of the Hun front will be cut off. Then with a broken-up host, fighting in some spots, surrendering or running away in others, the end will come. Slain and defeated Germans, not mere acquisition of territory, are going to win this war.
> Possibly after a hard drubbing this fall the Hun high command may decide to surrender and beg for mercy rather than stick out the winter and face the huge new Yankee army which will then take the field. Thought of what the Yanks will do next spring may decide the German people quite apart from the war lords that the jig is up, and that it is high time to have a revolution and call off the war. In any case, it is hard to imagine the Germans, in view of what the British and Canadians are now doing to them, being in condition to present a solid front and fight every foot of a retirement to Germany.

.·. CRISP COMMENT .·.

Have you paid an installment on your debt to the sailors of the Merchant Marine?

In order to save cloth men's clothes are to be made tighter. Following the usual line of war time procedure it will probably be a case of less cloth and more money. Thus the squeeze game continues while the continuity is good.

The long-suffering homeless boarders who have had their rations cut to feed the Allies and been content with less food at higher rates are now called upon to practically live without sugar. Isn't it time the brown-stone fronts were relieving the boarders in the food-conservation trenches?

The Globe seems to be peeved at the very idea, as suggested in a report from Ottawa, that Premier Borden is contemplating a fishing trip. The Globe remarks that "it seems some time since anyone read that Lloyd George, or Georges Clemenceau, or Woodrow Wilson were going fishing." It is quite possible, however, that these hard-working statesmen take an occasional week-end away from their offices to indulge in the relaxation afforded by fishing or golf or whatever seems best to renew their "pep" without being reported even by the opposition press.

Count that day lost whose low descending sun does not find Hon. Wesley Rowell saving the British Empire with still another speech, says the Toronto Telegram.

One delivery a day is now the rule in leading stores in at least twenty of the large cities of the United States, and in scores of smaller cities and towns and as a result the number of men employed on deliveries in these stores has been reduced, on an average, by 25 per cent., and in some cases by 50 per cent. Co-operative delivery systems have brought about even larger saving proportionately, than the one delivery a day plan. In a small Texas town for instance, there were six grocery stores and each maintained a truck. After they organized a co-operative system one truck did the delivery for all.

OTHER VIEWS

They Count the Votes.

Kansas City Star.

Finland is going to elect a king next month, and the only line we have on the probable result is the bare fact that the election commissioners are appointees of the German government.

Dreams and Realities.

Detroit News.

So the Lenine-Trotzky idea remains a good idea, but the fact, represented by actual living conditions in the world today, having fists and feet and all the other bruising attributes of reality, puts it down for the count. But, so far as Lenine and Trotzky are concerned, they've had a remarkably thrilling run on someone else's money.

Out-Heroding Herod.

London Daily Chronicle.

The Crown Prince of Germany for the moment out-Huns his sire. The Kaiser, in the message to his people which most of us have read, felicitates them, in chastened mood, upon having escaped the horror of war in their own land. The Crown Prince, explaining his gigantic failure on the Marne, bids his father's subjects rejoice in victory, for "another region of France has been devastated." Attila, the Kaiser's idol, put his method of warfare into a phrase, "Grass never grows where my horse has once trodden."

Newspaperless Days.

Buda-Pesth Pester Lloyd.

Never has Hungary, since the press became an indispensable necessity in the life of nations, experienced worse days than this time without newspapers. Fantastic rumors arise from every nook and corner without any possibility of testing their genuineness; passing from mouth to mouth a stream of unverifiable reports grows ever higher; incredible things are distorted into grotesque nonsense, inconceivable things are repeated as incontrovertible facts, and in this stupefying confusion there are no newspapers which might have given a glimpse into realities.

Australian Mother's Sacrifice.

London Times

Bishop Taylor Smith, Chaplain-General to the Forces, preaching at Westminster Abbey, told a story of self-sacrifice. A wounded Australian soldier in a military hospital, who was asked about his home and family in Australia, said: "There were six of us lads and mother. We all enlisted and left mother alone. It was her wish. She said she hoped no boy of hers would hold back when the Mother Country called. And now five of us are asleep, buried on the battlefields of France, and I am the only one left." There were a few moments of silence and then he added: "But I have not told you the worst. When I got this wound someone cabled to my mother that I had been killed, and that telegram killed her."

A Laugh or Two

A New Disease.

Members of Army Medical Boards have some curious experiences, I gather, in the course of their work, but it might be supposed that they would have fewer opportunities for making discoveries than have their colleagues behind the fighting line and in the base hospitals. But evidently there are exceptions.

"A man presented himself for examination the other day," one medical friend tells me, "and I put the usual question: "Well, what's the matter with you?"

" 'Timorbilli.'

"What?"

"He repeated it."

" 'I don't know what that is" I said. So he produced a paper form from his own doctor, and on it was written:

" 'This man is suffering from Timor Belli.' " (fear of the war).

It sounds better, certainly, than "cold feet," and is quite as full of meaning!

Many Doing It.

"Alas!" I have nothing to live for now!" wailed the rejected lover.

"Oh, pshaw!" returned the practical maiden. "Better stick around until the Kaiser is hanged."

The Upper Atmosphere.

An agitated neighbor had just informed Mrs. Warren that her son was at the top of a telegraph pole in the vicinity. When the boy was coaxed back to earth again his mother remonstrated.

"Tad, I've told you how dangerous that is, now why will you persist in climbing those poles?"

"But ma," exclaimed the boy in an aggrieved tone, "I have to have some fresh air!"

His Compliment.

She—How is your youngest daughter getting on with her music?

He—Splendidly! Her teacher says she plays Mozart in a way that Mozart himself would never dream of.

Fool Question No. 87945223.

Hanger Around—What do you do when your batteries run out?

Irritated Autoist—Run after them, you idiot. What do you suppose I do?

To be successful a farmer has to be sharp as a raiser.

The Poet's Corner

THE KAISER CALLS UP HELL.

The Kaiser called the devil up
On the telephone one day;
The girl at central listened
To all they had to say.
"Hello!" she heard the kaiser's voice,
"Is old man Satan home?
Just tell him it is Kaiser Bill
That wants him on the phone."

The Devil said "Hello" to Bill,
And Bill said "How are you?
I'm running here a hell on earth,
So tell me what to do."
"What can I do?" the Devil said,
"My dear old kaiser Bill,
If there's a thing that I can do
To help you, sure I will."

The kaiser said "Now, listen,
And I will try to tell
The way that I am running
On earth a modern hell
I've saved for this for many years,
I've started out to kill,
That it will be a modern job
You leave to Kaiser Bill.

My army went through Belgium
Shooting women and children down,
We tore up all her country
And blew up all her towns,
My zepps dropped bombs on cities
Killing both the old and young,
And those the zepps didn't get
Were taken out and hung.

I started out for Paris
With the aid of poison gas,
The Belgians, darn 'em, stopped us,
And wouldn't let us pass.
My submarines are devils—
Why, you ought to see them fight!
They go sneaking through the sea
And sink a ship at sight'

I was running things to suit me
Till a year or so ago,
When a man named Woodrow Wilson
Wrote to me to go more slow.
He said to me "Dear William,
We don't want to make you sore,
So be sure to tell your U-boats
To sink our ships no more.

We have told you for the last time,
So, dear Bill, it's up to you,
And if you do not stop it
You have got to fight us too."
I did not listen to him,
And he's coming after me
With a million Yankee soldiers
From their homes across the sea.

Now, that's why I called you, Satan
For I want advice from you,
I knew that you would tell me
Just what I ought to do."
"My dear old Kaiser William,
There's not much for me to tell,
For the Yanks will make it hotter
Than I can for you in hell.

I've been a mean old devil,
But not half as mean as you,
And the minute that you get here
I will give my job to you.
I'll be ready for your coming
And I'll keep the fires all bright,
And I'll have your room all ready
When the Yanks begin to fight.

For the boys in blue will get you,
I have nothing more to tell,
Hang up the phone and get your hat
And meet me here in hell."

15,000 Have Made Their Last Voyage

Help the Dependents of the Victims of the Subs.

DO YOU realize who it is that has borne the brunt of Germany's hellish submarine campaign? It is not the Navy, for the U-boat tries to to keep out of the way of our fighting ships. Not the ship-owners, for insurance covers their losses. Not the insurance companies, for high rates protect them.

No! It is the 300,000 men of the Merchant Marine and the widows and orphans of the 15,000 that have made the supreme sacrifice.

The submarine has hit hardest in the thousands upon thousands of homes which have been robbed of the breadwinner. Widows may mourn their loss in poverty, for the Government makes no provision for this service, as it does for the soldier and sailor of the Army and Navy.

To protect us, to protect our trade, to let our soldiers cross the seas in safety, and to feed our soldiers and the Allied people in Britain, in France and the other theatres of war, our Merchant Marine has "carried on"—submarine or no submarine. They have paid the price.

We can help. It is our privilege to contribute to the support of the dependents of the victims of the submarine warfare. Ontario's objective is to contribute one million dollars. Ontario has never failed! Give! Give liberally!

Letters from Overseas

FROM P. G. PALMER

1st Birmingham Hospital,
Rednal, Burmingham,
Ward 5 A, England.

Dear Mother:—As you see by the above address, I am now in dear old Blighty, and am enjoying the best of health despite the fact that I have had a souvenir from Fritzie. I suppose you were all excited when you received the telegram and thought all manner of possible things, but let me assure you that there is no cause to worry, as my wound is not severe at all; just the matter of a bullet through my right side, which is extremely slight when one has seen the wounds that some of the poor fellows have. Still every one seems to be happy, and besides we get the best of care.

The hospital in which we are situated, I believe, is part of the domains of an old church, and is a very cheerful place indeed. There are from sixty to seventy patients in this ward at least, so company is not lacking. There is plenty of reading matter, comprised of pretty nearly every kind of literature.

A few days before the great British advance they asked for men from each battery to go over the top with the infantry for the purpose of turning the captured guns back on old Fritz. Mr. MacGilliveray, of whom you have often heard me speak, and who is liked and respected by everyone in the battery, was one to lead the party, and naturally quite a number wanted to go, but as there were only five needed they drew lots and I was among the five.

It was just beginning to break daylight on the morning of the offensive, when the barrage started, and it certainly was an inferno of steel and bullets. We followed the barrage as it went along and it sure was very exciting for us as it was out of our line, but as long as I could see our officer, who was walking along as calmly as though nothing was going on, I seemed to be given a courage that I don't think I would have had under other circumstances.

We went along in this manner, seeing a few Fritzies now and again for about four kilometres. Up to this time we had been in a dense mist, but as we neared the top of the hill it became clearer, till at last we left the mist behind, and there in front of us was a German trench full of men. We laid down on the ground and started firing at them, and soon they threw up their hands in the air and surrendered. We got up and beckoned them to us, but here again the German showed his low, degraded character by firing on us, and before I could get down again I received my souvenir; what hapened afterwards I don't know, but our officer said that there were a great number of them taken prisoner. I was very sorry to have been hit so early in the game, as I sure would have liked to been able to reach our appointed destination with the rest and have helped to shove back some of Fritize's own stuff at him.

After I had been dressed I walked to the nearest dressing station as best I could, which was between four and five kilometres. On my way back I saw many wounded and dead Germans, also a great many prisoners who seemed happy indeed, but if I had my way I am afraid not many of these excuses of humanity would have reached their destination. I suppose you will think me very hard hearted, but after what I had seen it was just the way I felt.

Your loving son,
P. G. PALMER.

"Best Investment I Have Ever Made"

Contractor Wouldn,t Take Five Hundred Dollars For Good Tanlac Did Him

"I just want to say right now that I wouldn't take five hundred dollars for the good that first bottle of Tanlac did me, for I feel like it has given me a new lease on life," said C. E. Nelson, a contracting carpenter living at 7728 63rd Ave., Southeast, Portland, Ore., recently.

"Following a serious accident four months ago," he continued, "which laid me up for eight or nine weeks, I lost my appetite, and my stomach got all out of order. What little I did manage to eat would sour and form gas, which would cramp and pain me until I could hardly stand it. Then my kidneys went back on me, and my back hurt so bad I couldn't find a comfortable position. They said I had rheumatism or 'lumbago,' then my right leg, below the knee, got to hurting me, and at times I couldn't stand on my feet or get up when down. I was constipated all the time and suffered a great deal with headache. Nobody knows how I really did suffer, because I just can't describe it, and as nothing semed to do me any good I had become discouraged about my condition.

"I finally sent down and got a bottle of Tanlac, as I had read so much about it, and it was about the best investment I ever made. My appetite came bounding back after my first few doses, and by the time my second bottle was gone, my stomach trouble was almost gone, too. I am now eating any and everything I want and it don't hurt me the least bit, and my kidneys and back are greatly improved. At the time I started on Tanlac I had to use crutches in order to get about, but I don't need them now at all, and have thrown them aside. I have gained several pounds in weight, and can just feel myself getting stronger every day. I have gone back to work already, and I never lose an opportunity to speak a good word for Tanlac."

"Tanlac is sold in Belleville by Ostrom's Drug Store, in Trenton by J. H. Dickey, in Deseronto by W. J. Malley, in Stirling by J. S. Morton, in Frankford by W. J. Lettimer, in Madoc by J. Will Vince, in Marysville by T. . McAlpine, in Ormsby by Jas. Campbell and in Thomasburg by J. H. Blakely."

YANKS REACH VLADIVOSTOCK

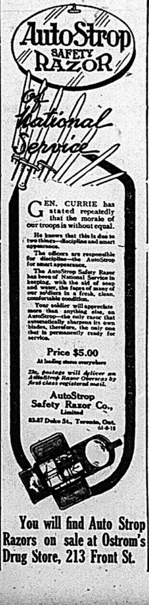
Washington, Sept. 6.—Arrival of Major-General William S. Graves and his staff, at Vladivostock to take command of all American forces fighting on the new eastern front, was announced by General March.

General Graves took with him from the U. S., forty-three officers and 1,388 men, who will join the regiments from the Philippines already on the ground.



GEN. CURRIE has stated repeatedly that the morale of our troops is without equal.

He knows that this is due to two things—discipline and smart appearance.

The officers are responsible for discipline—the AutoStrop for smart appearance.

ALL JOHN TAMSON'S BAIRNS

Toronto News.

Senator Chamberlain of Oregon, one of the most ardent supporters of President Wilson's war policy, has been criticized with some freedom because he said that the brigading of Americans with French and British forces was like brigading life with death. He contrasted the live keenness of the newcomers to the battle line with the weariness of men who had been fighting for four long, tedious years. Possibly this was the oratorical way of putting it, for the Senator would be the last man to admit that the victories of these last weeks had been achieved by men who were not in top-hole form. No American statesman or soldier who has seen the armies will suggest that there is any trace of languor in the way they attack or in the way they defend a position.

It is possible in an entente to pay too much attention to passing statements and to be too jealous of one's military reputation. Extreme jealousy has led in other times to the breaking of alliances. It is wise, therefore, to be tolerant of the French opinion that French troops are supreme, of the American view that American troops are supreme, of the British determination that the Guards are all-in-all. For we Canadians know well, without reference to the opinions of others—all good friends—that the Canadian corps is the flower of the Allied force.

MARY MILES MINTER

Two well known stars appeared at Griffin's last night, the first being Mary Miles Minter in a story of rural California. Miss Minter has the part of a young girl attending College, thinking that her father is wealthy when in reality he is struggling to make his grocery business a success. The father is conducting the store in a rural town in California and on the return of this winsome lass from College one summer she discovers that her father has not the wealth that she supposed, but is quite poor. Mary, as the title states leads the way, and puts ginger into the business, discarding many old customs long dead to the rising generation.

A single part comedy afforded much amusement and a new chapter of the very interesting serial "A Fight For Millions" was shown. "The Firefly of France" with Wallace Reid, the idol of millions, is very interesting. In this picture Reid plays the part of a young man that enlists with the ambulance section but falls into many startling situations on his way to the battle front. The story is very exciting and with the ever popular Wally Reid in the picture it could not help be pleasing.

THE SERVICE STAR

At the Palace, Madge Kennedy is appearing in a good picture called "The Service Star," dealing with the little flags that donotes that some one from the house in which it hangs has seen service over there. The story is very well constructed with a happy and novel ending; there is also a two part picture called "The Star Dust" with Margaret Clayton. It is a very called "A Barn Yard Frolic" got many laughs. This program is well balanced and will no doubt draw well for Friday and Saturday.

"A DAUGHTER OF THE SUN"

"A Daughter of the Sun," the story of an Hawaiian Butterfly, the latest play dealing with the Paradise of the Pacific comes to Griffins next Tuesday evening. This play is from the pen of Lorin Howard and Ralph T. Kettering and deals in a most delightful way with Hawaii and her people. Thecharm of the Islands is maintained by a scenic equipment never before equalled by this producer, Ed. W. Rowland. A trope of native Hawaiian singers play, sing, and dance during the action of the play. The cast is a competent one. No effort or expense has been spared in the production of "A Daughter of the Sun."

Rooms in City Hall For Military Use

City Council in Special Meeting Offer Free Use of City Hall for Offices

A special meeting of the City Council was held last evening, the object of which was to consider the proposition of granting the use of the City Hall to the military authorities to be used by clerks for clerical work in connection with the mobilization of troops here during the coming winter. It was decided to accede to the request and also allow the ante room adjoining the hall used by the Cheese Board to be used for the same purpose.

The members present at the meeting were Mayor Platt, Aldermen Whelan, Curry, Hagerman, Donohue, St. Charles, Treverton and Robinson.

Mayor Platt stated the object of calling a special meeting of the Council, namely to provide a suitable building for the placing of 50 or 60 clerks in connection with the mobilization of militia in this city. He considered that the City Hall was a suitable place for having the offices located. He had endeavored to secure a portion of the Y.M.C.A., but it was not obtainable. If a suitable place was not secured here the mobolization might not take place in Belleville.

Ald. Whelan thought that some other building than the City Hall might be secured. There were rooms available in the old Dominion Hotel premises, also rooms in the Robertson Block.

Ald. St. Charles—It means some 800 soldiers in the city for the winter which will mean much for the city.

MOTIONS

Ald. Robinson moved, seconded by Ald. Curry that the Militia Department be granted the use of the City Hall and Cheese Board room for the winter of 1918 and 1919 free of charge to be used for clerical work. The Militia department to leave the premises in the same condition as when they take posession of it.

Ald. Robinson said in days gone by we were anxious to get soldiers in the city, here was an opportunity to procure them. The City Hall was an appropriate place and he heartily supported the motion.

Ald. Whelan was in favor of getting the officers here again and to see if some other place was not available. If the City Hall and cheese room was used for this purpose it would disarrange the city officials.

In answer to a query Mayor Platt stated that Col. Smart and Major Lawson, who were in the city, expected to get a place from the city free of rent.

Ald. Robinson said all that was wanted was the City Hall and Cheese Board room. If they require any extras they will have to procure them themselves.

ROOMS AVAILABLE

Col. Lazier addressed the Council in reference to the matter and stated that it seemed a bad policy to have the City Hall used for the purpose named. In the west Robertson Block there were five rooms which could be used for the purpose mentioned.

Ald. Robinson—If the rooms were procured the city would have to pay the rent.

Ex-Mayor Ketcheson thought that the city might better procure quarters rather than have the City Hall given over for this purpose.

Ald. Donohue thought that the Militia Department should make good any damages that might be done to the hall.

Ald. Curry—We want the men here and we should do all we can to get them here. There is no time to lose in the matter. He was in favor of the motion proposed by Ald. Robinson.

Col. Lazier—I will rent the rooms in the Robertson Block for $20 a month or $4 a month for each room If the City Hall can be spared for the purpose give the Militia Department the Hall. We want the men here.

Mayor Platt—The City Hall and the Cheese Board room were agreeable to Col. Smart and Major Lawson, who were in the city. An answer had to be given in the matter tomorrow.

The motion of Ald. Robinson was adopted.

TAX COLLECTION.

Mr. J. M. Farley, tax collector, addressed the Council and stated that there were about 400 in the city who had not paid their poll tax for past two years. He had no power to restrain in the matter and nearly all were young men who had nothing to seize. The City Solicitor had given his opinion that the poll tax could be collected. There were also some business taxes, which had not been collected. If the Council and newspapers would back him up in the matter there would be no trouble in collecting the taxes.

Ald Robinson was in favor of the matter being referred to the Executive Committee and have the Solicitor's opinion in the mode of precedure.

Ald. Platt—We must get right at this matter. Appoint a Committee to deal in the matter.

A motion prevailed that the Mayor, Ald. Whelan and Ald. Robinson be a Committee to wait upon the Solicitor in regard to the matter of collection of taxes, said committee to have power to act.

ALBERT COLLEGE TAXES

Ald. Robinson said that Rev. Dr. Baker, Principal of Albert College, had asked for the remission of taxes upon certain property which had been acquired by Albert College. He moved, seconded by Ald. Treverton, that the matter of remission of taxes on certain properties acquired by Albert College be referred to the Executive Committee for consideration with power to act.—Carried.

NAVY LEAGUE GRANT

Mayor Platt referred to the fact that during this week the city was being canvassed for subscriptions for the Navy League and the Council had been requested to make a grant.

After some discussion on the subject it was decided to hold a special meeting of the Council on Monday evening next to consider the proposition to make a grant.

Council adjourned.

CATTLE MARKETS

UNION STOCK YARDS.

With 4700 head of cattle on the Union Stock Yards yesterday there was a good demand for all classes, with an active market, at steady prices. The canners and bulls sold steady.

Prospects are favorable for all classes of cattle.

Sheep market was steady, all classes of choice veal strong, heavy and rough calves barely steady. The lamb market sold at 17c for the top or a decline of 50c from last week's close.

LENINE WAS SHOT.

Woman Attempted to Kill Leader of Bolsheviki.

LONDON, Sept. 3. — Nikolai Lenine, the Bolshevik Premier, was shot twice last Friday night at Moscow, according to a telegram from Petrograd received by the Exchange Telegraph Co. by way of Copenhagen.

The latest official news concerning the condition of Lenine comes in the form of two bulletins by Russian wireless, timed 7.30 and 8.30 Saturday evening, respectively. These bulletins state that his general condition is good, that immediately danger is passed, and that no complications have arisen.

An official Russian Government despatch received by wireless concerning the shooting says that M. Lenine was wounded in two places. One bullet penetrated a little above the shoulder blade, entering the chest and touching the upper part of the lung. This caused great loss of blood. The bullet stopped on the right side of the neck over the shoulder bone.

The shooting, according to reports, occurred at the close of an audience granted by the Premier to two women Social Revolutionists, who came to discuss the embargo on the shipment of foodstuffs into Moscow. One of the women, it is said, drew a revolver and opened fire on the Premier. Lenine's assailant has been arrested.

Canadians In Fight.

LONDON, Sept. 3. — A message from Reuter's correspondent at British headquarters says that one of the features of Thursday's fighting was the clearing of Jigsaw Wood, eastward of Monchy, by the Canadians. The Germans strongly resisted, but the Canadians swept forward in grand style, and by three in the afternoon, after beginning operations in the morning, they had mopped up the wood. The Canadians claim to have captured sixty guns since Monday.

An officer of the 214th division was taken with his arms folded and an automatic in his hand. He said his men were hopeless poltroons and squealed that they were not going to face the Canadians.

The Germans in many places are blowing up supplies. The British are now within two hundred yards of the Drocourt-Queant line.

Want Pay for Bombing.

AMSTERDAM, Sept. 3. — The chief cities and towns of the Rhine district have formed a permanent committee to deal with the increasing menace of Allied air raids, says the Cologne Gazette. The cities of Cologne, Frankfort, Mayence, Stuttgart and Mannheim have representatives on the committee, and the commander of the home aerial defence is also a member.

The committee was formed at a meeting in Frankfort on Monday, at which all the municipalities concerned and the officials connected with the air defence discussed the situation fully. They demanded prompt legislation, giving the legal right of full compensation for damage from aerial attacks.

The total registration in Canada showed 2,572,754 men and 2,471,280 women, or 5,044,034 in all, not counting some 115,000 cards since received or expected through the post offices.

Canadian and American Government representatives will meet at Lake Champlain on Sept. 4 for a further conference on drafting uniform fishing laws for the two countries, in international waters.

An official German crop report estimates the yield this year at from 10 to 15 per cent. above that of 1917. The area planted to early potatoes was a fifth greater than in 1917, and that to late potatoes also showed an increase.

Capt. Neil Campbell, commanding the freighter W. Grant Morden, of the Canada Steamship Lines, and previously for many years in the employ of the Pittsburg Steamship Co., died of a paralytic stroke on his vessel near Soult Ste. Marie.

The American steamship Onega has been torpedoed. The vessel foundered Friday night. Twenty-nine persons were saved. Twenty-six are missing. Many bodies have been washed ashore. The captain of the Onega was drowned. His body has been landed.

Bapaume Merely A Heap of Ruins

On the British Front, Sept. 4.—I visited Bapaume Friday, being the first war correspondent to enter the captured town. I found it a heap of ruins and a scene of complete devastation, for British guns and British guns in recent weeks had made it practically untenable, and wrecked this once prosperous town.

For me Bapaume has old associations, because, when captured by Australians in March, 1917, I went into it to describe it. It was forlorn enough then. Now it is worse.

This time the New Zealanders have taken it, or, I should say, closed in so tightly on the Boche that Friday morning he departed from it with all haste. The advancing New Zealanders had no time to pause in the town, but swept by it from both sides.

Last night one lieutenant and a sergeant were the first actually to enter the place.

"I have never been in a gloomier place in my life," was the remark of this lieutenant when I met him there this morning looking for Boche "booby" traps.

The enemy was shelling one end of the town as I traversed its unrecognizable streets, which, except for some slightly cleared areas, were a pile of masonry and bricks.

Here was old Bapaume, in whose now completely flattened town hall some French civilians, shortly after its capture in March 1917, were blown to eternity by booby traps. I was wary of loose wires and monument-like ten-inch shells which the Boche had left standing at certain corners, some of them doubtless with time fueses and a definite mission to blow up the unwary.

Save for the screeching of British shells overhead and a few answering ones from the enemy, there is death-like stillness about this town, just at the very lip of the war crater. From a small eminence outside of Bapaume I could see the British guns pounding the retreating enemy's lines, and from far back of this line his spasmodic shells, which come into the town with a rush, were emanating. But to reach Bapaume it is necessary to traverse a long stretch of road as interesting and tragic as any over which I have crossed during the war.

Left Much Material.

I went by motor car through demolished Albert, past Laboiselle and its enormous crater, which was the scene of desperate fighting only a few days ago, past Courcelette and Butte de Warlencourt. From this country the Boche had retreated like an evil tide, leaving in the wake not only great piles of ammunition, trench railroad material and coal, but also much which he had swept over in the Marne drive. There were old destroyed tanks of Somme battles and even British-laid railways were intact.

He had been so quick to retreat this time he even left a valuable water station intact. To his credit let it be said he did not commit any vandalism upon Butte de Warlencourt, which the French long ago made into a war memorial. I climbed it again today, and on this famous hill near Bapaume stil stand crosses erected in honor of the brave Durhams and South Africans who captured it in November, 1916. The Boche left these crosses where I saw them just thirteen months ago, and over all the stretches of this Somme country he has not uprooted any grave marks.

Since my last visit to this devastated area there has grown up a big Boche cemetery facing the main road near Bapaume which he had left in good condition. Having seen the effects of his power of destruction on the roads after Bapaume was first captured, it is surprising to find today, when traversing the main Albert-Bapaume road that it practically is in the same splendid condition as a year ago.

NINTY YEARS OF AGE

Mrs. Alexander Harold, whose home is situated on the corner of Dunbar and West Bridge streets, in this city, yesterday commemorated the 90th anniversary of her birth. She is enjoying fairly good health and her many friends wish her continued health and happiness.

LIEUT. HOWARD WOUNDED.

An official message from the Director of Records at Ottawa received by his family in Brockville, conveyed the information that Lieut. Evan Robert Howard, of a Canadian infantry battalion, was wounded by gunshot in the left leg on Sept. 2.—The message gave no particulars as to his location. Lieut. Howard, who had served in the Imperial forces, was employed as a fireman with the Grand Trunk Railway when he enlisted in September, 1915, at the age of 37 years with the 80th Battalion as a private. Before the departure of that unit for England he rose to the rank of Battalion Sergeant-Major and some time ago received his commission.

Smith is a son of Mrs Mondville, and left with the 155th Battalion.

GASOLINE TO BE RESTRICTED.

There is every indication that there will be a curtailment of the Sunday auto traffic in this locality. The Imperial Oil Company service stations will be closed on Sundays till the end of the war. This rule is rigid and will be obeyed, according to the orders received from General Manager G. J. Hambly at Toronto. It is pointed out that there is at present a great scarcity of gasoline and that only the cooperation of all users in the matter of conservation will prevent the necessity of issuing stringent regulations limiting, by Government order, the use of this much needed product.

WOUNDED IN THE CHEST

Mr. W. E. Anderson of Ameliasburg Township, Prince Edward County, this morning received a cablegram which stated that his son, Pte. W. Brint Anderson, 2115747, had been wounded in the chest. Pte. Anderson enlisted at Calgary last year in an Army Service Corps, and was transferred to the infantry, having been at the front with the 49th Canadian Battalion. The cable was from Mr. W. A. Anderson, whose home is at Lewis, Sussex County England, and who is a cousin of Mr. W. E. Anderson.

DANGEROUSLY WOUNDED

Mr. Richard Black, residing at 24 Hillside street, this city, was to-day in receipt of the following sad message from Ottawa: "Sincreley regret to inform you 636710 Pte. Pte Black tried to enlist with the 155th Battalion of this city, but was turned down, being only 16 years old. He then joined a special class at Lindsay, being bugler of the guards at the Arsenal. From thence he was transferred to the 252nd Battalion, which left here about the same time as the 254th Battalion. The news is especially sad as to-day is his 19th birthday. The many friends of the brave young soldier in Belleville will hope that the wounds will not prove of a fatal nature.

Knights of Columbus To Make Drive

To Aid Canadian Army Huts—Belleville Knights to Raise $5,000

A most enthusiastic gathering of the Belleville Knights of Columbus was held last night at their Club Rooms, Robinson Block, Front St. The purpose was the organization of a central committee to manage this district's share of the nation wide drive to obtain $500,000 for the Canadian Army Huts. Belleville District has placed $5,000 as its objective, and it is confidently expected that this will be reached and far surpassed. While the Knights of Columbus as a fraternal organiation is conducting the campaign, it is simply acting as a trustee and agency, assisting in the administration of the Army Huts, which are under direction of the Military Chaplain service and regularly recognized by Government authority. The huts are non-sectarian and the slogan "All Soldiers Welcome" is fully lived up to always.

The Army Huts have been established for more than a year, but until the present time it was not necessary to appeal to the general public. Now, however, the work is becoming too expensive and the appeal must be made in order to keep this vitally necessary work alive. During the past year the Canadian Army Huts have supplied the needs of thousands of our Brave Boys in training in Canada, in training in England and on the firing line in France, where the portable huts are moved right up under the guns, and all this without charge of any kind. Stationery, reading matter and refreshments are supplied to all soldiers. There are no sales whatever, and no one connected with the administration of the Army Huts receives a cent of remuneration.

The Canadian Army Huts are under the patronage of His Excellency The Duke of Devonshire, Governor General of Canada, and the President is Lt. Col. W. T. Workman, M.C., A.D.C.S., London, England, Vice-President Lt. Col. L. W. French, D.S.O., D.A.D.C.S., France. This organization is working in conjunction with and not in opposition to the Y.M.C.A., and kindred organizations that have done so much for our noble army in this great war. As with these other organizations the dispensing of comforts will be non-sectarian, so also will the appeal be non-sectarian, and it is hoped and confidently expected that Belleville District will respond with the same generosity as before to this appeal to lighten the task of our brave soldiers in France, who have cast a radiance of gallantry on the fair name of Canada that will go down through history to the end of time. The call is for all to get together with one single aim to win the war, and each do our bit for those who are winning it for us.

Letters From Overseas

FROM HOWARD BLACK

Mrs. R. D. Black, 24 Hillside street, has received a letter dated France, August 13, from her son Howard, on active service overseas, the following extracts from which will be of public interest:

"Well, mother, I suppose you will be worrying about me as you have not heard from me in some time. I am very sorry, but it was unavoidable owing to unsettled conditions they could not take mail. I sent you a whiz bang) field card as often as I possibly could.

'I would like to tell you plenty of news but I guess it will have to wait till I come home. I can say though, that I've been over the top, got my first 'Fritzie' and am still as fit as ever. We have him on the run and I'll send you a bunch of souvenirs as soon as possible. Art Clare and Tim Buck are still fine and Tim has been recommended for a medal."

Barge Founders In Heavy Storm

Had Cargo of Stone From Point Anne Quarries—Capt. Smith In Charge

TORONTO, Sept. 6—Capt. James Smith, of Lakeport, Ont., together with a woman and three other men, narrowly escaped drowning when the barge Sligo with a cargo of stone from Point Anne Quarriers foundered in a gale two miles out in the lake off the Humber River shortly after four o'clock yesterday morning.

Capt. Quinn of the tug New York, which was towing the barge at the time of the accident endeavored to aid the crew of the sinking boat but was forced to desist on account of the high seas running and the seriplight of his own craft.

The tug New York therefore made its way to the city; the life-saving crew was notified, and they together with the tug Geary, Capt. Cook, hurried to the scene.

Meanwhile the crew of the sinking barge had battled their way to shore in a rowboat and landed near Swansea.

Anee Quarries, Hasting County, has sunk in thirty feet of water. No effort will be made to raise it.

Royal Scandal May Cause Divorce

People Growing More Bitter Daily Against Emperor and Empress

BERNE, Sept. 7—A few months ago several official or semi-official denials were made regarding charges against Emperor Charles of Austria and his wife, Empress Zita. What these charges refer to is becoming known by degress. The Austrian censorship has so far prevented a full statement reaching the wires in neutral countries, but the news is filtering through telling of a scandal in the Imperial Palace which is likely to lead to a divorce

The Empress is accused of shielding and protetcing the Italians. The disaster on the Piave was the result of a plot engineered by Empress Zita, the people believe. In Vienna the excitement of the people knows no bounds. When the Emperor appears in the streets he is received with cat calls and curses. Recently a man ran after automobile in which the ruler was driving, calling out: "Fie upon thee, Parma!"

Empress Zita is a daughter of the house of Parma, one of the royal families, formerly reigning over parts of Italy. Zita's brothers are accused of betraying Austria. There is no end of denials coming from official sources. These denials, proclaimed even from ministerial benches in Parliament, show the seriousness of the situation caused by the reports, rumors and gossip affecting the Imperial family. While some of the reports no doubt are extravagant the Austrian people insist that where there is smoke one is bound to find fire.

Britain Furious At Embassy Crime

LONDON, Sept. 7—The attack on last Saturday, involving the sacking of the Embassy and the killing of Captain Cromie, the British attache, has aroused intense indignation here. The London morning newspapers in their editorials denounce the act in the strongest terms, and endorse the British Government's action in the demand upon the Bolsheviki Government for reparation and the threat of outlawry for the members of the Soviet Government should it fail to give complete satisfaction or should further acts of violence be committed against British subjects. They assure the Government that it will have the support of the nation in enforcing the punishment of the perpetrators.

According to Foreign Office advices Captain Cromie opposed the Bolsheviki troops and killed three soldiers with his own hands. Captain Cromie was killed and his corpse was mutilated. The documents at the Embassy were destroyed.

It is feared that similar outrages have been committed against the French Embassy at Petrograd. Precautionary measures have been taken, the Foreign Office says, and some French soldiers have already arrived at Petrograd. The Bolsheviki are reported to be encouraging the populace to massacre the British and French.

Laon is Now Under Fire of French Guns

Foch is Practising His Precept Of Battle With Telling Effect

PARIS, Sept. 7.—The course of the fighting on the western front continnus to show day after day that Marshal Foch is practising his precept, "The whole art of war consists in attacking," with telling effect on the enemy. As Henry Ridou points out in the Journal des Debats, the battle of the Marne is being reproduced, with the positions reversed. Six German armies are recoiling closely pressed by seven or eight allied armies, as was the case with the allied forces four years ago.

The commander of the French right wing made a brilliant score yesterday, placing the entire hinge of Soissons in allied grasp. The recapture of Folembray, Coucy-le-Chateau and Coucy-le-Ville, all of which had been cleaned out and destroyed by the retreating enemy, brings the allied troops to the foot of the St. Gobain heights, on the retention of which the present German line in the west absolutely depends. The German citadel of Laon is again under the fire of French guns.

It is now plain that the direction of the enemy retreat is towards the line of Cambrai-St. Quentin. He is carrying it out with no mean skill, and only one mistake can be detected in his plan. That error lay in the persistency with which he clung to the Vesle.

Four Thousand to On British Air Score

LONDON, Sept. 7.—The British, during the year ending June 30 last, brought down considerably over 4,000 German aircraft, while British machines missing have only slightly exceeded 1,000, it is officially announced.

"German machines refuse battle unless they have a decided superiority in numbers," it is added. "Where numbers are equal British victory is assured; where numbers are with the Germans victory is very frequent for the British."

RURAL ASSOCIATION ELECTS ITS OFFICERS

Toronto, Sept. 7.—The inaugural conference of the Rural Municipal Association of Ontario, which has been in session at the Labor Temple, closed yesterday afternoon with the election of the following provisional directors: President, John Forgie, Pickering; Vice-President, J. D. Drummond, McGillivray; Sec.-Treas., D. B. Beaton, Whitevale. Executive Committee: W. A. Emery, Wentworth Co.; C. H. Claus, Lincoln, Co.; Clarence Mallory, Prince Edward Co.; Judson Scratch, Essex, Co.; R. J. Wilson, Victoria Co.; Fred Rosebrough, Brant Co.

On a 12-Mile Front British Go 3 Miles

LONDON, Sept. 7.—British troops were reported to have advanced yesterday morning astride the Amiens-St. Quentin line on a front of twelve miles to a depth of three miles.

Ham-Guiscard Line Turned.

Gen. Debeny's army has turned the Ham-Guiscard line at Dampcourt, west of Chauny. The Germans are retreating rapidly all along the front south of the Somme.

Hun Positions Untenable.

The capture of Coucy-le-Chateau by the French makes the German positions on the Chemin des Dames precarious and practically untenable, according to French military officers.

BRITISH TROOPS MARCH ON MESSINES FRENCH SMASH ENEMY REAR GUARD

MANY TOWNS TAKEN AND PRISONERS CAPTURED

ALLIED ARMIES CONTINUE VICTORIOUS ADVANCE ALL ALONG THE LINE, DRIVING INVADERS BACK TOWARD THE RHINE — ENEMY REARGUARD RESISTANCE SMASHED BY FRENCH TROOPS, WHO ARE CLOSELY FOLLOWING RETREATING GERMANS — TOWNS SEVERAL MILES BEYOND HAM HAVE BEEN OCCUPIED BY FRENCH TROOPS.

Special Despatches to The Intelligencer, Canadian Press, Limited.

LONDON, Sept. 7.—(Official)—British troops advanced last night on the front to the southwest, and north of Peronne captured the towns of Hancourt, Sorel-le-Grand, and Metz-en-Couture.

BRITISH PUSHING TOWARD MESSINES.

Fighting their way toward the left flank of the German positions along the Canal du Nord from Havrincourt northward the British penetrated the western part of Havrincourt Wood, taking prisoners as they proceeded.

In Flanders the British are pushing toward Messines, near the southern end of the Messines ridge and advanced their lines last night a short distance in the direction of the town.

FRENCH ADVANCE BEYOND HAM.

PARIS, Sept. 7.—(Official)—On the front between the Somme and the Oise Rivers French troops continued to press forward last night, overcoming the resistance of the German rearguard. Pushing east of Ham French troops have occupied the towns of Dury and Ollezy, more than three miles beyond Ham.

VICTORIOUS SWEEP OF FRENCH TROOPS.

LONDON, Sept. 7.—Tergnier, three miles west of LaFere, has been captured by French troops. North of the Ailette the French have made a further advance, winning the entire lower forest of Coucy. North of the Vesle where the American troops have been advancing there is no change in the situation.

FRENCH ADVANCE ON TWENTY-MILE FRONT.

LONDON, Sept. 7.—(1 p.m.)—French troops have advanced on a 20-mile front to an average depth of two miles and at some places to a depth of four miles. They occupied Tergnier without opposition. French troops also reached the Forest of Coucy and are now on a stretch of entirely new ground.

BRITISH TROOPS ADVANCING RAPIDLY.

LONDON, Sept. 7.—British progress on practically the whole battlefront from Havrincourt Wood to the River Aisne continued this mornin gwith much greater rapidity than had been expected. The British line starting at Havrincourt Wood, of which the British occupy practically one-half, runs through Metz-en-Couture and Fins, thence by Lieramont, Longavesnes, Tincourt, Boucly, Hancourt, Tertry, to Lanchy, where it joins the French line.

THE WAR YESTERDAY

All long the sixty-mile front from the region east of Bapaume to the junction of the American and French lines near Rheims Allied troops yesterday drove the enemy rear-guards toward the Hindenburg line. On the northern part of the battlefield English and Australian troops swept the Germans back on a front of about fifteen miles to a depth of seven miles east of the Somme. Many villages were captured, two of them after sharp fighting. The British are now about nine miles from St. Quentin.

Betwen the Somme and the Oise the French drove the Germans out of the wooded hill country known as the Autremont Massif, occupied Ham and Chauny, and pushed on close to Terguier, an important railway centre a little over three miles to the west of La Fere.

ANOTHER MEDICAL OFFICER ARRESTED

MONTREAL, Sept. 7.—Capt. A. Roy C.A.M.C., has been arrested by the military authorities in addition to Capt. J. M. E. Provost, C.A.M.C.

The offences charged against the accused officers have not been divulged. It is alleged, however, that they have to do with examining draftees from service. These officers were not directly identified with the interior economy and administration of the 2nd Quebec Regiment, so it is understood, and the work of medically examining draftees was quite separate from regimental procedure.

All along the sixty-mile front from Bapaume to the junction of the American and French lines near Rheims, the Allies are driving the enemy toward the Hindenburg line. The British are now nine miles from St. Quentin.

French troops have captured Ham and re-occupied all the old positions along the whole front to the north of the Aisne River.

Auto Machine Guns Chase Fleeing Enemy

With the American Forces on the Aisne Front, Sept. 7.—In their endeavor to keep up with the Germans, who are retreating beyond the River Aisne, the Americans have organized auto machine gun detachments, with three men to each car. More than 30 cars were operating north of the Vesle River early today.

As not much German infantry had been sighted, the automobile machine gunners were uncertain just where their advance might lead them. The outfit had supplies of food and equipment to enable them to keep after the Germans for days.

As the Americans pressed forward it was a different sight than that which greeted them in their advance from the Marne to the Vesle. From the Vesle northward over the plateau the Germans had cleaned up virtually everything, taking with them all of value or of use, and were burning what they could not move northward, or which might be of use to the French or Americans. Between the Marne and the Vesle the Germans had left great stores of supplies and ammunition because of their hasty withdrawal.

The roads on the plateau north of the Vesle were in fairly good condition although in some places over ravines the Germans had endeavored to destroy some bridges. Engineers quickly repaired the roads, and Americans on foot and on horseback and mule teams, automobile trucks and motorcycles went ahead along grain fields overrun with weeds, and passed villages with houses shot to pieces, but nowhere encountering anything of military value.

The plateau for every few miles was dotted with frames of German airdromes, from some of which the Americans say, Germans raiders who bombed Paris operated. Three or four of these frames stand in aviation fields at a score of places. The American officers believe that this plateau must have been the principal German aviation site for operating against Paris for the districts in between.

The canvas covering for the hangars were taken by the Germans when they retired, and the wooden frames were so damaged by shells that they were virtually worthless.

Neat Move Cleared Foe From The Vesle

American Army Headquarters in France, Sept. 7.—There never was a neater instance of a strategical offensive than the fashion in which the Germans along the Vesle were put to flight by a blow struck many miles to the west of them. Had we attempted to force the line of the Vesle tactically we should have lost at least 10,000 men and possibly three times that number. By the blow struck on the Soissons plateau, however—a blow which in any case was inevitable—the Vesle has been cleared in the operations along the Ailette. By those same operations some of the finest divisions of the German army have been prevented from holding up the British advance, and the Hindenburg line thus has been broken by a battle near 100 miles away from it.

Though the German withdrawal from the Vesle is the most showy event in this sector, by far the most serious one was their defeat between Terny-Sorny and the Ailette. It is no wonder that their troops were commanded to resist to the last man, since if they are unable to hold the neck of the hill to the south of Vauxaillon, they will have to withdraw their entire garrison from the Pontrouge plateau and fall back to the last ridge from which the flank of Chemin des Dames can be defended.

HUNS USE 103 DIVISIONS.

London, Sept. 7.—Since August 8 the Germans have employed in the western front fighting 103 divisions (1,236,000) men), it was estimated today. Of these 29 were placed on the battle line, withdrawn and then sent into action again. In addition five Austrian divisions were used. One of them was broken up.

The boys in their rombles through the house picked up and old gun, which was loaded, and the eldest of the children pulled the trigger, the charge shooting away a portion of the hand and a portion of the head of the other child, and killing him.

Panic Conditions in Germany Nervous Anxiety Sways Nation

Special Despatch to The Intelligencer, Canadian Press, Limited.

LONDON, Sept. 7.—Public interest today is quite equally divided between the unbroken advance of the Allied army and the apparent signs that the German people are in a state of nervous anxiety bordering on demoralization. More editorial space is being given here recently to future events that hinge on the retreat of the German army. The belief that something like a panic has seized the German people is not based upon stories from neutral sources which have been proved unreliable in the past, but upon the utterances of leaders in the German nation and the appeals of the German newspapers to the public to keep its head, while they themselves admit the seriousness of the military situation.

WESTERN CROP DAMAGE REPORTS GREATLY MAGNIFIED—WANT 10,000 HARVESTERS AT ONCE.

Reports previously published regarding the damage by frost to the crops in Saskatchewan were unduly pessimistic. Frequent showers and favorable weather have changed the outlook and it is apparent that the great province of Saskatchewan will have a normal crop. This is evidenced by Western demands for farm laborers, as not less than 10,000 are required immediately for harvesting.

Every young man and those more mature, in every community in Ontario, including our own, should get away and can make this a great opportunity to serve the country in a practical way, and at the same time be of invaluable benefit to himself. The trial-tests were very satisfactory, particularly the last aerial mail round trip, when letters sent from Toronto received an answer from Ottawa on the same day.

Prohibit Exchange Of Artificial Limbs

In order to protect returned soldiers who are amputation cases from the competitive attention of the representatives of private manufacturers of artificial limbs, it has been found necessary to pass an order-in-council enforcing strict regulations in the matter of the supply of artificial limbs to such returned men as require them. It has also been found necessary to attach a strict penalty to any misrepresentations or false statements made by any parties in connection with appliances manufactured and issued by the Government.

The necessity of this order-in council is fully explained in a statement made by Sir James Lougheed, Minister of Soldiers' Civil Re-establishment:—

Unjustifiable Criticism.

"There has been very keen competition among private manufacturers of artificial limbs and apparatus to secure orders from returned soldiers, and some firms and their representatives have not hesitated to make, in our judgment, unjustifiable criticism of the limbs and apparatus manufactured by the Government in its shop. Every returned Canadian soldier, who is an amputation case, is not only provided by the Government with such artificial limb as he may require, but is entitled to have such a limb repaired and, if necessary, replaced during his lifetime. In establishing this policy it was determined to secure the best materials and workmanship obtainable. No expense was spared in seing data. Experts were sent to Europe to study the methods of manufacture in every allied country, and their conclusions were applied in the manufacture of standard artificial limbs by the most skilled workmen and experts to be secured.

"No man who suffers an amputation can ever feel that he is bodily complete, however long he has been wearin the most perfect artificial limb imaginable, still less can he be contented when he essays the use of what is at the best a substitute.

No Cheap Limbs

"Profiting by the state of mind in which a man who has lost a limb first finds himself, a number of manufacturers and evndors of artificial limbs, with their own commercial gains in view, have endeavored to convince returned men that the limbs of the Government issues are clumsy and of little value compared with their own product. It is true that nearly every privately manufactured artificial limb has some special patented device not possessed by those of other manufacture. In view of the fact that the Government has the right to use any patent that may be useful, it is, therefore, impossible for a private manufacturer to issue a limb superior to that manufactured by the Government. The Government has no interest in issuing a cheap or poorly manufactured limb. The purpose of the issue is to provide the disabled soldier with the best possible substitute for his lost member with which he can carry on his life and daily work.

"The Government has established a central factory at Toronto where limbs are manufactured by the best experts in their line. There are fitting and repair shops established at other centres. Standardization is an essential in the carrying out of the programme, because there has been established a travelling corps of fitters—returned men who themselves have suffered amputations—who are continually on the road where their services are required."

Stamp Govt. Output

The order-in-council in question enacts that every artificial limb and appliance manufactured or issued by the Department of Soldiers' Civil Re-establishment shall be stamped with the words "Issued by the Government of Canada." The penalty for forgery of this mark is punishable by a fine of from $50.00 to $200.00 or four months imprisonment, together with a confiscation of every chattel, article, instrument or thing by means of which or in relation to which such counterfeit seal has been made or affixed. A fine of $100.00 is provided for any person who wilfully defaces, conceals or removes a Government seal.

Punishment Provided

It is also provided that no person to whom an artificial limb or appliance is issued by the Department shall transfer, exchange or otherwise relinquish such limb except with a written consent of the Minister of Soldiers' Civil Re-establishment. Any person other than the one to whom such limb or apliance has been issued, who has possession of one or who makes any alteration to it without the consent of the Minister is also punishable.

The order-in-council goes on to say that every person, who by words oral or written, or by signs, pictures, ccariatures or objects, or by public exhibition or demonstration, publishes a false statement or suggestion or representation disparaging any goods manufactured or issued by the Department of Soldiers' Civil Re-establishment, shall be guilty of an offence and liable on summary conviction to a penalty not exceeding $100.00. It is provided, however, that nothing in these regulations shall take away or rpejudice any civil remedy which the Department might have for actionable disparagement of its goods.

RICH LOOT FOR HUNS.

The Cathedral of the Holy Saviour in Moscow, says Stray Stories, is probably the most magnificent church in the world. Its five cupolas are covered with pure gold one-half inch in thickness. Its internal decorations are magnificent and very costly. This church is the nation's thank-offering for the deliverance of Moscow from the French. It took fifty years to build, and its cost has been estimated at $160,000,000.

In the Cathedral of the Assumption, situated inside the Kremlin, is the most sacred picture of Russia, the Virgin of Vladimir, said to be painted by St. Luke. The jewels which adorn it are valued at $1,250,000, one emerald alone being said to be worth $250,000. Napoleon took from the church five tons of silver and 500 pounds of gold, but its most precious treasures were concealed previous to the French invasion, and afterward restored.

Nearby is the Cathedral of the Annunciation, with its many golden domes. It has a pavement of agate and jasper. The celebrated icon of the Virgin of the Don is its most prized possession.

The dome of St. Isaac's Cathedral in Petrograd, from which the Royalists fired machine guns during the revolution, is the most conspicuous object in the capital. It is covered with copper overlaid with pure gold, no less than $1,000,000 of gold being melted down for the purpose. The total cost of this cathedral is estimated at $125,000,000.

Mr. Peck's car was in first class condition and was provided with Goodyear tires nearly new, while a new tire was stropped on the side. The marker number was 88834 and the serial number 79521. # Build up the Mighty National Force

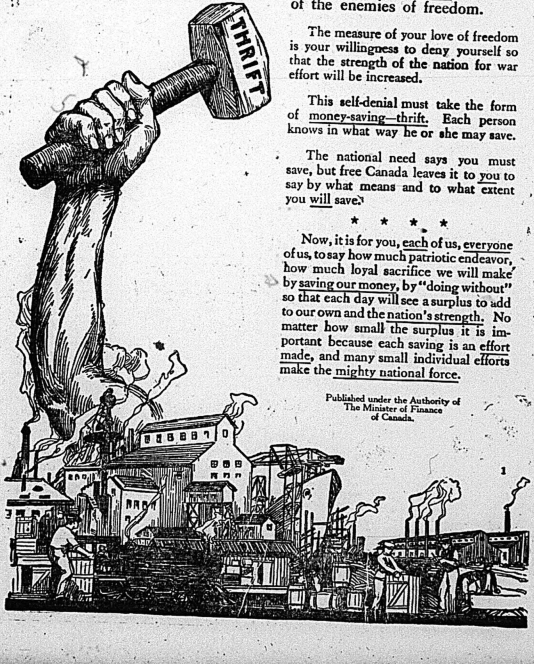
FOR fifty years the Teuton peoples have been trained, disciplined, whipped, into servile cogs of an implacable military machine, by which is maintained the Prussian doctrine of might, and the Kaiser's autocracy. The Teutons deny themselves, they make sacrifices, because they are trained or forced to do so, but they do it.

The peoples of the Allied nations must make great sacrifices and tremendous efforts in order to defeat the enemies of freedom, but because they are free peoples it is left largely to the individual to say what or how much self-denial each will practice.

So if freedom is to prevail individuals must make voluntary sacrifices which in the aggregate will be greater than the forced sacrifices of the enemies of freedom.



The measure of your love of freedom is your willingness to deny yourself so that the strength of the nation for war effort will be increased.

This self-denial must take the form of money-saving—thrift. Each person knows in what way he or she may save.

The national need says you must save, but free Canada leaves it to you to say by what means and to what extent you will save.

* * * *

Now, it is for you, each of us, everyone of us, to say how much patriotic endeavor, how much loyal sacrifice we will make by saving our money, by "doing without" so that each day will see a surplus to add to our own and the nation's strength. No matter how small the surplus it is important because each saving is an effort made, and many small individual efforts make the mighty national force.

A MARVEL OF THE WAR.

he healthiest place for any man to be in today is in the ranks of my. The healthiness of the Allies' armies has been one of the s of the war. It is brought to mind by some official figures just ut from Washington, showing what medical science has done for erican army.

uring the Mexican War, the annual death rate from disease among erican troops was 100 men out of every thousand. During the War, the rate was as high as 60 out of every thousand. During anish-American War, it was 25 out of every thousand. Now the on-General's office reports that among the American troops at and abroad, the annual death rate from disease fluctuates from less per thousand to slightly more than 3 per thousand. This is an ishing record. The best of all performances previous to the present as in the Russian-Japanese War, when the annual death rate from e among the Japanese troops was 20 per thousand. The Ameri- present rate is about one-tenth of that. The annual death rate lisease among American men of military age in civil life is 6.7 per and. The army rate is about one-third of that.

And the miracle has been achieved not by any one medical discovery ecaution, but by a campaign of administrative vigilance that has every means to protect and promote and assure the health of mil- of men. At the outbreak of the war the most skillful physicians e drawn into service. The camps and cantonments were located by itary experts. The plans for the buildings were reviewed by civil dical boards after these plans had been passed by the army authorities. ther local influence nor political pull was given any consideration in ing the camps or in building them. A system of thorough inoculation inst typhoid, malaria, and the so-called "water diseases," completely inated those infections. Every other disease is either efficiently com- ed or prevented. We shall doubtless learn a good deal from the use he mass treatments and wholesale specifics which the war has made ible. The high standard of health attained by the American army is plicate of the armies of the rest of the Allies, and the United States tary medical men have profited by their experience and made im- vements wherever possible.

A Maritime Province paper discloses need for greater public information by seriously expressing doubt as to the country's ability to cope as successfully with the coming Victory Loan as with previous issues. As a matter of truth the Dominion will "go over the top" to meet the new loan financially stronger, than at any time since the beginning of the war. One fact alone may be cited as proof of this. At the present time deposits in the savings banks of the country are greater than they were at the beginning of the war by the enormous amount of $250,000,000.—Ottawa Journal.

Australian War Loans.
United Empire.

Subscriptions to Australia's Sixth Internal War Loan amount to over £43,000,000, an interesting feature of the present issue being the increase in the number of individual subscribers. A bond lottery scheme inaugurated in four of the States was the means of raising £1,220,000, while New South Wales contributed over £19,000,000. The wealth of the Commonwealth is said to have increased from £1,643,000,000 to £1,800,000,000 since 1915, the year of the first loan, so that it should be long before Australia's resources for war purposes can become exhausted.

President Wilson's "Interference"
Baltimore Sun.

Mr. Wilson may or may not have "adjourned politics," but he can not adjourn facts. Wherever a Congressional gentleman with a bad record comes up for re-election, it has been his privilege—and doubtless his pleasure—to point out that the candidate is no friend of his. It is none of his business who is nominated, but he takes the liberty of recalling the facts of the case. Certainly no one can be permitted to wear an Administration mask now who has been fighting the Administration for the last eighteen months. If the facts hurt, whose fault is it?

The Shrinkage of Cordwood.
Goderich Star.

Fuel men have discovered that 4-foot wood when sawn up into foot lengths only piles three single cords instead of four as one might expect. The air spaces which are to be seen in a cord of wood four feet long, on account of waviness or knots in the wood disappear to a large extent when the wood is sawn to foot length and piled, and actual experiment, the fuel men claim, demonstrates that this means about the loss of one single cord.

The Tightness of Clothes.
Detroit News.

Further steps are to be taken at the suggestion of Government authorities to save cloth. Said authorities are aware, we trust, that there is a limit in all things, even the tightness of men's garments. If men's clothes get much tighter a man will carry his street car transfer in his hand rather than run the risk of trying to carry it in his pocket.

The Toronto Globe speaks of the "inexhaustible natural resources" of Canada. Possibly wild pigeons were at one time spoken of in such extravagant terms when they darkened the heavens in flight. But where are they today? Extinct.

South Africa's Part.
Vancouver World.

South Africa has conquered more German territory than all the Allies combined. German Southwest and German East Africa are huge areas of rich territory only lacking development.

But South Africa's contribution to the war is not limited by her achievements on her own borders. She raised 40,000 troops for these campaigns, but she sent 60,000 to other war-theatres, including Europe. She suppressed one rebellion of her own citizens and she prevented another gaining headway. She has built miles upon miles of new railways and now controls the second largest railway system under one management in the world. She has become self-supporting and food-shortage is unknown. Her exports to Great Britain of maize wool and leather have grown enormously.

Airplanes in Canada.
Vancouver World.

The use of airplanes in this vast Dominion would bring tremendous advantages. For example, o nthe prairie towns could be linked up by daily mail services at small cost. Police work where long distances must be covered, would be amazingly simplified. In Northern Ontario or in British Columbia prospecting by aircraft is quite a possibility. A coastal patrol of hydroplanes could be made of much benefit to shipping. The long Arctic patrol of the Royal Northwest Mounted Police could be accomplished in a few days. The capture of a "wanted" Indian in the Northland would become merely an afternoon air trip instead of a weary "mush" of months. The airplane has opened up a new world of possibilities. Canada should awake to them.

The Poet's Corner

THE RIVERS OF FRANCE.
Westminster Gazette

The rivers of France are ten score and twain,
But five are the names that we know.
The Marne, the Vesle, the Ourcq and the Aisne,
And the Somme of the swampy flow.

The rivers of France, from source to the sea,
Are nourished by many a rill.
But these five, if ever a drought there be,
The fountains of sorrow would fill.

The rivers of France shine silvery white,
But the waters of five are red
With the richest blood, in the fiercest fight
For Freedom, that ever was shed.

The rivers of France sing soft as they run,
But five have a song of their own,
That hymns the fall of the arrogant one
And the proud cast down from his throne.

The rivers of France all quietly take
To sleep in the house of their birth,
But the carnadined wave of five shall break
On the uttermost strands of Earth.

Five rivers of France, see their names are writ
On a banner of crimson and gold,
And the glory of those who fashioned it
Shall nevermore cease to be told.

THE BELLS OF BELGIUM.

By James Henry Darlington Bishop of Harrisburg, Pa.

Ten thousand bells of Belgium rang their message o'er and o'er;
Five hundred years they called to prayer now silent evermore.
No more will Antwerp, Bruges and Ghent awaken by their chimes,
For the bells, like men, have suffered from the Hun's unheard-of crimes.

Ten thousand bells of Belgium have been melted up for guns;
Not even altar vessels have been sacred to the Huns.
Their metal, mixed with base alloy, is shot at Belgian men,
With the Hun's cold sneer, "The Belgians shall have their bells again!"

O captive bells of Belgium, it's not your fault, we know,
That you pierce the hearts and take the lives of those who love you so.
At least you're buried with the slain, in the soil you love so well;
Those saved, put back when war is done, will ring the Hun's death knell.

Our silver, gold, and copper from America's far mines;
We gladly offer for new bells to voice your pillaged shrines.
When Belgium blocked the Hun advance and said, "Halt! Here you stop!"
You won our heart's devotion to the last pulsating drop.

The plots of lying Huns shall not Walloon from Fleming cleave;
Your hearts are knit so firm by love the Hun cannot deceive.
As metal of ten thousand bells together now has run,
So the fires of German baseness have fused all hearts as one.

God bless the Huguenot and Catholic, and loyal Hebrew, too;
King Albert, Cardinal Mercier, we bow our hearts to you!
We join with Caesar—"Belgians are the bravest of the brave";
You gave your all for Freedom, the whole wide world to save.

The children in all schools have learned and e'en the youngest knows
How every Belgian faced the Huns and stopped five million foes;
Henceforth all lands and farthest isles, wherever mankind dwells,
Will recall the bells of Belgium, when they hear their own church bells.

THE ROAD TO ROYE.

Dameny town, they say, is ours,
Ride, O ride to its rubble tow'rs,
Let us begone, for the Road runs fair,
Prairie trooper, galloping mare.

Flank the enemy, ride him down,
On to Roye, from Dameny town.
Ride, O ride in the dusky morn,
Hear the cavalry hunting-horn.

Red volcanoes are at our feet,
Shrapnel creams at our cowboy-sea,
Ride, O ride, for the guns are strong,
And the Road to Roye is devilish long.

Dameny town is colse at hand.
Ours? Not so. It is battery-land.
Curse the spy, and his lying tongue!
Threes about—and all of us young!

Threes about—through the iron flood,
Empty saddles, and seas of blood!
Ride, O ride till our rest be found,
Ride to the Blackfoot hunting-ground.

Frequent Headaches

People with thin blood are much more subject to headaches than full-blooded persons and the form of anaemia that afflicts growing girls is almost always accompanied by headaches together with disturbances of the digestive organs.

Whenever we have constant or recurring headaches and pallor of the face they show that the blood is thin and your efforts should be directed toward building up your blood. A fair treatment with Dr. Williams' Pink Pills will do this effectively and the rich, red blood made by these pills will remove the headache.

More disturbaces to the health are caused by their blood than most people have any idea of. When your blood is impoverished, the nerves suffer from lack of nourishment and you may be troubled with insomnia, neuritis, neuralgia and sciatica. Muscles subject to strain are under-nourished and you may have muscular rheumatism or lumbago If your blood is thin and you begin to show symptoms of any of these disorders, try building up the blood with Dr. Williams Pink Pills, and as the blood is restored to its normal condition every symptom of the trouble will disappear. There are more people who owe their present state of good health to Dr. Williams' Pink Pills than to any other medicine, and most of them do not hesitate to say so.

You can get Dr. Williams Pink Pills through any dealer in medicine or by mail at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50 from The Dr. Williams Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

The New South Wales Parliament has given the first reading to the anti-sedition bill which disqualifies persons convicted of sedition from voting in State or municipal elections or sitting in Parliament for from four to seven years.

Giving Veterans Their Rights

LIEUT. FRED HOLMES, Ontario officer in charge of industrial surveys in the Department of Soldiers' Civil Re-Establishment, describes how two "total disabilities" have made good in spite of handicaps, as follows:

A great many people imagine that the returned soldiers are not trying, but a couple of instances will convince that a majority of them are; and that a majority of them are not only trying, but that a man with a terrible disability can still make good. We have one chap in Canada who had both legs blown off and one eye out. He was a married man with two children. He waddled in to see us and asked for a course of training. We said: "Why, you are 100 per cent. disabled!" He said: "I can do something." So we took him to a wholesale jewelry house and gave him a course in silver polishing. He has been there about five and a half months and has not only become proficient in silver polishing, but has added soldering to it, is taking up gilding, and the firm has absorbed him at $75 a month, in addition to which he receives his 100 per cent. disability pension.

One man whose case I think is nothing short of remarkable is Capt. Ed. Baker. Capt. Baker had just graduated from Queen's University as an electrical engineer when the war broke out. He was 21 years of age. He immediately enlisted, but his people fought against his going. He was kept in Canada for a year. Finally when the second or third contingent was called he went with No. 4 Canadian Field Company, which is attached to the Canadian Engineers.

He got to France and was there only thirty days, but he did such wonderful work that he had already been awarded the Military Cross and the Croix de Guerre, the French decoration. He was a fine, upstanding young chap, as brave as a lion. He was out one fine morning reconnoitering, looking around to see what he could do, and (as he tells) he did not hear a sound, but suddenly everything turned black. A bullet had gone through his head, and both eyer were gone. Of course, he was unconscious. They carried him back to the dressing station.

The next thing he remembered he was down at Toulon, waiting for a boat to "Blighty" with a blue ticket on his coat to St. Dunstan's, that wonderful institution in England where they train the blind.

Of course, at first he was very much depressed, but Sir Arthur Pearson, who is responsible for St. Dunstan's, is a most wonderful man. He himself went blind ten years ago from overwork. He walked up to Baker, shook hands with him and said, "Never mind, you and I have seen everything in this world that is worth seeing." He helped Baker along and Baker came to so that he took a little interest in training. He took up typewriting and braille, and he specialized in them.

He was in St. Dunstan's seven months, when he was sent back to Canada as fully cured as he ever could be, with two artificial eyes. He landed in Kingston, where his home was. As I told you, he was an electrical engineer, and the Hydro-electric Company offered him a subordinate position in their office after hearing that he could operate a typewriter. Baker accepted. He gets a 100 per cent. disability pension, plus another pension of $35 a month for helplessness, as he requires somebody to lead him around. He took a position in the Hydro-electric office in Toronto, and rented a couple of rooms close to his work, so that in a short time he could make the journey back and forth without a guide.

I saw him two or three months after he landed there. He was then operating a typewriter, taking his dictation direct from the dictaphone, and taking the trouble reports over the long distance telephone, all the way along the lines between Niagara and Toronto at the different stations, and making out his trouble reports on a sheet of paper with twelve rulings on it; and, by a very ingenious arrangement on the top of his typewriter, which he himself invented, for spacing, he could put the date, the time of day, the trouble, the peak load, the low load, the number of minutes, and sign his name, and do it all just as fast as a man with both eyes, and do it just as well.

Troubles of Church Choirs.

An incomplete diary kept by a Kingstonian who died recently, after having been a choir singer for more than forty years, shows that he had witnessed tilts between sopranos and altos 7,165 times; ditto between tenors and basses 5,328, and seen 395 leaders resign; noted organists late for practice, 680 times; witnessed the marriage of 1,560 choir members; noted friction with pastors, 4,230 times, and discord among the members, 11,137 times.

Where Unicorn Made Last Stand.

Masset district, Q.C.I., is being stocked with English red deer from the British Columbia Colony Farm collection. Heretofore the Queen Charlotte Islands have had no large game save and except a now extinct caribou, unique in that each of the three specimens preserved in the Provincial Museum possesses but a single horn.

DENY THAT ONLY BASIS OF SALE OF G.T.R. IS CASH

MONTREAL, Sept. 7—Reports that the shareholders and directors of the Grand Trunk Railway, in the recent negotiations carried on in London, insisted that the only basis upon which they would sell their property to the Dominion Government was for cash are declared here on the highest authority to be absolutely untrue. It is stated that there was no suggestion made by either side of a cash settlement in payment for taking the sys- t em ,htoneyl tem, the only terms discussed being those regarding a fixed annuity to be paid to the owners of the property.

DOES ADVERTISING PAY

The power of advertising is generally thought of in terms of quick results, and advertisers generally are not satisfied unless inquiries follow closely upon the appearance of their advertisement, but F. G. Clark, president of the Columbia Motor Truck and Trailer Company of Pontiac, Mich., received a letter the other day which demonstrates that an advertisement may be effective after years have passed, and that inquiries may then come from the most outlandish places on earth. In this advertisement, which appeared in an automobile engine trade paper eight years ago, the Columbia Motor Truck and Trailer Company, then known as the Clark Company, of Lansing Mich., proclaimed an eighteen-horsepower, water-cooled, shaftdrive motor car, which it has long ceased to manufacture. The letter of inquiry is from Suva, Fiji Islands, and the enquirer says that if the catalogue shows the car to be what he wants and if the first car is satisfactory, he will order others. Even the trade paper in which the advertisement appeared is out of existence, despite the fact that its work goes on in an advertising way.

Someone stops selling.
When someone stops selling,

ACTIVITY AT MARBLE QUARRY

In a few days everything will be running smoothly at the marble quarries again. Considerable new machinery has been installed, and two gangs of saws will be in operation before the end of the week. The big drawback is lack of help. Men are needed for different kinds of work, and good wages will be paid.—Bancroft Times.

Mr. Thos. Wills, Fuel Controller of this city, is in receipt of the following communication from Mr. C. A. Magrath of Ottawa, Dominion Fuel Controller: "I wish to thank you for your letter of the 31st ulto regarding the action of a Belleville coal company charging $12.50 per ton for coal and delivering same without the required card. ### THREE IN THE FIRING LINE

Sergt. Harry Renfrew, who lives at Monteagle Valley, received word on July 16 that his son Walter, in charge of a machine gun, had been wounded in the side of the head by a piece of shell. His comrade was crushed to pieces. He went into a hospital and was back on the firing line again in a short time. He was wounded again on August 19th, this time in the chest but is getting along well. He is in the 3rd battalion with his oldest brother Willie, and he has another brother in the 21st battalion.—Bancroft Tmes.

A NARROW ESCAPE

While engaged in some developing work in a mica mine near Wilberforce a few days ago Mr. James Best, a well known resident of Bancroft, met with an accident, which has kept him confined to his bed ever since. A boulder weighing several tons became loosened and in falling struck Mr. Best just above the hips. It was only by throwing himself forward when he saw the stone coming that he escaped with his life. It was a very close call, and on one side, down to his foot is still 'black and blue."

ONE PIECE OF VARNISHED WOOD

A piece of varnished wood—that was all that was left of the British steamer North Wales, reported missing when overdue at a Canadian port.

The German wireless press gave the name of this vessel in their list of torpedoed ships, so that, although details are lacking, her fate is fairly certain. She was sunk almost without trace. One piece of varnished wood marked "North Wales" was washed ashore in Sennen Cove, and one or two bodies reached the Cornish coast. That is all. If her crew had time to take to their boats, after being torpedoed, they were probably drowned, as violent gales were raging at the time.

The crew of the vessel were Britons. They left dependents to mourn their loss. For such as these the Navy League of Canada during "Sailors' Week," September 1st to 7th, is raising $1,000,000 in the province of Ontario.

PTE. O'NEIL WOUNDED

Mrs. Margaret O'Neil residing at 73 Lewis street, received the following telegram from the Director of Records at Ottawa, whch refers to her son: "Sincerely regret to inform you 1093114 Private Hugh Francis O'Neil, infantry, officially reported admitted to 22 General Hospital, Camiers, on August 27th, gunshot wound left arm." Pte. O'Neil left Belleville with the 254th Battalion, and this is the second time he had been wounded, the first time being a scalp wound. Another brother is also in the firing line. The many friends of Frank in this city will hope his wounds are not of a serious nature.

A financial campaign in the interests of the Salvation Army's growing work will be launched at once. This enterprising organization is well known for what it has done locally, is well as for the boys overseas. Adjt. A. workers will be gven districts and it is hoped the objective will be reached. The Y. P. Workers under their leaders, Mrs. B. W. ## Music and Drama

"THE FIREFLY OF FRANCE"

The ideal of millions, Wallace Reid, will appear at Griffin's for the last time to-night in a fine picture called "The Firefly of France," dealing with an incident that has happened in the present war. In the early part of the war numerous adventurous young Americans joined the French flying service in France and during one of these fliers service in France the incident happened that gave the author inspiration for his story. The story is a spy story, but quite different from any seen yet, and the real figure in life that Reid represents on the screen is none other than a brother of Harry Thaw, who was much in the lime light some years back.

Another good picture is Mary Miles Minter in "Peggy Leads the Way," and "A Fight for Millions" serial, while Billee Rhodes in a laughable comedy complete a good program.

UNCLE TOM'S CABIN

For Monday and Wednesday nights, Margaret Clark will appear in a photoplay taken from the immortal Harriet Beecher Stowe's great work "Uncle Tom's Cabin." The picture is put on as no play could ever have been put on the wide scope that the camera takes in the outdoor scenes and the real darkies that are used along with the actual locations that apeared in the book tends to make this picture the biggest attempt ever made to produce this old story in a new and brghter way than has ever been done before. Little Eva, played by Margaret Clark, could not be improved on. On Wednesday after school a matinee will be run to give the children a chance to see the picture, and a percentage of the receipts will be donated to the Sailors Relief Fund. The matinee will start not later than 4.30; the admission will be 15 cents and 10 cents any place in the house. Other offerings for the beginning of the week will be Blanche Sweet in a big picture called "Her Condoned,' 'and the "Eagles Eye Serial' 'and a good news film.

AT THE PALACE

At The Palace for the first three days of the week a new chapter of the serial "The Woman in the Web" will be shown along with a special feature picture and other good pictures that will keep up the usual standard photoplay program seen at the Palace.

Mark Twain's eulogium on the Hawaiian group is an epic and stands as the epitome of all that has been said about the Islands. "No alien land in all the world has any deep, strong charm but one; no other land could so longingly and beseechingly haunt me, sleeping and waking, through half a life-time, as that one has done. Other things leave me, but it abides; other things change, but it remains the same. For me its balmy airs are always blowing, its summer seas flashing in the sun; the pulsing of its surf beat is in my ears; I can see its garlanded crags, its leaping cascades, its plumy palms, drowsing by the shore, its remote summits floating like islands above the cloud rack; I can feel the spirit of its woodland solitudes; I can hear the plash of its brooks; in my nostrils still lives the breath of flowers that perished twenty years ago."

"A Daughter of the Sun," the story of an Hawaiian Butterfly from the pen of Lorin Howard and Ralph T. Kettering, is the latest play to use these enchanted islands as a theme for its story and will be seen at Griffin's next Tuesday evening with the famous Hawaiian singers and players.

SOLDIERS WILL PLAY RUGBY

With practically all the older Rugby players overseas, it is necessary to keep the younger boys interested in the grand old autumn game. Prior to the outbreak of war the Ontario Rugby Football Union formed a junior section, made up of two series, as follows:

A. To consist only of inter-scholastic teams. Only bonafied students shall be eligible to play in this series, with the addition of one master, provided he has never played senior foot ball. No age limit is in force in this series.

B. To consist of all other teams, with an age limit of 21 years. This is made up of city and town teams.,

At the end of the season the winners of the series may play off for the championship of their respective series.

In addition to the junior series, intermediate and senior series were also in force. The latted was abandoned, however, after war broke out, as was also the intermediate. Last year however, a four-team intermediate series was operate, And proved to be a great success. It is the intention of the O. R. F. U. to again run this series, and perhaps it will be known as senior. If possible, other sections will be formed, and thus bring about a play-off.

The question of the formation of a series or section for military teams has been discussed, and if this is possible the O.R.F.U. will make every effort to form such a section. There are many Rugby players in the ranks of the soldiers, and there should be no trouble in getting things in working order. In the fall sport is at a standstill, except for Rugby, and with the majority of the players overseas it remains for those at home to keep the sport alive. A meeting of the O.R.F.U. will be called shortly to get things in working order for 1918. In the meantime any information that may be wanted is available from the secretary, Robert Hewitson, care The Toronto Evening Telegram, Adelaide 2600, or at Junction 539.

UMPIRE JOHNSON SUES NEWSPAPER

Harry S. Johnson, who lives in Chicago and who umpired in the International League, has started an action in Federal Court against The Rochester Herald Company for $10,000 damages because, he alleges, he was characterized as "a nut" in an article published on the sporting page of their paper one day last July.

Johnson was an umpire in Rochester when Iriwn's Colts and the Toronto Leafs were having a contest. Headlines in the article on which the action is based refer to him as "Nut" Johnson ,he declares, and he has suffered considerable mental anguish because of the publication of the article.

Among other things, the article asserts, the Rochester team should have won the game and probably would have if there had been another umpire. Johnson, it is asserted, was engaged in the cleaning of the home plate with a whisk broom while the Toronto players were running wild on the bases

SURPLUS OF WIDOWS VIEWED WITH ALARM

AMSTERDAM, Sept. 6.—Enactment of a law in Germany to prevent widows from re-marrying so as to leave the few available men for single women is urged in a letter to The Tag by a Munich doctor, Hans von Hertig. He points out that the widows, through re-marrying after the war, would have a detrimental effect on the birth rate, as most of them are mothers already.

"On December 1, 1910," he wirtes, "there were in Germany about 300,000 widows between the ages of 18 and 45. At a very modest estimate there are now 8000,000

Hard To Explain Quitting Kemmel

AMSTERDAM, Sept. 7.—Apparently it has not been possible to hide from the German people the bitter disappointment among the German military authorities over the evacuation of Kemmel, one of the strategic strongholds southwest of Ypres. The Lokal Anzeiger's military correspondent says the evacuation was effected with a heavy heart, and adds that the sole comfort surrounding the withdrawal was that it was voluntary and that it served a tactical purpose affecting the whole army on the west front, "which does not hesitate at sacrificing a mere place when a purpose is to be attained."

More outspoken is Koester, military writer in the Berlin Vorwaerts, who is completely at a loss to understand why "the proud Kemmel bastion" was surrendered. This writer says the future alone will tell what purpose this manoeuvre served.

HOTELMAN ORDERED TO SELL OUT.

Toronto, Sept. 7.—Three hotelkeepers appeared before the Ontario License Board today to show why they should not be deprived of their license to keep licensed hotel. J. P. Deshaitre of Rockland, Russell county, was given till October 15 to sell out, as he was fined for having liquor in his hotel recently. It was his second offence.

Frank Rice, of the New Welland Hotel, had been fined $200 for having liquor on his premises and also $10 as the result of an altercation with the chief of police. The board thought he was hardly the type of man to run a hotel, but reserved judgment.

Alf. Cook, of Collingwood, claimed the liquor he was fined for having in his hotel was being taken to his farm and that he was only technically guilty. The board pointed out that the liquor was in ginger ale bottles.

NEW UNION OF FARMERS.

Township Reeves of Ontario Fear War Taxes.

Toronto, Sept. 6.—Opening a two-day session at the Labor Temple Wednesday afternoon, the inaugural conference of the Rural Municipal Association of Ontario took steps which may develop into a non-partizan political organization to further the "class interests" of the farmers and their districts at Queen's Park and Parliament Hill. Sixty reeves were present when the chairman, Reeve John Forgie, of Pickering, author of the scheme outlined the reasons for action. He said that every other industry in the province was organized to protect itself against legislative inroads. Councillor H. F. Richardson, of Pickering, declared that the farmers and small business men were certain to be loaded with the bulk of after the war taxes, unless organization were effected now. Tariff legislation was always drawn up by the representatives of special interests and merely ratified by Governments and Parliaments in Canada. Over 150 township councils had already approved the idea, he said.

FILL SENATE VACANCIES.

Ottawa, Sept. 6.—Three Senatorial vacancies are expected to be filled shortly. There is a vacancy each in Ontario, British Columbia and Saskatchewan. The Ontario vacancy was occasioned by the death of Senator Mason. The British Columbia and Saskatchewan vacancies are due to provision for increased Senatorial representation from the west. Two additional Senators were to be appointed from each of the Western Provinces mentioned, and so far only one has been appointed.

LENS EVACUATED, BUT BRITISH HAVE NOT ENTERED

London, Sept. 6.—The city of Lens has been definitely evacuated by the Germans, according to reports from Northern France. The British, it is said, are refraining from occupying it only because of the gas fumes remaining there. Patrols protected against the fumes have entered the city, it is stated, and found it clear of the enemy.

GARAGES CLOSE SUNDAYS.

KITCHENER, Sept. 7—The garage men of this city announced to-day that comencing next Sunday all the repair shops and gasoline tanks would be closed. The purpose is to give the repair men a day of rest and to discourage joy riding during the remainder of the war period.

Hon. Dr Cody Goes to Front

To Ascertain What Ontario Can Do for Soldiers' Comfort

TORONTO, Sept. 6.—Hon. Dr. H. J. Cody, Minister of Education for Ontario, is leaving immediately for a visit to Britain and France, for the purpose of ascertaining what Ontario can contribute further to the comfort and welfare of her soldiers, and what measures she should take to prepare for their return. He will also study industrial education problems. Announcement to this effect was made yesterday by the Prime Minister, Sir Wm. Hearst, as follows:

"My colleague, Dr. Cody, has received an urgent call from the Imperial authorities to go overseas for the purpose of educational matters affecting the soldiers. The Government agrees with him that it is his duty to respond to the call, and he will do so immediately. Dr. Cody will visit the battlefront in France, and will carry to our soldiers there a message of encouragement and appreciation from the people and Government of Ontario. He will also gather information as to how the Province can contribute further to the comfort and welfare of our soldiers, and what additional measures it should take to prepare for the day of their return.

"While in England Dr. Cody will make a study of conditions and legislation affecting industrial education, with the object of giving Ontario the advantage of the experience of the Mother Country in that respect. The trip, though necessarily a hurried one, will I believe, afford Dr. Cody an opportunity for rendering these important public services."

Victoria Cross For a Canadian

LONDON, Sept. 6.—At Buckingham Palace Wednesday the King decorated Lieut. Alan McLeod, Royal Air Force, with the Victoria Cross. The winner is the son of Dr. McLeod, of Stonewall, Manitoba, is eighteen years of age, and has had less than a year's service in France. He was assailed at 5,000 feet by eight enemy machines diving at him from all directions. He received five wounds and his machine was set on fire.

He climbed out on to a plane to control the machine, thus enabling his observer to continue firing into the enemy machines. The observer was wounded six times but when the machine crashed McLeod, notwithstanding his wounds, dragged his companion clear of the burning wreckage and was again wounded while performing this rescue. Then he fell exhausted from loss of blood.

The Distinguished Service Order has been awarded to Lieut.-Col. Ralph Humphreys Webb, west Ontario.

Col. John S. Dennis, Montreal, attached to the British-Canadian recruiting mission in the United States, has been made a Companion of St. Michael and St. George.

The bar to the D. C. M. has been awarded to the following:

Private F. R. Phillips, belonging to Regina. When his raiding party was held up by a machine gun he rushed round with one comrade, bayonetted the crew and disabled the gun. He was wounded, but rushed into a trench and bayonetted two Germans and shot and bombed the rest.

Corp. A. W. Mitchell, engineers, who enlisted at Valcartier, in September, 1914. As a motor cyclist he was carrying messages under heavy fire into positions almost surrounded. The handles of his motorcycle were shot away and himself badly wounded, but he obtained new handles and continued to carry messages.

TO FILL VACANCIES IN THE LEGISLATURE

THE TEMPTING OF PAUL CHESTER.

BY

ALICE AND CLAUDE ASKEW

"Ah, you have me there," he muttered, "you have me there. For you loved me once, I suppose, in your own way."

"And I am fond of you still, dear," she continued in low, dulcet tones, though, of course, I have sense enough to realize that I was wise to act as I did in the past, for my husband would have found out in time if we hadn't pulled up, and then what would have happened?—ruin and social disgrace for both of us."

She paused, then put out her hand and laid it gently, half caressingly, upon his shoulder.

"What great harm have I done you, after all," she whispered, 'that you should approach me so bitterly?"

"What great harm?" He flung her words back at her scornfully—fiercely. "Try and remember the circumstances of our first meeting," he went on. 'Think what I was then, and what I am now."

'We met at Simla," murmured Henrietta, "during the Indian tour the Duke and I were making." You had some position or other in the Indian Civil Service."

"Yes, Henrietta," the man returned sternly, "and I was getting on wonderfully well."

His eyes flashed as he spoke. For a second his handsome, self-indulgent face had gained a look of ambition and decision.

'I believe you were," replied Henrietta. She had ceased to gaze out of the window now—she was watching Rupert too intently to think of the man striding up and down the terrace outside.

'I was also engaged to be married," Rupert went on frimly. "To a particularly charming girl, the daughter of my Lieutenant-Governor, and if ever a young man had brilliant prospects in front of him, I had. You will admit that, I suppose, ma belle cousine?"

His voice, his smile, were mocking in the extreme. Henrietta nodded her head.

"But Jean Douglas was not a particularly pretty girl," she remarked calmly. "And, after all, where's the man who really wants to spend the best years of his life in India? Just to gain his K.C.B. and a pension at the end of all things?"

She spoke airly—lightly.

'I might have been a big man—a great man, if I had remained in India," Rupert continued, taking no notice of his cousin's speech, "with a splendid position! and you know this, Henrietta. I should have been a happy husband, and perhaps—who knows—a happy father. That is, if you hadn't come into my life and persuaded me to sell my birthright for a mess of pottage. For you made me fall in love with you, Henrietta, you know you did. You deliberately stole me from Jean, made me false to all that was highest and best in my nature—false to the girl who trusted in me—false to my own ambitions."

He paused and looked at her reproachfully.

"But I cared for you—really and truly, I cared for you in those days, Rupert," she answered, hanging her head a little. "And think what a cold pedantic husband I had. Besides, every other woman up at Simla had somebody hanging over her—some one making hot and desperate Anglo-Indian love to her."

"So you thought you would follow Simla fashion," the man retorted, "and join the painted army of the soul-snatchers. You cheated me with honeyed words—with delicate, shy caresses. You persuaded me to throw up my appointment, to break off my engagement with Jean, and in return for the good position I had in India you made me your husband's private secretary."

He laughed, and his laughter rang through the long gallery—laughter fierce and broken.

"You were pleased enough at the time," she whispered, casting down her long lashes. 'I remember the way you kissed my hand when I first suggested that you should come back to England with us. You weren't sorry to throw everything to the winds for me then."

'Perhaps I expected more than I got,' he returned. "Or else you promised more than you fulfilled. For when a man gives up everything for a woman's sake, Henrietta, he expects a little in return."

"I gave you as much as I colud," she retorted slowly and steadily. "Did you really expect me to betray my husband for your sake, Rupert? No, you are charming in your own way, but not the man I should ever throw my cap over the windmills for."

"You robbed me of my soul," he retorted, "and paid me back with a few kisses—a few soft words. Oh, I was a fool to believe that you really loved me. Women like yourself don't understand what love means. And as to those smiling promises of yours—your tender hints, your murmured avowals—you were cheating me all the time, playing the amusing game of moth and lamp, watching me flutter and scorch. For, Henrietta, you promised—what you have never fulfilled."

She bit her lip, and pulled with impatient fingers at the heavy brocade curtain.

"I was really fond of you," she said. "Promise me, Rupert, never to make mischief with the Duke. Not that you could; he would not listen to a word against me—dear man."

He shook his head.

"Wouldn't the Duke—well, we may see one day," he muttered, then he shrugged his shoulders. "Why should not I want to ruin you, as you have ruined me?" he continued. "For look at me—look at me as I am! A man who might have done so much with his life—been a little tin god if he had chosen, a ruler of the powers of life and death, but whose sole claim to distinction now is that of being private secretary to His Grace the Duke of Berkshire. A man who was loved by a pure, sweet girl, and who deserted that girl for the sake of a married woman—a woman who, after allowing him to fetch and carry for her for two or three years, and be known to all the world as her cavalier servant—sees fit to push him now into the background of her life, and never, never to pay him his hire."

The bitterness he put into the last words was indescribable, and Henrietta winced and flushed.

"My husband—I had to think of my husband," she replied hoarsely. "Don't blame me for being a loyal wife—for thinking of the Duke."

"Thinking of the Duke," he retorted, giving full rein to his fury. "That's a lie—the only person you thought of was yourself. You don't want to risk your place in society for me. It was fear of the world's judgment which kept you true to your husband—the horrible fear of being found out. Do you think I don't know and understand you, Henrietta? You'd crucify your love any day for your ambition. You don't understand what passion means. For all your beauty—you're but an apology of a woman. A true woman would have given up everything for love—everything—but you—you have given up nothing."

'Are you sure? Are you confident?" She drew herself up, and looked at hi msteadily, imperiously "I'd go to hell for a man I loved," she continued in low tones. "I'd throw all the pomps and vanities of this world on one side for him. But I should have to love that man very dearly," she added, pressing her hand upon her panting breast. 'Better—far better—than I ever loved you. He'd have to be a strong man—my ruler—my master. For I must either break—or be broken. It's my nature, I can't help it. I must conquer or be conquered."

There was a ring in her voice as though she was speaking the truth.

'And you have never been conquered?" He looked at her steadily. "You think, you cruel, scornful woman—that you have never met your true mate yet, your master. What will happen when you do meet him?"

He asked the question slowly—calmly.

"I' follow him to the end of the earth.' She flung her head back as she said the words, and laughed. "But I doubt if the man lives who is stronger than I am," she added slowly, "the man who could break my will to his."

"Henrietta." He caught wildly at her hands, his face aflame with wrath and passion, his heart surging with jealousy. "Oh, Henrietta, why were you created? You beautiful, baneful creature! You are sister to golden-haired Helen, and to her who dwelt at Tyre. Yet God help me, dear, I love you still."

He tried to kiss her—to kiss her on her warm, red mouth—but she eluded him with a swift cry. Then a look of uncontrollable anger came over her face, for she caught sight of Paul Chester, who stood at the end of the long gallery. He had evidently just opened the door and come in, and so must have witnessed Ruppert Temple's proffered caress.

"You fool You fool Look behind you" Henrietta whispered the words, and Rupert aghast at the expression which had come into her eyes, glanced over his shoulder, to start nervously as he caught sight of the man who stood at the end of the gallery—the witness of his wild attempt to kiss Henrietta.

'My dear, forgive me," he muttered, turning round and gazing at the woman in broken-hearted fashion—aware of the enormity of his offence against her—contrite as a beaten dog—overawed by her flashing eyes, her air of insulted virtue.

"Be quiet," she comamnded hoarsely, then swept down the gallery, making her way towards Chester, who still stood by the door as though frozen to the spot. But when he saw Henrietta approaching he turned as though to leave the gallery.

MICHELIN
Twelve Tire Tests No. 10
This series of twelve tests is designed to take the uncertainty out of tire-buying.

Experience

IN previous talks we have shown you that the durability of a tire depends on the quantity and quality of the materials used; and we have already shown you how to determine the quantity.
But you cannot gauge the quality of rubber and fabric in a tire simply by looking at it. You must be guided by the experience and reputation of the tire maker.
The world's first pneumatic automobile tire and tube were made by Michelin back in 1895. Since that time the House of Michelin (founded 1832) has concentrated on the production of pneumatic tires only, and today has factories in the United States, France, England and Italy, with selling branches in every corner of the world. Thus the scientific brains of the entire globe have been and are at Michelin's disposal.
More and Better Materials is the Michelin watchword. Yet Michelin Tires are not high priced.

The latest achievement in tire making—the Michelin Universal—Introduced 1915

Furnace Management

Ease of the Sunshine

Feeding the furnace;
—shaking down the ashes,
—removing the ashes,
—keeping the health-giving water pan filled,
—fixing the drafts for the night,

—those are the five major operations in managing a furnace—and what a trial of the temper and destruction of your raiment any one of them may be.

If your furnace is the famous McClary Sunshine these operations will cause you little more trouble or effort than winding up the clock.

The feed door of the Sunshine is big—you don't hit the side and damage your shovel and temper and scatter coal and naughty words all over the basement.

You don't shake the Sunshine grates, you merely rock them a few times, —and the ashes drop from the perpendicular fire-box walls and grates and are guided into the big ash pan,

—and you lift the ash pan out with handles that are always cool.

—No shovelling of ashes—no ashdust on your clothes or in your hair or in the house.

And at night, without going down to the basement, you drop the damper and open the check with pulls that always work.

And the water pan is right above the fuel door—very accessible—in plain view, where you can't forget it.

Sunshine furnace management is not even exercise.

Engineering Service Free. McClary's own heating engineers are at your service when you buy a Sunshine Furnace, to give you free expert advice on your home-heating requirements. Write to the nearest McClary Branch and ask for particulars about this service. A booklet, "Comfort in the Home," makes clear all the things you want to know about furnaces, and it is sent free on request.

German Home Front Smashed

Cologne Gazette Blames Wolff Bureau For Deluding the People

LONDON, Sept. 6—The Cologne Gazette frankly admits that the German home front has been weakened by the reverses in France and blames the Wolff Bureau for leading people to believe that the enemy could never recover from the blow struck in March and April. The people, it says, were thus buoyed up with false hopes. Moreover, it complains, they have similarly been misinformed as regards the effects of the submarine and peace with Russia and Roumania. It quotes the semi-official German telegram announcing enormous captures of clothes in Russia, Italy and northern France and representing booty in rubber and copper as sufficient for the German army for a year. It continues:

"Can it be wondered at that there should be disappointment and mistrust when we are asked to part with our clothes and door handles to cover urgent needs? Patience gets worn out by such camoflouging of facts."

After admitting that the allied air attacks do produce effects which the enemy intends, the writer proceeds to admit that despite the submarine, "we are not within measurable distance of so mutting off the enemies' supplies as to render their means of subsistence as scarce as ours."

The appearance of these sentiments in what is practically a German official newspaper possibly means that the German Higher Command intends to initiate, as far as possible, the British policy, after the reserves of March and April, of taking the people more into its confidence and plainly stating actualities, arguing that this method benefits Britain and will probably benefit Germany.

Nurses, Doctors, Wore Gas Masks

LONDON, Sept. 6.—What happened in the advanced dressing stations during the Canadians' great show ih revealed in the following narrative given to the Canadian Associated Pres:

'I went over twa advanced stations perilously near the front line. The Boche had for days been heavily shelling around them. Hundreds of gas shells dropped at the very portal, and the fumes at times being so bad that the medical staff and chaplains had to work wearing gas respirators. The work, however, was gone on without interruption. These stations are well beyond where motor ambulances can go, but horse-drawn vehicles make regular trips. Canadian sisters could today be seen peering over the fringe of the German front line of less than a week back."

Canadian Railway troops are already spanning the barren region that was the scene of the recent fighting with ribbons of steel over which supplies can be rushed far quicker than by motor lorry. Thy have repaired captured German tracks, and at one point have converged several lines, making it look like a busy section of the Canadian Pacific.

Pirate Thiefs Expiate Crimes

LONDON, Sept. 6—Although the British Government does not intend to adopt the practice of giving proof of official utterances made by its Ministers, it has been thought desirable to print in to-day's newspapers the names of the commanding officers of 150 German submarines which have been disposed of in order to substantiate the statement of Premier Lloyd George in the House of Commons that "at least 150 of these ocean pests have been destroyed."

The statement to be published tomorrow does not include the names of Austrian submarines put out of action.

A majority of the 150 officers mentioned are dead. Some of them are prisoners of war, and a few were interned in neutral countries, where they took refuge.

British Tanks Crush Masses of Retiring Foe

With the British Armies in France, Sept. 4—Since the British began their attack Monday morning along the Drocourt-Queant switch line the Germans have not been given an instant in which to collect themselves. They hesitate for a moment and the Brit troops are on top of them pushing beyond.

In the towns through which the British advanced the fighting has been most severe the Germans firing from behind cover and the British swarming around them. In many instances the tanks charged into masses of the Germans who were holding out stubbornly and crushed them to pieces. Reports from the fighting on the lower end of the switch line indicated that the Canadians were engaged in fighting of the heaviest character, while cleaning up portions of the line in the neighborhood of Buissy. Behind the northern section of these positions the Germans held out in the town of Villers-les-Cagnicourt until last night, when the place was stormed and captured. Throughout these zones the British troops are capturing large numbers of prisoners from scattered dugout and trenches.

COUNTER ATTACKS EXPECTED

On the extreme British left stiff opposition seemed to be developing this morning and counter attacks are expected. It is not believed that these reactions will be in any great strength, however, for the attack on Hindenburg line itself just to the south of its junction with the Drocourt line at Quesnt means that this stronghold is in grave danger, and that the Germans can hardly allow their forces there to side slip and participate in fighting back of the Drocourt line. The capture of Queant was officially reported by Field Marshal Haig in a statement given out between one and two p.m., in London.

While the opposition in the southern area of the principal British attack seems to be diminishing but slightly, the village of Etaing, north of the Arras-Cambrai road, has been completely cleared of the enemy, and the British are fighting well to the eastward of this town. To overcome the opposition, the British cannon have been moved up to correspond with the advance of the infantry and the tanks, and the guns are now deluging the German rear at Arras with shells.

Everywhere the Germans seems to be relying on machine guns, and the ground is covered with them, grouped in pockets and scattered about singly.

Between Peronne and Bapaume, the woods of St. Pirre-Vast and Vaux, after being captured, are being mopped up by the British forces.

Haut-Allaines and additional high ground astride the Canal du Nord were captured and held against several vicious counter-attacks. During the intervals between counter-attacks the Australians made progress in the area east of Peronne, advancing steadily.

None of the counter-attacks had the slightest success, except for the Australians, who mowed down masses of the enemy with machine gun fire.

INDIAN SOUGHT THE EVIL EYE

AS most tourists and travellers have realized, there are two kinds of Indians on the western reserves, one being those commercial spirits who seek the station platforms and frequented trails to sell their poses for whatever silver money they can get, the other those strong-minded but simple souls who believe the kodak has the evil eye and that to be winked at by it means very bad medicine indeed. Few can remember Indians who sought photographs for the sake of photographs.

Jimmy Simpson, guide, trapper and hunter in the Canadian Pacific Rockies, was riding across the Stoney Indian reserve, north of the C. P. R. main line, one early fall day and had set up his little tent on the edge of the Bow river to spend the night. Like all good guides of the present day he carried a kodak. He had scarce finished his evening meal when a tall Indian brave came from the brush and in sign language asked him to take up his kodak and follow him. There was a good light, for Simpson had eaten early and the short days had not yet come. A short distance up river they reached a tepee, and they had scarcely reached it when a squaw came out with a little papoose in her arms. The Indian posed, as seen in the picture and motioned Simpson to take them. Amazed, but willing, he did so.

The child was dying of consumption. By next morning it had passed away. The parents knew it was about to leave them, and that was why they sought the man with the picture machine. To-day, framed in beads and velvety buckskin the small reproduction is a treasured, revered household god. And round the neck of buck and squaw there are silver chains each holding a locket containing the child's face. For Jim Simpson was touched by the action of the savages and took pains to do what he could to soften their sorrow in the loss of their little one.

Boy of Fifteen Seriously Injured

Revolver was Accidentally Discharged Bullet Entering Body of James Ketcheson

Last night about 10.30 James Ketcheson, aged fifteen years, youngest son of ex-Mayor Ketcheson, of this city, was the victim of a shooting accident which may prove fatal. It appears that last evening Ward Luffman, a young companion of the injured boy, procured a revolver from his home on Foster Avenue. The two lads then went towards the Ketcheson home on Albert street and were near the house examining the revolver when it was discharged. The .38 calibre bullet penetrated young Ketcheson's abdomen, causing a gaping wound. The victim ran to his home and as he reached the door sank upon the steps. His cries attracted the attention of his parents who were soon by his side and he informed them that he had been shot. As quickly as possible medical aid summoned and James was taken to the hospital, where three physicians were in attendance upon him. Owing to his conditon the probing for the bullet could not be undertaken. As it did not emerge from the body it is presumed that it took a slanting course and is embedded in the lower part of the body. The wound made was dressed and the lad made as comfortable as possible. When the revolver was discharged Ketcheson was standing in close proximity to Luffman and facing him. The boys were not aware of the fact that the weapon was loaded. It is the property of an elder brother of Luffman. This morning the injured boy was resting fairly well although suffering considerable pain. Owing to the nature of the wound and its locality the physicians are unable to definitely state what the outcome will be. In the meantime everything is being done for the young sufferer. His many friends will hope for his speedy recovery.

Enemy Discovers 52 Canadian Divisions

LONDON, Sept. 8.—Information received from the Canadian front shows that the roads leading rearward are still clogged by groups of Huns, merely anxious to get out of the shell-fire.

Several senior officers have been captured. Two battalion commanders admitted today that the game was up. One still arrogant Prussian declared that England started the war and that Canadians and Australians were fools to come in.

One officer prisoner produced a document issued by the German General Staff, declaring that no fewer than 52 Canadian divisions had been identified in France. Amongst the Canadian captures is a complete Boche concert party, and also a batch of Prussians straight from the Italian front.

The work devolving upon such a corps as the signallers is tremendous. Nearly 5,000 telephone calls were checked in one day on the Canadian lines. Fifteen hundred miles of new wire were issued in one week for communication purposes alone. The Canadians claim the distinction of having established the first Y.M.C.A. hut across the Hindenburg line.

Two Pounds Sugar Monthly Apiece

Householders Asked by Food Board to Adopt Honor Ration

OTTAWA, Sept. 9.—The Canada Food Board in a statement at the week-end places definitely upon householders responsibility for limiting domestic consumption of sugar so as to insure a sufficient supply for preserving. The board urges that a family of two should not use more than an aggregate of one-quarter of a level cupful of sugar per day for cooking, table use and all other purposes except preserving, and for other families consumption should be limited to two pounds per person per month.

"There will not be sufficient sugar if it is consumed in other ways in the homes to the same extent as in former years, or if people eat up in the homes sugar which has been saved by regulation of manufacturers," the statement says.

The Premier said there must be an avoidance of waste in all departments of national activity by federal, provincial and municipal governments. Canada's resources are enormous and they must be conserved for the benefit of the whole people.

Lieut. Roger Porter Was Killed In Action Somewhere in France

Gallant Young Officer Made Supreme Sacrifice on Field of Battle—One of Youngest Canadian Officers in The Service—Lived and Died a Hero

Following quickly the news that Lieut. Roger Porter, on active duty in France with a machine gun unit, was missing, came the dread message that the gallant young officer was dead Saturday the parents received word that their soldier son was missing, and on Sunday came the cablegram apprizing them of his death, killed in action.

Deep sympathy is felt for the parents, Mr. E. Guss Porter, K.C., M.P., and Mrs. Porter, in their sad affliction. Roger was an only son, born in Belleville, and a favorite with everybody by reason of his bright and cheerful nature, his manly character and kindly courtesy to all. When war was declared Roger Porter, although yet in his teens, was determined to serve his King and country but on account of his youth was not accepted. He persevered in his intention, however, and finally accomplished his desire.

Sunday's cable message was confirmed by a telegram from the Director of Records at Ottawa, this morning.

School Days

Lieut. Porter, who was only 20 years of age, was born in Belleville. After graduating from the public schools he entered the High School in ths city, and while a pupil there made a splendid record. Afterwards he went to Upper Canada College, where he became imbued with the military spirit and desired to enlist for oversea service, but his youth prevented him from doing so. Two years ago, however, he achieved his long expressed desire, and enlisted with the 155th Battalion, which was recruited in this city and vicinity, and took a course at Kingston, qualifying as lieutenant.

On October 19th, 1916, he left Belleville with the 155th Battalion for overseas service. After being in England for some time he went into active service, being attached to the machine gun section of the 2nd Canadian Battalion with which battalion he was serving when he made the supreme sacrifice for his king and country.

Lieut. Porter was possessed of a personality which made him many friends while attending school and college, and the news of his death will be sincerely regretted by a host of friends.

During the month of May, 1917, Lieut. Porter was married to a young lady in England, who with a young son survives. The Intelligencer unites with all citizens in extending to the bereaved relatves the sincerest sympathy in this their hour of sore affliction.

His Military Career

Lieut. Porter took a keen interest in all things pertaining to military science, of which he made a close study. One of the senior officers of his battalion said, "Very few officers handled his men as this young officer did; his platoon, N. C. O.'s and men loved him, though he rigidly enforced the strictest discipline, and he seemd to get everything out of his men that was in them, but no man 'grouched' in his platoon. He was all military and very strict 'on parade', but after parade was over was among his men fraternizing with them all, calling them by their Christian and nick-names, always having their comfort and welfare at heart."

When his battalion was disbanded in England in 1916, he, with another pal officer from his regiment, at once set about to get to France as soon as possible. This was prevented by some of his senior officers, although he had sought the assistance of persons high in command to attain this end. He was transferred to the Canadian Forestry Corps, on account of his youth, much against his wishes as it was a non-combatant force. From this unit, very shortly after, he secured his own transfer to the Machine Gun Corps, which was then called the "Suicide Club." He became a very efficient machine gunner, and was an expert rifle and revolver shot.

Lieut. Porter took a deep interest in his work, was exceptionally apt in learning, and had unusual initiative with all kinds of nerve and undoubtedly gave a good account of himself before making the supreme sacrifice.

Crucified Kittens Trap For British

LONDON, Sept. 7.—The morning Post says the authenticity of the following incident is taken as unquestionable. During the recent operations of the Allies, it fell to the 4th British Army to re-occupy a town when the Germans retreated from it. As they were making their way through the war-scarred streets of the town, a group of them were arrested by a sight that startled and shocked even men inured to the horrors of war.

On the door of one of the houses a kitten was hanging by its forepaws, which had been nailed to the wood. The wretched creature, which might have been where it was found at least an hour or two, was mewing piteously in agony and struggling desperately with its hind legs to release itself.

With the natural instinct of pity for a suffering dumb animal, one of the British soldiers rushed forward to release the kitten. He pulled out the nails that pierced its paws, but the moment he did so there was a flash and roar and his mutilated and dismembered body was flung across the street. A hidden explosive charge had been set off by the withdrawal of the nails.

The retreating Boche had laid his trap and baited it with a kitten nailed to a door He calculated such an appeal to British humanity would be irresistible, and he was right.

BOSTON WON THIRD GAME.

Chicago, Sept. 8.—Boston concentrated its energies in the fourth inning of Saturday's game of the World's Series and squeezed in two runs, which was just enough to annex, 2 to 1, the third of the contests from the Chicago Nationals. The one-run margin was in constant danger, however, and it was not until Pick, Chicago second baseman, was caught at the plate for the third out in the last half of the ninth inning that victory perched finally on the Boston dugout.

C.N.R. Old Directors Have Resigned

TORONTO, Sept. 7.—Hon. J. D. Reid, Minister of Railways and Canals was in the city yesterday in connection with the Canadian Northern Railway matters. Asked as to what the stuation was in connection with the board of directors, he stated that at the meeting of directors held yesterday all the old board tendered their resignations with the exception of D. B. Hanna, A. J. Mitchell and G. A. Bell, who remain to make a quorum pending reorganization.

The resignation of the remaining directors, namely Sir Wm. Mackenzie, Sir Donald Mann, Z. A. Lash, W. K. George, W. J. Christie, R. J. Mackenzie, E. R. Wood and R. M. Hornepayne were accepted. As to the compositions of the new board to fill the vacancies, Dr. Reid was not in a position to make an announcement, but stated the matter was receiving the attention of Sir Robert Borden and his colleagues, and he had no doubt the Premier would be able to make an announcement in a few days. In the meantime D. B. Hanna is in charge of operation until further reorganization takes place.

Dr. Reid returned to Ottawa last night.

TAXICAB WAS NEEDED TO CARRY THE MONEY.

TORONTO, Sept. 7.—So large were yesterday's taking in the Sailors' Week campaign that it was found necessary last night to hire a taxicab to convey the receipts to the bank. The money was contained in a big packing case, several canvas bags and a wash tub, and was guarded by armed bank officials and policemen.

How Uncle Walt Mason, Prose Poet, Managed To "Come Back"

Down and Out at Forty-Five, the Poet of Emporia Has Conquered His Weakness and Made a Big Success of Life

One of tth most vital autobiographical stories that has appeared in a long time comes in the current issue of the "American Magazine" from the pen of Walt Mason. The prose poems of Walt Mason are known the Continent over and it is most interesting to learn that Mason is a Canadian by birth and that his career has been one long, heroic struggle. However, let the poet of Emporia tell it himself.

On October 12, 1907, I arrived in Emporia, Kansas, to begin at the bottom and work up.

I was forty-five years old, and my assets consisted of the hand-me-downs I wore, an extra shirt, $1.35 in money, and an old pony and buggy. I had no ambition and no confidence in the future; everything of that kind had been licked out of me, and the only thing I was conscious of was a profound discouragement. The bottom had fallen out of the planetary system, so far as I was concerned.

I was not the victim of a cruel world or a stony-hearted society. I was the victim of my own folly. I had spent all the best years of my life with the prodigal sons, holding wassail in wayside inns; and when I arrived in Emporia I was fresh from an institution in Kansas City where pickled people have the alcohol boiled out of them, and are supposed to be sent forth as good as new.

I began my newspaper career when I was twenty-two years old. Before that, for several years, I had been working on Kansas farms, where I achieved a reputation as the worst hired man in the state. I had a mania for writing and was setting down gems of thought when I should have been currying mules or milking cows, and employing farmers don't take kindly to literary work. My one ambition was to do newspaper work; and one winter day I absconded from the farm and went to seek my fortune. I managed to get a job as a telegraph editor of a Kansas morning paper; the work kept me at my desk until the cock was crowing aloof, and when the paper had gone to press the night editor, the city editor and I repaired to a little booth around the corner, where an un-moral citizen sold fire-water. There we sat till broad daylight, every morning, telling stories and quaffing the kind nepenthe.

And there I acquired a taste for conviviality that stuck to me until my mane was getting grey. In those halcyon days most newspaper men were partial to the flowing bowl. The young man who refused to look upon the wine was considered effeminate. In fact, there was a superstitious belief in newspaper offices, that one couldn't be a good reporter, unless he was a good "mixer" and he couldn't be a good mixer unless he was at all times ready to consume his share of booze. There was some foundation for this theory, in those grand old days when city councilmen were recruited from the saloon-keepers, and caucuses and conventions were held in back rooms of the grog parlors.

While this theory survived, I never had trouble getting employment. I drifted around the country from one town to another. Being of a happy-go-lucky disposition, I gave no thought to the future. Sufficient to the day was the evil, or the good, thereof. Because I seemed able to get a job wherever I wanted one, it never occurred to me that conditions might change—and I wouldn't have cared if they had. I was known in all Western newspaper offices, and one reason why I could always get employment was that I was " a hog for work" so long as I lasted. In all my experience, I have known but one man who could turn out as much copy, day after day, the year round. This was Ed. Howe, of the Atchison "Globe," for whom I worked for a year and a half.

A Prolific Producer

Some newspaper proprietors considered it a blessing when I turned up; for I would turn in and write the whole editorial page, and edit the telegraph, and read proofs, and do as much as three ordinary people would do. This is not a boast. There are many editors who will endorse the statement. I always tackled a new job with a virtuous determination to cut out the fool habits for good. I was going to turn over a new leaf and be a shining example to the young Time and again I fooled my employers as well as myself. For two or three weeks I would live like an anchorite and break all hard work records; the managing editor would raise my wages every week, and take me into his private office to tell me that if I kept up my present lick he would give me half of his kingdom and the hand of his daughter in marriage, or words to that effect. I had a dozen such opportunities to establish myself firmly in fine situations. But my virtuous resolves never laster longer than two or three weeks.

I would equip myself with a good suit of clothes, and purple and fine linen, and become obtrusively respectable, and then of a sudden there come a great longing for the gilded saloon and the company of the people who drank not wisely but too well; and then, poof, away would fly all the excellent resolutions, and I'd wake up some fine morning in a livery stable, to find that my raiment was in the pawnshop, and I couldn't remember whether it was Wednesday or a Chinese New Year.

In November of one immemorial year I was seated in a beautifully furnished editorial room, the star man of a great and growing newspaper. The managing editior thought so much of my work , and was so convinced that I had reformed for good, that he had fitted up his sumptuous office for my exclusive use. I was honored and petted in every possible way. In the following February I was shovelling snow off the sidewalks in an Ohio town to get the price of a feed and bunk.

Breaking Good Resolutions

I will give a concrete instance of this sort of experience: I blew into Denver, one cold day, shivering in a suit that would have been considered too gauzy in Florida. I was penniless and hungry, and, as I had been sleeping box cars for two nights, I looked like something left over from a rummage sale. I went to the office of the Denver "News" and found John Arkins, who was the editor and proprietor. He knew my reputation, and considered me so amusing he laughed for an hour before handing me over five dollars. Then he told me I could contribute at special rates if I wished.

I was simply overflowing with good resolutions. At last I had seen the error of my ways, and was going to abandon the husks and the swine. "Never Again," said I, in ringing tones. I got a humble hall room in a cheap boarding house, and a pad of paper and a pencil, and wrote a column or two of highly moral paragraphs. The "News" printed them next morning, and another batch next day, and in a week they formed a feature that Denver was talking about. I had letters from clergymen and merchant princes and invitations to everything.

One day Mr. Arkins called me into his private office for a heart-to-heart talk. First he gave me an order for a suit of clothes, no price limit, set, and explained that this was a present. Then he told me that my stuff promised to be of value to the paper, and if I would behave myself and abandon that conduct which had made my name a hissing in newspaper offices from Dan to Beersheba, my future was assured. The "News" didn't quarrel over wages when it found something it wanted. I assured Mr. Arkins, with tears in my eyes, that my good resolutions were like the laws of the Medes and Persians, and also had a strong family resemblance to the Rock of Gibraltar. Thrones might crumble and dynasties crash, but my resolutions would rise triumphant above the wreck of matter.

"Go and get your suit of clothes," said Mr. Arkins, " and come around to-morrow ready for regular work."

I went forth and got the suit of clothes. I don't remember what happened after that. Two or three days later I woke up at Ogden, Utah, and I have never known why I went there or how I got there.

A Change of the Times

This was the sort of life I led for many years. If one is young, and has a sense of humor, such ups and downs don't matter. But one cannot always be young, and a sense of humor becomes frayed along the edges after a while.

Conditions were changing in newspaper offices and I was so busy I did ont notice it. The old superstition that a reporter should be a good mixer and hence a competent drinker had died the death. A red nose was no longer a recommendation when one applied for a job in a newspaper office. So, when, at the ripe age of forty-five, I found myself in that bleaching institution of Kansas City, I slowly realized that I was worse than down and out. I was a back number, a has-been. And I no longer had the resiliency of youth. I was feeling very old and humble and useless.

I wrote to editors everywhere describing my circumstances, and offering to work for an old wage that would assure me a place to sleep and a meal ticcket. I went to a daily newspaper in Kansas City and offered to write the whole editorial page for twelve dollars a week. But there was nothing doing. My reputation for unreliability was against me. Those were sickening days, when every mail brought replies from editors, explaining why they couldn't give me work, kindly trying to let me down easy. There seemed to be no place for me anywhere.

Then one weary day I picked up an old magazine and read an article by William Allen White. It was a good article so full of humor and kindliness that I thought he was a man who might understand. So I wrote to him, asking if he couldn't give me some little job on his newspaper, to carry me along until I could get something else.

In a few days I would have to leave the boiling out institution, and had no place to go. Mr. White was in Colorado, and my letter had been forwarded to him, so there was a delay in getting a reply. Somehow, I had counted on a favorable word from him and as day after day went by, and the mail brought me nothing my hopelessness became absolute. Then, when I had ceased to expect a reply there came a long, generous letter, telling me to go to Emporia and make myself useful until he returned home and then we'd discuss ways and means together.

I believe that was the gladest hour of my life. You have to be down and out and well stricken in years, and ashamed that you are alive, to understand the joy of having one more chance.

And so, one October evening, as the sun was slowly sinking behind the western hills, a solitary horseman might have been seen pushing his jaded steed into Emporia. The next morning I reported for work at the "Gazette" office and a small corner was cleared for me in Mr. White's private office.

I have said that I had a reputation as "a hog for work" and I lived up to it now. Work had become sort of a passion with me. It enabled me to forget for a while that I was forty-five, and dead broke, and starting in again at the foot of the ladder, in worse shape than when I first entered a newspaper office. I was superfluity in the "Gazette" office; there was no real place for me; a place had been made, just to give me a chance, and of course the wages were small.

Making Good in Emporia

But I wrote so much stuff the printers were in a panic; and I was at it in the evening by lamplight. After two or three weeks Mr. White came home, and I'll never forget his hearty greeting. I had never met him before, but he acted as though I were the long-lost Charlie Ross.

"You've been writing wonderful stuff, Walt," he cried. "Come up to my house to-night. I want to have a talk with you."

I went and we had the talk, and my wages were raised, and I was assured a place on the "Gazette" as long as I wanted it. This was balm in Gilead.

A heart-breaking time followed. In my days of riotous living I had piled up a mountain of debts. They had never troubled me when I had been stayed with flagons; but when my creditors heard that I was working and earning money they came down on me, not as single spies, but in battalions. There were lawyers and bailiffs and collectors hot on my trail all the time, and I saw that it would take me ninety-nine years to pay them all, and the weight of discouragement oppressed me again.

Had it not been for the cheery sympathy of Mr. White in those dreary days, I'd have given up trying. His sympathy wasn't the easy stuff that exhausts itself in words. In fact, he never talked about my worries; but I know he understood them, and he let let me know he was ready to help me out in any way, at any time. But he preferred to see me work out my own salvation. It was by manifesting his confidence in me that he kept me to the mark. I admired him so much, and was so hungry for his approval, that I was determined to make good if it were in me to do it.

And all the time the fleshpots were calling. If I quit work for an hour I could hear the march of the prodigal sons, and yearned to be with them.

A Fund of Rhymes

There was a day when the managing editor wanted a stickful of stuff in a hurry to fill a corner on the front page. It was a Saturday, and I sat down, and wrote a little rhyme in prose form, urging people to go to church next day. I had been writing such little rhymes for years, when working for the Atchison "Globe" I used to write the advertisements of grocers and coal dealers in verse, and throughout my newspaper career I employed the talent indiscriminately. I always could write verse as easily as prose. The rhymes form themselves in my head as fast as I can write them down. I am never stuck for a rhyme. If there is a word in any corner of the language that will rhyme with another, it bobs up in my mind without effort.

The verse I wrote for the "Gazette" was printed with a border around it, and caused some comment. So I wrote another on Monday and a third on Tuesday, and so on. The verse became a feature of the first page. In the beginning they treated of local topics exclusively, then they had a wider range, and newspapers all over the country were copying them. It never occurred to me that the rhymes had possibilities as money-makers.

But one day Mr. White said, in that friendly way of his, "Walt, it's time we began to figure on getting you something for those rhymes. I have been waiting to see if you could keep up your lick before talking about it. You seem to me an inexhaustible fountain of verse, and I believe you can keep it up indefinitely. The newspapers are using the rhymes everywhere, and I am sure they'd pay some thing for them. Now, I am going to write to a friend of mine who syndicates things, and I feel sure he will sell these verses so you'll have quite an income from them."

Then he wrote to Mr. George Matthew Adams, with the result that the latter agreed to syndicate the poems. He hadn't much faith in the proposition, for poetry has always been regarded, by publishers and syndicate men, as something to be touched with a ten-foot pole. At the beginning of the experiment Mr. Adams paid me eighteen dollars a week for six rhymes and this, added to my wages from the "Gazette," seemed opulence and restored some of my natural optimism. I began to think that perhaps God was in his heaven, after all.

The rhymes caught on, and every month of two Mr. Adams added something to my pay. That was more than eight years ago, and he has been at the same trick ever since. I have never asked him to add a dollar to my pay. He has kept on increasing the stipend with untiring generosity, and at the present time he probably pays me more than any other man ever received from rhyme alone.

A "One Shirt" Democrat

It is ten years since I came to Emporia, with my extra shirt and my $1.35. Emporia has been a tender nurse to me, and I expect, and hope, to potter around under her ancestral elms until Joe Dumm calls for me with his six-cylinder motor hearse. Since prosperity overtook me I have received flattering offers from Chicago and New York—even from London. But little old Emporia is good enough for me. The people here know me for the stuffed prophet I am, and won't allow me to get swelled up with false pride. When I begin to feel important, and realize that my hat is too small, I meet Carl Ricker or Harry Peach, or somebody else who knew me when I had only one extra shirt, and I know I can't get by with any pose. I feel that this chastening of the spirit is good for me, so I remain in Emporia.

I have a sumptuous automobile with all modern improvements, and sometimes when I am jaunting along the road I begin to feel that the sun rises and sets somewhere in my neighborhood. Then I see a landmark that my weary eyes beheld ten years ago; when I had only one extra shirt, and I quit trying to look like Washington crossing the Delaware. Such things are good for me, for I don't want success to give me the idea that I am not a false alarm; so I remain in Emporia.

"A DAUGHTER OF THE SUN"

Way back in the seventies Mark Twain made a trip to the Hawaiian Islands and the benefit of his trip there is amply set forth in his book "Roughing It.' He simply raved over the beautes of these 'blessed isles' and ever since they have been called, and justly so, "Mark Twain's Paradise." Today those islands are the property of the U.S.A. and the native Kanaka is gradually going the way of the American Indian, dying out, also in intermarrying with all the people of the islands, the Japanese excepted.

"A Daughter of the Sun," the story of an Hawaiian Butterfly, a play written by Lorin Howard and Ralph T. Kettering, and produced by Ed. W. Rowland, is the coming attraction at Griffin's Theatre tomorrow evening.

This play is the latest to deal with this interesting theme, and the wonderful realism and detail of the islands is maintained by a band of native Hawaiin players, who render their plaintive and charming music at intervals during the play. The realism is further intensified by a most wonderful and elaborate scenic equipment. The cast is a competent and large one, being more numerous than many musical shows.

THE NEW UNCLE TOM

Owing to "The Daughter of the Sun" road attraction being on Tuesday evening, Margaret Clark in "Uncle Tom's Cabin," and Blanche Sweet in "Her Condoned Sin," will be shown Monday and Wednesday nights only. Margaret Clark is at her best in the role she has in Uncle Tom's Cabin," as little Eva. This photoplay is taken from Harriet Beecher Stowe's immortal classic and is presented in pictures on a scale never before attempted on the stage. The locations in which the picture was produced in the South are the same as named in the book and the wide scope of the camera enables the picture producers to work out the story in a way that would be impossible on the stage. Real colored pickaninnies, old plantation folks, real cotton fields, hounds and all other plantation properites are used to make this presentation of this age-old story a masterpiece in picture form.

There are a large number of both old and young folks who have never had an opportunity to see this play, so the management of Griffn's in order to encourage every one, old or young, to see this great picture, will run a special matinee Wednesday after school, starting not later than 4.30. A percentage of the receipt will be donated to the Sailors Relief Fund.

A Serious Matter

There is a delicacy about mentioning piles. And yet so many suffer needlessly who could be readily relieved and cured if they only knew about Dr. Chase's Ointment.

Men tell one another about this remarkably successful treatment. But many women pine away their health and vitality, dreading a surgical option and not knowing how easily they they can be cured at home by Dr. Chase's Ointment.

A SIGN OF VICTORY.

Letter on Oat Leaves Impresses the Farmers.

Among the list of munitions of war, which are vital to victory, there is none more important than the oat crop of Canada, the food for man and beast and one of the most valuable of the farmer's field crops, and in the oat plants themselves this year many people profess to find a portent of coming victory for the Allied arms.

For some weeks, observant people in the agricultural districts, have pointed out a curious phenomenon in connection with the structure of the leaves of the oats, which many claim was observed the year the British arms triumphed in South Africa. The sign or portent is to be found on the flag leaf of the oats. The sign can be variously interpreted as the letter "B" or the figure "8" some of the leaves looked more like the one and some the other.

Does it mean that "victory" is coming to the British arms in 1918? Such is the interpretation given to the phenomenon by the superstitious, who declare they looked in vain for the sign last year and the year before, remembering the portent of victory in 1902.

The sign may be seen by anyone. It is to be found on the flag leaf, which is the leaf nearest the head of the grain. To find it, pull the leaf, in doing which it is unnecessary to injure the grain, and spread the lance-shaped frond flat on a table under a strong light. It makes no difference which side of the leaf is uppermost as the mysterious sign can be seen on either side. About one-third of the distance, from the place where the leaf joins the plant to the tip, there is usually, but not always, an appreciable narrowing of the leaf, and right at this point, impressed through the leaf, as it were, as though with a large type, is the letter "B" or the figure "8," plain to the eye.

One of the persons interested in the phenomenon, said recently: "They are all talking about it all over the country, they say that at the time of the Boer War, the letter "V" which presages 'victory' was observed in similar circumstances on the oat leaves.

"Some say it is a "B" and some say an "8" and many believe that it means 'victory' for 'Britain,'" he said. "A farmer pointed it out to me yesterday and it's there all right.

Another explanation of the sign which finds favor with some, is that it is connected with the new star, for many people believe that astral visitors have a special influence on crops. The grapevine is supposed to be peculiarly susceptible to the influence of comets, and wine produced in the years when comets, in the course of their erratic orbit, pass the earth is supposed to be better than in other years and the supposition during last century has been proved on many occasions, commencing with the visit of Halley's comet in 1811. "Comet Port" was especially sought by connoisseurs of wine.

And comets themselves, whether or not they can influence the growing crops, are believed in many lands to presage war. An old Scotsman now in the city, who remembers the Crimean war, remembers also the visit of the comet that year.

The strange part of the appearance of the sign on the oat leaf this year is that it should be this year. With the portent of victory in South Africa in 1902 it may safely be assumed that eager eyes scanned the leaves last year and the year before and people there are who see in the sign the interpretation of the recent war despatches which tell of the defeat of the German arms and the discomfiture of the Crown Prince's forces.

Stories of the discovery of the sign are not confined to any one field or any one locality, but are widely scattered over the farms of old Ontario.

Spruce for Planes.

So great is the demand for airplane spruce by the Allies that eastern as well as Sitka spruce is now being used. Canada has large resources of eastern spruce, which has hitherto been used mostly for the manufacture of pulp, paper and lumber, and the British War Mission is at present trying to secure in Eastern Canada as large an amount as possible of the grades suitable for airplane manufacture.

Eastern spruce has for some time been used for airplane construction in the United States, although only a very small percentage of this timber is sufficiently clear for this purpose. Tests made by the United States and Canadian Governments show that where material of suitable quality can be found, this species serves admirably for airplane construction and may be expected to supplement the supplies of Sitka spruce from the Pacific Coast, which are only now beginning to approach adequate proportions.

Pick Wild Berries.

The Canada Food Board calls upon people at summer resorts and residents in suitable areas to make an immediate drive on the wild berry patches. Small fruits in general are scarce this year, but the wild berries are as abundant as usual. The main argument for gathering the wild berries freely is the shortage of butter in Europe. During the winter of 1918-19 jam must be used extensively on this continent as a substitute for butter, and the finest flavored jam in the world is that which is made from wild berries.

Labor Lost.

"How is that expert in genealogy you hired?"

"Nothing to him."

"How's that?"

"He has traced my ancestry back fifty years without finding anybody worth mentioning."

Coatless Choir In Ottawa.

In Ottawa's French Baptist Church the male members of the choir set the fashion of attending Sunday worship minus coats, the males of the congregation quickly following suit on the suggestion of the pastor.

WANT "FOGHORN'S" UNIFORM.

Major Neil MacDonald, otherwise popularly known as "Foghorn" by reason of the volume and penetrating qualities of his voice, is again in the limelight. "Foghorn" is one of those gentlemen of fortune who always bobs up where there is something doing of importance, and he has been one of the picturesque figures in most of the boom mining camps of the United States and Canada. When the war broke out "Foghorn's" age was around the half century mark, a little more or a little less, but his desire to be in the "big show" caused him to do a little mental arithmetic and casually forget a few of the years of his strenuous existence so that he was able to adjust his age to the military requirements and pass the enlisting officer.

As the result of wounds, "Foghorn," who had risen from private to Major, was given leave of absence to return to Canada, and in the past few months has been featured in magazine and newspaper articles, at so much per line. However, the unkindest cut of all came when the name of Major Neil MacDonald was removed from the active service roll of the C.E.F. and he was requested to hand in his uniform. The Major naturally objected to this as he preferred to continue to wear his uniform which no doubt added materially to the picturesqueness of his peculiar line of talk. "Foghorn" had enlisted for the duration of the war and six months thereafter, and he simply didn't intend to be relegated to the civilian scrap heap so unceremoniously.

The military authorities, however, refused to see the matter in the same light as the gallant major and a few days ago he was placed under arrest in Montreal for unlawfully wearing the uniform of a Canadian officer. "Foghorn" is fighting the case in the courts, and pending a decision will not be deprived of his liberty. When Foghorn's big and booming base violin voice goes into action denouncing those responsible for his troubles, a battery of French 75's will sound like a whisper in comparison.

ADVERTISING WITH A PUNCH.

When it comes to the art of advertising, the advice which an expert who returned recently from the Orient tenders to publicity writers is: "Go East!" Presenting his observations and experiences in The Dayton News, this advertising man points out that Japanese merchants and manufacturers who have occasion to make use of printer's ink are not disposed to limit themselves to dull prosaic statements concerning the excellence of their wares. The enterprising little Oriental goes in for the thrilling and the picturesque. He applies to the advertising of his commodities a unique descriptive skill. He selects his similes from the fields which command public interest and concern.

Among the most striking and entertaining bits of advertising which the traveller compiled in his study of Japanese publicity are these:

"Goods despatched expeditiously as a cannon ball."

"Parcels done up with such loving care as a wife bestows upon her husband."

"The print of our books is clear as crystal the matter as charming as a singing girl."

"Customers are treated as politely as by rival steamship companies."

"Our silks and satins are as smooth as a lady's cheeks and colored like a rainbow."

It ought to be possible to get advertisements read in Japan without scattering them around next to "pure reading matter."

BLUNDERING IN HIGH PLACES.

A number of military nurses on active duty in Toronto have suddenly been placed on the reserve list without pay. These nurses haven't been discharged, for they are subject to call, but their means of subsistence has suddenly been taken away, and the experience is the reverse of pleasant to them, the majority of them being at a considerable distance from their homes. That it should suddenly be discovered that the supply of military nurses is far greater than the demand for their services is somewhat of a mystery, and on the face of it there appears to be a big blunder somewhere, either in accepting the services of too many nurses, or in suddenly making a big reduction in the number of the girls on active duty in Toronto. With the war in its most active phase it looks to the outside observer as if the services of all the nurses already enrolled could be used to advantage. To suddenly remove a number of military nurses from the pay roll and ask them to hold themselves in readiness for some indefinite future call, and in the meantime subsist as best they can on nothing per week, looks like rank injustice or stupid blundering.

.·. CRISP COMMENT .·.

Now that Belleville and Toronto Fairs are over let's all get our coal in.

The Fuel Controller is a sort of a chills and fever specialist.

The United States brewers say if they cannot make beer they will make munitions. Next thing we know the dry wave will be hitting Germany. Can you imagine Fritz separated from his stein?

A despatch from Trenton to a Toronto paper states that farmers in that section are "cheerfully" paying big money to thresher gangs and that two men with a machine earn from forty to fifty dollars per day. By deleting "cheerfully" the rest of the glad tiding may pass the censor.

When the schedule of tolls is taken down from the western entrance to the Bay Bridge and the sign WELCOME TO BELLEVILLE substituted a big handicap to the prosperity of this city will have been removed. The progressive spirit must be lacking in public men who refuse to fight through every obstacle until the blight of a toll bridge is nothing but a memory.

Few things are more embarrassing to the little company of men who have been wearing military uniforms about the streets of Toronto for the past three or four years than to be greeted by some absent-minded or malicious friend with the remark, "Hello, old chap, when did you get back?"—Mail and Empire.

The continual rise of wages and the cost of living as recorded by the Labor Gazette gives ground for the apprehension of the late James J. Hill, who referred to this movement as the "fatal spiral." It cannot go on indefinitely. When it stops—what? asks the Financial Post.

OTHER VIEWS

"Firing" the Governor-General.

Toronto News.

The Toronto Star announces that the "job" of the Governor-General is now abolished, and that no other English representative of the King may live at Rideau Hall. It is a hasty judgment, worthy of the Star. Any link of connection between Canada and the dominant partner of the Empire is regarded by our neighbor with vexation.

The War Referendum.

Baltimore Sun.

One by one, pacifist and obstructionist Senators and Congressmen are getting the referendum on the war they demanded so loudly months ago. They didn't get it then, but they are getting it now in the primaries, and most of them are getting it "in the neck."

Wait Till Noon.

New York Globe.

German power at its zenith has been smashed by opponents whose power stands not at noon, but at nine or ten o'clock. When 12 strikes next spring the German staff is well aware what will happen. If the Allies can beat the German on the lines of the Marne and the Somme, they can beat them anywhere else.

Waste of Apples.

Mail and Empire.

Has the Food Board taken note of the apples being wasted on the farms, being left on the ground under the trees as is usual? Waste in food of any kind is to be condemned these days.

A True Story.

Toronto News.

This is an actual fact. The wife of a clergyman warned him as he went off to officiate at a funeral one rainy day: "Now, John, don't stand with your bare head on the damp ground."

Allied Weariness.

Manitoba Free Press.

"Success is with us," says Von Hindenburg, and he adds that: "The enemy begins to show signs of weariness." He mistakes the kind of weariness, however it is the sort that is intended when we say, "You make me tired."

Couldn't Beat Britain.

General Ricciotti Garibaldi in New York Herald.

"I do not say that the participation of America will have a decisive result on the final outcome of the war because that never was doubtful as long as England could dispose of her unlimited resources."

A Laugh or Two

Fully Explained.

The learned counsel in the great case literally beamed with joy. Here was a witness who was everything a witness should be.

"I congratulate you, sir," he said, enthusiastically. "Your memory for detail does you infinite credit. And on behalf of the numerous relatives of the testator in the court I should like to thank you for the very flattering though none the less truthful, description that you have just given of that esteemed gentleman who is now, alas! no more."

A murmur of applause went round the crowded court.

"I presume," continued the learned counsel, "that you were very intimate with the testator during his lifetime?"

The witness hesitated and blushed a crimson red. "N-n-o," he stammered. "In fact, I never saw him in my life."

"But, really, sir!" cried the barrister, in surprise. "I fail to see how you could give such an accurate and flattering description of him if you never saw him."

The witness gave a very sickly smile. "Perhaps you will understand better," he said, "when I tell you that I married his widow."

Cleanliness Before Godliness.

Harrington Times—The Dog Hill preacher cannot occupy his pulpit on Sunday as his wife did not wash this week.

Denied It.

He—You don't love me—you are merely flirting with me to make Jack jealous.

She—Oh, no; I'd have picked out a better lookng man if I wanted to do that.

CARNATION MILK comes to you in sealed air-tight cans—safe from contamination, sweet fresh, pure.

It is milk—nothing more.

But it is richer than ordinary milk. For it has all the cream, all the milk solids of the original whole milk.

It is evaporated to the consistency of cream. Then sealed air-tight and sterilized.

No preservatives are added.

And no sweetening.

So Carnation Milk may be used for cooking, for soups, for creaming vegetables. It is even better than ordinary milk for such purposes—and more economical (no waste). Because of its richness, less butter is needed to get the rich flavor you desire.

Add an equal quantity of water to Carnation Milk and you "bring back" the original milk—the safe milk for children to drink—purer than most milk you could give them.

If your recipe calls for skimmed milk, dilute Carnation Milk with more water.

Undiluted Carnation Milk may be used as cream in coffee or tea—and with cereals and fruit.

COMBING OUT PHYSICALLY FIT

It is understood that a number of clerks in the Kingston Armouries who are in Category A2, and whose services were requisitioned by the authorities on account of special experience, are to be returned to the Depot Battalion. Representations have been made by local organizations of veterans pointing out that returned men are willing to take over their duties and that if the clerks are suffering from no physical disability which may lower their category, the men who have been overseas should be given the preference. No definite announcement of policy has been made by the military authorities, but it is believed that a process of combing out physically fit men is going on wherever their services can be spared.

PTE. KEEGAN PAID THE PRICE

Private James Keegan, whose death from wounds was mentioned in The Intelligencer on Saturday, was well and favorably known in this city. Some days ago a message was received that he had been severely wounded and gassed and on Saturday the sad message was received, announcing his death. "Jmmy," as he was best known, enlisted and went overseas with the 155th Battalion of this city. His record of service in France was of the highest. He was wounded and as a tribute to his bravery he was awarded the Military Medal, but as was characteristic of him, he did not tell of this honor and the first intimation came with the arrival here of the medal from the military authorities. He had been all through the heaviest engagements during the past two years and was in the present big offensive. He died on August 29th. In addition to his wife and parents three brothers, Fred, Frank and George and one sister, Mrs. J. McGuire, survive. To the bereaved will be extended the heartfelt sympathy of all citizens.

NEW BARRACKS STARTED

Work commenced Friday morning on the Barriesfield barracks. Mr. Loveland, superintendent for Bate McMahon, and Assitant Superintendent Dagenais, have men engaged on a service building, while trucks and carts are drawing the lumber to the site and a surveyor was taking levels. Next week more men will be required, for the lumber will then be coming into the city at the rate of five carloads a day. No real progress can be made until the work is fairly started and one or two buildings are erected to accommodate the workmen and provide cook houses, etc. The buildings will be arranged in two groups. The first will be arranged along a line about 300 feet back from the shore, and the second group on a line on the east side of the common. The space between the groups will be used as a parade ground. The officers' quarters and mess will be at the north end of the parade ground. The hospital building will be situated near the shore close to the boat house. The superntendent expressed himself as very pleased with the site, which is especially adapted to the style of buildings specified in the plans

Fitzhugh's farm, noticed that his collie dog was afflicted with what he thought was rabies, and he destroyed it. Dr. A. Moore had the head sent to Ottawa for analysis and then pronounced the head as affected by rabies. The dog had bitten three other dogs, one belonging to Mr. Landymore and two to General Fitzhugh, and Mr. Landymore destroyed the three. ## Doctor Said "Keep On Taking Tanlac,"

Mrs. Bieal Gains Twenty Pounds—Wants Others To Be Helped

"I have not only gained twenty pounds since I began taking Tanlac, but it has done me so much good that my doctor after seeing the improvement this medicine brought, advised me to keep on taking it," declared Mrs. Mary Bieal, of 519 Dayton Ave., Seattle, a few days ago.

"I feel so grateful for Tanlac, I don't know what to say," continued Mrs. Bieal. "For three years I suffered such agony with my stomach that I wasn't able to do a thing around the house. I fact I was hardly able to get around at all. I completely lost my appetite, and what I did force down caused me so much pain I could hardly stand it. Of course this got my nerve in a terrible condition, and I hardly knew what it was to sleep at night. I'd just roll and toss until morning.

"At last I got so bad off that I was taken to the hospital, and had an operation performed. I was there for five weeks, and when I finally got back home I was a perfect wreck. I was so weak I couldn't move around the house at all and had to stay right in bed and my husband had to leave his work and wait on me. I had the best attention I could get but nothing seemed to give me any strength and although I tried and tried to get up and move around, it was no use. I was too weak; I just couldn't do it. Everybody insisted that I go back to the hospital, but I said, 'No'. I had been through so much I just couldn't bear the thought of going back there again.

"Then I decided to try Tanlac, as I heard so much about it and it's the honest truth this medicine did more for me than I ever thought anything could do. I have taken six bottles now and my stomach is in splendid condition. I have a fine appetite and can eat anything I want and never suffer the least bit afterwards.

"Tanlac certainly has built me up wonderfully. Just think, before I took it, I didn't have strength enough to set my own table, and now I can do every bit of my house work even to the washing, if necessary, and I sleep like a child and wake up in the mornings feeling refreshed and full of life. I've gained twenty pounds and look so well that my doctor told me to keep right on taking Tanlac and you may be sure I'm going to do it. I'm glad for everyone to know what Tanlac has done for me and hope the story of my case will help other sufferers to get the same relief."

"Tanlac is sold in Belleville by Ostrom's Drug Store, in Trenton by J H. Dickey, in Deseronto by W. J. Malley, in Stirling by J. S. Morton, in Frankford by W. J. Lettimer, in Madoc by J. Will Vince, in Marysville by T. [illegible] McAlpine, in Ormsby by Jas. Campbell and in Thomasburg by J. H. Blakely."

SERGT. BLACK WOUNDED.

Mr. John Black, 20 Hillside Street, Belleville, has received a telegram from the Director of Records at Ottawa that Sergt. Wm. Black, artillery, was admitted to No. 3 Australian General Hospital, Abbeville, on August 13, suffering from a gunshot wound in the right leg. Sergt. Black was a resident of Belleville and went overseas with the 34th Battery. As he had had previous military experience he was kept in England as an instructor until last November, when he was transferred to France where he acted as instructor at the base until February when he was sent to the front. He served four years in the United States navy upon the battleship Vicksburg and had interesting experiences in connection with revolutions in Central American, and service elsewhere. He is an uncle of Howard Black, reported wounded several days ago.

NATURAL GAS AT STIRLING

While drilling a well on Friday last on the premises of Mr. William Wallace of Stirling Village, natural gas was struck at a depth of 80 feet. The flow of gas was so strong that the men operating the drill could not remain in the vicinity. A match was applied to the aperture and a brilliant flame shot up in the air to a height of 12 feet. It is said that steps will be taken to cap the well and if the flow is peramnent it may provide light and heat for many of the inhabitants of the village.

"ALIEN ENEMIES" FINED FOR NOT REGISTERING

Five Fines of From $250 to $300 Imposed by Walkerton Magistrate

HANOVER, Ont., Sept. 9—"Alien eenemies" in Bruce county who have never registered, are being brought to book by the Dominion Police and this week no fewer than five have been arrested and taken before the magistrate in Walkerton, where they paid fines of $250 and $300 and costs.

Two employes of a furniture company were among the men rounded up after remaining in the country for over four years as alien enemies without having registered as required to do by law.

One of the men, Otto Blumb, is a German marine, who received an order from the German Government to return to his fatherland the day before Great Britain declared war. This man, according to the story which the told the Provincial police officer R. S. Russell, who made the arrest, attempted to get home to Germany but was advised by a German Consul not to go as he would be sure to be caught by the British navy. He has worked in Canada ever since, and ignored the registration law. At Walkerton he was fined $250 and costs. He was an employe of the furniture company.

Herman Milz, another employe of the company is the leader of the band of that company. He is an alien enemy, and he also parted with $250 and costs for not observing the law.

Ernest Denef, another of the men rounded up is a preached in Brant, and is an alien enemy who has never registered. His fine, like that of the men employed in the furniture company, was $250.

William Huenemader, a farmer in Brant County, faced the same charge and in his case the fine was $300 and costs.

Henry Oesthoff a shoe merchant also was among the men detected as being alien enemies and not registered with the police. He paid a fine of $250 and costs.

The two men wer stacking grain ppreparatory to thrashing. oJnes was on top of the shack when the lightning struck hm, setting fire to the grain and dazing White. When Mrs. Jones arrived her husband was not visible, so she brought White to his home in town in a motor car, and summoned assistance to fight the fire. The members of the Gravenhurst Fire Department took the fire engine out, and when the flames had ben subdued the charred body of Jones was found. tI is not known whether he was killed or rendered unconscious by the shock, as White has no recollection of what happened. Mr. Jones was a well-known and prosperous farmer of this district, and leaves a wife and two young children.

Daylight Saving Soon To End

The Ottawa Citizen has the following: The daylight saving time has about eight weeks more to run. Canada and the United States will revert to the old time on Saturday, October 27th, at two a.m.

In Toronto a newspaperman recently dug up the original order-in-council for the Dominion and sprang a sensation by stating that there would be all manner of confusion as the United States would go back to the old time on October 27th and Canada would not do so till October 31st. All manner of confusion on railways, etc., were pictured and the story was sent out to other papers and was used by many.

But the trouble was the story was wrong in the essential feature. The original order-in-council was passed on April 12th and made the time for daylight saving from April 14th to October 31st. But on May 7th an amending order was passed making the closing date the same as that set by the United States, two a.m., on Sunday, October 27th.

Whiskey Labels Made to Order

Man Infringed Temperance Act And Deceived His Customers As Well

TORONTO, Sept. 10.—Along with the 37 bottles of whiskey and four tins ful of liquor which the police seized at Harry Craig's place were labels which purported that the bottles to which these were affixed contained "10-year-old Scotch whiskey.' This evidence satisfied Magistrate Denison in the Police Court on Saturday that Craig had not only been breaking the Temperance Act but had also been deceiving his customers, and imposed a fine of $500 and costs or five months. As Craig was leaving the dock he was taken in charge by Plainclothesman Scott who thought he recognized in the man 'Harry Claremont," wanted at Barrie for jail-breaking. At all events as soon as the officer yelled out, "Hey, Claremont," Craig turned round quickly and asked Scott what he wanted.

Fred Cairns and John D. Agnew, who also toyed with the Liquor Act, were each fined $500 and costs, and Peter Swartz and Joseph Skasyowski $300 and costs for a similar offence.

Wounded Belleville Soldier Laughed When Placed in Ambulance

Mrs. R. Stapley of this city, has received the following letter from Corp J. D. Gordon, in regard to her soldier son, who was wounded on August 19 while taking part in the great allied offensive in France:

Dear Mrs. Stapley:—I have the sorrow to advise you that your son E. G. Stapley was wounded on the 10th of August. He got a slight wound in the side, but he will be all right, as it was a nice "Blighty." He was laughing when we put him in the ambulance and he asked me to write you as I was the Section Commander. I felt sorry for him, but now I call him one of the lucky ones. I hope he will soon be better, and be back in Canada with you soon. He stood up to the attack like a hero. I was glad to see him do so well.

Yours respectwully,

A Fine Tractor, According to Ads

BOSTON, Mass., Sept 10—John B. Kobs, treasurer of the Jeweler Tractor and Trunk Company, claiming to manufacture "the farm tractor of the hour," was arrested on an indictment warrant charging 11 counts of larency and fradulent advertising

At the address of the company's "factory" the police said they found an empty stable, with a negro engaged in whitewashing the interior. They declared that the widely-advertised "equipment of the concern" consisted of four automobile wheels, the frame of a truck and the skeleton of a motor, while the company's motor expert was found to be a waiter in a restaurant and the mechanical expert a shipping clerk.

In the few months that the tractors company has maintained offices in a large downtown office building, it has engaged representatives, the police said, in England, Poroto Rica, South Africa, Egypt, Brazil, Tripoli, Mexico and Canada, besides establishing agencies in various section of this country. The company was capitalized at $1,000,000, according to the police, with nothing paid in, and 5,000 shares had been sold at $2 to $5 a share.

Nothing was known of Kob's career by the police except that he had told them he was a machinist for four years.

Boston Has Edge On World's Series

BOSTON, Sept. 10—The Boston Americans got the big edge in the World's Series by beating the Chicago Nationals in a mad scramble for the fourth game yesterday by a score of 3 to2. This gives the Red Sox a lead of 3 to 1 in the series, and it is necessary now for them to win only one more game to make them the wartime baseball champions of the world

Both teams departed from letter perfect baseball for the first time since the meeting, and the explosion which resulted kept the fans in a furore of old-time series excitment.

Babe Ruth, Boston's big southpaw and slugger extraordinary, led the first bombing party, which apparently wrecked the Cub machine for good and all, but was hoisted by his own petard in the eight and ninth innings.

The game was broken wide open by Boston in the fourth. Tyler got himself into a hole by passing Shean, the first man up. Strunk smashed the ball hard to centre, but Paskert raced under it for a neat out. Shean, taking advantage of Tyler's leisurely wind-up, dashed for second and made it standing up, while Killifer let the ball get through him for a short passed ball.

It was a clean steal for Shean, nevertheless, and the crowd rooted for a run. With Whiteman up Tyler wobbled again and issued another pass. The stands were fairly rocking when "Stuffy" McInnis strode to the plate but all the Gloucester boy con dldo was to force Shean at third. Then along came Ruth.

TYLER TAKES A CHANCE

Two runs were on base. Red Sox rooters feared that Tyler would not take a chance with that big black bat, for the first three pitches were wide of the plate. The next one curved over for a strike. Owens called the next one strike two, while the burly "Babe" scratched around the box in disgust. Then he dug himself in at the plate and with the count three and two waited to see if Tyler dared to send one over. Tyler dared.

Ruth swung into the ball savagely and the gleaming sphere soared in a steadily upward sweeping climb for the right centre field. It was a hard drive to judge and Flack ran in for a step and then started back in a wild chase. Before the ball slammed into the outfield barrier, Whiteman and McInnis had scampered home and Ruth was heading for third like a big tank running wild. He beat the throw in easily and enjoyed a quiet grin on third while the National League leaders tried to readjust themselves to the same chaotic conditions Ruth's shock bat had created in the American League all season. Everyone rooted for Scott to bring the big fellow home, but the shortstop lifted a high one to Paskert.

Soldiers In Hiding Brutally Slain

Germans Killed Eleven British And the Man Who Sheltered Them

LONDON, Sept. 10.—Authentic details of a peculiarly infamous case of German brutality have been received by the Daily Express. Eleven British soldiers, finding themselves behind enemy lines in France, managed to evade capture for several weeks by hiding themselves in fields and subsequently taking shelter in a house.

The woman in whose house they found shelter says she and her husband, knowing the soldiers were hiding in the field, took them in and lodged them in an attic. Unfortunately some outsiders knew they were there and a neighbor denounced them to the German commandant at Guise, he sent troops to arrest the soldiers, who gave themselves up immediately without making resistance.

Three days later they were tried. The eleven soldiers and the husband of the woman who had sheltered them were sentenced to death and were executed on the same day. The woman was sentenced to four years at forced labor, her daughter to two years and her son to three years, while a woman who had given the soldiers some food was sentenced to ten years at forced labor and her daughter to one year.

STOCKHOLM, Sept. 9—American refugees from Moscow who arrived at Haparanda, Sweden, Thursday, say that while the storm raged in Moscow and Petrograd against the Bolsheviki newspapers demanded the lives of one thousand members of the bourgeoisie for every Bolsheviki killed. Newspapers received from Petrograd, the refugees said, told of the arrest of British and French there and carried such slogans as "A bullet in the forehead of every enemy of the Soviet Government

Letters to the Editor

CHARITY WANTED AT HOME

To the Editor of The Daily Intelligencer:

Dear Sir:—Will you kindly allow space in your valuable paper to draw the attention of our City Council to the serious condition of drains crossing streets in the lower parts of the city where there is no sewerage. Many of them have not been cleaned for years, and only about half of the open drains have gratings where they enter under the roadway. The consequence is they are filled with all knids of refuse including everything that should go in a garbage can. When people in those abused districts ask for them to be cleaned there is either no money to do it, or a promise to do it in the spring. When spring comes another promise to do it in the fall, and the abuse continues from year to year. Surely the people living in sections of the city that are not fortunate enough to have proper sewerage, should receive more attention, instead of having water poured down from the hills with not more than two dozen proper outlets in the city. There is money for grants for everything that is asked from the Council, but none for those neglected residents who are obliged to pay their high taxation the same as their more fortunate neighbors who have good sewerage.

I understand the City Council intends granting $5,000 of our money to the Navy League. Why not take some of it and expend it on the neglected places. Charity is needed here as well as elsewhere, and will be appreciated by those abused citizens as much as anywhere it will be sent, and will prevent the suffering that existed last spring through this cause. Hoping something will be done before the winter sets in to improve conditions.

TAX PAYER.

Belleville, Sept. 9, 1910.

Ludendorff in Very Tight Box, Centre of Hun Defence in Peril

Painful Quandary For Huns, Who Face Possibility of Being Off French Frontier Before Winter Begins—Crown Prince's Positions Are Now Being Enfiladed

PARIS, Sept. 9—With the advance of the Americans and French toward La Fere and the St. Gobain hills, Laon and positions north of the Aisne, in the very centre of the German defence system from the sea to Verdun are imperilled.

Conservative military crictics now mention the possibility of seeing Hindenburg pounded out of his famous line into a new one just inside the French frontier before winter begins. It is too early, however, to throw our hats in the air. Unless all signs fail an immense amount of fighting must come before Germany is beaten.

Nevertheless, Saturday, Lundendorff was in a tight box. Not only are Cambrai and Douai threatened by the British, who are at the very gates, but the Crown Prince is facing the possibility of retreating further than the positions along the Chemin-des-Dames. Humbert and Mangin have fought their way into the St. Gobain hill country, and unless soon stopped they must inevitably cause a wide retirement at this part of the line.

Likewise the French are pushing on eastward in the region of Vauxailon and Pinon toward the western end of the Chemin-des-Dames, toward which the Crown Prince is hurrying in the hope of finding security there.

A huge deception may await him, for with the allied gun enfilading the positions from the west, he obviously must continue his retreat northward, after which only solid masses of men can halt the Americans and French, who are now hot on his heels.

As a similar situation already prevails in the region of Cambrai and Douai. Lundendorff is face to face with a painful quandary.

Armies of Germany Affected by Mutiny

LONDON, Sept. 9—General demoralization of the German population and widespread and growing dissatisfaction with the German army, accompanied by mutiny and desertions, are described in a despatch to The Daily Telegraph from its Rotterdam correspondent under date of Thursday. The correspondent says that information reaching him is so sensational as to inspire skepticism, but declares that he has received corroboration from authroati ?DitatC ?
ation from authoritative sources which establishes the authenticity of the information beyond a doubt.

He asserts that the German army is filled with despondency and seething with mutinous spirit, and that alarming outbreaks have occurred in several units. One incident on the Arras front terminated in a whole Bavarian division being disarmed and transported to Bavaria, where it was placed in a prison camp, and the mutiny of one of the Silesian regiments resulted in nearly a hundred of its men being executed.

A huge number of desertions are occurring, the correspondent says, and it is estimated that there are more than 20,000 desertions in Berlin alone. Large numbers are scattered throughout the country and the authorities are having the greatest difficulty in trailing deserters, owing to the connivance of the working class. Nevertheless, hundreds have been sentenced to 15 years imprisonment. A great number of imprisoned deserters, broken by solitary confinement, have been released and sent back to the ranks.

Disobedience and defiance of officers in common at the front, according to the correspondent's information and a similar spirit is shown in the munition factories, where the workers, deliberately are slowing up, with the result that the output has been seriously decreased.

A PROVINCIAL HIGHWAY

COBOURG, Sept. 9—Following a visit of a deputation from the united counties of Durham and Northumberland to Toronto, Warden F. J. Slade has been notified by the Department of Highways that the Government has decided to take over the road from Grafton to Belleville as a Provincial highway about October 1. Road valuators will be sent down, it is understood, to investigate the matter of the toll-roads in this district which have not yet been assumed by he Government.

A resolution will be introduced at the coming December sessions of the Counties Council, asking that the road from Cobourg to Hastings be taken over as a county Provincial highway.

U-Boats Disguise As Fishing Craft

An Atlantic Port, Sept. 9—Two German submarines disguised as fishing craft and carrying sails are operating a few hundred miles off the Atlantic coast, according to information transmitted to the naval authorities by the officers of the British and French steamships arriving here Saturday.

Officers of the British vessel said they became suspicious of two sailing vessels sighted about dawn, travelling six miles apart. Suddenly the sails came down and puffs of smoke appeared. The English captain crowded on speed and escaped after an all-day zigzag flight.

The French vessel reported an encounter at about the same locality the Frenchman fighting off the submarine after an engagement lasting several hours.

Indefinite Leave Without Pay

Sad Plight of Military Nurses Suddenly Removed From Pay Roll

TORONTO, Sept. 9.—Thirty-one nursing sisters at the base hospital and its various annexes are wondering how long they are supposed to occupy the anomalous position of being "on indefinite leave without pay" and yet remain "on reserve should the reserves be required."

"This decision of the headquarters of M.D. No. 2 to cut down expenses by putting a number of the nurses out of positions with practically no notice is a piece of rank injustice and ingratitude on the part of headquarters," said one nursing sister at the base hospital yesterday. "They were quite willing to take us on some months ago, when our services were needed, and now we are struck off the strength indefinitely. A number of the girls have just returned from their leave and, thinking their positions were assured them, have spent the major portion of their money and are next door to penniless."

THE CAVALRY OF THE SKIES.

The great world's war has produced many wonders but none greater than the development of the aerial navies winging their way over land and sea, acting as the eyes of the army in observation work and proving of inestimable value as cavalry of the skies in wonderfully effective offensives against advancing troops, swooping low over the marching columns and pouring a hail of bullets and bombs into their ranks. Cecil I. Dorrain, staff correspondent in France of the Newark, New Jersey, News, has caught the vision of the inspiration animating these dashing dare-devils of the winged host and voices his admiration as follows:

> Eighty of them! Think of it! Can't you picture them over the valley of the Oise coming slantwise down out of the clouds at more than a hundred miles an hour, and rushing over the heads of the German troops—sometimes only thirty feet above them—pouring bombs and machine-gun fire into them, killing them like rats in a trap, blocking the roads with smashed wagons, dead horses, upside-down camions, turning the victorious advance into a panic! And then off again, away off, at a furious speed up among the clouds, before the Germans could even get out their machine guns to fire on them. This is all the more thrilling when we remember that this victorious advance means that the German column was marching down the Oise valley in the great gap between the Allied armies, without a thing between them and Paris for a while but those hair-raising cavalrymen of the air. And the fliers alone in that marvellous charge decimated the German column and routed its march. This group-fighting is an important phase of the new strategy of aerial warfare which has emerged from a whirl of possibilities and of individual exploits.
> Imagination mounts to the scene and follows the difficult manoeuvres. What is it like to lead a flying party across space 15,000 feet above the ground hunting enemies on whose wings you were sure you saw the sunlight flash a minute ago? You set your wings and you set them back, and your followers understand from this sign-language that you see enemies and are going for them. They set wing and follow. You hold the course true while your eyes try to see that glinting wing again. You and your little lot plunge into a cloud in close flying order and when you emerge from it into the sun, there is the Boche party in full view.
> Beelzebub and His Angels.
> What time is there to think? At the same moment they see you, and they sweep around and head for you. Now, you're the captain of the team and the fliers behind are waiting for your orders. Life or death for them whether you say right or not. You flash your wings. They understand; and together you go singing across space to down Beelzebub and his angels—all of them branded with the black cross!
> You single out the leader for yourself, perhaps, and you "wing" your men to keep the rest from interfering. They circle around and plunge into the patrol. The roar of planes is scattered by the crackle of machine-gun voices. Spad and Albatross circle around and over and under each other like hawks in a fury. You sweep past your Boche and pour shot toward him. He drops. You wheel and follow, and he swoops up at you from beneath. You climb, tip sideways, and fall. As you fall you pour bullets at him. He dives! Have you got him? You can't be sure. You put your nose down and dive after him. Two thousand feet you go spinning to earth in a dizzy whirl. But your hand is like steel on the "broomtsick." You think the Boche is trying to fool you, and you have the right hunch. Suddenly he flattens out and scuds off, disappearing in a billow of mist. But you got his direction and you bring up right over him. Passing him on an arc like the curve of Niagara just going over the ledge, you pepper him again. Flash! His tank flames. The wings catch. His machine lurches over and plunges. You circle around and watch the flames and smoke growing smaller and smaller. Finally you see them meet the ground, and when the smoke clears you see a little black heap lying still.
> One more star on your score-card! You look around for your patrol and gather them together. What is left of the Boches is winging off. You set your course toward home.
> Next day your adventure is referred to in the world's news in the following lengthy and thrilling description: "Lieutenant ——— downed his sixth enemy plane yesterday." But your satisfaction is in knowing that, thanks to your afternoon's job, the observation over our lines has not been interrupted in its vital work. Everything depends on that.

The Kaiser is strongly averse to eating his Christmas Dinner in Paris this year—says there are too many French shells in his scrambled eggs now.

President Wilson now declares for "a decisive victory of arms" over Germany, and probably feels that he was a mere unsophisticated lad when he demanded "peace without victory," says the Mail and Empire.

Fifty-six nursing sisters in Toronto, duly accepted in the military service and expecting to go overseas any minute, have been laid off without reason or warning and are now out of work and out of pay. At the same time the United States is asking for 10,000 nurses to serve overseas. It looks as if unity of command was as necessary behind the lines as it is at the front.—Kingston Whig.

Referring to War Savings Stamps, the Toronto Globe says that the fact that half a billion dollars' worth of the United States issue of two billions of Treasury stamps has already been sold furnishes additional proof of the soundness of the old Scotch maxim that it is the "littles that make the muckles."

The Frankfurter Zeitung hints that the German navy may shortly put out to sea. It is not likely to put out much else. The "Allied armada of Armageddon"—as The Glasgow Herald recently described it—is still patiently awaiting "der tag."

Even enthusiasm over a promising home war garden cannot make the Cleveland Plain Dealer abandon its customary diplomacy. It has decided that in the controversy between the advocates of tomottoes and tomaytoes it is wise to take no part.

OTHER VIEWS

Low Bridge!

Forest Free Press.

Sir Robert Borden and colleagues have arrived home from England, and will now be instructed in their war duties by a lot of busy editors who know little or nothing about how these important matters must be managed.

Not Very Remote.

Calgary Albertan.

Lord Shaughnessy, in an address to a Toronto public, expressed himself as reconciled to the nationalization of railways. He did not discuss the wisdom of such a policy, but Canada is a democratic country, and if the people wish to put an end to the private ownership of public services, the people will do it. That being the case, it would be well for Canada to watch carefully the manner of other nations in taking over the railways.

Such is the attitude of the ablest railway man in America, and one of the most successful in the world, which is very interesting. The head of the C.P.R. is a close student of affairs, and he reads very clearly the signs of the times. Evidently he not only admits that Canada will take over her railways ultimately, but also that the time for such action is not very remote. His warning about preparedness should be heeded by the Canadian public.

The time is very near when railways will be regarded as the great national highways, operated by the people, for the service of the people. Shaughnessy sees it coming, and to him it seems much nearer than to the members of the government.

Penny Wise.

Wall Street Journal.

"If Fuel Administrator Garfield looked about him he would see some gross inconsistencies. The new order asking for the voluntary limitation of the use of pleasure automobiles on Sundays brings forth this observation. A Wall Street banker travels back and forth between home and office in a Rolls-Royce. This is only one of the few high-priced automobiles at his service. The round trip covers sixty miles. The Rolls consumes about one gallon to six miles and each round trip takes ten or more gallons. For six working days at least 60 gallons are consumed. At 27c. a gallon the cost is $16.20. There is a clerk in the financial district who maintains a Ford. He goes to church on Sunday and is wont to give his family an afternoon outing. He travels sixty miles on Sunday at the rate of twenty miles a gallon. The clerk consumes three gallons a week at a cost of 81c. Fuel Administrator Garfield's order says, in effect: It is highly consistent for the banker to consume ninety gallons during week days but the banker's clerk must under no circumstances consume three gallons on Sunday.

Digested His Remarks.

A young minister just out of the seminary was preaching his trial sermon in a village church. He was very positive, repeating several times: "I am correct, though all the commentators disagree with me." That evening, just as the young preacher arose to read the Scripture, an old lady entered the door and walked straight to the front, and, looking up into the young minister's face as she handed him a market basket carefully covered, said: Brother, I heard you say this morning that all common taters disagree with you. I have brought you a basket of yellow yams, which I hope you can eat without getting sick."

Wee Bit Sane.

While a certain Scotch minister was conducting religious service in an asylum for the insane one of the inmates cried out wildly:

"I say, have we got to listen to this?"

The minister, surprised and confused turned to the keeper and said:

"Shall I stop speaking?"

The keeper replied:

"No, no; gang along, gang along; that will not happen again. That man only has one lucid moment every seven years."

MR. GETTHINGSDONE.

Phil Ossifize is a very big man,
And he owns a wonderful brain;
He can furnish a perfectly marvellous plan,
He is great when he comes to explain;
But when we are caught in a very big war,
And the war must be speedily won,
We have no time for a speculator,
We need Mr. Getthingsdone.

Putitinprint is a glorious chap,
He can write in a masterful way;
He has elegant phrases forever on tap,
And he always knows what to say;
But when guns bellow and soldiers bleed
And the war-cloud swallows the sun,
Rhetoric isn't the thing that we need,
We need Mr. Getthingsdone.

Wholeloafornone sees far, far ahead,
He is great on the Ultimate Goal;
He wants the Ideal, and nothing instead,
And he owns an inflexible soul;
But there isn't much room in the midst of a fight
For the dreamy Wholeloafornone;
We need the vim and the very present might
Of the bold Mr. Getthingsdone.

Mr. Getthingsdone wields a very clumsy pen,
And his tongue is clumsy, too;
But he knows his job and he knows his men,
And he knows how to put things through,
He is not polite, he is not high-brow,
And he crudely hates the Hun;
But we need him badly and we need him now—
We need Mr. Getthingsdone.

"Make me a Kite—"

Hardly Excusable Even in a Child

IF a child were to enter one of our aeroplane factories and interrupt a workman with a request to have a kite made—the workman would smile indulgently—and proceed with his aeroplane.

You yourself would condemn the man if he stopped his vital war work to build a toy.

Condemn yourself, then, if you employ labor and material to make such goods as cater only to your self indulgence.

Every time you buy a thing you do not need, you interfere with Canada's war work.

Every dollar you spend on goods not strictly necessary, is a dollar—not merely wasted—but used to employ labor on things that have nothing to do with our efforts to win the fight for freedom.

Too many of us, in Canada, are flying the "luxury kite." Too much of the time of Canadian workmen is being purchased by us to make the things that are for show and pleasure. Too great a quantity of material that our soldiers could effectively use against the foe, goes into the making of superfluous things for us, whom they are so valiantly defending.

Stop the reckless spending.

Stop acting like children. This war we are fighting calls for men and the brains of men. If you cannot fight—at least do not interrupt the war-work by buying the things you merely want and do not need.

The money you have been spending wastefully—with no result but to divert labor from war-essentials—will make a worth-while sum.

Use that money to build up a fund, that you can lend your Country, when your Country calls.

Published under the authority of the Minister of Finance of Canada.

About three o'clock the bride donned her travelling suit of brown silk with velvet hat and wore the groom's gift, a necklpiece of white fur The happy couple left by motor for Picton, where they will visit friends for some time. ## The Man With The Hoe

Hoeing is a severe strain on the back. It calls into play muscles not used much in lifting or in other kinds of farm work.

If you have a weak back you cannot stand much hoeing unless you use Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills to set the kidneys right and remove the cause of weakness and lameness of the back. Just try one pill a dose at bed time and see how much better you will feel.

FEROCIOUS GERMAN DOGS NOW ACCOMPANY SENTRIES

This Will Remove Hair or Fuzzy Growths

(Toilet Tips)

A safe, certain method for ridding the skin of ugly, hairy growths is as follows: Mix a paste with some powdered delatone and water, apply to hairy surface about 2 minutes, then rub off, wash the skin and the hairs are gone. This is entirely harmless and seldom requires repeating, but to avoid disappointment it is advisable to see that you get genuine delatone.

Music and Drama

"A DAUGHTER OF THE SUN"

A story pulsating with thrills, rich in its love interest, and bubbling with cleancut comedy characterises "A Daughter of the Sun," is the story of an Hawaiian Butterfly to be presented at Griffin's Theatre tonight. The scenes are laid in the Hawaiian Islands, famed throughout the world for their beauty and they offer the widest scope for imposing scenic affects of which Mr. Ed. W. Rowland the producer, has taken every opportunity. Scenically, this play is said to be the most pretentious of the season. Lorin Howard and Ralph Kettering, the authors, have written a story that is calculatedd to leave a lasting impression. Native Hawaiians are among the characters and the wonderful music of the 'Paradise of the Pacific' lends a distinctive charm to this delightful play. From the time Dr. Edward Grant, a young American, meets 'Loa,' the beautiful Hawaiian girl, to the fall of the final curtain, the interest is sustained. There are three acts and seven scenes, each a masterpiece in the scenic art. The atmosphere of the famous Hawaiian Islands is accentuated by the appearance of a number of natives, who play the wondrous melodies and sing the songs of their native country. The music of the ukelele and guitar furnishes a delightful musical setting for this absorbing play which is presented by a capable company.

MARGUERITE CLARK IN "UNCLE TOM'S CABIN"

That old classic "Uncle Tom's Cabin" was presented in a newer and brighter way at Griffin's last night and charming Marguerite Clark was at her best in the role of little Eva. She gave a good account of this somewhat different part to what she has been playing lately, and the work of Topsy, the comedy role of the play, is also well taken care of. The usual amount of laughs was secured by the ever funny Topsy who had no fadder nor mudder but just growed up.

Another good picture was 'Her Condoned Sin," a story of Roman days, the picture has several well known stars in the cast, Mae Marsh, Blanche Sweet, Henry Walthall and Robert Harron. These two good photoplays were well supported by a good News Film and the usual good chapter of "The Eagles Eye."

AT THE PALACE

At the Palace the exciting serial "The Woman in the Web," is drawing to a close and some sensational work is done in this chapter. Another chapter will complete this excellent serial. A good "Musty Suffer comedy was on the program, and as usual Musty drew the laughs with his funny antics. The special picture was "The Lady in the Photograph," and it pleased if the many comments made by patrons leaving the theatre could be used as a criterion.

Appeal To Public To Save Gasoline

Production of Vital Fluid is Lagging and it Must be Saved

OTTAWA Sept. 11.—An appeal to conserve gasoline by voluntary conservation is made to the citizens of Canada by the Fuel Controller.

Immediately following the departure of C. A. Magrath for the south on official business, C. W. Peterson, Deputy Controller, handed out the following statement:

"The Fuel Controller has had the question of regulating the use of gasoline under careful and anxious investigation ever since his appointment. The position is briefly as follows:

How Gas is Made

"Gasoline and other important commodities are produced in the refining of crude oil. The residue is fuel oil, which enters so largely into the marine war activities of the allies. Storage facilities for gasoline in America are limited. Over-production would, therefore, automatically reduce the output of fuel oil and other vitally necessary substances gained through the refining process. It is consequently a matter of the utmost importance to preserve a proper balance between production and consumption of gasoline. Hitherto all overseas demands have been satisfactorily met ,as far as transportation was available, and the domestic demand has absorbed the balance, and the attitude of the Fuel Controller has been one of watchful waiting.

Production is Lagging

'Recent information, however, discloses the fact that production is beginning to lag behind the demand from all sources. The requirements of the Western harvest fields owing to the ever increasing use of mechanical motive power, has been very large and the country is now face to face with an actual gasoline shortage. Whether or when production will overtake this shortage, it is difficult to say., but this is the period of the year when the consumption of gasoline is at its highest, and the increased domestic demands, together with the extensive overseas requirements, have rendered necessary adequate safeguards against a possible shortage.

Don't Joy-ride on Sunday

"Under the circumstances the Fuel Controller appeals to the people of Canada to exercise the most rigid economy in the consumption of gasoline until such time as the public is officially notified that no further necessity exists or extraordinary economy. This may me effected in two directions; secondly, by the economical use and handling of gasoline. The public is particularly requested to discontinue the use of motor-driven vehicles on Sundays with the following exceptions:

'Tractors and motor trucks employed on actual transportation of freight, vehicles of physicians used in performance of professional duties; ambulances, fire equipment, police wagons, undertakers' wagons, and conveyances used for funerals; railway equipment using gasoline, repair outfits employed by telephone and public service companies, and motor vehicles on errands of necessity in rural communities where transportation by steam or electricity is not available.

How Oil is Lost

"In regard to economy in handling, it has been estimated that strict observance of the following rules would be proportionately equal:

"1. Avoid spilling gasoline.
"2. Don't permit leaks.
"3. Use no gasoline for washing.
"4. Do not leave tanks or cans open.
"5. Waste no lubricating oil.

'While the necessity for rigid compliance with the Fuel Controller's appeal is very real. Mr. McGrath hesitates to embody with his request informal and drastic regulations owing to the fact that to successfully enforce such regulations would involve considerable public inconvenience and would probably necessitate a card system in connection with all gasoline consumption. Such being the case, the Fuel Controller has decided to observe the effect of an appeal for voluntary conservation. Should this not be found sufficiently or quickly effective, he will, of course, have no other option than to embody the necessary restrictions in formal regulations and to provide for their enforcement."

LESS THAN 26 CTS. FOR GAS IN THE UNITED STATES

WASHINGTON, Sept. 11 — The price of gasoline will be Government fixed at less than 26 cents, according to the Fuel Administration.

Canadians Add Two Chapters To World's History

With the Canadian Forces, Sept. 11.—It is a month yesterday since the Canadian corps went into action before Amiens. In that battle and in the more recent battle of Arras it has added two important chapter to the history of the world and to the deeds that redound to the honor of Canada. In that brief span its captures of guns have been one-seventh of the total guns captured by the allied nations this year.

Lifting the Veil

It is possible now to lift the veil a little and give a connected account of these operations.

During the period July 1 to July 10 For the previous two months they had been constantly practising open warfare. On July 10 the corps was released from the reserve and relieved Hill south. This line was held by three divisions and our 2nd Division, which had been attached up to that time to another corps, thus losing the benefit of the period of training was taken out and put into reserve to go through the same course. The general plan adopted during this period of holding the line was to foster in the mind of the enemy the idea of a pending attack in order to retain or draw his reserves into this area and consequently an aggressive policy was adopted. Active patrolling was carried out by day and night and raids were constantly affected. The artillery carried out a vigorous program of harassing, firing, and counter-battery work. From prisoners it was learned that the enemy expected an attack and that troops had been frequently rushed forward to defend the Drocourt-Queant line.

Another Front

On July 30, the corps was transferred to the fourth army and orders were received to move to another front. The time between July 30 and August 8 was given up to moving the corps to the new area extending from Villers-Bretonneux in the north, to the woods of Geksil Gentelles in the south. How the move was executed and with what secrecy can best be indicated by the fact that no member of the corps knew where he was going, and the success of the attack was demonstrated by the fact that the enemy was taken completely by surprise on the night of August 7-8. Therefore the Canadian corps was concentrated in woods and fields and all available power in front of Amiens and immediately behind the front line extending from Domart through Hangard Wood, east of Cachy. At twenty minutes past four on the morning of August 8, the corps attacked with three divisions, the second division being on the north, the first in the centre and the third on the south. The corps was extended between the Amiens-Chaulnes railway and the Amiens and Roye road. On the left flank of the Canadians were the Australians, and on the right flank the French. All troops attaced simultaneously.

A World's Record

During the first day the Canadian troops advanced about twenty thousand yards, a world's record capturing the villages of Domart ,Hourges, ,Hangard, Abecourt, Courcelles, Demuin, Ignacourt, Marcelcave, (whose capture has been erroneously attributed to the Australians) Beaucourt, Gayeux, Wiencourt, Le Quesnel, Gillancourt, Beaufort and Folies. On the second day a further advance was made through stiff fighting, and when the fourth Canadian division was thrust into the fray to relieve the second. On this day the villages of Boucholr, Warvillers, Rosieres, Maucourt, Maharicourt and Chilly were captured. On the third day the corps was reinforced by a British division, and the attack was proceeded with. The villages of Quesnoy and Fouquescourt fell on this day. The fighting was intense since the enemy had been driven back on to a system of trenches easy of defence and was making the most of it.

BRITISH FRONT LIQUID

British Headquarters, Sept. 11—The British front is now liquid in the literal sense of the word. However, we are pursuing the enemy across fairly high, rolling country in most places, and although the artifically flooded areas south of the Scarpe and southern fringe of the old Somme battlefield are so bad as to be largely impassable, yet between these limits the going is still feasible, if uncomfortably sloppy.

SEEKING TO OUTFLANK ENEMY POSITIONS

VILLAGE OF TRAVECY CAPTURED BY FRENCH TROOPS NEAR SOUTHERN END OF MAIN HINDENBURG LINE—IMPORTANT ENEMY POSITIONS WILL BE OUTFLANKED BY CONTINUED FRENCH OCCUPATION OF TRAVECY—BRITISH LINE ADVANCED LAST NIGHT NORTHWEST OF ST. QUENTIN—STRONG GERMAN COUNTER ATTACK REPULSED—BRITISH TROOPS CONTINUE TO ADVANCE DESPITE BAD CONDITION OF GROUND FROM HEAVY RAINS.

Special Despatches to The Intelligencer, Canadian Press, Limited.

PARIS, Sept. 11.—The village of Travecy, near the southern end of the main Hindenburg line has been captured by French troops, according to reports received here. If the French can hold this town important enemy positions at LaFere, the northerly defence of St. Gobain massif, two miles south of Travecy, will be virtually outflanked.

BRITISH LINE ADVANCED.

LONDON, Sept. 11.—(Official)—During last night the British line was advanced slightly in the region of Vermand, northwest of St. Quentin, Field Marshal Haig reported today. The Germans delivered a counter attack in the region of Ecourt-St. Quentin. It was repulsed in stiff fighting. There was sharp fighting also at Gouzeaucourt. The Germans were beaten off at one point where the British posts had been in the enemy's possession.

Knights Templar Take Possession Of City in Annual Assembly

Many Delegates From All Parts of Canada Attending Thirty-Fifth Annual Assembly of Sovereign Great Priory of Canada—Visitors Pleased With Convention City

The City of Belleville is honored today by the presence of a large number of members of the Masonic fraternity, who have attained the exalted rank of Knights Templar. The occasion is the thirty-fifth annual assembly of the Sovereign Great Priory of Canada, and delegates are here from as far east as Halifax, and from as far west as British Columbia. The appearance of many of the delegates in the attractive uniform of the order adds a picturesque atmosphere to the gathering, and gives the assembly a military appearance. The delegates are in many cases accompanied by their wives and the unanimous verdict of the visitors is that Belleville is an ideal convention city and the local Knights and their ladies are great entertainers. The beautiful residences of Belleville, well kept lawns, wide streets and abundance of shade trees, have occasioned much favorable comment from the visitors, who are greatly taken up with the City on the Bay. The splendid hotel accommodation is also very pleasing to the delegates who are satisfied that Belleville is the best convention city on the map.

The officers and members of King Baldwin Preceptory, Knights Templar, of Belleville, and their wives, are making every effort to provide attractive entertainment for the visitors and are certainly succeeding. Yesterday afternoon the visitors were treated to an automobile trip through Prince Edward County with stops at Picton and the famous Sand Banks. Needless to say the visitors enjoyed every minute of the trip. Last evening a theatre party was arranged, a section of seats having been reserved at Griffin's Theatre for the performance of "The Daughter of the Sun." This morning the visiting ladies were entertained to a motor trip to the Oak Hills, and thoroughly enjoyed the beautiful scenery and bracing atmosphere. For this afternoon an automobile trip to the local aviation camps is the principal feature of entertainment, and the visitors are enjoying the experience of seeing Canada's soldiers of the sky in action at the training headquarters.

Opening Session

The opening business session of the Great Priory was held this morning in the City Hall, beginning at 9.30, when an address of welcome was made by Mayor Platt. Eulogy of John Ross Robertson.

The Grand Master, referring to the late R. E. Sir John Ross Robertson, said:

On May 31st, 1918, death claimed the most outstanding figure in the Masonic life of Canada, and one of the best known Masons in the world—R. E. Sir John Ross Robertson, Provincial Grand Prior Ontario Centre in 1882. Frater Robertson was P.G.M. of the Grand Lodge of Canada; Past Grand First Principal of the Grand Chapter of Canada; Representative to the Grand Lodge of England of the Grand Lodge of Canada, and Grand Historian. All his life he was a close student of Masonic history and tradition. His History of Masonry in Canada and the History of Knights Templar in Canada are veritable storehouses richly filled with knowledge concerning the fraternity. He was an intellectual giant, strong in his opinions, whether of men or affairs, and frankly outspoken. He found in Masonry an inspiration for his princely philanthropy as exemplified in his personal gifts to the Hospital for Sick Children in Toronto. Frater Robertson manifested beautifully and practically the teachings of "Him who went about doing good," and "his noble deeds will last longer than a granite monument or any eulogy in marble."

Roll of Honor.

The roll of honor is 683; the membership is 8,560, an increase of 173 for the year.

The financial affairs of the order are in excellent shape, with over $40,000 in the treasury.

The visiting ladies accompanying the delegates, are very much pleased at the splendid program of entertainment arranged for their benefit, which includes automobile outings and a musical and card party at the Belleville Club.

Rt. Em. Sir Knight J. A. Cowan, of Toronto, editor of the Freemason, official organ of the Masonic fraternity, is one of the busiest officers in attendance. Special Despatch to The Intelligencer, Canadian Press Limited

LONDON, Sept. 11—A troopship with 2,800 American soldiers on board has been torpedoed. All hands were saved and the troopship was beached. In order to save time instead of launching boats the men clambered down ropes to the decks of the destroyers which swarmed around the stricken vessel and came close alongside. This operation was greatly facilitated by the fact that the sea was not rough. The troopship was a member of a large convoy approaching the English coast and was torpedoed two hundred miles from shore at three o'clock on Friday afternoon.

RECORD GRAIN HANDLED BY GRAND TRUNK

MONTREAL, Sept. 9—A new record for grain handling has just been established by the Grand Trunk on its line in Eastern Canada. During the month of August that railway transported the great total of 8,371,521 bushels of grain, carrying the bulk of this vast tonnage from Great Lakes to Montreal for export. The cars required to move this traffic numbered 4,653 showing the remarkable loading average of 1,799 bushels per car. The amount of grain transported by the road in August surpassed the best previous record by half a million bushels.

President, Grand Trunk and Grand Trunk Pacific Railways.

Cross Canal in Face Of Worst Fire Of the War

With the French Army in France, Sept. 11.—The troops of Gen. Mangin between the Aisne and the Oise River are now virtually behind their old wire entanglements in their old trenches of 1917. All along the edge of the forest of Coucy and through the western horn of the St. Gobain Forest the Germans are only two hundred yards away, and in some places they are in positions in the old Hindenburg line that are planly visible from the heights west of Chateau Coucy.

The Oise-Aisne Canal and the River Ailette that runs between the heights and the Chateau, and which forms a sort of advanced post of their main line six miles further back at Fresnes, were not abandoned voluntarily, but wrested from the enemy after a struggle of five days, during which five different German divisions tried to hold off a single French division.

At a Range of Twenty Yards.

"The divisions that tried to proven the crossing of the canal and river," the Associated Press correspondent was informed by a French officer, who has participated in most of the campaigns of the war, "accomplished the greatest concentration of machine-gun fire that has been witnessed in this war."

The French troops were obliged to face that fire at a range of twenty yards in order to cross the Oise-Aisne Canal and the River Ailette. Pioneer throwing bridges over the canal seventeen yards wide suffered not only from the quick-firers, but were in good range of German grenades. It required two days to advance to the Ailette from the village Pont St. Mard and four days to gain five hundred yards of ground. The machine guns were massed thickly all along the canal in front of Quincy and in the woods, thickets and marshes.

Finally Bridge the Canal.

The French engineers finally succeeded in bridging the canal, and over the first bridge an enraged sergeant charged the Germans around a machine gun position, and single-handed made twelve of them prisoners. Such was the work that went on both along the river and the canal during the five days, each day exhausting Germany's best divisions. Twenty-two quick-firers were found in a small thicket called Etcarissage Woods. They were almost as thick in Vache and the more extensive timbered land fronting Coucy-le-Chateau and Coucy-la-Ville. Where the French could get at them they charged and killed the German gunners on their pieces, but many emplacements were too well hidden or protected for a direct attack and it was necessary to shell them.

At Last Enemy Flee.

During the several hours French projectiles sent splinters flying all through the timber, and when the infantry charged they had to go on to Coucy-la-Ville to catch the enemy, who had fled leaving his guns and an enormous amount of materials and supplies behind.

Coucy-le-Chateau and the height on which it stands was thus turned from the north and flanked at the same time from the south, while thousands of shells filled the ruins of the surrounding positions. Chateau Nogent, to the southeast, was taken about the same time, and with it the Germans lost positions on which they had spent a tremendous effort. They retired behind their three lines of barbed wire on the line to Fresnes. The booty they left behind in two immense engineering dumps included locomobiles, railroad material of all sorts, and a great number of quick-firers and emplacement guns and one fifteen-inch gun, with which they had bombarded French towns far behind the lines east of the Ailette.

MADE HIS LAST RUN

TORONTO, Sept. 10.—While resting at noon hour, John Dake, 190 Brock avenue, C.P.R., engineer, was overcome and died of heart failure. He was found lying beside the track by William Tearney, 130 Sumach street, yardmaster. Dr. Burns of Dunn ave., was called and pronounced Dake dead. The body was removed to the Morgue in the police wagon. Dake was a driver of a C.P.R. yard engine, and had left his engine in Parkdale yards, and after eating his lunch was sitting beside the track when he expired.

CONFLICTING REPORTS.

Kingston, Sept. 10.—While Lieut. Ian McKinnon of Renfrew is officially reported as killed in action on August 27, his brother, Lieut. Kenneth McKinnon, on August 30, cabled that Ian was safe. Relatives are awaiting further information.

LAUGHED AT IN OTTAWA.

Ottawa, Sept. 10.—The story emanating from Quebec to the effect that the late Hon. T. Chase Casgrain was assassinated, and did not die, as was reported at the time, from pneumonia, is laughed at in Ministerial circles here.

Destroyed Half Flanders U-Boats

LONDON, Sept. 10—A number of interesting developments in and aspects of the present naval situation have authoritative source.

For one thing, when German submarines first appear off the American coast naval experts in London formed the opinion that the move was merely a feint to draw off American anti-submarine craft from European waters. They argued that it was impossible for Germany to maintain such long-distance operations. However, it is pointed out, both cruisers, submarines and mine-layers are working far afield and worrying American shipping along the Atlantic coast.

The general tendency of the U-boats is now to operate further from the shore—at some points from 200 to 250 miles out.

There are no submarines in the Dardanelles, it is revealed, while the movable barrier established by the allies in the Straits of Otranto, at the entrance to the Adriatic, is responsible for the diminution of sinking in the Mediterranean. The losses to German submarines in the Adriatic since 1917 have been 25 per cent. of the total number operating.

BUSY IN NORTH SEA

The British are active in the Heligoland Bight and are carrying out operations with various kinds of light forces in the North Sea, the average number of such operations being no less than five daily. The number of German surface craft destroyed in the Bight during the year runs into three figures.

The German short-distance submarine fleet making its bases in Belgian ports has been virtually wiped out. The enemy reinforced the Flanders flotilla with long-distance submarines, commanded by captains with daring proclivities, some of whom have dashed through the allied naval barrage, but between the end of March and July the allies definitely destroyed more than 50 per cent. of the flotilla.

Since the Jutland battle, the German high seas fleet has not been in the North Sea except for some "tip-and-run" dashes of a few ships.

Gas in the Stomach Is Dangerous

Recommends Daily Use of Magnesia To Overcome Trouble Caused by Fermenting Food and Acid Indigestion.

Gas and wind in the stomach accompanied by that full bloated feeling after eating are almost certain evidence of the presence of excessive hydrochloric acid in the stomach, creating so called "acid indigestion."

Acid stomachs are dangerous because too much acid irritates the delicate lining of the stomach often leading to gastritis accompanied by serious stomach ulcers. Food ferments and sours creating the distressing gas which distends the stomach and hampers the normal functions of the vital internal organs, often affecting the heart.

It is the worst of folly to neglect such a serious condition or to treat with ordinary digestive aids which have no neutralizing effect on the stomach acids. Instead get from any druggist a few ounces of Bisurated Magnesia and take a teaspoonful in a quarter glass of water right after eating. This will drive the gas, wind and bloat right out of the body, sweeten the stomach, neutralize the excess acid and prevent its formation and there is no sourness or pain. Bisurated Magnesia (in powder or tablet form—never liquid or milk) is harmless to the stomach, inexpensive to take and the best form of magnesia for stomach purposes. It is used by thousands of people who enjoy their meals with no more fear of indigestion.

Government Paper To be Published

OTTAWA Sept 11—A weekly paper is to be published by the Government. Following the lines of the United States publication, the "Canadian official Record" will aim to keep its readers fully informed of the actions and decisions of the Government and the activities and programme of Government departments, this more particularly in connection with war efforts. The paper will be issued under the direction of M. E. Nicholls, Director of Public Information.

To enable Mr. Nicholls to devote his attention more particularly to this work, and to other duties in his department, Dr. George H. Locke, chief librarian Toronto Public Library, has been appointed Associate Director of Public Information. Dr. Locke will have in his charge the administration of the War Lecture Bureau and such activities of the department as are connected with public speaking. His services have been lent to the Government by the Toronto Library Board.

Establishment of a weekly paper is but a phase of a wide scheme of publicity of Canadian war effort which is now under consideration. Co-operative relations are being established with the British and American Departments of Public Information. It is purposed to use the motion picture film to a greater extent than has been the case hitherto. Ways and means are understood to be under consideration of encouraging production of Canadian films. Furthermore, the co-operation of the various provincial Ministers of Education is to be sought in an endeavor to ensure that the lessons of the war are not overlooked in Canadian schools.

Canada's Case To Washington

Three Government Officials Are Closeted With Secretary Lansing

WASHINGTON, Sept. 9—In support of an appeal from the International Boundary Commission's decision granting permission to an American aluminum company to construct a submerged weir in the St. Lawrence River at Long Sault, Sir Joseph Polk, Secretary for External Affairs has brought to the State Department two members of the Canadian Cabinet, Hon. A. L. Sifton, the Canadian Minister of Customs, and Hon. Arthur Meighen, Minister of the Interior

The Canadian officials were closeted with Secretary Lansing for half an hour. They explained that their Government objected to the project because it infringed Canadian treaty rights in the St. Lawrence River. The American Company contends that the treaty obligations should be waived for the present, since the Entente allies and America are in great need of aluminum which it proposes to produce.

Secretary Lansing took the matter under consideration. It is believed a compromise can be reached that will be satisfactory to both sides.

Mannheim Is Again Bombed

LONDON, Sept. 10—An official communication on bombing and raiding operations issued by the Air Ministry says:

"On the night of September 6-7 against two hostile airdromes. Fires were caused, but observation of the results as were operation generally. All of our machines returned.

"On the morning of Sept 7 our squadrons attacked the railways at Ehrang (four miles northeast of Treves, Prussia and the chemical works at Mannhein. Good bursts were observed on and beside the railway lines at Ehrang.

"Fierce opposition was met with in the raid at Mannheim, but despite this the objective was reached and successfully bombed. Eight direct hits and many good bursts were observed on the chemical works. Our suadrons fought largely superior numbers of enemy airplanes, both before and after reaching the objective. One squadron had a hard continuous fight for a distance of seventy miles before reaching its objectives, and the fight continued for another seventy miles on the way back. Over two tons of bombs were dropped on Mannheim.

"As a result of the fighting one enemy airplane was destroyed and two more were driven down out of control. Four of our machines are missing."

Whitby Youug Woman Injured

WHITBY, Sept. 10.—As the result of an automobile smash near Pickering, Miss Lila Ruttan, a young lady of this town was very seriously injured. She was taken to a hospital in Toronto. The accident was caused by the car, which was being driven by a novice at a very high rate of speed, overturning into a ditch when an attempt was made to pass an approaching car. All the occupants of the car were thrown clear except Miss Ruttan, who was caught underneath the back of one of the seats and pinned to the ground. After being released she was brought to Whitby where Dr. C. F. McGillivray attended her. Her spine was badly injured.

Pro-German Critic Changes Tune

ZURICH, Sept. 10.—The pro-German critic of the Zurich Post writes: "Since the entry of America into the world war, a decisive victory for Germany has been out of the question. The German offensive for 1918 completely miscarried. No counter-attacks are likely to deprive the French commanders of their initiative."

Less than a week ago the same critic wrote in a very different tone. He declared the French and British victories brought peace no nearer. Now he says the allied first attacks exerted a most depressing influence in Germany, not only among the people, but in the army also.

He suggests some hidden political or moral reasons explaining von Hindenburg's failure to stay this victorious progress of Marshal Foch.

Disastrous Wreck Near Kerwood

STRATHROY, Sept. 10.—A wreck on the Grand Trunk Railway occurred Saturday night about 9.25 o'clock, one and a half miles west of the village of Kerwood, when twenty-four cars of a train of forty-two cars jumped the track, completely demoralizing traffic. The roadbed and rails on both of the east and westbound tracks were torn up for more than sixty rods, the rails being twisted like ribbons, and one rail thrown over the fence into the adjoining field. The cars, which were fillled with corn, oats, coal and tobacco, were thrown in all directions, and their contents strewn over the ground. The train, which was eastbound, drawn by engine No. 2,889, was in charge of Conductor Charles Ellis.

The cause of the accident is not known. The auxiliaries from London, Hamilton, and Sarnia were soon on the scene, and after working all night, were still at it today.

Button Matching A Game of Chance

STRATFORD, Sept. 10—Police Magistrate Makins in Police Court, imposed a nominal fine of $5 and costs on Thornton & Douglas, Ltd., The Stratford Herald Printing Company, and Mr. Kingsley O'Brien of the The Stratford Beacon, on charges laid by Chief of Police Lannin, who alleged that defendants "did, contrary to law, publish, or cause to be published, a proposal, scheme or plan for disposal of goods by cards, tickets or other mode of chance, contrary to form of statutes on August 29 and September 3."

The case arose out of an announcement by Thornton & Douglas in advertisements apearing in The Herald and The Beacon relating to distribution of buttons by Thornto & Douglas These buttons, which bore numbers, it appears were given away free by Thornton and Douglas. No conditions were attached. The advertisement on August 29 read in part: "In each hundred there are two buttons numbered the same. When two boys meet whose numbers are the same, if they come to the store we will allow them $5 each on their new fall suits. Get busy, boys, and match up, wear your button on your coat and watch the other fellow's number. One boy, one button. Any boy with two or more buttons forfeits his chance."

The advertisement of September 3 announced the names of the winners, and added that there were still buttons to be matched up.

In this connection, it will be of interest to publishers to know that the same button scheme has been worked for years in Hamilton and London. In addition, the scheme has been worked this year in Toronto, Brantford, Ingersoll, Kitchener, Guelph, Chatham, Woodstock, St. Catherines, St. Thomas, Windsor and Sarnia.

Vladivostok, Sept. 10.—From Olvyanna to Penza, a distance of 2,000 miles, Szecho-Slovak forces hold the railway, it was learned here yesterday. This indicates that the Czecho-Slovaks have penetrated more important areas of Russia, loosening the Bolsheviki grip.

Soldiers Dependents To Sent Back

TORONTO, Sept. 10.—Word has been received by the Dominion Government that all wives, children and other dependents of Canadian soldiers who are now living in Britiain will be sent to Canada as soon as possible.

Such is the information that came to light at the meeting of the Toronto and York Patriotic Fund yesterday afternoon.

The Patriotic Fund, which has been asked to assist in caring for these returned Canadian women and children, yesterday placed the matter in the hands of their Allowance Committee, and decided to co-operate in every way with the Dominion Government and the Soldiers Aid Commission of Ontario.

CLASS HATRED IN RUSSIA

STOCKHOLM, Sept. 10—Bolsheviki Russia is suffering the consequences of class hatred in its most violent expression. Human life has lost all value, and foreigners and Russians alike are at the mercy of officials who kill without trial.

Such were the conditions, at any rate, when the Associated Press correspondent at Moscow left Russia recently and travelled hence with the party of American refugees that has arrived here.

FOUR PERSONS BURNED

[illegible]

MIKADO, Sept. 9—Four lives were lost and $35,000 damage done in a fire Sunday morning which destroyed the store and dwelling of S. S. Meloff. Mr. Meloff, his two sons and a daughter had gone to Canora for the Jewish New Year observance, leaving Mrs. Meloff with five children at home. Mrs. Meloff discovered fire and gave the alarm, and it was thought that all had escaped, when the fifteen-months-old child Dora, was found missing. Heroic efforts were made by Fred Popoff, a farmer, Miss Etuskova, a clerk, and Miss Boychuk, a servant, to rescue the child. They gained the top floor, but apparently were overcome by smoke and flames, and perished along with the baby. The charred remains of all of them were found.

The origin of the fire is unknown.

LENINE'S ASSAILANT DIES

Alkali In Shampoos Bad For Washing Hair

If you want to keep your hair looking its best, be careful what you wash it with. Don't use prepared shampoos or anything else, that contains too much alkali. This dries the scalp, makes the hair brittle, and ruins it.

The best thing for steady use is just ordinary mulsified cocoanut oil (which is pure and greaseless), and is better than anything else you can use.

One or two teaspoonfuls will cleanse the hair and scalp thoroughly. Simply moisten the hair with water and rub it in. It makes an abundance of rich, creamy lather, which rinses out easily, removing every particle of dust, dirt dandruff and excessive oil. The hair dries quickly and evenly, and it leaves the scalp soft, and the hair fine and silky, bright, lustrous, fluffy and easy to manage.

You can get mulsified cocoanut oil at any pharmacy it's very cheap, and a few ounces will supply every member of the family for months.

INFANTILE PARALYSIS IN TORONTO SUBURBS

TORONTO, Sept. 10.—A case of infantile paralysis was discovered yesterday at Todmorden, and prompt action was taken by the authorities to prevent a possible spread of the disease.

The patient is Edith Buchin, the 6-year-old child of Private Buchin, now overseas. Dr. Dennis Jordan made the diagnosis yesterday, and a strict quarantine was ordered. The family reside at 181 Gamble avenue. There are six small children.

The Soldiers' Aid Commission will be appealed to to see every assistance is given the family.

NO MORE DINNERS ON DINING CARS

WASHINGTON, D.C., Sept. 10—A la Carte lunches and dinners on dining cars on the railroads of the United States will be abandoned after Oct. 1, Drector-General McAdoo announced to-day, and table d'hote meals of not more than four courses limited to $1, except on a few through trains, where $1.25 will be charged. Breakfast will be served a la carte with a restricted menu. The purpose, the announcement said, is to economize and put meals within the reach of the most moderate purse, increase the capacity of dining cars, save labor and conserve food.

GOLD FOR MANUFACTURING IS NOW CUT OFF.

Washington, Sept. 10.—Gold for manufacturing purposes was cut off yesterday from commercial America. In a telegraphic order Ray Baker, director of the mint, instructed all mint and assay offices to discontinue at once the isuance of gold bars for any, except essential war uses.

HITCH OLD DOBBIN TO THE SHAY.

The request of the Dominion Fuel Controller that motor riding for pleasure on Sunday be discontinued, reinforced as it is by a threat that unless the request is acceded to generally it may be necessary to issue a prohibitive order, indicates that there must be a good reason for the conserving of gasolene. Just now when the prospects for good motoring weather are so good the ban on Sunday pleasure riding will come hard on these motor car owners who work hard all week and look forward to Sunday for the healthful relaxation afforded by a jaunt along country roads. Many motor car owners, however, with more leisure, can arrange their trips for week days and will not feel any particular hardship in laying up their cars on Sunday.

Any national movement of importance in war time must necessarily hit some harder than others, but if it is really necessary to save gasolene in this way ,and there is no reason to doubt the sincerity of government officials who have all the facts and figures bearing on the situation, this sacrifice can be cheerfully accepted as only one of the minor discomforts entailed by this great struggle for the freedom of the world.

"CAN'T FOOL ALL THE PEOPLE ALL THE TIME."

The policy of the military-mad masters of the German people in feeding out lies to the people through a shackled press and seeking to create a strong national morale through boasts of great deeds on the battlefield sure to bring an early peace and restore plenty to a Germany short of food and everything else needful was conceived in folly and is bearing the bitter fruit of disillusionment and pain. The great offensive on the west front which the German High Command promised would open all roads between Berlin and Paris, bring France to her knees and drive the hated English into the English Channel, has developed into a disastrous retreat in which all the ground won early this year by the Germans at such a tremendous sacrifice of man-power has been wrested from them together with an immense number of prisoners, many cannons and great stores of war material. The German war machine is many times worse off now than before the spring offensive started and every day the armies of the Kaiser are being further weakened and demoralized. It is not to be wondered at that murmurs of discontent and despair are becoming so loud and insistent that they can no longer be concealed from the outside world. Hindenburg and a bunch of other leading lights of the German military machine are now busy, through the German newspapers, calling upon the people to keep cool and not to lose their nerve, that everything will come out all right. The German people have been fooled so often that just now with their border cities being bombed daily by allied aviators, hospital trains bearing wounded soldiers from the front becoming more numerous, and food scarcity becoming more acute, they will be hard to lull into fancied security—even with Hindenburg on the megaphone.

Abe Lincoln was absolutely right when he said:

> "You can fool all the people some of the time,
> "You can fool some of the people all of the time,
> "But you can't fool all the people all of the time."

CRISP COMMENT

Teaching of the German language in Canadian High Schools is still being discussed by some newspapers. The German language should be buried in the same grave with German Kultur as far as Canada is concerned.

"Canada needs an official weekly published at Ottawa about as much as Canada needs a daily edition of the Christmas Globe published at the same point, says "Ups and Downs" in the Toronto Telegram.

When the visiting Knights Templar were treated to a vision of the food production possibilities and achievements of the residents of Prince Edward County yesterday they realized one more reason why Germany never had a chance to win the war.

That Toronto never fails in its patriotic duty is the proud boast of the press of that city, and with very good reason, for the many patriotic campaigns launched there receive generous treatment. Toronto's contribution of $541,820 to the Sailors' Fund is just another indication of the patriotism of the citizens generally and the efficiency of the patriotic workers.

Can you recall, asks the Regina Leader, anyone sitting peacefully in church on Sunday being run over by an automobile?

Democracy in war, points out the Edmonton Bulletin, does not move as quickly as autocracy, but it has more staying power.

One of the new words born of the war is "defeatist," and the Peterborough Review aptly explains that it means a man in any line of endeavor who quits before he starts.

A baseball umpire is suing a newspaper which referred to him as a "nut," claiming damages for "mental anguish" suffered as a result of being so designated. It has always been supposed that baseball umpires were proof against mere verbal assaults and impervious to everything but swiftly flying pop bottles, decayed eggs and other very personal manifestations of regard from the bleachers.

In British Columbia alone forty-one newspapers have gone to the journalistic graveyard since the outbreak of the war. Of all industries, that of newspaper publication has been most severely hit by the war. Higher subscription and advertising rates must come if the remainder are to be saved, says the Kingston Whig.

OTHER VIEWS

A Good Idea.

Ottawa Evening Journal.

Rear Admiral Wood, commander of the American naval district of which Boston is the centre, has taken steps to correct, as far as he is concerned, an annoyance that it would be well for everybody to be rid of—that of illegible signatures on official and business documents and letters. He has notified all the officers under his command that hereafter every document sent to him must have attached to it, in addition to the signature of the author, his name in typewriting.

The idea is a very excellent one and should be widely copied. What a saving in time and temper would result from its universal adoption—the time and temper expended in effort to decipher signatures. Many people make no attempt at legibility in signing their names; some even take a sort of pride in producing a scribble. The trouble they thereby cause those who have to read their documents is incalculable.

"Firmly in Hand"

Sydney Record.

The Kaiser, after reviewing the Brandenburg chasseurs the other day, urged them to take the enemy "firmly in hand" everywhere they found him. A glance at the shifted lines on the battle map shows what kind of a job the Brandenburgers have been making of this "firmly in hand" business.

A Laugh or Two

His Status.

"What are DeBroke's relations with his wife's people?"

"Entirely imaginary. They don't recognize him as a relation at all."

Nothing Doing.

"I love the country," said the young city man on vacation, "because everything smacks of freshness."

"Perhaps it does in some parts," replied the rural maiden, "but freshness gets no smacks here."

Would Return It.

It was a very hot day, and the kindhearted iceman had given a little girl a piece of ice. A newsboy asked her for it, but she refused to give it up. "Aw, shucks," said the boy, "I'll give it back to you; I only want the juice out of it."

No Time for Abstruse Calculation.

"How soon do you think the war will end?" asked the girl who thinks a soldier knows everything.

"That's something for the Hohenzollerns to figure out," replied the man who had been across; "we're too busy fighting."

The Problem of Coal.

As every one knows, coal-mining is very largely a matter of coal transportation. The most difficult task involved in an increase must fall upon the railroads. The wonderful work these railroads are doing is brought into bold relief when we remember that in 1914 when the Great War started, the output of bituminous coal in the United States was four hundred and twenty-three million tons, and that in 1918 it promised to be nearly two hundred million tons greater.

Apparently, this country today can furnish the steel required if only it can get the necessary coal. The work of the Fuel Administration during many months has been directed toward increasing coal production. These efforts have borne much fruit, miners are approaching one hundred per cent. service, while the railroads are outdoing themselves expediting the movement of coal-cars from the mine to the consumer and back again.

But war's demands mount so rapidly that even with full speed ahead production can not make the pace. A fuel deficit can be averted only by the most intensive conservation. Conservation, economy, savings, sacrifice must fill the gap between the possible increase of production and the greater increase of demand. If every user of coal will join the army of fuel conservationists, realiiang that the need for steel to carry on this war is practically unlimited and that every ton saved means an additional five hundred pounds of steel, there is prospect—the figures show it—that the work of the miners will not be in vain. Our increased production, plus conservation, the Fuel Administration believes, can furnish the coal, and hence the steel needed for the war, and still leave none of our people cold.

KEEP THE PRAYER FIRES BURNING.

(Sung to the music of "Keep the Home Fires Burning")

Through the smoke and din of battle
Comes a cry from o'er the wave
Christians keep the prayer fires burning,
None but God can help and save.
Keep our country's cause before Him,
Call upon Him night and day;
Be the rearguard of our army
And our strength in weakness—pray!

Forward, freemen! On to victory!
Shall our watchword ever be.
We will keep the prayer fires burning
For our lads across the sea.
For the lads we love so dearly
From the city and the dale,
We will humbly plead before Him
Anr our prayers will prevail.

Son of God, be Thou their helper
When their heart and courage fail.
When temptations fierce assail them
Be their Comrade through the vale.
Make our country great and worthy
Of their Christ-like sacrifice,
Cleansed from sin and self, for service,
May a race redeemed arise.

Refrain:
Keep the prayer fires burning,
While your hearts are yearning;
Though the boys are far away
They dream of home.
God will guard and guide them,
Near whate'er betide them;
Keep the prayer fires burning bright
Till the boys come home.

H. ISABEL GRAHAM.

THE MERCHANT SAILOR.

By Robert Partridge.

This is the song of the Merchant Man
Who sweeps o'er the mighty sea,
While the breakers roar from each rugged shore,
And the Storm King shrieks with glee,
Far on the crest of the ocean's breast
O'er the dismal depths below,
He scans the tides whils his vessel glides
Midst the stormy winds that blow.

This is the song of the sudden crash,
And a shudder from stem to stern;
While the eddies curl from the foaming swirl,
And those who await will learn
That another glides o'er the murky tides,
And his cry is victory.
And he faces death on the ocean's breath,
To keep the ocean free.

This is the song of the Merchant Man
Who lies in his ocean bed;
While breakers roar on each rugged shore,
A hymn for the mighty dead.
No stone will trace his last resting place,
But the restless tossing sea,
Will keep his tomb 'till the crack o'doom
From unhallowed footsteps free.

This is the song of the sailor's wife,
White-faced, weary and lone;
As she clasps her child to her bosom wild,
And lists to the ocean's moan,
She waits in vain, for never again,
The man of her heart she will see;
For his work is done, and his day is run,
And he rests—'neath the mighty sea.

And this is the song for you and me,
WHAT ARE WE GOING TO DO?
For those bereft, those loved ones left
In want, maybe starving too.
Just an effort small on our part—that's all,
For remember, we're here—AND LIVE;
So think of the brave, 'neath the angry wave,
And answer the call—AND GIVE.

"WHEN I HAVE TIME"

"When I have time, so many things I'll do.
To take life happier and more fair
For those whose lives are crowned now with care;
I'll help to lift them from their low despair—
When I have time!"

"When I have time, the friend I love so well
Shall know no more these weary toiling days;
I'll lead her feet in pleasant paths always,
And cheer her heart with words of sweetest praise—
When I have time!"

When you have time, the friend you hold so dear
May be beyond the reach of all your sweet intent;
May never know that you so kindly meant
To fill her heart with sweet content—
When you had time!

Now is the time! Ah, friend, no longer wait
To scatter loving smiles and words of cheer
To those around, whose lives are now so dear;
They may not heed you in the coming year—
Now is the time!

70,000 Deserters From German Army

LONDON, Sept. 10—"I now can amplify my earlier information concerning the morale of the German army," says, the Rotterdam correspondent of The Daily Telegraph. "In the first place, with regard to military desertions, not only was 20,000 the number of absentees I gave in Berlin alone an underestimate, but to that must be added the men in other large cities.

"They are so scattered as to make calculations difficult, but it may be accepted that they number at least 70,000. Because so many fail to return leave from the front has been practically stopped, but the stream is constantly swelling, as, in the last few days, the ranks of absentees have been increased by a considerable trickle over the frontier of soldiers deserting from the western theatre of war.

"Behind the lines there is a condition of things which defies the power of the authorities. Daily men disappear from units engaged on lines of communication and from duties a long way to the rear. In French and Belgian towns, there is a regular traffic with soldiers for civilian clothes in which to make their escape over the frontier and to render their detection difficult when they reach Germany.

Physicians Demand Closing Liquor Store

WINDSOR, Sept. 10.—Windsor's "oasis," operated under the supervision of the Ontario Licensing Board, is in danger of being compelled to close its doors through action taken here Monday by members of the Essex Medical Society, composed of physicians of the county, who have often been called out of bed by "patients" demanding that their family physicians prescribe the maximum of one quart of liquor.

The Medical Society in a drastic resolution calls on the Provincial License Board to close the store immediately and allow druggists to dispense liquor in doses of not more than six ounces on "repeat" prescriptions, which system was in vogue before a liquor store was authorized for the border city.

"We have no personal quarrel with the vendor," said one of the medical men "but we insist that the store close its doors, and in this demand we are backed by the churches of the city. In our opinion the store was 'dumped' on Windsor by the Government to satisfy both the prohibition party and those addicted to the liquor habit, and the onus of keeping within the law has been placed on the shoulders of the doctors."

French troops are close up on the Hindenburg line and on the banks of the Meuse and the Sambre Canal. The enemy's artillery and machine gun resistance is becoming heavier.

IN AND ABOUT THE CITY

LEFT FOR OTTAWA

"The Daughter of the Sun" company left early this morning via C.N.R. for Ottawa, where a three day engagement will be opened with a matinee this afternoon.

A SEVERE FROST.

As was predicted by the Weather Man, this section was visited last night by a severe frost, which did considerable damage to tomatoes and root crops still in the ground. Flower beds also suffered.

DEATH OF INFANT

An infant daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Lake, Victoria Avenue, died last evening. The little one had been ill for some time.

BODY ARRIVED HERE

The body of Mr. Frank W. Dawe, formerly of this city, who died at Toronto, arrived here last evening and this afternoon was interred in Belleville cemetery.

BICYCLE RECOVERED

Yesterday afternoon a bicycle was found under the C.N.R. freight shed in this city and handed over to the police. Later the wheel was claimed by T. E. Wrightmyer, residing on Mill street, having been stolen from in front of the Y.M.C.A. building last Saturday. Who stole the wheel is not known.

TWO CARS OF HOGS SHIPPED.

Two cars of live hogs were shipped today from here by D. Scott & Son. The porkers were sent to Montreal and the price paid was $18.75 per hundred weight.

FOUND BAG OF OATS.

Mr. Geo. Boyle, of this city, while driving on Bridge street yesterday afternoon, found a bag of oats on the street. He reported his find to the police.

STORY INTERRUPTED

Owing to an accident to the manuscript of the serial story, "The Tempting of Paul Chester," publication of installments of this interesting narrative will be interrupted for a few days pending the receipt of duplicate copy.

KILLED IN ACTION

Mr. Seymour Deacon, who resides on Murney street, in this city, yesterday received a message fro mthe Director of Records, that his nephew, Sergt. Allan Dennng, was killed in action on August 26th. The young officer for some years lived in Belleville, where he attended school. He enlisted and went overseas with the 249th Battalion, which was organized in Western Canada. A wife and child survive, also his father.

DRUG STORE BROKEN INTO

At an early hour this morning the drug store of Mr. J. S. McKeown, of this city, was burglarized. An entrance to the store was effected by breaking the plate glass of the front door and opening the spring lock. A visit was paid to drawers in rear of the counter an number of which were pulled out. The cash register was also inspected and some coppers were taken; other having been removed. The burglar or burglars took away with them some anaesthetics, but not in large quantities. A large stone used to break the glass was found upon the floor of the store and at present is in possession of the police. This is the fourth drug store that has been broken into in this city within a month and the general impression is that a drug fiend is the guilty party as morphine and cocain is what is being searched for. The police are making every effort to locate the guilty party or parties.

Y. M. C. A. Notes.

Mr. P. F. Brockel, General Secretary of the Y.M.C.A. has taken up his duties again at the local building after spending the summer as an S. O.S. Supervisor among the boys who were on the farms. At the regular September meeting of the Y.M.C.A. ## Sporting Notes

GRAND TRUNK 7 HIGH SCHOOL 0

At Pine Street School Grounds last evening the G.T.R. team took the measure of the B.H.S. Boys in a friendly game of ball by the score of 7 to 0. Althought the score appears one-sided, about a hundred fans who were present, witnessed some good baseball.

The High School had a well balanced aggregation, including in their line up several well-known players, who played nice ball. Weir, their pitcher, was hit hard, most of the G.T. runs crossing the plate the result of clean hits. Morden, Brown, Follwell, Schreider and Shane did great work with the willow and if they hit the same in the next game it would be well for the High School to include in their equipment a number of bicycles for use by the outer gardeners.

The fielding on both sides was real class, the High School having only about two errors, while the G. T. was satisfied with one spill made by the short stop. In the fielding the featuer was a good stab of a hot liner by Andrews, cutting off a run and resulting a double play unassisted by this player.

Play was started about 6.25 p.m. and seven innings were played in exceptionally quick time, the game being over about 7.25 p.m.

Mr. Joe Goyer, Manager of the Vimy City League team, was umpire and gave satisfaction to both teams.

Trained Nurse Endorses Tanlac

Graduate of Dominion School Tells of Wonderful Results She Obtained

"I have found out the value of Tanlac by trying it myself and I would advise anyone suffering from stomach trouble and a run-down condition to take it," said Mrs. Minnie Edmonson, residing at 79 Mackay avenue, Toronto recently. Mrs. Edmonson, who is a graduate of the Dominion School of Nursing, has been a trained nurse for the past twelve years and, her statement, coming as it does, from one of so much experience in relieving suffering, will be of wide interest.

"For sometime," she continued, "My appetite had been poor and I suffered from nervous indigestion. I suffered constantly from a heaviness and pain in the pit of my stomach, together with a gaseous condition, that kept me feeling miserable and badly nearly all the time. What little I did eat seemed to give me no nourishment, so I felt tired and didn't seem to have much life and strengh. My nerves were rather bad and I was unable to rest well at night. My case had not reached a serious stage, but I knew if neglected it might develop into chronic indigestion.

"So I decided to try Tanlac, as I had read so much about it, and now I can't recommend it too highly. I have now taken two bottles and all the pain and distress has left my stomach. My appetite is fine, my food seems to assimilate properly and I can eat what I want without suffering in the least from indigestion. The gas has stopped forming and all that disagreeable feeling after eating is gone, and my nerves have improved until I sleep splendidly. After Tanlac helped me so much I told my sister about it, who also took it for stomach trouble with fine results. I have never made a statement about medicine before, but I certainly do think Tanlac is fine and gladly tell others about it."

"Tanlac is sold in Belleville by Ostrom's Drug Store, in Trenton by J. H. Dickey, in Deseronto by W. J. Malley, in Stirling by J. S. Morton, in Frankford by W. J. Lettimer, in Madoc by J. Will Vince. in Marysville by T. . McAlpine, in Ormsby by Jas. Campbell and in Thomasburg by J. H. Blakely."

Music and Drama

"A DAUGHTER OF THE SUN"

A large audience witnessed the presentation of "A Daughter of the Sun" at Griffin's Theatre last evening and the entertainment was very pleasing. This Hawaiian drama was shown here last season and the production this year is bettor if anything than last season. The story is interpreted by a capable cast and the scenery and costumes are in perfect accord with the requirements of the play.

UNCLE TOM'S CABIN AT GRIFFIN'S

Marguerite Clark, who is loved by all, willl be at Griffin's to-day and night in Harriet Beecher Stowe's immortal classic "Uncle Tom's Cabin" as Little Eva in this age-old story her work is excellent, the part of Topsy also played by Miss Clark is clever and in a less experienced hands would be a failure, the brand of comedy handed out by Miss Clark as Topsy, was very funny, no doubt many that have never seen the play will take this opportunity of witnessing this wonderful story.

In addition to this fine picture there will be another good picture called "Her Condemned Sin" with Blanche Sweet and other well known stars playing prominent parts. There will also be a News Film and the usual good chapter of the "Eagle's Eye."

THE WOMAN IN THE WEB

At the Palace "The Woman in the Web" is nearing the end and great interest is being shown in the finish of this very interesting serial photoplay, there is also funny Harry Watson in a "Musty Suffer" comedy that seems to make all laugh. The special picture is "The Lady in the Photograph,' with Shirley Mason in the leading part, it is a very interesting picture holding the interest of the audience throughout.

Letters From Overseas

FROM PTE. TED STAPLEY

The following extracts of public interest are taken from a letter written by Pte. Ted Stapley to his mother, Mrs. Richard Stapley, Station P.O., city:

I suppose you have been informed about me getting wounded; it was on the third day of the big push. We went over the top on the morning of the eighth and it sure was scrap, believe me. We took his front line and second line, and went right through taking his big guns of all kinds. The tanks went over with us and they were a great help. The Huns never put up much of a scrap when we got onto them, but they were dirty with their machine guns in wiping us out. We advanced about twelve miles the first day. We took the quarter-master stores canteens and everything. They went back in thousands throwing up their hands and yelling "Kamerad" for all they were worth. They were driven back so far that they had set up a kind of a stronghold in a woods along a track where we could see them Some of the battalion boys were going to charge them, and as I saw some of my platoon fellows going I jumped out of the shell hole and over I went. A tank came along to our assistance and I got hit just as I jumped into the German trench. I said to the officer, "I've got it, sir, right through my back." He tore open my equipment and put a dressing on; then he left me. I was alone and I thought for sure the Germans were coming through the trench; so I crawled down one of his dugouts and laid on some straw. After a while our platoon stretcher bearers came along looking for me. Four of my pals put me on a stretcher and carried me out. I am now in an Australian hospital and expect to be sent over to Blighty soon. The bullet went in between my ribs, but I am getting better fast.

FROM PTE. G. E. YORKE.

The following extracts of public interest, are taken from a letter written by Pte. G. E. Yorke, to his mother, Mrs. C. Yorke, 249 William street, city:

We started on the 8th day and went over the top, and did fine and dandy, and put another feather in the Canadian hat. Well, not being satisfied with that we went over the next day again and again and accomplished what was wanted of us, but I can tell you it was not all honey. Of course, we had to do it, and we did it and did it well, and thank God we did not get many killed but of course we had quite a few wounded, and I am thankful I got through without a scratch, and I hope to do so until it is all over. We are having fine weather for this drive; everyone is in the best of spirits, but of course we are feeling a little tired after this job, but we hope to get rest before we go over again.

Chicago Team Won Fifth Game

BOSTON, Mass., Sept. 11—Hitting the pitching of "Sam" Jones viciously and frequently safely, the Chicago Nationals got back into the World's Series running yesterday by beating the Boston Americans 3 to 0. The standing in games is now three to two in favor of the American Leaguers. The Chicago team got off in front yesterday and showed more aggressiveness thereafter than at any time during the five games played to date.

Vaughn made his third start of the series and finally succeeded in winning. The veteran southpaw has pitched cleverly in all of his games, and should have won ere this with ordinary support with the stick. Vaughn was beaten in his first game by 1 to 0 and his second by 2 to 1.

Chief of Hungarian Party Keen For a Wilson Peace

Count Michael Karolyi Slams Dreams of a Decisive Military Victory and Idea of a Middle Europe

BASEL, Sept. 12—President Wilson's program as a basis for the negotiations for peace are endorsed by Count Michael Karaolyi, president of the Hungarian Independent party. A despatch from Budapest quoting from an open letter written by Coun Karolyi to his eelctors to whom he recommends an early peace, says:

"A decisive military victory, despite its successes, is a dream for which itis useless to pursue. The prime condition of peace negotiations is the democratization of nations and the abandonment of imperialistic theories. A second condition is that we should not become slaves to the idea of a middle Europe either military economically or politically and that we should not strengthen our alliance with Germany which would form the first step towards the realization of this central Europe.

"We ought to accept as a basis for negotiations President Wilson's program."

Dashing Deeds Of Aviators

With the British Army in France, Sept. 12—Amazing feats by British airmen during the recent fighting may now be mentioned. After driving down in flames one of two enemy two-seaters, a British scout had engine failure, which compelled him to spin down. As the machine touched the ground a German fired his pistol at the pilot from fifteen yards puncturing the gasoline tank. At that moment the engine picked up sufficiently to carry the pilot to the rear of the German lines where he was forced to come down again. Being under heavy fire, he removed the gunlocks and sights and all his instruments before abandoning the machine, which could not be saved.

A pilot and observer, returning to their machine from a bombing raid, fell behind their foramtion because of engine trouble, and were attacked by Fokkers. The elevator controls were immediately shot away and the observer was badly wounded, but he continued to fight and shot down one Fokker in flames and saw another crash to the ground.

TEN WOUNDS IN FIGHT

By this time all the gasoline tanks had been shot through and the engine hit in several places. All the instruments on the dashboard were smashed by enemy bullets. Both rear guns were jammed and the observer was bleeding badly. The pilot succeeded in getting his machine into a dive and went through a cloud and reached the British lines. The gallant observer was found to have been wounded ten times during the fight.

Attacked by a squadron of enemy airplanes, a lone British scout spun downward, but on the way saw that only one of the enemy was following him. So he came suddenly out of the spin just above a grove of trees and caught the enemy machine crossing in front of him and shot it to the earth, where it burst into flames.

There are many stories, too, of how British airmen swooped back and forth over the German batteries playing their guns on the enemy until these guns were completely silenced. One report winds up by saying that a scout machine crossed a battery positions several times later, but were not fired upon, all the gunners apparently having been killed.

Such tactics as these aided materially in making the recent British victories possible. One British scout sailed over an enemy sausage, made a dive and finished off two German sentry planes, then fired on the suasage, which was being hauled down, and finally wound up the performance by dropping two bombs squarely on the winch used in raising and lowering the balloon.

CRAWL OUT ON WINGS

There were many instances where the observer crawled out on the wings and stopped bullet holes in the gas tanks with either his fingers, a handkerchief or a glove. One machine had its starboard top and bottom plane broken by anti-aircraft fire. The observer leaned over the side of the fuselade, holding a machine gun in his hands, and thus maintained the balance and enabled the airplane to land safely, although all the controls except the elevator were useless.

Another machine had its gas tank punctured by a bullet and the pilot was wounded in the leg. The fuselage burst into flame, but the observer kept the fire under control from a great altitude with a small extinguisher until the machine was brought to earth, where it blazed up, the observer rescuing the wounded pilot just in time to save his life.

There is an increasing number of cases in which British pilots have attacked enemy night-bombers caught in searchlight beams. In every case down. During one fight well inside the German lines the pilot was badly wounded, but the observer from the rear seat helped to bring the machine safely back, while with his left hand he fired occasional burst from his machine at the pursuring enemy planes.

Many time the wings of German planes have broken off in the air during a fight, indicating the faulty material which the Germans are now forced to use in the construction of their machines.

God Only Second German People First

AMSTERDAM, Sept. 12—Emperor William, on replying to a message from the German National Soldiers' Union, is quoted by the Cologne Gazette as saying:

"I am firmly convinced that the members of the German Soldiers' Union will exert all the powers of their personal influence in support of the home front and, like our glorious comrades in the field, will not in the vicissitudes of war let themselves be turned from their will to victory and steadfastness by the enemy's superior forces and repressive methods of combat.

"The military and moral strength and the unanimous determination of the German people must and will succeed, with God's help, in breaking the more and more openly manifested will to destruction of the enemy, who is charging upon us from all parts of the earth and in safe-guarding for all time the freedom of our dear fatherland."

Poison Lurks on Rubber Bands Placed on Fruit Preserve Jars

TORONTO, Sept. 11—Acting on the instructions from officials of the Ontario Government, an analyst has been asked to report on suspicious circumstances surrounding the illness of residents in Muskoka, believed to the result of poisoning from eating freshly caned fruit. It is understood that the analyst has found phenol on the rubber rings used on the jars in which the fruit was canned. German agents are believed to be responsible for tampering with the rubber rings, and it is thought to be an insidious attempt of enemy spys to poison thousands of residents of both Canada and the United States.

Phenol is a poison similar to and acts like carbolic acid. When used on the rings of jars it will permeate the fruit therein, and produce at the least a nauseating effect on those eating the contents. The rings used in Muskoka, it is understood, originally came from the United States. Quantities have also been located in Alberta and Saskatchewan. An investigations is now being undertaken by the authorities into the whole matter, both here and in the west.

COOK DETAINED IN MUSKOKA

The cook of one Toronto family is at present being detained in Muskoka as the result of the inquiry made and the analysis was undertaken at the request of the Crown Attorney for the district. The cook, it is said, canned several jars of red currant jelly. One jar of it was given to a farmer living in the vicinity .Shortly after eating it the farmer's wife was stricken seriously ill. The fruit was believed to have been the cause of an investigation was made, the cook being taken into custody until the full circumstances became known.

Chemists declare the only protection householders have against using rubbers affected by this poison is to boil them thoroughly before placing them on the jars. The extent of the plot will likely become known in the course of a few days, as a result of the investigation now being made.

LAUGHS AT IDEA OF GERMAN POISON PLOT

"Boil the Rubbers For Your Jars And You Are Safe," Says M.O.H. to Women

TORONTO, Sept. 12.—"I take that with a grain of salt," commented Dr. C. J. O. Hastings, M. O. H., when he read a morning paper tale to the effect that a German plot had been discovered—a plot to poison thousands of people by putting phenol on the rubbers of fruit preserve jars.

"Ther is about as much plot to that as there is to chase and slaughter all the flies in the City Hall. The thing is too absurd to deserve much comment."

'It would be almost impossible to get enough phenol on the rubber to do any serious harm. And any careful housewife boils or scalds the rubbers before she uses them. That is enough to make them safe."

Muskoka Story Lacks Detail

Dr. Hastings commented on the fact that the story about the family in Muskoka which had been affected lacked detail. Only one peroan was really sick and that did not prove that it was poisoned rubbers on preserve jars that did it

"Just tell the women to boil the rubbers and they'll be all right," he said.

Phenol is just another name for carbolic acid, according to chemists, and it would be very difficult, they say, to poison people by way of the small quantity that could adhere to the rubber.

Other officials at the City Hall commented on the fact that several newspaper stories had appeared of a nature calculated to discourage preserving of fruit and vegetables in a year when conservation is urged. They were wondering whether it is accident or design.

"Nothing to Stand On"

"I have had absolutely no advice in connection with the reported poisoning of preserves," was the statement of Inspector Rogers, the chief of the Provincial Detective Bureau.

"The story has nothing to stand on as it reads, 'was the statement made to The Star by H. M. Lancaster, the chief analyst of the Provincial Labratory.

'Phenol on rubber bands would not prove particularly harmful, and even if it had been applied the substance is evaporative and would not contain sufficient strength to be fatal.

"Why," smiled Mr. Lancaster, "there is a certain amount of phenol in the human form all the time, and I am absolutely certain that so far as my department is concerned no analysis has been made. I don't know how the Ontario Government would act on an analysis if the analysis were not made officially."

Dr. R. W. Bell, Medical Inspector for Ontario, thought that the article in the morning paper was very disturbing and not in the best interests of the general public. "What makes it worse is that there is absolutely no basis why it should have appeared," said Dr. Bell. "Scaring people unnecessarily is not good business at the present time, and particularly when there is so little to build up a case on as was published this morning"

Severely Injured In Runaway Accident

News From Trenton Town—Serious Outcome of Buggy Drive—Hand Injured

(From our own Correspondent)

TRENTON, Ont., September 12.—A distressing accident occurred on the evening of the 9th inst, whereby Mr. George Mayles, from near Brighton, was badly injured. It appears that Mr. Mayles, accompanied by a young lady, was driving from the English Settlement to Brighton, when his horse suddenly became frightened and unmanageable. The young lady jumped from the vehicle and fortunately escaped with only a bad fright and shaking up, but Mr. Mayles clung to the horse until it suddenly swerved and he was thrown out. Friends coming along shortly after the accident conveyed him to the nearest house, Mr. Snelgrave's, as he was unconscious. Medical aid was summoned quickly and no serious results are anticipated. The young lady was conveyed to Brighton, and the horse and rig later recovered, the latter considerably damaged.

INJURED HAND

On Monday, 9th inst., Mr. J. Irwin, of Trenton, had the misfortune to have his hand severely bruised, while working about a car which had gone off the track, and in trying to replace same one of the dummys slipped, and the heavy iron striking his hand gave it a bad crushing.

Mining Market Becomes Active

La Rose Shares Climbing—Rush for Gifford Yesterday Absorbs 15,000 Shares

TORONTO, Sept. 12—Feature of trading on the Standard yesterday morning was the further advance in La Rose, which opened at 57, as compared with a closing on Tuesday night of 54 and on opening of 50. The stock was quite active, and profit-taking carried it back to 53 by noon. The buying is, of course, a result of the satisfactory finds on the Violet claims. Quite a heavy demand for Gifford was another feature of the Cobat section, fifteen thousand shares being purchased on the Exchange yesterday. A strenuous effort is being made to find ore on this property, and indications are very favorable.

Trading in good stocks was meagre but interest was added to dealings in this section by the listing of Hattie Gold Mine shares. Standard members pointed out that the stock is listed ony as a "prospect," despite which fact is sold at 73, a good way above many producers and dividend-payers. It is having quite a lively market on the New York Curb these days.

It may not be known that one of the means the Standard Exchange takes to safeguard buyers of mining stocks is to label the properties listed either as developed properties, prospective producers, or working prospects, so that the buyer who consults the exchange list may know the nature of the stock he's dealing in.

Suspected of Being An Agent of Germany

WINDSOR, Sept. 12—Suspected of being a German agent, Harry Juttin, twenty-one years old, who came from Germany shortly before the war is under arest here on the technical charge of failing to comply with the requirements of the Alien Enemy Act by neglecting to register with the police.

Jutting, who was apprehended near Tilbury by Dominion Officer Tucker, had maps and German literature in his possession, according to the police, who are now seeking his brother.

Jutting was remanded in order that the documents taken from him might be translated.

Bales of Paper Floating At Sea

An Atlantic Port, Sept. 12—The captain of a fishing vessel which arrived here yesterday reported that on Sept. 5, twenty miles north of Sable Island, he passed more than fifty big bales of wrapping paper floating in the sea. Some of the bales were taken aboard, and examination showed that they had evidently been in the water but a short time, as the outside wrapping was not wet through. They were stencilled "Wayamac Canada" and "Durban." No wreckage was sighted in the vicinity.

Letters From Overseas

FROM PTE. HAVELOCK BOULTER

The following extracts of public interest are taken from a letter written by Pte. Havelock Boulter, brother of Mr. R. Boulter, 16 North Front street, city:

"I suppose you have been wondering where I am and what I am doing Well I cannot just tell you the name of the town, but it is a nice little town about the size of Belleville, and we have good quarters They are French barracks built of stone, with large airy rooms We also have cots to sleep on and get good meals, so you see we are quite comfortable

"Shortly after we landed in France those of us who had experience with automobiles in civilian life were sent here to the school to take a course in automobile and caterpillar tractor driving Those of us who seemed to be the best fitted acted as instructors for the rest of the fellows After the course was finished we had a written examination on which I averaged one hundred per cent When the men went back to their batteries about fifteen of us were transferred to the school as permanent instructors, so here I am, though for how long I cannot say, for when you are in the army you don't know one week what is coming next When ever a new outfit comes in the men they are to use as chauffeurs are sent here to take the course We have cars and trucks here of all makes and description, also a number of tractors, which they use to pull the guns over fields and rough places. We got to work at 7.45 a.m. and quit at 11.30, then from 1 to 4.30 in the afternoon. We are allowed to go out evenings from 5.30 to nine and on Holidays, Saturday afternoons and Sundays. How is every one I know in Belleville. Remember me to P. J. and the boys at the shop I weigh one hundred and sixty pounds"

K. of C. Army Hut Campaign Next Week Great Enthusiam For Success of Drive

From all parts of the District covered by the local campaign for $5,000 to aid the Canadian Army Huts greatest enthusiasm is being shown by all classes of people Success is assured. Committees have been organized in the different communities throughout the District. Canvassers have gladly given their services, and business men their time in matters of organization. No stone will be left unturned to make the K. of C. Army Hut Campaign for $5,000 the most successful effort yet made on behalf of the Patriotic Fund.

The slogan "Everything Free and Everyone Welcome" has caught like wild fire. The fact that every Dollar subscribed will find its way to our Boys in France without shrinkage, because the administration expenses are paid out of the K. of C. general fund appeals to the patriotic citizen. Campaign headquarters in Belleville are on the corner of Bridge nd Front Sts., Old Balmoral Building, and every citizen of Belleville is cordially invited to make this a rendezvous for the next week.

It is expected and hoped that this will be one of the last sacrifices asked for, therefore should be generously supported. Canvassers have been appointed to call at every home in Belleville, and it is expected that the response will be generous, and worthy of the memory of our gallant heroes in France.

Canadian Women And Babies Land

An Atlantic Port, Sept. 11.—Carrying 1,050 passengers, of whom 700 were women and children, a British liner arrived at this port yesterday. Among the passengers were 100 children under one year of age, and the women were mostly repatriated Canadians who had been prevented from returning home by the activities of the U-boats. The children were cared for on the way across by Lieut. Anna B. Stover, of the Canadian Army Medical Corps, who had handled 300 cases of illness since the ship left the other side.

Among the prominent Canadians on board were Sir Edward Kemp, Overseas Minister of Militia; Sir Clifford Sifton, and Bishop Fallon, of London, Ont., who has been in the fighting zone for five months with the Canadian troops. Bishop Fallon witnessed the advance of Aug. 8, 9, and 10, and said no words could describe the great work done by the gallant Canadians. He said the men were hopeful of seeing the war end with a great victory by next year.

One of the returning war heroes on board was Corp. Felix J. Konowal, who, before he enlisted in the Canadian army, was a worker in a Canadian match factory. He is a Russian by birth, and it seems he tried to complete the work done by his countrymen after they withdrew from the war.

Konowal wears the Victoria Cross for bravery—he is credited with killing 52 Germans in four days with a rifle and bayonet. He captured a machine gun and 15 Germans, and in three days cleaned out three other machine gun nests single-handed.

OUR WEEKLY SERMON

BY REV. A. M. HUBLY

FOUR YEARS OF WAR—ITS GOOD AND EVIL.

I. Kings xx:28.

"And ye shall know that I am the Lord." This is the acme of all knowledge. "This is life eternal, to know thee, the only true God and Jesus Christ whom thou hast sent." One of the great purposes of the Almighty, and to us the greatest, was to reveal Himself to mankind. The climax of that revelation was reached in the person, works and words of Jesus Christ our Lord, who said: "He that hath seen me hath seen the Father."

Now while Christ could say with all truthfulness unto the Father: "I have finished the work which thou gavest me to do," yet there is the furtherance of the benefits of that finished work by the application of faith in the Almighty thus revealed. Faith cometh by hearing, and hearing by the word of God. That word, when and where unheeded, in order to meet the purpose for which it has been sent, must be forced upon the attention of men and nations often by severe and inexorable providence.

The prophet who allowed his faith to falter so that he forgot the protecting hand of the God of Mount Carmel, and fled from duty in fear of the wrath of a wicked woman, must feel the mountain fastness shake beneath him and round about him. The wind must sweep his hiding place, the earth must quake, and the fire consume in order to wake the sleeping, fainting soul to faith and obedience again.

All these indomitable, masterly agencies of destruction were sent by the mercy of Elijah's God in order that Elijah should hear again the still small voice which speaks divine guidance, and leads in paths of righteousness and truth.

This has been the way of the Almighty from the beginning, and what ever man may think or say about it, His way will continue the same until the end. For He hath said: "I am the Lord. I change no." The ways by which God prosecutes His purposes of love are innumerable. Our text is a record of one way by which He deals with nations, that the people may be blessed with an increase of knowledge regarding Himself.

The Lord hath no delight in war, neither hath He pleasure in the death of the wicked; yet war must be made use of, as a means by which His people shall know His power over material forces, and His enemies know the impossibility of successfully contending with Him.

The Israelites did not deserve divine deliverance, for they had made peace with Benhadan, king of heathen Syria, on the terms which he had proposed; and they did it without consulting either God or His prophet. It was when these terms no longer satisfied the heathen king, and he demanded for a continuance of peace, the degrading surrender, not only of their houses, land, gold, and silver, but their wives and children, that the king and the elders of Israel gathered in solemn conclave and decided to resent the injustice. God intervened in behalf of Israel, not because they deserve such kindness, but because the Syrians blasphemed by denying the attributes of omnipotence and omnipresence. They said the "gods of Israel are only the gods of the hills, we shall fight them in the valleys and we shall overcome them." Even those heathens must be taught to know something of the invincibility of Israel's God, and also be punished for their sin; and Israel must also know that the battle is the Lord's, and He works His sovereign will to conquer by many or by few. War is a terrible national affliction, but it is never destitute of good to those who believe that it comes of divine chastisement and to give the people a better knowledge of God, His hatred of sin and His power to deal with it, and also His love of righteousness and His readiness to reward it. During the past four years we, as Christians, who call God our Father, and who pray that "His kingdom may come, and His will be done in earth as it is done in heaven," have had many strange experiences, unlooked for and hard to bear, the whole making one great tragedy by which faith in God may be strengthened or weakened, just in proportion as we honor His word by keeping its precepts and relying upon its promises. This four years of war has given us many lessons to ponder over, terrible to learn, most significant in purpose, and gloriously beneficial, or tragically destructive according to the application we make of them. Amid conflict and distress of nations men will seek and apply different means for relief. Many will seek festive amusements and encourage laughter, frivolity and jollification. They will deaden their senses by narcotics and call it comfort, or stimulate them to intoxication and call it courage. Thus we may learn more than ever in the time of war, to call good evil, and evil good, and to put darkness for light and light for darkness. There are others who will fly to the word of God for refuge and encouragement.

By prayer and communion with God they soothe their troubled hearts, and stimulate their courage, and face every ordeal of conflict strengthened by the faith in the Almighty with whom they delight to acquaint themselves. To these the Bible speaks with no uncertain sound, and in words of penetrating power.

Our eyes are open to the truths of God's book, which hitherto were virtually sealed for lack of that experience which teaches. New discoveries of the length and breadth and depth and height of scripture, are made.

We learn in war, as we never could in peace, the meaning of those austere psalms written in past days of fear and anguish. We more readily realize how large a part of the New Testament scripture is addressed to the literally suffering and militant Christian assemblies. As we see the great things of earth shattered; and things made with hands totter, crumble, and fall around about us, we can, with greater gladness confess, with reverent humility: We are but pilgrims and strangers upon earth.

During this four years war we have seen the order of the world so broken up by sudden convulsions that we read with deeper interest and more concern those portions of scripture that hitherto were carelessly passed over as apocalyptic. We accept them as no longer out of date. The visions of the Hebrew prophets and Christian seers and apostles grow instinct with awful reality. Thus, the words of our text—"And ye shall know that I am the Lord" come to us with living force. We read them as not only spoken to nations nearly three thousand years ago, but they come to the nations of today pulsating with life from the same Almighty source.

The concomitants, the moral and mental lessons of the present war will forever testify to the exercise of of divine power, judgment and mercy in the interests of our fallen race, and give the world a clearer knowledge of its Creator.

For those who desire to know God as the giver of eternal life, and would make sure of faith's foundation, through the clouds, the smoke, and dust of war's destruction, there breaks the light of imperishable truth, relative to Him "who kingdom is an everlasting kingdom," and to that dominion which endureth throughout all generations.

There will be better knowledge of the God who, amid thunderings and smoke proclaimed law and judgment from Sinai, and who on Calvary put away man's sin and transgression of the law by the sacrifice of Himself.

We shall know Him as the God of peace. But, until the nations of the earth shall submit to righteousness there must be war, and the same Lord will be the God of battle. He will lead the bravest of the brave and will conquer, not by carnal might or power but by His spirit of invincible truth.

We thank Him for all our brave Christian men that face suffering and death in this war now waged in the interest of righteousness, liberty and truth.

There is an ancient story which tells of the dream of an old Roman soldier. First, he saw a long line of veterans marching past and chanting: "We have been brave." Next came an army with gleaming weapons and shining armor proclaiming, "We are brave." Last, all the youth of the land tramped by to the refrain: "We will be brave." The vision this war gives is more inclusive of life's endeared relations. Our vision of the brave consecrated hosts includes the women and the girls all marching to the refrain: "We are brave."

This war has therefore given us a larger conception of the words courage and bravery. We include in these terms the soldiers and the sailors of all commissions and ranks, the airmen, the chaplains, the doctors and nurses, the fighters in air, earth and sea. But we also include the mother who smilingly seals with a kiss her blessing upon the face of her son or daughter as he or she goes forth to the conflict. We also include the sisters, the wives and sweethearts who while their hearts are breaking with the sorrow of parting speak words of cheer to their departing loved ones. We also include the girls and boys who give up their playtime and holidays to fill whatever place they can in the ranks of patriotism for the winning of the war. But with all this our chief concern is to know God and to learn His will and do it.

Men Happy Even If They Grumble In The Drizzle

With the Canadian Forces, Sept. 11—Four days or rain, mostly a drizzle, sometimes a deluge, has converted this unhappy No Man's Land into a slough of mud and puddles. The delights of life under canvas are somewhat tarnished when one finds one's tent a pool of water and one realizes something of the miseries of the old trench warfare behind us. Fritz is throwing some of his big stuff around Arras. In front is the Canal du Nort and beyond lies a range of low hills, heavily wooded on their western slopes. Back of them lies a garden of Eden, where war has not entered.

"Why can't they let us in there?" our soldiers ask. There's mighty good billets in Cambrai. In this blessed hole you carry off a shell hole every step."

The men grumble, but they are happy. The old crop is all right. Fritz would sooner run up against a mad dog any day.

The army post office has worked devotedly, but it has been a desperate task keeping up to the kaleidoscopic movements of the corps. The first Canadian letters are beginning to arrive, telling of what the folks at home think of the Amiens show, bu tno Canadian newspapers. "I have not seen one since July, and there is a dearth of cigarettes, tobacco and matches. A lucky souvenir hunter found six Hun matches in Escourt and traded half a dozen for a box of cigars. These things are practically unprocurable even at the army canteens.

It is cold as well as wet. Woollen underclothing, socks, mitts, and nightcaps are welcome friends. They should be mailed to the boys now rather than when half the winter is over at Christmas.

NO PEACE BY AGREEMENT

Reference is being made to trench warfare. It is mere speculation, of course, but it is doubtful whether the trench warfare in its bitter old form will recur this winter. It is proved that any rigid line can be broken through at will. A very wide No Man's Land, anything up to five or even ten miles, lightly held by our posts ,with behind a great depth of mobile defences, seems more likely. Best of all, is to keep the Hun moving as long as a road can bear a gun. It is a pity if he gets time to even prepare a crust of defence against our flood tide of victory next spring. The only foe the army fears is peace by agreement this winter.

Thousands of angry women, the despatch says ,raided the railway station protesting against the departure of the men.

Standardize Gas When Fixing Price

Ontario Motor League Officials Not Enthused Over New Suggestions

TORONTO, Sept. 11.—Unless R. J. McFall, the New Cost of Living Commissioner, proposes to standardize the quality of gasoline in conjunction with price-fixing, Toronto motorists and officials of the Ontario Motor League are not unduly enthused with his suggestions.

His recommendation is that the maximum price in Ontario be fixed at 36 cents per gallon, whereas the general price at the present time is 35 cents. According to Mr. W. G. Robertson, secretary of the Ontario Motor League, there are retailers who charge up to 37 cents, but they claim the gasoline which they distribute is of higher quality. In his opinion, many of these higher-priced gasoline dealers sell gas worth the difference, but there are some who simply defraud the motorists.

"Motorists want cheaper gasoline," he said, "and many of them are of the opinion that some one is making an unreasonably large profit on gasoline sales. I don't think they blame the retailer. The wholesale price cannot be altered in Canada, for it is fixed by the big American oil companies."

One pleasing feature to motorists of the 36-cent maximum is that it would prevent exorbitant prices in country districts, where 40 cents per gallon and more is not uncommon. But even in this case, Mr. Robertson admitted, the country dealers do not sell very much fluid, and therefore, with their equally expensive equipment, may be entitled to slightly increased prices for providing accommodation for sparse touring motorists.

Back, Back, Back To Hindenburg Line of Defence

NEW YORK, Sept. 11.—Except for a salient southeast of St. Quentin and a double salient north and south of La Fere, the Germans have now retired practically to the Hindenburg line along its entire length.

A mile or two of terrain remains to be covered at places before the Germans are everywhere back in the same footsteps as marked the starting place of their spring offensive. But for practical military purposes the allies have regained practically all the territory over which Von Hindenburg swept this spring in his effort to win the war by ruthlessly sacrificing Germany's man power.

Same as Last Winter.

The situation, therefore, now confronting Von Hindenburg is the same, militarily, as it was at the end of last winter. At that time the German general staff decided the only way the Kaiser could win the war would be to gain a decisive victory before America' millions had begun to arrive in France.

The attempt having been made, is now seen to have been one of the ghastliest failures in history. The relative strength of the German and Anglo-French armies has not been changed in Germany's favor while the best of the German shock troops lie in the new cemeteries of Flanders, Picardy and Champagne. At the same time America's second million men is filing into France, giving the allies every two months as many new troops as the Germans can find for themselves in a year.

German Morale Gone.

The chief result of Von Hindenburg's fiasco, apart from the terrible depletion of the German reserves, is the loss of German morale. The ruin of Von Hindenburg's reputation has well started. The Germans are in reality now entering the final phase of the war under a leadership which has proven itself incompetent, recklessly prodigal in its waste of Germany's man power, and unable to give guarantees that it can save Germany from invasion.

In this condition it is impossible to believe that the German armies will fight, hereafter, with the same ferocious disregard of consequences as in the past. An army's brutalities are always more marked when it is victorious than when it is on the defensive.

U-BOAT MAY USE FREIGHTER AS DECOY

An Atlantic Port, Sept. 12—Warning that a German submarine operating 1,000 miles east of New York may be using a large cargo ship as a decoy was brought here to-day as the officers of the incoming British passenger liner. They reoprted sighting a vessel, apparently of about 4,000 tons, damaged by shell fire, and flying the Spanish flag. There were no signs of life aboard the freighter and the British commander gave her a wide berth, speeding away on a zizag course to avoid a possible torpedo attack.

Passengers on the liner included W. Ferguson Massey, Premier and Sir Joseph G. Ward, Minister of Finance, of New Zealand, who are on their way home from attendance at the British Colonial War Conference in London.

CONSIDER OTHERS.

Selfishness and thoughtlessness cause more trouble in this lottle old world than almost any other combination of faults with which mankind is afflicted. Consideration of the comfort and welfare of others is a cardinal virtue which scatters sunbeams along life's pathway and dissipates many a threatening cloud. The lesson of the trenches and the battlefield is one of unselfishness and comradeship which can well be emulated by the home folks, and, universally adopted, will make life brighter and better. There are many ways in which the spirit of unselfishness can be shown to advantage. One way is to consider the comfort of others at public gatherings, now that the season is opening for indoor entertainments. Patrons should make it a point to be in their seats before the entertainment begins and not come tramping noisily in while the program is being rendered, marring the pleasure and comfort of those who were considerate enough to come early. An improvement in this respect would be very much appreciated by the sufferers, both in the audience and on the platform.

GOOD OLD ARTHUR ROSS.

In an account of his visit to Vimy Ridge, Mr. W. R. Givens of the Kingston Standard has this to say of Kingston's member of the Legislature, Brigadier-General Ross, whose work as head of the medical service of the Canadian Corps has made his name well known all along the Western front: "We reached the Ridge, first by automobile and then over the narrow-gauge light railroad that runs almost to the crest, with good old Arthur Ross (just a day or two before offered the medical command of the Fourth Imperial Army of Gen. Byng with the rank of Major-General, and content nevertheless to remain with the Canadians as a Brigadier-General that he might stick to 'his boys' to the end; and not changed or 'swelled up' one whit by his new honors) as my seat mate and counsellor and guide, and with Count de Bury (formerly Major in the R.C.H.A. at Tete de Pont barracks) just across from us."

THE LION OF NEBRASKA BOSSES WILDCATS IN FRANCE

Friday, September 13, 1918, will be the fifty-eighth birthday of General John J. Pershing, commander-in-chief of the United States army in France. Friday the thirteenth would seem to be a "jinx" enough without making a fuss about it, but Gen. Pershing's birthday is to be made the excuse for one of those popular celebrations always on tap in the United States ready to be turned on at a moment or so notice. Nebraska is the state which purposes to do honor to Pershing's birthday—a state-wide celebration centering in Omaha, and some doings, believe me! Gen. Pershing lived in Nebraska four years and consequently is rated as a native son—and Nebraska purposes to put a permanent tag on the leader of Uncle Sam's fighting boys "over there" by claiming him publicly as its very own in a great big hurrah-boys celebration which will keep people from forgetting that there is a war on—that is, people who have no direct human connection with the war. Omaha will have a military parade with a gigantic "Pershing Birthday Cake" mounted as a float and bearing fifty-eight red, white and blue candles. Then there will be a real birthday cake baked by the best cooks in Omaha which, with the exception of one large section which will be sent to General Pershing, will be cut into small pieces and auctioned off for the benefit of the Salvation Army War Fund. Gen. Pershing, of course, being busy putting the fits into Fritz, will send his regrets out of a full heart, and privately thank his lucky stars that the business of bossing U. S. A. wildcats in France prevents him from being a lion in Nebraska.

Being rather unfortunate in its native sons who have attained national prominence, one William J. (Grapejuice) Bryan, who has been slipping badly for some time, for instance, Nebraska seems to have picked a winning number this time and glorying in the achievements of Gen. Pershing may forget the disappointments of a Bryan.

Go to it, ye sons of Nebraska and may your favorite son live to celebrate many anniversaries of his birth, which by the way took place somewhere in Missouri. while his ancestors came from France. The only thing likely to mar the pleasure of the celebration is the danger of a cable being received from France reading thus:

I'M FROM MISSOURI.

.·. CRISP COMMENT .·.

When the Canadians come in they act as if they owned the whole darned place; when the Americans come in they act as if they didn't care a darn who owned the place. Such is the explanation by a French storekeeper of the difference between Canadians and Americans.

Touching a match to a pool of alcohol to see if it would burn satisfied an experimenter in Ottawa that it would burn. Incidentally the blaze caused $112,000 worth of damage in the G. T. R. freight sheds at Ottawa. A thirst for knowledge is sometimes commendable, but in this instance the experiment was rather expensive.

The doctors of Windsor object to having their slumbers disturbed by "patients" who are suddenly seized with internal combustion in the region of the equator in the middle of the night and seek medical orders on the licensed vendor for a quart of Irish, Scotch or Canadian fire extinguisher and thirst eradicator. Hence comes a request to the Government from the Essex Medical Society that the licensed vendor be dispensed with in favor of the six-ounce specialists of the drug store. These be dark days indeed when six ounces of moisture is considered sufficient to satisfy a 200-pound thirst—particularly six ounces of the stuff usually dispensed by drug stores.

Certain boot and shoe concerns in the United States have increased their profits during 1917 from 20 per cent. to 1000 per cent. Such is the discovery of the American Government. Isn't it nearly time the Canadian authorities investigated some of the profiteers? asks an Exchange.

Now that autoing for pleasure on Sunday is to be stopped as a war measure in the United States, the young man with the new car will be more than ever convinced that Sherman was right.

Learning to do Without

Everyone must do something to save for Canada's war needs For some the cut will be on one thing, for some on another. For you it may be gasoline. Surely there is not a patriotic Canadian motorist but will respond to the appeal of the Fuel Controller to stop unnecessary and unreasonable driving. Suppose it were stopped on one day a week only, say Sunday, the saving would mean $100,000 on gasoline alone, or perhaps $150,000, including wear and tear. Even these are modest estimates.

This sum, added to the savings of the people concerned, means something worth while in the preparation for the rainy day that may come all too soon. It is not too much to ask the well-to-do with motor cars to join the ranks of the poorer folk who long ago had to learn to do without.

three executives exist in Canada to which the country has a right to look for action and co-operation against a possible fuel famine next winter, namely, the Fuel Controller, the Conservation Commission, and the Commission of Scientific Research. The Fuel Controller has the power to do a great deal about coal. The Conservation Commission knows what our fuel resources are or can ascertain. The Commission of Scientific Research can advise or experiment as to how to make the best of our resources.

A Masonic League for war service was tentatively organized at Cleveland, Ohio, on August the first. The efforts of the League will be directed towards assisting disabled men in making them self-supporting before, during or after the vocational training given them by the Government. The Masons are to raise the funds. For that purpose the various lodges in the United States and Canada are being asked to devote their time and efforts to the work, which it is contemplated, will be carried out in close co-operation with the Governments of United States and Canada, and probably of all the allied countries.

OTHER VIEWS

The Northern Silver Field.

Cobalt Miner.

About fifteen years have elapsed since the first discovery was made in what has since come to be considered one of the world's greatest silver districts. Approximately 280,000,000 ounces of the white metal have been produced, having a value of about $163,000,000. Almost one half of this amount, or around $75,000,000, has been paid in dividends, so that from the standpoint of shareholders of Cobalt stocks, the returns have been most gratifying.

Had the price of silver during the fifteen year period averaged around the present price of $1, instead of between fifty and sixty cents, the output would have had an increased value of about $120,000,000. At the same time it is figured that by the end of the year production will have reached $170,000,000, or an average of a little better than $11,000,000 annually. This compares with an output of about $1,500,000 monthly, or $18,000,000 annually at the present rate with silver at the one dollar figure.

While it is more or less impossible to estimate the future possibilties of the camp, the outlook is far from discouraging. It is figured that there are many millions of ounces of silver in reserve at the various mines, the production of which at the present selling price of the metal should yield a handsome profit for some time to come.

Life's Deepest Bitterness.

Ridgetown Dominion.

We have taken no part in the newspaper howl about the filching of editorials without due credit being given to the paper from which they are swiped. We preferred to suffer in silence, solacing ourselves with the thought that the stealing of our remarks was a compliment to this great family journal, whether or not we received credit for them. But, gosh all hemlocks, we find in The Dresden Times one of our editorials on the gas question—credited to The Ridgetown Plaindealer! Oh, well, "sic transit gloria mundi"—whatever that means.

Trouble.

For weeks Pat Cassidy had been a familiar figure, tramping along the street of the little town where he lived in his shirt sleeves, but now he was putting on his coat once more.

"More trouble," he sighed wearily. "If it isn't one thing it's another, you can bet."

"Why, Pat," queried his wife, "what's the matter now?"

"More labor troubles," groaned Pat. "More worry!"

"Not another lockout, Pat, I hope?" anxiously inquired his missus.

"No, worse than that," answered Pat. "The boss has given in and I've got to go to work again."

He Forgot.

At one of the theological seminaries they tell of an absent-minded professor who, while studying one evening, had need of a book mark and for the purpose employed a pair of his wife's scissors that chanced to be at hand.

Shortly after his wife wanted the scissors, but a diligent search on her part failed to disclose them.

The next day the professor appeared before his class and opened his book. There lay the lost scissors. He picked them up and, with a triumphant smile, held them aloft, crying out: "Here they are, dearies!"

Referring to our recent note about the English reporter giving the baseball score as "Two-love," a correspondent reminds us that no less a writer than Conan Doyle once made a curious blunder in describing baseball: "The catching," he wrote, "seemed to me extraordinarily good, especially the long catches by the bleachers, as the outfields, who are far from any shade, are called."

BE HAPPY.

'Tis a pretty good world that we live in,
Though some think it dreadfully bad—
A world to forget and forgive in,
A world to make happy and glad;
There are prizes to have for the striving;
In the strife itself there is joy,
And limitless pleasure contriving
To vanquish the things that annoy.

Nay, think not the world to you hostile,
Though often you stumble and fall.
Look deep in yourself for the cause still,
Overcome it and you shall prevail.
The stars in their infinite courses
They fight for the good and the true,
In Him who of all strength the source is,
Your faith and your courage renew.

'Tis the man with most faith in his fellows,
Who easiest wins to success,
Not doubting their purpose or jealous
Because of their more or his less;
But always with hopeful endeavor
Doing that which he can with his might,
Serene in belief that forever
Life's forces work on to the right.

"Live in A Worry invites death in a hurry." Worry wastes nerve force at a tremendous rate. The more exhausted the greater the tendency to worry.

Then how is one to get out of this vicious circle? By building up the nervous system with the aid of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food.

As the nerves are strengthened you forget to worry and find yourself resting and sleeping naturally.

Chant No Requiem For "Dan And Bill"

MONTREAL, Sept. 12—The Gazette says: "We do not intend to chant a requiem over the departed railway magnates, Sir William Mackenzie and Sir Donald Mann, but their dissolution of the Canadian Northern board, and the passing from the railway stage of the two men who gave being to the enterprise with which their names will ever be associated, is a noteworthy event in the annals of Canadian affairs. For twenty-two years they consecrated all their time, talent and resources to the laudable ambition of spanning the Dominion from coast to coast with bands of steel and had practically completed the great enterprise as respects roadbed and rails when unfortuitous circumstances compelled a halt.

Was Some Censure

"The activities of the firm brought down upon it some censure. Its methods were criticized, sometimes openly, more often privately and in whispers, people being prone to speak ill of those upon whom fortune had smiled. But in the report of the Royal Commission on Railways, Mackenzie and Mann received complete vindication. That report, after stating that assertions and insinuations have been widely made that pubitc money received by the firm of Mackenzie and Mann had been appropriated by these gentlemen to their own use, concluded in these words, 'we are satisfied that the charge is unfounded.'

Tribute to Builders

"As it is, the Government comes into possession, at a small cost, of a fine property, economically built while the originators of the road, the men whose energy and resourcefulness brought it into being, step down. 'Tis oft the way of the world that others reap than those who sow, but though the names of Sir William Mackenzie and Sir Donald Mann will no longer be synonymous with the Canadian Northern Railway, the tribute will not be withheld them of great courage, ability, skill and enterprise in carrying a vast enterprise well to the point of completion and giving to Canada a railway mileage of ten thousand miles."

SUCCUMBS TO BANDIT'S SHOT.

Vancouver, Sept. 11.—The coroner's jury in the case of Thomas J. Roberts, pioneer hotelman of this city, who was murdered last Saturday night, returned an open verdict. J. F. McCabe, held as a suspect, appeared before a local magistrate and was remanded until September 16.

After lingering since Saturday night, when he was made a target for the same gun that killed Roberts, Harry Eames, logger, and friend of Roberts, succumbed at a hospital here last night.

THIS CORPORATION IS NOT SOULLESS

Kingston, Sept. 11.—The Street Railway Company tendered an informal dinner to the employees of the company last evening, and at its conclusion the Superintendent of the company announced that an increase of 25 cents a day had been granted the employees. This makes the fifth increase voluntarily given the employees since the outbreak of the war, and the third this year. The employees include the eleven lady conductors, whose services have been appreciated both by the employers and the public.

"NO SHADOW ON HER FACE"

Writer Tells of English Woman Who Has Given All She Had to the Country.

We English do not read our casualty lists any more. Many of us dare not. When we meet, we do not even speak of those who have gone away. A very touching thing was told me by one of my neighbors. He was the last of twenty-four officers in one of the Gordon regiments. He said that the places were just filled up as soon as they were emptied, and they never spoke of those who had fallen. That brings the reality of the thing to you.

In my own little country—Scotland—you will find many, many villages from which the Highland regiments have been recruited. There are no boys left to come back. They are all dead.

Not many weeks before I came to this country I was up in the Gordon country, and on a Sunday night I was speaking in a church on the spiritual side of the war. At the close a woman came to me, a little, simple, country woman, dressed in the uniform of the Gordon Highlanders, holding a yellow missive, which I, alas, knew too well. "The war office department regrets to inform ——— that ——— was killed in action." She laid this little missive beside one of the portraits, and said, "That came yesterday. That's Jimmie. He's the last of the three." "I hear you are going to America. Will you tell American mothers I have given all my lads? I had only three and I would give six, if I had them, for the same cause." Another friend of mine has given all her five sons. She is a widow and she has none left; but she is working in one of the canteens with no shadow on her face.—Mrs. A. Burnett-Smith in the Atlantic Monthly.

ROSE CLIMBS THREE STORIES

College-Bred Flowers That Nestle in Ivy-Covered Wall of University of Washington.

They are college-bred roses and their high education seems to have had a very elevating effect on their aspirations. Students on the University of Washington campus recently noticed on an ivy-covered wall of Denny hall, way up on a level with the third floor windows, a spray of coppery roses, the Seattle Post-Intelligencer says. The branch which bears them reaches out from the heavy ivy vines and is the only sign of a rosebush in the neighborhood.

Some curiosity was aroused as to whether the flower was grafted on the ivy or whether it was rooted in the wall. Neither supposition was found to be correct. A number of years ago the rose blossomed modestly near the ground. Then either the crowding of the ivy or the lofty ambitions inspired by the intellectual surroundings forced it to shoot up so that it could extend its blossoms to the sun just outside of the windows used by the public-speaking and Spanish departments.

Its long, branchless stem is covered by the ivy and its top flourishes in the soft and musical sounds from the Spanish room and the forceful oratory from the public speakers.

Look at the Hat Cords.

A military man can immediately tell to what division a soldier belongs by glancing at the cord on his hat, but to the average citizen the color of the hat cord denotes little or nothing.

It is an interesting feature to be familiar with, especially now when so many soldiers are seen all over the country, and anyone who takes the trouble to learn the following list will be rewarded by being able to satisfy his own curiosity respecting any soldier he happens to see without having to ask questions: A cord of light blue signifies that the wearer belongs to the infantry; red denotes artillery; yellow, cavalry; buff, quartermaster's corps; orange and white, signal corps; red and white, engineers' corps; red and black, ordnance; black and white, field clerk; maroon and white, medical corps; black and gold, officers; silver and black, adjutant general's clerk; green, instructor home guards, and green and white, home guards.

German General Staff.

The German general staff is not the creation of the kaiser. It is the creation of the army, and in Germany the army is the nation. In the old days, when the principality of Brandenburg was becoming the state of Prussia, it was the elector who governed with unchecked, autocratic authority. Even when Brandenburg had become Prussia the kings of Prussia dominated and owned the country as completely as the head of the house dominated the family, or the manufacturer owned his business. The cabinet of the great elector, the tobacco parliament of Frederick William, the Potsdam library of Frederick the Great, these have merged into the offices of the general staff, in which is consecrated the surrender of the state to the army, and of the army to the army chiefs.

Such a Relief.

She put down the book with a sigh.

"What is it, darling?" he asked.

"Ah, dearest, I'm so happy," she replied.

"But you had such a sad look in your eyes just now."

"I know. I've been reading about the unhappiness that the wives of men of genius have always had to bear. Oh, Alfred, dear, I'm so glad you're just an ordinary sort of a fellow."

Make Church Social Centre

TORONTO, Sept. 12.—The Anglical Council for Social Service held its pre-synod meeting in St. James' Parish House under the Presidency of the Primate. The chief item of business was the appointment of a paid General Secretary, and the Council decided to offer the position to Rev. Canon Vernon of Halifax. The headquarters of the new secretary will probably be established in Toronto.

As the Council for Social Service was created by the last General Synod three years ago, this will be the first time a report on the general subject of social problems will be submitted to that body. Such a report has been drawn up dealing with the various phases of social life and directing the attention of the General Synod to social problems that call for some action on the part of the Church.

Dealing with the question of prohibition the report says: "The drunkard, his family and his home long appealed for protection and help. The most complete answer to that appeal has been the abolition of the bar and the enactment of Dominion-wide prohibition."

On "impurity" the report says "The white slave traffic should be rigorously suppressed." It suggests "rigid isolation" for the victims of venereal diseases and "prevention through the single standard in morals."

Soldiers Safeguarded.

Referring to "our soldiers overseas," the report says that the Council sought to bring the influence of the Church to bear upon the authorities at Ottawa and in England in regard to the moral conditions that surrounded the troops. It was gratified to learn that the state of morality among the troops was on a high level, and that every precaution was being taken to protect them from evil influences.

On the question of securing "health certificates" before marriage the Council at its meeting yesterday endorsed all legislative action for securing personal purity, and expressed the belief that the time had come for the Church to emphasize very clearly the moral failure involved in sins of impurity, while at the same time it would remind the public that legal enactments and physical prophylactics alone would not eradicate a moral evil.

Churches a Social Centre.

The Council suggested that church buildings should be erected in such a way as may be possible to use them as centres of social life.

The question of the moral conditions on Indian reserves was considered, and it was resolved that inquiry be made of Indian missionaries and suggestions asked for as to the best methods of promoting the Christian ideal of marriage.

Sweep Eastward Of Slovak Troops

Force Under Col. Garda Covers 600 Miles in Face of All Opposition

LONDON, Sept. 11—Under the heading "The Enemy Collapse in Siberia—Czechs Remarkable Exploit," The Times prints the following:

VLADIVOSTOCK, Sept. 3— The Czecho-Slovaks under Colonel Gaida have made a marvelous eastward sweep. General Dieterichs with his expeditionary force had hardly moved over the Manchuria frontier with the object of going to the relief of the hard-pressed Czechs, when to the surprise at Olovyanna, having pushed through all opposition for 600 miles and presumably defeated all their enemies en route.

We are yet entirely in the dark as to the enemy forces except the surmise that a large number surrendered at Kiakhata on the Mongolian frontier. Whether any escaped into Mongolia remains to be seen. As regards the main force the assumption is that it retired along the Amur railway via Stietinsk.

That the Czech contingent of Col. Gaida displayed conspicuous gallantry and enterprise goes without saying. The extraordinary collapse of the German and Austrian prisoners' forces comes as a great surprise. It is obvious that presence of an unknown number of allied troops at Ussuri and elsewhere has produced an important moral effect and indicated that the prisoners' resistance could but lead to ultimate destruction.

Urges Fixing Of Gasoline Price

OTTAWA, Sept. 10.—That an order-in-Council fixing the retail price of gasoline in Ontario and the West is advisable is a statement made in a report by R. J. McFall, Cost of Living Commissioner, to Hon. T. W. Crothers, Minister of Labor, on the cost of gasoline, made public to-day Mr McFall suggests a ruling which would establish 36 cents as a maximum retail price in Ontario, 43 cents in Saskatchewan, and 45 cents in Alberta.

"It is respectfully suggested," says the report, 'tha thauch a ruling be immediately embodied in an order-in-Council and that the local authorities be empowered to enforce the same, the wholesale price being freely published at the same time."

No changes are suggested in the wholesale price of gasoline, it being noted that, although the cost of imported gasoline has been increased from 5-6 of a cent to 1½ cents a gallon because of increased freight rates and other increases, the wholesale price of gasoline has not advanced in Canada. The freight rate advance increased the cost in the United States by half a cent a gallon.

Hurl in Fresh Troops To Save Ladies' Road

ADVANCE AGAINST TABLELAND

With the American Armies in France, Sept. 11—Americans have advanced in local attacks against the La Petite Montaigne tableland, a fortified height on the American lines, where they drop down from the Aisne to the Vesle.

After a strong bombardment of the hill, with the heaviest fire concentrated on the La Petite plateau, the Americans launched their assault Monday morning. The fighting was still continuing Monday night.

Seeks To Stop Sunday Sale of Gasoline

(Dr. W. M. Rochester)

That the sale of gasolene on Sunday is unnecessary we have all along contended, some in authority and many others holding to the contrary. In conference with those in the business in many places and in particular in recent correspondence with those of the Queen City we have had emphatic confirmation of our view. Now support is coming from unexpected quarters. A leading paper says it is no more necessary than the sale of bread on Sunday. Quite a number of dealers in various parts have combined to discontinue Sunday sales. The example of the Fuel Administration in the United States in requesting that gasolene be not used on Sunday by motorists that a vital war supply may be conserved is having its effect on Canada. Motorist associations here are calling upon their members to eliminate Sunday use of motor cars. Garage owners are acting independently and in concert to stop Sunday sale and repair work with a view to conservation.

"Well done!" we say in the interest of 'gas' but more emphatically in the interest of men. Why, before the war or since, apart from the example of the United States, people could not see that this form of Sunday trade was unnecessary and deprived hundreds of employees of Sunday rest seems incomprehensible to us. Now that the light has dawned let there be no half-way measures. Stop Sunday sales compeltely, except in case of emergency, everywhere, and permanently. In the United States the disposition to use for pleasure a motor car on Sunday is being effectively discouraged by the applicaton to offenders of the epithet "Slacker." "Give up your Sunday pleasure," say they, "and win the war.' The Lord's Day Alliance uses no epithets but urges, 'Cease Sunday buying and selling to save our day and help our men, and if we have less Sunday motoring so much the better for the relief to all classes which a quiet Sunday brings."

The Lord's Day Alliance furnishes large cards reading, "Buy your gasolene Saturday," to all dealers upon application.

INTERESTING REPORTS ON FARM EXPERIMENTS

The annual report of the Dominion Experimental Farms for the year ending March 31st 1917 is a comprehensive document of some 150 pages, containing matter well worth studying by progressive farmers. It describes briefly and concisely the experiments and tests which have taken place at every farm and station which practically means all over the country, seeing that every province is represented. Just as there is not a branch of agriculture undealt with so there is not a district the capabilities and possibilities of which have not been tried in the matter of better production by improved methods. In former years the report has been given in two and three volumes and contained accounts of the scientific experiments that have been made during the year or that were still in progress, written by professional experts of the experimental farm system but henceforth these are to be given in bulletin form and the report confined to statements of the year's doings at the score and more farms and stations at different parts of the country. The report which, as has been said, will well repay study, can be had free on application to the Publication Branch, Department of Agriculture, Ottawa.

Ruin Complete In German Wake

With the French Army in France, Sept. 11.—The destruction of towns and villages within the zone of the recent operations has been so complete as to offer little basis for comparisons. South of the Somme, and between the Aisne and the Oise the work of demolition has been uniformly thorough. Settlements, big and small, have been reduced to hostly ruins, the fragments of walls assuming fantastic shapes; the roofs of many houses, bereft of tiles and slates, look like skeletons of huge beasts whose back have been broken.

Noyon offers the only contrast to the devastation that is characteristic of other towns. Montdidier was razed to the ground. Noyon was almost as completely ruined, but it is still erect. The walls of most of its houses still support only partially collapsed roofs. From a distance they appear to require only repairing, but close inspection shows that the Germans made good their boast that they would destroy the town in its entirety.

The enemy is destroying everywhere in the most vandal-like manner. When he has not time to burn down houses he removes the furniture and makes a great bonfire of it. He blows up the most important buildings and pillages everything, removing agricultural machinery and destroying everything else which he has not time to remove. Nevertheless the French advance into the forest of Coucy was so rapid that the enemy had to abandon very large quantities of war material and important ammunition depots.

The sight of such devastation ordered by the leaders of the German army kindles in the French soldiers a determination to punish such crimes. They know no fatigue in pursuing.

Serious Enemy Stand New Phase of Battle

LONDON, Sept. 11.—The battle on the western front is entering a new phase. The enemy at last is making a serious stand just short of the series of positions commonly called the Hindenburg line—positions which, however, already have been bitten into by the British from the Sensee to Moeuvres and touched by the French in the St. Gobain region at Servais and Bassoles-Aulers.

The Germans are doubling their rearguards and seeking by counter-attacks to slow up, if they cannot stop outright the encroaching tide of the allies. Their efforts have been in vain, notwithstanding the new measures adopted, in checking the advance of the French and the British, for both pushed forward yesterday in the direction of St. Quentin.

The French made such progress across the Crozat Canal that the enemy no longer can hope to defend it.

Gen. Humbert's centre is at the gates of LaFere and Gen. Mangin's left is beginning to creep around the St. Gobain Forest by the west, while his right beat off the enemy's attacks by which the Germans sought to cling to the Aisne front. More of such attacks are probable, but Gen. Mangin will know how to deal with them. They are local affairs, and a more serious effort is not likely to be made.

Gen. Ludendorff is working for a respite. Marshal Foch is likely to be aware, however, whether the enemy is sufficiently weakened and demoralized to be smashed in at some part of the present battle front, or whether a stroke elsewhere would be advisable, thus giving the armies that have fought so indefatigably for the past two months a rest.

Great Record Held By Canadian Flyer

OTTAWA, Sept. 11.—An official of the Naval Department has received a letter from Major Raymond Collishaw, D. S. O., D. F. C., officer commanding the 203rd Squadron Royal Air Force, whose home is in New Westminster, B.C., in which this distinguished Canadian aviator mentions that he has downed his fifty-third Hun machine. The letter, which was written from France and bears the date of August 4th, states that Major Collishaw has recently been awarded a bar to the D. S. O., which he had previously won, and also the Distinguished Flying Cross. He says that he is hoping to get away on leave and pay Canada a visit some time this fall.

When the war broke out Major Collishaw was mate on the fishery patrol vessel "Fispa," which was operating off the coast of British Columbia.

∴ Wedding Bells ∴

WISKIN—BOYLE

A very pretty wedding took place on Wednesday afternoon, Sept. 11th, at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Chas. B. Boyle, when their eldest daughter Vera Helena, became the bride of Corp. Harold Wiskin, son of Mr. J. Wiskin, of Kingston. The bride looked charming gowned in white and georgette crepe with pear trimmings and wore a veil with orange blossoms and carried a boquet of Othella roses entering the drawing room on the arm of her father, while Miss Lavoie played the wedding march. The looked nice in a gown of pale green ninon over silk with gold trimmings and wore gold slippers and carried a bouquet of pink asters. Mr. Russell Clarke, of Kingston, cousin of the bride, assisted the groom. A very dainty buffet luncheon was served by three cousins of the bride Miss Lottie and Irene Boyle, and Miss Alice Clark and Miss Alma Rousseau of Kingston. The house was prettily decorated with pink and white asters and palms. The bride's table was beautifully decorated with a mound of pink silk and tulle with the bride's cake in the centre. The bride received a large number of costly and beautiful gifts. The young couple will reside in Kingston.

The officiating clergyman was Rev. Mr. Ramsay.

Music and Drama

PAULINE FREDERICK AND FOX "BABY GRANDS"

A splendid program of light and entertaining offerings has been arranged for presentation at Griffin's to-night to Saturday, with a matinee Saturday at 2.30. Katherine and Jane Lee, William Fox's juvenile "Baby Grands" appear in a highly amusing 6-part comedy entitled, "Troublemakers." Pauline Frederick also appears on the same program in a gripping story of unusual interest entitled, "Her Final Reckoning.' A new 2-part Sunshine comedy, and the 3rd chapter of Vitagraph's thrilling Western serial, "A Fight for Millions" will also be screened.

FOX'S "BABY GRANDS"

The Lee children, those amazingly clever juveniles of the silent drama will be seen at Griffin's this evening in one of their immensely entertaining comedies entitled "Troublemakers." The Lees are called William Fox's "Baby Grands" and they certainly are very clever and amusing, a sure and certain cure for the blues and a never failing delight for all movie patrons. Don't fail to see the Lees.

"THE GARDEN OF ALLAH"

So gorgeously and yet so exquisitely toned are the scenes which have been arranged for the dramatization of Robert Hichens' novel, "The Garden of Allah," which, on its sixth annual tour, comes to Griffin's Opera House next Tuesday night for a limited engagement of one night only, that the deep impressions left by the sumptuous settings visualize the foreign lands to a remarkable degree.

The nine scenes which follow one another verily transplant one into the atmosphere where the drama is worked out. First the desert in the early dawn, with its starlit sky and soon the morning sun rising to send its ruddy rays up from the depths, revealing the desert stretching away like an ocean of sand, its countless dunes rising and falling like mighty jewels. Next the street of the Ouled Nailes, with its gaieties among the native Arabs. Then the dance hall with its famous Arabian dancer, Faddma. Then comes the picturesque garden of Count Anteoni, an oasis in the desert. Then the remarkable sandstorm on the desert, nl which real sand is used. And then it turns night and the stars come out in all their glory, the Milky Way seeming almost to touch the earth. And then comes the reproduction of the monastry where all is peace and rest and the tired soul may lie down secure from temptation.

Literary Notes

"DRUMS AFAR"

War is the background for most of our thoughts to-day, and a novel without a war tinge would seem almost out of keeping. In "Drums Afar," the new novel by John Murray Gibbon, the war interest is kept subdued till the latter part of the story, which indeed vibrates with echoes of the great conflict. Canada plays its part in this international romance, the author obtaining some vivid local color from a Patriotic Fund Campaign and from the sailing of the first Canadian Expeditionary Force. Described in a subtitle as an international romance "Drums Afar" has as its hero a happy-go-lucky young Englishman, who, after three years of Oxford University with vacations in Germany and France, becomes director of an illustrated weekly newspaper in London. The charms of an American girl lead him to the United States where he arrives just on the outbreak of the war. All through the pictures of life at Newport, Rhode Island, at Chicago and at Lake Geneva, Wisconsin, the drums of war are heard beating ever louder. On the one hand is the call of the Mother Country; on the other is the prospect of luxurious ease in a country of mixed races which at the time of the story was aiming to be neutral. It is the influence of Canada, however, which brings the hero to his great decision —a decision which first entangles and then disentangles the skeins of love woven into the story. "Drums Afar" is published in London and New York by John Lane, and in Toronto by S. B. Gundy, of the Oxford University Press, who also published "Hearts and Faces," the well-known novel by the same author.

If Your Ears Ring With Head Noises

If you have roaring, buzzing noises in your ears, are getting hard of hearing and fear Catarrhal Deafness, go to your druggist and get 1 ounce of Parmint (double strength), and add to it ¼ pint of hot water and a little granulated sugar. Take 1 tablespoonful four times a day.

This will often bring quick relief from the distressing head noises. Clogged nostrils should open, breathing become easy and the mucus stop dropping into the throat. It is easy to prepare, costs little and is pleasant to take. Anyone who has Catarrhal trouble of the ears, is hard of hearing or has head noises should give this prescription a trial.

Huns Fling Orange, May Prove Lemon

With the British Armies in France, Sept. 12—Just before the British launched their attack yesterday on the enemy trenches northwest of Peiziere, below Gouzeancourt, the Germans for the first time employed a new kind of projectile in an effort to drive the New Zealand troops from nearby positions.

The projectiles, which were about the size of oranges, were fired at short range in bunches of from 200 to 300 each, and were sprinkled over an area of two or three acres.

These projectiles burst into flames as they hit the ground, and gave off gas.

PATRIOTIC KISSES AT $60 PER DOZEN

MILLVILLE, N.J., Sept. 12—Jas. Boyle invested $60 in a dozen fervent kisses when Miss Frances Kelly, the "horse-back-booster of War Savings Stamps, of Jersey City, made an address on the principal street corner here and offered to kiss every man who bought a stamp. She enlisted the services of two Cape May jackies from the audience to kiss every woman purchaser of the stamps, and they cheerfully fulfilled their obligations.

Smacks resounded when scores of prominent citizens were duly kissed by the fair sponsor, and the total sales of the drive amounted to $1,500 which, Miss Kelly said, was the largest sum she had realized from her kisses in South Jersey.

How to Rid the Skin Of Objectionable Hairs

(Aids to Beauty)

A simplified method is here given for the quick removal of hairy or fuzzy growths and rarely is more than one treatment required: Mix a stiff paste with some powdered delatone and water, apply to hairy surface and after 2 or 3 minutes rub off, wash the skin and every hair has vanished. This simple treatment cannot cause injury, but care should be exercised to get real delatone.

Moderate est to north winds, scattered showers to-day and on Saturday. Not much change in temperature.

TEN THOUSAND PRISONERS TAKEN IN TWELVE HOURS BY YANKS

SMASH ST. MIHIEL SALIENT IN GREAT DRIVE

AMERICAN ARMY IN FRANCE ASSISTED BY FRENCH TROOPS LAUNCH BIG DRIVE AGAINST ST. MIHIEL SALIENT—DIRECT MENACE AGAINST GERMAN SOIL—TEN VILLAGES CAPTURED EARLY YESTERDAY MORNING—ADVANCING TROOPS WITHIN A FEW MILES OF GERMAN BORDER—MORE THAN 100 U. S. TANKS TAKE PART IN ADVANCE AND SMASH THROUGH STRONG FIRST LINE DEFENCES OF ENEMY.

Special Despatch to The Intelligencer, Canadian Press, Limited.

LONDON, Sept. 13.—(Noon)—General Pershing's forces in the sector on the southern side of the St. Mihiel salient have advanced for a distance of eight miles. The assault was made on a front of fourteen miles.

9,500 PRISONERS AND 60 BIG GUNS.

The Americans are reported to have captured Vigneulles, seven and one-half miles north of Vreay, through which their former line ran. Gen. Pershing's troops also are said to have captured Beney, Heudicourt and Boise de Thiaucourt. The American troops so far have captured 9,500 prisoners and have taken sixty German guns. The Germans are blowing up ammunition dumps at Hattonville and Dombeux.

With the Americans on the Metz Front, Sept. 12—The first American offensive started at five o'clock this morning between the Meuse and the Moselle Rivers. The attack was carried out by the First Army under the direct command of Gen. Pershing.

The French are assisting toward the right and also toward the left. This despatch is filed at Mihiel.

The Americans have canptured ten villages and advanced several kilometres on a fifteen-kilometre front (about ten miles).

St. Mihiel is on the Meuse directly in front of Metz, approximately 35 miles from that city, and about 23 miles from the Lorraine border. It is at the apex of the St. Mihiel salient. M

The immediate objective on the attack is limited to a specified line. Tanks are in action.

The greatest number of Americans troops and artillery yet involved in any single operation is engaged in the attack.

More than a hundred tanks manned by Americans aided in smashing the powerful, concrete-reinforced first line of the enemy in the region of St. Baussant (twelve miles east of St. Mihiel). The tanks drove forward at sunrise behind a dense smoke screen.

The town of Montsec (seven miles east of St. Mihiel) was kept shrouded in a smoke screen all morning long to prevent effective German observation.

PUSH ENEMY TOWARD FRESNES

The Americans and the French also attacked on the western side of the St. Mihiel salient,, pushing the enemy back in the region of Fresnes (at the northern base of the salient.) The French are on the peak of the salient keeping pace with the Americans pinching in the sides.

The region of the Meuse and the Moselle is on the Toul front, before the important fortress of Metz, in German Lorraine. This is the point where the American concentration has been on for months.

The American line is within two or three miles of the German border. At some points the line actually touches the Lorraine line. The battlefront is approximately fifteen miles from Metz.

YANKS MAY SMASH RHINE CENTRES

WASHINGTON, Sept. 12—Launching of America's drive in the Toul sector where probably a million Yanks are concentrated may mean the beginning of General Pershing's forecasted campaign of destruction against the German industrial centres of the Rhine.

While awaiting full details of the new offensive to determine whether or not it is destined to become a major action, officials here to-day were guarded in their comment.

It is known, however, that systematic destruction of the Rhine industries has been long urged. It has been felt here that the best opportunity of giving Germany an example of the wreck she has wrought in Belgium and northern France would be in a campaign across the Rhine from the American concentration point between the Meuse and Moselle.

Besides offering the opportunity of reaching Germany by a short line, the drive presents the chance of preventing added German pressure farther north.

GERMAN GENERAL KILLED

GENEVA, Sept. 13—General Hugo Huhn of the German army has been killed by British aviators near St. Quentin, according to the information from Basle yesterday. The majority of his staff was also slain. Other generals narrowly escaped.

Organized Band of Drug Thieves Working in This Vicinity

Five Drug Stores in Belleville Broken Into Recently—Same Methods Used--Two Belleville Drug Stores Burglarized This Week—Morphine and Cocaine Evidently Sought by Thieves—Other Places Visited

That an organized band of drug thieves are working in Ontario seems evident from the freuent burglaries reported of drug stores and the theft of habit forming drugs such as morphine and cocaine. Tuesday night McKeown's drug store was broken into and drugs stolen, the glass in the front door being broken by a large stone making an aperture large enough for a hand to be inserted and the spring lock opened. The thieves in this instance failed to secure any great quantity of the drugs wanted as the management profiting from the experiences of other drug stores visited; had prepared for just such an emergency. Last night the Belleville Pharmacy on Bridge Street was broken into, the methods used by the thieves being the same as at the McKeown store. During the past month the Ostrom, Clark and Lattimer drug stores were broken into and in each instance the object of the thieves seemed to be cash and habit forming drugs.

Brockville, Kingston, Napanee, Peterboro and other places have recently been visited by drug thieves and in some cases several hundred dollars worth of morphine and cocaine taken. The increased cost of drugs and the undoubted spread of the illicit sale of habit-forming drugs makes this branch of crime easy and profitable. The drugs take up very little space and a couple of hundred dollars worth could be caried on the person without any great difficulty or danger of being observed.

In most of the drug stores thus far visited no attention is paid by the thieves to goods which are not included in the contraband traffic of habit-forming drugs, morphine and cocaine being most popular with the theives who show an intimate knowledge of the properties of the various drugs and waste no time on those not readily salable.

The frequency and regularity of these thefts suggests an organized business of drug stealing and warrant attention from the provincial authorities at once.

Mr. Allen Schryver, the proprietor of the Pharmacy Drug Store, was not aware that his store had been broken into until he came down to open up as usual this morning. There was no trace of a stone or anything else to show what had been used to break the plate glass, which was about a quarter of an inch in thickness .Once inside the burglar or burglars had evidently made a survey of the store. A step ladder was taken from the rear of the store and brought to the front and in this manner drawers and shelving were searched. It seems apparent the thief or thieves were only in seach of drugs as Mr. Schryver has not missed much from the store. A flashlight was taken and possibly some cigars. In the rear part of the store a search was made for drugs, but this was unsuccessful as the proprietor has placed morphine, cocaine, and other drugs in a safe place. Just when the door was broken is not known, but it was some time in the early morning. The crash of the breaking glass was heard by parties who are domiciled in the Standard Bank building adjoining the drug store, but no person was seen about the premises. The police were upon the scene very soon after the store had been broken into, but as yet have discovered no trace of the guilty parties.

The Lesters returned to find their baby, it is reported.

Drastic Drug Law Will be Enacted

ASHINGTON, Sept. 13—Habitual use of morphine, cocaine, heroin and cotic drugs has increased rapidly in the United States within the last two years, and a drastic anti-narcotic law must be enacted at this session of Congress to check the wholesale spread of the habit. These are the conclusions made public to-day by a special Treasury investigation committee, together with a partial report on the number of drug addicts acually under physicians' treatment in the States.

SOLDIER HAD TWO WIVES, ONE OVERSEAS

TORONTO, Sept. 13—That he was married in England and her child, of which he was the father, was the defence advanced in the Police Court yesterday by Hector Vatchell, a returned soldier, when charged with failing to support his legal spouse. Vatchell enlisted as a single man and it was only after a lot of trouble and a lapse of six months that his wife received separation allowance. He earned $16 per week and received $10 a month pension, and when asked what he did with the money replied very coolly that he was supporting the other woman. Magistrate Denison made an order for $8 per week. As the bigamy was committed in England, Vatchell cannot be prosecuted in Canada.

$80,000 Spent On Soldiers by Y.M.C.A.

In Six Months Ending June 30—Percentage of Profits From Canteens

In the six months ending June 30th, 1918, the total sum distributed by the Canadian Y.M.C.A. among the units of the Canadian Corps in France was approximately $80,000. This sum represented per cent. of the Corps Area and the distribution among the various units in the Division is made according to the ration strength of the units. Accompanying each monthly cheque for the proportion of receipts returned to the units is slip of paper on which is printed:

"The Canadian Y.M.C.A. trusts that the troops to whom these comforts are distributed can be made aware that the articles come from the Association as part of our regular service in the Field, which is made possible by donations from the people of Canada and through the profits on our canteen operations, and that the articles are not a Government issue."

Writing to Capt. W. B. Hurd, Senior officer Y.M.C.A., 2nd Canadian Division, France, Lieut.-Col G. J. F. Murphy, O.C., No. 6 Canadian Field Ambulance, acknowledges reciept of a cheque, and expresses the sincere thanks of all ranks of his unit for the money.

"We all sincerely appreciate the excellent work you are doing for the comfort and amusement of the troops" writes Lieut.-Col. Murphy. "In using this money in rations and comforts for our men they shall be informed as to the donor. With regard to the contemptible article which appeared in a certain paper, I would beg to say on behalf of all officers and other ranks of this unit that we trust the Y..MC.A. will take no notice of this inasmuch as their good work and general untility to the Army is too well-known to us all to think that any so-called Association could change the high opinion and esteem in which your association is held."

Frantic Teutons Now Weaken Quiet Sectors

With the American Troops in France, Sept. 13.—In their frantic efforts to stem the tide of the entente allied advance the German high command has been taking divisions out of quiet sectors around Verdun and in the Woevre and Lorraine, where they had been sent to recurepated, and is putting them into the line after shorter rest, even though the troops need recuperation.

The entente allied military authorities have compiled some interesting information regarding the present strain on the German man-poyer. In this connection the following schedule of work thrown on the German troops speaks for itself.

In a certain sector four German divisions were withdrawn after five weeks. Thirty went to a reserve area for five weeks of rest and training, and then returned to the big battle. In July another four divisions were withdrawn after being in a quiet sector for five weeks and a half. They were allowed to train only two weeks before being engaged again.

In August six divisions were withdrawn from a quiet sector, but it was not until they had consumed seven weeks that they were reconstituted. They were then thrown back into the battle almost immediately, and they were not allowed complete rest in the reserve area as the other divisions had been.

Thus it is evident that, while the length of time necessary for a thinned division to recover becomes greater the lack of effectives makes it necessary for the German high command to engage a reconstituted division in battle without even a few days of that complete rest which is only possible in reserve camp.

The intermediary between a quiet sector and a battle zone has been entirely abandoned nd the troops are thrown in again after rehabilitation.

BIGGEST LOADING OF COAL THIS SEASON

CLEVELAND, Sept. 13—The docks dumped 4,329 cars of coal yesterday, which was the biggest loading of the season, and although the fleet took more than 200,000 tons, there was a good supply of coal on hand this morning when the railroads had 9,387 cars in port and 6,744 cars in transit, making 16,131 cars in sight. If coal comes forward at the present rate a record of shipments will be made in September, although it is a short month. Tonnage is in big demand, but the supply is liberal, and coal is being sent forward with little delay. Thirty vessels were named for early loading to-day and many of the boats will report for cargoes to-morrow.

Twenty Airmen Return on Leave

An Atlantic Port, Sept. 13—Among the passengers on board a British liner arriving at this port Wednesday were 20 Canadian members of the Royal Flying Corps, bound to their home on furlough, and Rev. O. C. S. Wallace, of Westmount, Quebec, who spent some time visiting the Canadian forces in France as the representative of five religious denominations in Canada. Dr. Wallace, who was formerly pastor of the First Baptist Church in Baltimore, Md., was enthusiastic in his praise of both the Canadian and American soldiers he had seen at the battlefront. "As to the morality of the soldiers, both Canadian and American," he said, "you may tell the mothers of America that their sons willl come home in better mind and body for taking their part in this great fight for righteousness. Tell them, on my authority, that all published stories as to immorality among our men are absolutely false."

Two intrepid flyers who are bringing back to Canada high honors bestowed on them for gallantry in action are Capt. Daniel Owens, of Annapolis, N.S., who lost an eye and received other injuries in a thrilling fight with a fleet of Boche machines in the Lorraine sector, and Lieut. David W. Pratt, 18 years old, of Toronto, who is carrying home the Italian Medal of Honor for brilliant work on the Italian front.

Early in March when a fleet of Austrian planes attempted to cross the Piave front, Pratt went up alone and gave them battle. He sent three down in flames at a height of 18,000 feet, and attempting to escape he ran into an Austrian barrage at 2,500 feet. He lost consciousness from his wounds, and his plane went to earth within the Italian lines.

Lieut. Pratt was badly injured but is now recovered, and will return to duty after a visit to Canada.

Our Sector is Quiet, Troops Getting Rest

With the Canadian Forces Tuesday.—The Canadian sector is quiet and many of the troops are getting a well earned rest. Some of the infantry battalions have been on the go steadily for six weeks, marching when not fighting, with never an hour to write a letter or darn a sock. The front line is not yet stabilized and is very active, as the enemy concentrates a harassing fire from both north and east, while his snipers are particularly busy. The lie of the land is in his favor at this passing stage of our general advance. Behind the lines goes on the ceaseless activity of field ambulances, casualty clearing stations and hospitals. The devoted work of the former is lightened now as with marvelous celerity and method, the wounded are passed back to the forward hospitals, thence to be cleared when necessary to the base and evacuated to "Blighty." During the heat of the fighting advanced dressing station staffs worked without cessation day and night in their effort to cope with the casualties. And well they succeeded. A Canadian hospital lies not far behind Arras with a line of huts, bare and spotless. Here our wounded first reach the hands of Canadian nurses.

GOOD TO HAVE WOMAN ABOUT

"Well, sister, you don't know how good it is to have a woman around again," said one of the men, and he said it in no depreciation of the men and hove given freely of their lives in the recent fighting. They have dogged the steps of our fighting infantry through barrage, through wire and amid the hail of machine gun bullets. To see a woman's face again after a month of battle and flame is in itself an inspiration and a comfort. They are the picked women of Canada. It has been their good fortune to be selected from the nurses who have volunteered at the base for this forward work. It is the nearest any woman may get to the battle line. They toil unremittingly with heart and body Their reward is the long trains of evacuated soldiers going to "Blighty" with a chance for their lives.

Less of Jonah And More Arithmetic

MONTREAL, Sept. 13.—L'Autorite, a French Canadian weekly of this city, comes out in this week's issue with a straight plea for what amounts to the secularization of the schools in this province and the elimination of clerical influence. The paper asks that the people of the Province of Quebec should rise up and proclaim to the world that they have been hewers of wood, carriers of water and lowly scavengers quite long enough, and that the only proper "after-war" policy is to secure an education that will put French Canadians on the same footing as the Anglo-Saxons and the Americans.

"Give us less of the stories of Jonah inside or outside of the whale, and more of arithmetic. We will even go farther than that and ask that the control of education be transferred from the provincial to the federal domain. Nothing, in fact, is more logical than this, for the reason that where the greatness and the unity of our country is concerned we should have national schools. The Dominion of Canada has more to gain than to lose in leaving the Province of Quebec in ignorance of practical things, for it might be said that the French Canadians in general know all that is necessary in useless matters, and ignore what is useful to them."

SIBERIAN FRONT GONE.

Or, Rather, It Has Moved 4,000 Miles Westward—Czecho-Slovak Forces Advance.

Vladivostok, Sept. 4.—(Delayed)—The Siberian front has disappeared overnight. In the words of an American authority it has "moved 4,000 miles to the westward."

Communication has been completely established between Vladivostok and Irkutsk.

Czecho-Slovak forces have broken through from Lake Baikal in the direction of Tchita, under Captain Gaida while Gen. Semenoff's Cossacks, supported by Czecho-Slovaks, have approached the trans-Baikalian capital from the Onon River.

The Bolsheviki forces, seemingly overawed by the presence of entente allied troops, have scattered. Some of them have gone in the direction of Kiakhta and others are supposed to be fleeing northward by way of the Amur railway.

Military officials say it would not be surprising to find that the Bolsheviki had dissolved into non-combatant groups intent only on seeking amnesty from the entente allies.

Million Barrel Deficit in Gasoline

WASHINGTON, Sept. 13.—Gasoline stocks in the United States were reduced at the rate of 44,000 barrels daily in July alone, a total of 1,367,000 barrels for the month, Fuel Administrator Garfield informed the Senate to-day in answer to the Lodge resolution.

Garfield predicted a deficit for the year of 1,000,000 barrels, if consumption continues at its present rate and production is not increased.

Garfield stated that on January 1st 8,400,000 barrels were in stock in the territory east of California. On April 1st this had reached 11,000 barrels, the highest point for the year, and on August 1st had dropped to 7,800,000 barrels, a decline of 3,200,000 barrels in four months.

He stated that the daily production fails to meet the consumption by 3,000 barrels. The consumption is 194,000 barrels and the production 191,000.

$800 FINE FOR FIVE BOTTLES OF BAY RUM

Toronto, Sept. 13.—Morris Peterman, drug clerk, in the Police Court yesterday, was fined $800 and costs or five months' imprisonment for a breach of the Ontario Temperance Act. On Monday last Detectives Ward and Scott saw Mrs. Mary Speed go into the drug store where the accused worked and obtain five bottles of bay rum, for which she paid $2. Peterman claimed that the woman had said that the rum was for her husband, who was a barber, but this story was denied. Peterman will now face a charge of perjury.

MILLION AT EXHIBITION

Great Interest in Canadian Trophies on Canadian Day at Chicago.

OTTAWA, Sept. 13.—According to advices received by the Government more than one million people attended Canadian Yay Tuesday at the United States War Exhibition, Chicago. Great interest was shown in the Canadian exhibit of war trophies, in charge of Dr. Doughty, Dominion Archivist.

RE-OPEN THE BLAND CASE

WINNIPEG, Sept. 13.—It is considered very probable that the matter of the Bland-Irwin dismissals from the staff of the Wesley College will be dealt with at the Methodist general conference which will be held next month, at Hamiton, Ont.

The Manitoba conference upheld the board of the college. The Saskatchewan conference was in favor of the professors being reinstated. Both these professors were dismissed as their teachings tended more towards socialism than spiritualism, it was claimed by the board.

Ontario Battalion Smashes Enemy

With the Canadian Forces, Sept. 10—Some idea of the task performed by Ontario infantry in their advance on the north of the Cambrai road and between there and the Sensee River, when, with other Imperial divisions they stormed the Queant-Drocourt line on the morning of Monday last, can be gathered from a trip along this road up to the villages bordering on the Canal du Nord. Vis-en-Artois, a ruin of rubble was then in our hands. Thence the ground climbs gently upwards east to the sunken road connecting Hendecourt and Drury. Through here, there are no less than five enemy trench systems, with wire everywhere.

The sunken road was held in great force and one Central Ontario battalion was somewhat cut up before it captured the fourteen machine gun posts in front of it. This was the same battalion that in the Amiens show captured Le Quesnel in the face of very strong enemy defences, including whizz bang batteries and machine gun nests. That success was accomplished by a brilliant turning movement and the result was the capture of a complete divisional headquarters and vast stores, which gave all ranks in the battalion a change of underwear and new boots.

GOES GRIMLY FORWARD

Nothing of the kind was possible here, but the battalion went grimly forward till it carried the crest by assault and turned in a large number of prisoners. This battalion belongs to the brigade that captured and has since consolidated the apex of the Sensee River and the Canal du Nord triangle.

A Quebec battalion fought through the marshy ground along the river. This area is dissected by ditches and was filled with machine gun posts. Some British Columbia troops also had very stiff fighting before this hornet's nest was cleaned out, and we had established ourselves solidly between the river and the canal.

Novel and brilliant reconnaissance work for this attack was done by a brigadier, who advanced five thousand yards in front of his line in a whippet tank.

"He's always trotting about the front line," said a member of his staff, explaining his absence. "He is a regular dare-devil, who isn't happy if he isn't in the thick of it."

The excellent work of our artillery and in particular a Manitoba battery did useful service at a critical moment by laying down a smoek screen across the Cambrai road under cover of which the infantry pushed their attack.

Sir Wm. Mackenzie Has Highest Income

Pays Nearly Seven Thousand Dollars Taxes on His Income And Smiles

TORONTO, Sept. 13.—The assessment rolls for ward three, which have just been handed over to the City Clerk show that Sir Wm. Mackenzie is still to enjoy the distinction of paying municipal taxes on the highest income entered on Toronto rolls. His income assessment for 1919 is $225,000, so that his income tax to the city will be over $6,750. This, of course, is in addition to his federal income tax.

The Premier of the province pays taxes on the comparatively modest assessment of $12,500. Most of his colleagues at Queen's Park apparently contend that their residence is outside of Toronto and thus escape the taxation here. The idea that the city does not catch as many of the big fish as it does of the little when it spreads its income tax net is born out to some extent by an examination of the rolls. This, however, is partly due to the fact that the law specifically exempts dividends from mercantile and manufacturing concerns from income tax, an unfair discrimination which Toronto is trying to have the legislature remedy.

The result of the present law is that men with large incomes from industrial concerns escape the greater part of what might be considered their legitimate income tax, while men with large salaries in banks and trust companies and men who have amounts of money invested in mortgages are compelled to pay.

Householders Asked to Cut Down Sugar Rations Voluntarily

Canada Food Board Issues Appeal to Householders to Save—300,000-Ton Shortage in Cuban Cane Crop—Losses From Submarines

The Canada Food Board urges householders to assist in arranging a fair distribution of sugar. Owing to the fact that the Cuban cane crop has proved to be 300,000 tons short of the original estimates upon which sugar allotments for Canada and the Allied countries were based, with additional shortages due to disappointment of the Louisiana cane crop and the sugar beet crop of the United States and losses from submarine attacks off the American Coast, the International Sugar Commission have been obliged to reduce the amounts allotted to the various Allied countries, including Canada. The Canada Food Board has, therefore, imposed radical restrictions upon manufacturers using sugar for the purpose of providing sufficient quantities to supply householders. It would be manifestly unfair, however, if people in the homes ate up the sugar saved by regulations of manufacturers, by wasteful or extravagant use, or even by permitting consumption of amounts normally used in normal years. The Food Board urges that a family of two should not use more than an aggregate of one quarter of a level cupful of sugar per day for cooking, table use, and all other purposes, except preserving, and for other families consumption should be limited to the same proportion.

"The greatest waste of sugar does not occur in the manufacture of candy or in commercial uses, all of which are now under drastic regulations. Instead it is found in unnecessary and excessive use of sugar in the homes," says the Food Board. "The time has come when the people of Canada must must be reduced. With reasonable conservation there will be sufficient to take care of preserving requirements, and to meet the necessary demands until the end of the year, when the new crop will be available, but this can only be assured by reduced domestic consumption. If extravagance is continued in the homes, shortage is unavoidable and the blame will rest with the householder."

Among the ways in which the public are asked to conserve sugar, in addition to observing the honor ration of not more than two pounds, per person, per month, are the following:—

"Use white corn syrup in part in canning and preserving.

Use no more than one level teaspoonful of sugar in sweetening any cup of tea, coffee or other beverage.

Discontinue the making of rich pastries.

Use no more sugar in canning and preserving than is absolutely necessary.

The making of heavy jams and preserves is not necessary and should be stopped.

In Old Age

Health and comfort in old age depends largely on keeping the liver and kidneys in healthful action.

Pains and aches, stiffness of the joints, lumbago and rheumatism tell of poisons left in the blood by sluggishness of the liver and kidneys.

People in advanced years hold Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills in high esteem because of the promptness and certainty with which they awaken the action of kidneys, liver and bowels.

No Relaxation Of British Food Laws

OTTAWA, Sept. 13.—The following cable dealing with conditions in England compiled by the Minister of Information under the authority of the War Cabinet, was received here by the Director of Public Information:

Early threshing reports show a lower yield that was anticipated. The Food Controller speaking at Derby said, notwithstanding the bountiful harvest, no relaxation of food restrictions and economies is possible. It must be remembered tht ships are needed to transport American troops to France.

It is hoped the fruit shortage will be remedied by using vegetable marrows at fixed prices for jam, also blackberries collected by school children. The price of wheat is unchanged. An increase has been allowed to cover the increased cost of production of barley and oats.

The estimated profit of the national restaurant is seventy per cent. There is a proposal to economize winter fuel by extending service kitchens and restaurants.

Buffalo, N.Y., Sept. 12—Practically all of western New York was under a blanket of white frost yesterday morning, and reports to the weather bureau indicate that it reached the stage of "killing frost" in the central and northern part of the State.

Except for grapes, practically all crops that would suffer from heavy loss probably will not be serious. The indications are that the period of low temperature has passed, it was said at the weather bureau.

THE vital elements that give beef its special place and value as a food are concentrated and stored in Bovril.

Just as the equivalent light of 32 candles is concentrated in one electric lamp, so the vital elements of beef—of many pounds of beef—are concentrated in a single bottle of Bovril.

But Bovril is not merely a precious food in itself; it possesses the peculiar power of enabling you to extract more nourishment from other foods. This gives Bovril its wonderful body-building power, proved by independent experiment to be from 10 to 20 times the amount taken. Bovril, therefore, in the true sense of the word, is a Great Food Saver.

Always keep Bovril in the house.

"THE GARDEN OF CANADA"

That Prince Edward County can justly claim to be the garden of Canada is evidenced by statistics of production contained in a little booklet published by the Picton Times, which tells in detail a marvellous story of increased production consequent upon the demands of war. The United Empire Loyalists who were the pioneer settlers in Prince Edward County certainly chose wisely and well a location where the soil was rich and where the efforts of man would be certain of abundant reward. The prosperity of Prince Edward County is founded upon the fertility of the soil, climatic conditions and situation, but these advantages would not have produced the splendid results achieved had it not been for the rugged health and untiring zeal of the citizens embued with the determination to succeed, the will to win despite every obstacle and discouragement.

The result of years of constant effort is now reflected in the splendid farms, orchards and dairies, comfortable residences and modern farm buildings, while canning factories and cheese factories add materially to the general prosperity which has caused many thriving villages and towns to blossom and progress.

In 1917 the products of Prince Edward County totalled $8,253,270, and the following comparison with previous years is interesting:

1916—$5,793,000.
1915—$6,385,000.
1914—$3,775,000.
1913—$3,435,000.

The production for 1918 is expected to surpass the banner year of 1917 from all present indications.

An Amazing Record.

The products of Prince Edward County for 1917 aggregated in value $8,253,270, divided as follows:

Canned vegetables and fruit, $1,250,000.
Cheese and butter, $1,500,000.
Seed peas, $100,000.
Other grains, $1,649,847.
Roots and vegetables, $162,641.
Hay and clover, $830,971.
Apples, $300,000.
Other fruit, $150,000.
Cattle, $1,250,000.
Hogs, $500,000.
Horses (sold), $115,425.
Sheep, $119,386.
Poultry and eggs, $225,000.
Fish, $100,000.

Truly an amazing record and one to be proud of. Prince Edward county with a population of 17,150 and 195,365 acres of arable land, produces annually a larger return per capita than any other county in Ontario. This county produces half of Canada's canned goods.

Prince Edward County citizens, descended as they are from United Empire Loyalist forebears, could not help but be patriotic, not alone in increased production, but in cash subscriptions to worthy war funds. For the Victory Loan in 1917 the county subscribed $1,134,850, a greater amount per capita than was raised by any other county in Canada.

Best County Fair in Canada.

Picton, with a population of 3,600, is the County Town of Prince Edward, and a progressive hustling town it is too, with more live wires than dead wood judging from the success of the Picton Fair alone, a fair association with a membership of 1,100 and officers who know the value of publicity and do not hesitate to spend money on advertising to get the results. An attendance of ten thousand on one day of the Picton Fair is not unusual and receipts have run as high as $12,000. That there is no suspicion of cold feet about the management of the Picton Fair is evidenced from the fact that the sum of seven hundred dollars was spent on band music alone for last year's fair.

Prince Edward County is without doubt the finest agricultural section in all Canada, with the best roads, and Picton Fair has no equal outside of the larger cities.

Sir Robert Borden urges economy and is willing to set the example, being ready right now to do without a whole lot of the advice that most folks seem willing to supply him with, says the Toronto Star.

The fashion men have of writing their signatures so that they resemble a Chinese laundry check more than anything else is one of the annoyances of modern business life. Rear-Admiral Wood, of Boston, has set a good example by requiring all signatures to military documents in his department to be accompanied by a typewritten translation.

With approximately one million Yanks assisted by French troops smashing through the St. Mihiel salient and threatening an invasion of German soil the troubles of the Hun high command are multiplied and the frantic and voluble efforts of the Kaiser, Hindenburg, et al, to keep the German people from panic will have to be speeded up. Words will have to be reinforced with works to have any effect.

An item of news Sir Edward Kemp brings from England is that "the Canadian boys are marrying the English girls at the rate of a thousand a month, and jolly fine wives they make, too." An organised band of drug thieves is undoubtedly at work in Ontario, many towns having been visited and morphine, cocaine and other habit-forming drugs stolen. The thieves know what they are after and waste no time upon drugs not easily disposed of in illicit sale. Five drug stores in Belleville have been broken into recently and drugs stolen, and similar thefts are reported from other places. The matter should be taken up by the provincial authorities at once.

OTHER VIEWS

British Labor.

New York Tribune.

In England, as elsewhere, labor is overwhelmingly loyal and patriotic. If this were not so England would have failed in the war long ago. If it were not so France could not have saved the world for democracy. If it were not so in this country we should not be now in the thick of the work at Armageddon. England's rebellious labor minority is more articulate and political and troublesome than the corresponding element in this country. That is owing partly to circumstances partly to the fact that volunteering in the beginning diluted the spirit, and largely, besides, to the fact that in Great Britain there was no Samuel Gompers.

Canada and Divorce.

Regina Post.

We should have either one thing or the other. Either our Canadian law should state that divorce may be granted in Canada for any reason whatsoever, or it should state specifically the grounds upon which divorce may be procured and establish courts in all provinces open equally to the rich and poor alike, and to husbands and wives upon the same footing.

Bringing Patriotism Home.

Hamilton Herald.

There are people whose patriotic talk is most fervid and who are extremely hard on "slackers", yet whose patriotism is not equal to the self-sacrifice of one teaspoonful of sugar at a meal.

The Duty of All.

London Daily Express.

It is for masters as well as men to think of their country first. Fair play, tact, and readiness to see other points of view, are necessary if labor troubles are to be avoided. At heart, every worker in the land wants to win the war. It is for him to refuse to nurse small grievances. It is for employers and officials to avoid small irritations.

A Coming Day.

Regina Post.

We are calmly waiting for the time when we may summon all our dignity as an ultimate consumer and tell the butcher, the baker and the candlestick maker that "on account of the peace" we'll be danged if we'll pay such prices.

HOW A YOUNG GIRL SUFFERED

And Was Restored to Health By Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound—Told By Her Mother.

Brooklyn, N. Y.—"I cannot praise Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound enough for what it has done for my daughter. She was 15 years of age, very sickly and pale and she had to stay home from school most of the time. She suffered agonies from backache and dizziness and was without appetite. For three months she was under the doctor's care and got no better, always complaining about her back and side aching so I didn't know what to do. I read in the papers about your wonderful medicine so I made up my mind to try it. She has taken five bottles of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and doesn't complain any more with her back and side aching. She has gained in weight and feels much better. I recommend Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound to all mothers and daughters."—Mrs. M. Finore, 516 Marcy Ave., Brooklyn, N.Y.

For special advice in regard to such ailments write to Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co., Lynn, Mass.

The Poet's Corner

Joyce Kilmer, one of the most popular of American poets of the people, has made the supreme sacrifice for his country's cause, being killed in action in France. The world is the poorer for the loss of a very gallant gentleman and a poet who never wrote a line that was not pure, and sweet, and clean. Before he enlisted he was the poetry editor of the Literary Digest. In his memory the New York Times, with which he had a long and close, connection, publishes this poem:

Joyce Kilmer.

By Elsa Barker.

The singers of a nation
Weep as one soul this day.
Our glad child-hearted comrade
Has gone the patriot's way;
A grave in grave-encumbered France
Now wears his wreath of bay.

His youth and self forgotten
When the Great Summons came,
He knew the soldier's purpose
More than the poet's fame.
Does he know today a thousand throats
Choke as they speak his name?

The candles in St. Leo's
Have flickered with dismay
Each noontime for the long year
He has not come to pray.
Today they burn with steady flame
To light him on his way.

When Joyce came home the white ships
Stirred with the moving tide—
The spectral ships he visioned
Washed clean and glorified.
But one red ship sinks deeper
Because of him who died.

Perhaps the best-known poem of Sergeant Kilmer's is that which he wrote upon the sinking of the Lusitania, "The White Ships and the Red." We reproduce here the last three stanzas:

The White Ships and the Red.

By Joyce Kilmer.

I went not forth to battle,
I carried friendly men,
The children played about my decks,
The women sang—and then—
And then—the sun blushed scarlet,
And Heaven hid its face;
The world that God created
Became a shameful place.

My wrong cries out for vengeance;
The blow that sent me here
Was aimed in Hell. My dying scream
Has reached Jehovah's ear.
Not all the seven oceans
Shall wash away the stain;
Upon a brow that wears a crown
I am the brand of Cain.

When God's great voice assembles
The fleet on Judgment day,
The ghosts of ruined ships will rise
In sea and strait and bay.
Though they have lain for ages
Beneath the changeless flood,
They shall be white as silver,
But one—shall be like blood.

In his "Main Street" he paid a tribute to the memory of a fellow poet, Rupert Brooke, every word of which we can apply with equal truth to Joyce Kilmer himself:

In Memory of Rupert Brooke.

By Joyce Kilmer.

In alien earth, across a troubled sea
His body lies that was so fair and young.
His mouth is stopt, with half his songs unsung;
His arm is still, that struck to make men free.
But let no cloud of lamentation be
Where, on a warrior's grave, a lyre is hung.
We keep the echoes of his golden tongue,
We keep the vision of his chivalry.
So Israel's joy, the loveliest of kings,
Smote now his harp, and now the hostile horde,
Today the starry roof of heaven rings
With psalms a soldier made to praise his Lord;
And David rests beneath Eternal wings,
Song on his lips, and in his hand a sword.

Much of Joyce Kilmer's work had a strong religious vein running through it, and here is such a poem, written in the trenches:

Prayer of a Soldier in France.

By Joyce Kilmer.

My shoulders ache beneath my pack
(Lie easier, Cross, upon His back).

I march with feet that burn and smart
(Tread, Holy Feet, upon my heart).

Men shout at me who may not speak
(They scourged Thy back and smote Thy cheek).

I may not lift a hand to clear
My eyes of salty drops that sear.

(Then shall my fickle soul forget Thy agony of Bloody Sweat?)

My rifle hand is stiff and numb
(From Thy pierced palm red rivers come).

Lord, Thou didst suffer more for me
Than all the hosts of land and sea.

So let me render back again
This millionth part of Thy gift. Amen.

Trees.

By Joyce Kilmer.

I think that I shall never see
A poem lovely as a tree.

A tree whose hungry mouth is prest
Against the earth's sweet flowing breast;

A tree that looks at God all day
And lifts her leafy arms to pray;

A tree that may in summer wear
A nest of robins in her hair;

Upon whose bosom snow has lain;
Who intimately lives with rain.

Poems are made by fools like me,
But only God can make a tree.

Wanted a Likeness.

"I'll have to pass up the flattery this time. It's for a passport."

American Transport Did Not Sink

Hit by Torpedo Kept Afloat Until Shore was Reached

LONDON, Sept. 12.—The troopship with 2,800 American soldiers on board which was torpedoed last Friday did not sink and was beached. The transfer of the American soldiers from the stricken vessel to escorting British and American destroyers, was quickly made without injury to anyone. They escaped injury when the torpedo exploded, and they were soon on their way to a near port.

There was no sign of panic on board. Several soldiers told the Associated Press that they saw the German submarine lifted clear out of the water after one of the depth bombs exploded and then entirely disappear.

Something had gone wrong with the troopship's engines, which compelled her for a time to lag behind the rest of the convoy, but the trouble had been fixed up and she was fast catching up with the other transports when a torpedo hit her just forward of the engine room.

Many Taking Baths.

The vessel at once began to sink by the bow. Many of the soldiers at the time were taking baths. They did not wait to dress but made for the deck with what little clothing they could lay their hands on. The water was rushing in at such a rate that it was thought the steamer would quickly founder.

To the surprise of most of the soldiers the troopship did not sink. Some means, apparently, were found to check the inrush of water, and she got near enough to the shore to be beached. It is hoped that the vessel ultimately can be saved.

Safe in Rest Camp.

An Inland Rest Camp in England, Sept. 11.—The majority of the 2,800 American soldiers from the troopship which was torpedoed last Friday off the English coast have arrived here none the worse.

Whole World Calls Church To Be Ready

TORONTO, Sept. 12.—In the presence of the Anglican patriarchs and leader of the entire Dominion, of dignitaries from the United States and of a congregation that all but filled St. James' Cathedral, the General Synod of the Church of England in Canada was formally opened this morning with an impressive service. With the words of an inspiring sermon, by Bishop McCormick, of West Michigan, fresh in their ears, the delegates this afternoon began their sessions.

Bishop McCormick's sermon was a warning to the Church and its workers of responsibilities that face them at "this critical hour" and of the exceptions with which the whole world watches.

"We who love the Church,' he said, "must make good in the face of destiny. The Church must stand or fall in the centre and in the open."

"An American bishop addresses the Church in Canada, when America and Canada are joined together in a war that is sweeping the world. Now everything must be big, open, catholic, cosmopolitan. Everything small must be scratched or made big. The churchmen of the United States and Canada have a chance to develop a Christianity that is unconfined. The spirit of the times would have the Church speak up and speak out. We must be ready to look up, not down, out not in, forward not backward.

"If we take the position that by Divine right is ours, it will be welcomed and honored. We who love the Church must make good in the face of destiny. In the spirit of objective Christianity we must aproach our problems. From all the corners of the world there come to us the call to be ready at this critical hour to play the man."

Use Cocoanut Oil For Washing Hair

If you want to keep your hair in good condition, be careful what you wash it with.

Don't use prepared shampoos or anything else, that contains too much alkali. This dries the scalp, makes the hair brittle, and is very harmful. Just plain mulsified cocoanut oil (which is pure and entirely greaseless, is much better than anything else you can use for shampooing, as this can't possibly injure the hair.

Simply moisten your hair with water and rub it in. One or two teaspoonfuls will make an abundance of rich, creamy lather, and cleanses the hair and scalp thoroughly. The lather rinses out easily and removes every particle of dust, dirt, dandruff and excessive oil. The hair dries quickly and evenly, and it leaves it fine and silky, bright, fluffy and easy to manage.

You can get mulsified cocoanut oil at most any drug store. It is very cheap, and a few ounces is enough to last everyone in the family for months.

WOMEN MILITARY AVIATORS EMPLOYED BY GERMANS

With the American Army in France, Sept. 13.—That the Germans are using women as military aviators is indicated in a report that in a machine recently brought down by the Americans the pilot, who was killed, was a woman. The captain of a company of the 167th infantry says the pilot of a German plane brought down near Sergy, August 28, by Lieut. Miller Thompson, of the American Air Force was a woman.

Canada's Credit Best in The Whole Wide World

NEW YORK, September, 12, 1918—

(By A.C. LAUT)

In a former article on Canada's good credit standing in the United States, the statement was made that three counter-currents would presently restore Canada's exchange with the United States—namely, the exportations of surplus food and feed stuffs the payment for munition orders placed in Canada, and the cancelling of British debts to Canada by American ocean transportation charges owing to England. Exception was taken to this statement by some of the banking interests of Canada on two grounds—first, that the crop was a failure and there would be very little surplus food and feeds to export; and second, that munition orders to da from the United States do not exceed $100,000,000 and that stille leaves a balance of trade against Canada for $300,000,000. In the face of which how can American Wall Street bankers still be optimistic as to Canada's credit? Isn't the view too rosy-red?

My answer is—in view of world conditions, we canot take too rosy a view of Canadian finance. The year after the war broke out, I was in Ottawa, I came directly from the International Finance Commission that had come from England to arrange the floating of the first great Allied Loan, and I happened to mention that the biggest men of Wall Street confidently expected Canada's war debt to exceed a billion. A very big Canadian financier, indeed, gave me one look of withering, blighting, blasting contempt "A billion. Physically impossible! Consider the population of the country!- Preposterous!" Yet Canada's war debts have rolled up to a billion, and if the war lasts, they may roll up to two; and in face of that, Wall Street is rosy-red fool-happy optimistic on Canadian credit. In the name of sacred cats—why? What is the matter with Wall Street? Is Wall Street daffy? May be; but being right on money guesses; because Wall Street always guesses with facts for the counters; and here are the reasons why Wall Street is so cocksure, rosy-red, fool-happy optimistic on Canadian credit.

THE CANADIAN CROPS

Take the question of cereal crops, which the Canadian banking interests say are a failure. They are. There are—we'll say—a 2 to 30 per cent failure. We'll probably have only 200 million bushels of wheat in Canada this year instead of 300 million bushels. Well, the very same thing holds good on this side of the line. The crops here, too, are a failure with the exception of oats. Only, we are still lying about it. Early in spring, we whooped we were going to have a billion bushel crop of wheat. Then it was hot and dry in May and wet in June, and we whooped with less of a jubilate about the crop maybe shrinking to 900 milion bushels, or even 800 million bushels. Then July and August came with heat that can't be described—shrivelling heat that shrunk and ripened prematurely the delayed cereals; and we began singing in a very minor key—indeed, about a 700 million wheat crop. To save their faces, the Government experts—with accent on the spurts—began talking vaguely about the hog farmers hoarding wheat." I hope to see the joker. Farmers are likely "to hoard wheat" when the price is fixed as the laws of the Medes and Persians. The plain gospel truth is American wheat is not coming on the market in an avalanche for exportation, because a big surplus for exportation does not exist; and though we may lie like a German facst will call our bluff by December. Figure for yourself.

Suppose this country has a crop of 700 milion bushels of wheat real exportable wheat, not hot-air prophecy wheat. For seed purposes there will be needed 125 million bushels, taking for granted we increase the area and plant 60 to 65 million acres of fall and spring for next year. Now while the food administrators of the allies set down 4 1-2 bushels to a barrel of flour, that is only a study-chair, parlor-socialist estimate. It takes no account of waste, of shelling in, the field, of shrinkage, etc. The greatest authorities place the per capita consumption of wheat in the United States—I mean authorities like the late Jim Hill or Sir Ramsey Crookes at nearly 6 bushels per head than 5. A barrel of flour is estimated at 300 to 330 loaves of bread, or the cereal rations per head for a year. Place the consumption at 5 bushels for the home use! You have left for export of the year's crop here 75 million bushels. Now that total may be swelled by using corn and rice and flour substitutes at home; but figure the credit value of 75 million bushels of wheat at $2.25 a bushel and you have a credit slip on wheat account coming to the United States of $168,750,000 for the year.

DIFFERENT IN CANADA

Now take Canada's case! I can't foretell—neither can you—what acreage of wheat she will plant next year; but it is a perfectly safe guess she will not need 50 million bushels for seed. For home food, she will need, say 35 million bushels—that gives a loaf per head per day. Granted her crop is a failure. Granted she raises only 200 million bushels this year. She will have left for export over 100 million bushels, which will give her a credit slip on wheat account of $225,000,000 for the year.

Now if you were a big international banker like Wall Street, literally financing the whole world, which would you consider the better risk—a 7 million nation with a wheat surplus worth $225,000,000 in a bad year, or a 100 million nation with surplus worth $168,750,000? Wall Street may be a slimy jade clad in golden ducats with the mark of the little S with two sticks through it on her forehead, but when Wall Street is dealing with money guesses, facts are her counters. And the facts holding good as to wheat in Canada also hold equally good as to lumber, gold, copper, fish, land.

Take land! When five million men come back from the war to this country do you fancy after fierce, care-free, dare devil life in the open, changing mushy muscles and flabby flesh into thew and fire, that these men are going back to "chiffon counters and office stools," to quote Robert Service? They did not after the Civil War here. When the Civil War was over, they demanded a man's job on the land; and they peopled the West. Where are they going to get free land after this war? Russia yes, to be sure; but I don't fancy they will go there. China and Mexico, yes; but I don't see a rush of white men to either country. There is only one country with abundance of free land; and that is Canada; and to Canada they will go as sure as a magnet draws iron filings. Her brave fighters have done for Canada what all the advertising bureaus under the sun could not do. Another reason why Wall Streets considers Canada's credit one of the best risks under the sun!

But there is another reason which the big fellows are not talking about just now. It is too dangerous. It is full of dynamite. I don not suppose the amount can ever be computed which investors in this country have lost in Mexico and Russia. They have lost in Mexico and Russia because of what we call revolution, but really because of Bolshekism run riot; and wherever the majority of the population are not vested righters owning their own home acres, Bolshevikism is going to run riot for the next few years. In this country 30 per cent. of the people are agricultural, 70 per cent are industrial, and of the industrial, 18 millions are to-day engaged in war industries at wages which make the wildest Socialist's dreams pale. In Canada, we are a people still basically agricultural, with our feet on the solid ground of our own home acres. We are still individualtists and vested righters. We like to be allowed to possess what we earn instead of handing it over to some lazy spout. When the war is over what of the 18 million workers now in war industries at wages that must come down? Wall Street is no fool. She is looking for places where investments and credits willl be safe till the storm passes; and that is another reason why she regards Canadian credit as the safest and stablest in the world.

So, in spite of my banker critics, I repeat, even if Canada's war debt should go to two billions, Wall Street will still regard her credit as the best in the world; and if I were Canada instead of damning myself with faint praise. I'd beckon back to Wall Street, "come right on."

Economy Begins at Home

Now-a-days Governments, Chancellors, bankers and business men talk economy. However, it is one thing to talk economy and another to put it into practice.

The Canadian Housewife

holds the key to the situation. Real economy may be practised by the housewife in food purchasing for the home. At very small cost she may obtain the finest cocoa that money can buy — a cocoa unexcelled as a food drink and unrivalled as a flavoring, that adds extra delight to hundreds of dainty desserts.

WHAT VIENNA SAYS

VIENNA, via London, Sept. 13—Patrol engagements and artillery fighting were reported yesterday by the War Office. The statement said: "In the Tyrol there were local patrol engagements. In the Asolone region we repelled an Italian surprise attack with sanguinary losses. Artillery fighting continues on the Piave. We made a successful attack in Albania on the Tomorica ridge, taking possession of the enemy's positions at a few points."

Civil Service Chief For Ontario

J. M. McCutcheon, B.A., D. Paed., who, since the organization of the Ontario Workmen's Compensation Board in 1914, has acted as its secretary, has been appointed Civil Service Commissioner for the Province of Ontario. The appointment is made under the Act of the last session of the Legislature, which gives the commissioner control over all appointments in the various departments, by requiring his certificate that the appointment is necessary, the salary reasonable and the applicant duly qualified. It will be Mr. McCutcheon's duty to investigate and later make recommendations for the improvement of the organization and business methods in the departments with a view to greater efficiency and economy.

The new commissioner is a native of Grey Township, Huron County, and a graduate of Queen's in Arts and Pedagogy. For seven or eight years he was principal of the St. Thomas High School, and for six and a half years English master at the Stratford Normal School. He left the teaching profession to take the secretaryship of the Compensation Board. His service there has marked him as a man of judicial mind, with organizing ability of a high order.

All Signs Point To Col. Bickford

OTTAWA, Sept. 13.—Announcement of the appointment of an officer to command the infantry brigade with the Canadian expedition to Siberia and of other officers for that force is expected within the next few days.

There seems to be a growing impression that Col. Bickford, of Toronto, now in command of military district no. 2, will be promoted to the rank of brigadier-general and be placed in charge of the infantry brigade.

It is also reported that Brig-Gen. Swift, D.S.O., of Quebec, has accepted command of a battalion of infantry and will revert to the rank of colonel.

French Trawler Sank Submarine

PARIS, Sept. 13.—The exploit of a French trawler, the Automne, which succeeded in destroying a submarine which was attacking a British steamer in the Mediterranean, is described in a despatch to the Matin from Toulon.

The trawler was patroling the Mediterranean when it received a wireless call from the British vessel, which was being attacked 30 miles off Marseilles. Although the submarine had submerged the Automne traced it and succeeded in destroying it with depth bombs. The British steamer returned safely to Marseilles.

Murder Orgy Bleeds Russia

Massacres by Bolsheviki Rage In Cities of Moscow and Petrograd

STOCKHOLM Sept. 13—July and August were months of horror which will never be forgotten by persons who watched Russia's two great cities—Petrograd and Moscow—pass through the mad attempt of the Bolsheviki to shoot or imprison all persons who disagreed with their wild efforts to control crumpling European Russia. September probably will be werse for the opposition parties are gaining strength through desperation.

The lives of the non-Bolsheviki are unsafe and everywhere in Russia self-defense is forcing unwilling belligerents to take up arms against the ruthless persecution of the so-called Commissions for the suppression of a counter-revolution which shoot down the burgeoisie by the hundreds.

Leon Trotsky the Bolsheviki Minister of War, evidently is determined that his dictatorship of the proletariat shall not repeat the history of the former provisional Government and fall through being too merciful.

Ex-Premier Kerensky refused to impose the death penalty, and his Government fell almost without the loss of a life, but the observers of the Russian political situation say that no such bloodless end will come to the Soviet Republic. It has given no quarter and it willl receive none.

Premier Lenine, War Minister Trotsky, Sverdloff, President of the Central Executive Committee, and other Bolsheviki leaders realize this and they doubtless will fight as long as a single soldier remains loyal to them.

Trotsky has said in speeches that Moscow will be reduced to ashes before it is surrendered. Yaroslav, a town on the Volga, 18 miles northeast of Moscow, was burned for resisting Bolsheviki domination and Vologda, 110 miles north of Yaroslav, is reported to have suffered the same fate.

Night has been hideous in Moscow for months because of the volleys from execution squads in the military enclosures where prisoners are kpet. Foreigners and Russians alike were searched without warrants and Red Guards march crowds of men and women prisoners through the streets with such regularity that pedestrians harly noticed them.

Marie Spiridonova, a Social Revolutianary leader, charged in her Russian Soviet Congress at Moscow on July 4 that Bolsheviki rule was more tyrannical than that of the late Emperor, and the reign of terror had scarcely begun at that time.

Caught Female Spy At Telegraph Work

NEW YORK, Sept. 13—Information has been obtained that Miss Wanda Kreutingzer, a Postal Telegraph Company operator, who was taken into custody here Wednesday, has transmitted directly to the German Government important information regarding munition ships, obtained from cablegrams and telegrams which passed through her hands, according to a statement to-night by Federal authorities.

These transmissions, the statement said, were made in 1914 and 1915. But within the last six weeks, it is asserted, Miss Kreutingzer has furnished similar information "to persons she believed to represent the Imperial German Government." The operator has been under surveilance for some time.

Miss Kreutingzer, who is a registered enemy alien, told her examiners she was born in Posen, Germany, 42 years ago, and she had been in the United States 20 years. She has been employed by the Postal Telegraph Company for sixteen years, working as an operator in the Chicago office until the outbreak of the war, when she obtained a transfer to the New York office.

According to the statement, Miss Kreutingzer received no money for her services, doing the work "because of her love for the homeland."

A Presidential warrant for her internment as a dangerous enemy alien has been requested it was announced.

What Is Necessary.

Buffalo Enquirer.

The German people must be given an object lesson. The mere cessation of hostilities and the readjustment of the map will not settle the war nor satisfy civilization's sentiment. There must be an outward and visible concrete and convincing demonstration of triumph—a crowning pageant which will show the wide world that the menace of Prussianism has been removed for all time.

Ironing this way is almost as easy as knitting

Knitting requires only the knitter's hands. Ironing with the Hydro iron needs her hands and her eyes. It does not need her thoughts. They may be planning the coming family picnic or a new dress. Work that does not take the thoughts, does not tire. It goes on and is done before we realize.

How different from the old way! Could anyone keep her thoughts off the hateful task of ironing in a sweltering kitchen, with scorching fingers, worries about keeping the fire up, over heated or under heated irons?

THE HYDRO IRON

is ready in three minutes with exactly the proper heat. It holds that heat the same till the work is done. No heat on the hands. The Hydro costs only $4.50 and is guaranteed to take you comfortably through 260 weekly ironings—5 years of satisfaction.

FILED RINGS FROM WOMAN'S FINGERS

Muscles and Joints Terribly Swollen—Rheumatism Disapears After Taking Tanlac

"At the time I began taking Tanlac my condition was such that if I remained in one position any length of time my joints would get so stiff I could hardly move," said Mrs. Martha Walker, of 262 Evelyn Ave., Toronto, the other day. Mrs. Walker is a well-known woman of education and refinement, and her statement in regard to the benefits she has derived through the use of Tanlac will be of unusual interest to her many friends.

"About six years ago," she contiaued, "my health began to fail, my blood was bad, my circulation poor and I was in a dreadfully anaemic condition. I suffered from rheumatism and my limbs and feet were so swollen that I had to wear shoes two or three sizes larger than my regular number. I felt bloated all over, even my eyes were puffy and I could hardly put on a pair of kid gloves without nearly ruining them. Why, four years ago I just had to have my rings filed off my fingers. My flesh was so sensitive I could hardly bear the weight of my hand anywhere and I was almost in constant pain. My nerves were so frayed that I could hardly sleep at night, and I was actually afraid to drive my car around.

"Although I tried all kinds of medicines nothing did me any good, but when I heard so much about Tanlac I decided to try it next. Before I finished my first bottle I felt so much better that I kept it up till now my nerves are more quiet. I rest well at night and am stronger and better in every way than I have been in years. The swelling and soreness have almost left me entirely, I am wearing my regular size of shoe, I have put on my rings again, and I have been driving my car around all summer. I cannot praise Tanlac too highly, and have already recommended it to several of my friends."

"Tanlac is sold in Belleville by Ostrom's Drug Store, in Trenton by J. H. Dickey, in Deseronto by W. J. Malley, in Stirling by J. S. Morton, in Frankford by W. J. Lettimer, in Madoc by J. Will Vince, in Marysville by T. . McAlpine, in Ormsby by Jas. Campbell and in Thomasburg by J. H. Blakely."

"THE GARDEN OF ALLAH"

Allah stands at the head of all gardeners and anyone in doubt should go and see "The Garden of Allah," which on its sixth annual tour, will come to Griffin's Opera House, Belleville, next Tuesday, night, for one night only, for it is a marvel in many ways.

The first rise of the curtain reveals a scene of the Great Sahara desert stretching away like an ocean of sand, its countless dunes rising and falling like mighty swells and the morning sun sending its ruddy rays up from the depths—messengers of its gladsome coming to illuminate and revivify the world.

And then across the sand strange beings pass like spectres that seem to come into one's presence from that mysterious past and who, saying not a word, bow in homage to the new day.

The desert then vanishes and a town hotel is seen, alive with strife and turmoil. This gives place to another and again another filled with restlessness and trouble. The silence having been replaced by the noise of weird babble. Another change and one is before a wondrous garden, a vision of the way the world ought to be and may have been in the beginning.

This scene vanishes in its turn and one is in the very centre of a real sandstorm—a storm that makes its own darkness—whose fierceness is a tempest of dashing sand. And then it is night and the stars are out in all their glory. The Milky Way seems almost to touch the earth. And then last of all is the scene of the monastry—the place where peace and rest have their home and the tired soul is safe.

In the midst of all these wonderful scenes, the principals and supporting company, the Arabs, camels, horses, donkeys, goats, pigeons, etc., fill their roles and do their parts so impressively that the illusion is very remarkable with many dramatic climaxes.

EDNA MAYO IN "THE CHAPERON"

A light and varied program of photoplays is being exhibited at the Palace for the week-end, the feature offering being "The Chaperon," a five part Essanay comedy drama with beautiful Edna Mayo in the stellar role. "The Rag Doll," a very amusing 2-part Kalem comedy and "The Mirror of Fear," a gripping detective story are also being screened.

EXCELLENT COMEDY PROGRAM

The Lee children, Katherine and Jane, those amazingly clever juveniles of the silent drama, are appearing at Griffin's on the week end program in a highly amusing 6-part comedy offering entitled "Troublemakers." This comedy which was produced for laughing purposes only, affords one and a half hours of real wholesome amusement. "Her Final Reckoning" a splendid dramatic offering with Pauline Frederick in the stellar role revealed a story of unusual interest which held the interest to the last flicker. "My Wife's Husband," a highly amusing 2-part Sunshine comedy, and the 3rd chapter of Vitagraph's thrilling serial of early Western daring "A Fight for a Million," were also exhibited and greatly pleased. The entire program will be repeated to-night and Saturday.

Tells Dyspeptics What To Eat

Avoid Indigestion, Sour Acid Stomach Heartburn, Gas On Stomach, Etc.

Indigestion and practically all forms of stomach trouble, say medical authorities, are due nine times out of ten to an excess of hydrochloric acid in the stomach. Chronic "acid stomach" is exceedingly dangerous and sufferers should do either one of two things.

Either they can go on a limited and often disagreeable diet, avoiding foods that disagree with them, that irritate the stomach and lead to excess acid secretion or they can eat as they please in reason and make it a practice to counteract the effect of the harmful acid and prevent the formation of gas, sourness or premature fermentation by the use of a little Bisurated Magnesia at their meals.

There is probably no better, safer or more reliable stomach antiacid than Bisurated Magnesia and it is widely used for this purpose. It has no direct action on the stomach and is not a digestent. But a teaspoonful of the powder or a couple of five grain tablets taken in a little water with the food will neutralize the excess acidity which may be present and prevent its further formation. This removes the whole cause of the trouble and the meal digests naturally and healthfully without need of pepsin pills or artificial digestents.

Get a few ounces of Bisurated Magnesia from any reliable druggist. Ask for either powder or tablets. It never comes as a liquid, milk or citrate and in the bisurated form is not a laxative. Try this plan and eat what you want at your next meal and see if this isn't the best advice you ever had on "what to eat."

CUT THIS OUT

Old English Recipe For Catarrh, Catarrhal Deafness and Head Noises

If you know of some one who is troubled with Catarrhal Deafness, head noises or ordinary catarrh cut out this formula and hand it to them and you may have been the means of saving some poor sufferer perhaps from total deafness. In England scientists for a long time past have recognized that catarrh is a constitutional disease and necessarily requires constitutional treatment.

Sprays, inhalers and nose douches are liable to irritate the delicate air passages and force the disease into the middle ear which frequently means total deafness, or else the disease may be driven down the air passages towards the lungs which is equally as dangerous. The following formula which is used extensively in the damp English climate is a constitutional treatment and should prove especially efficacious to sufferers here who live under more favorable climate conditions.

Secure from your druggist 1 ounce of Parmint (Double strength). Take this home and add to it ¼ pint of hot water and a little granulated sugar; stir until dissolved Take one tablespoon ful four times a day. This will often bring quick relief from distressing head noises. Clogged nostrils should open, breathing become easy and hearing improve as the inflammation in the eustachian tubes is reduced. Parmint used in this way acts directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system and has a tonic action that helps to obtain the desired results. The preparation is easy to make, costs little and is pleasant to take. Every person who has catarrh or head noises or is hard of hearing should give this treatment a trial.

GREAT SWEEP OF ST. MIHIEL SALIENT MADE BY TROOPS OF UNITED STATES

THOUSANDS OF PRISONERS AND MUNITIONS TAKEN

ENTIRE SALIENT CAPTURED WITH THOUSANDS OF PRISONERS AND GREAT QUANTITIES OF WAR MATERIAL—YANKS SWEPT THROUGH DEFENCES OF ENEMY—TWELVE THOUSAND PRISONERS TAKEN IN TWENTY-FOUR HOURS—EVIDENCE OF WEAKENING OF GERMAN MORALE—KILLED AND CAPTURED ENEMY SOLDIERS RUN INTO BIG FIGURES—PERSHING'S MEN ACQUITTED THEMSELVES NOBLY, EAGERLY ADVANCING TO THE ATTACK AND SHOWING GREAT BRAVERY AND RESOURCE—PLANS FOR DRIVE CARRIED OUT WITHOUT A HITCH AND YANKS SWEPT FORWARD IN IRRESISTIBLE WAVE, ENGULFING THE HUNS WHO WERE FORCED TO SURRENDER OR DIE.

Special Despatches to The Intelligencer, Canadian Press, Limited.

PARIS, Friday evening.—The Americans progressed steadily throughout the afternoon in the St. Mihiel sector. Many prisoners, guns and equipment are coming in.

NEW YORK, Sept. 14.—The Associated Press today issues the following: The Americans are continuing their advance after eliminating the St. Mihiel salient. From Pagny, across the Moselle River from German territory, the new front extends in almost a straight line to the vicinity of Hattonville, where it bends slightly toward the northwest to Fresnes. This reduction of the front line from the Somme from forty to twenty miles, places at the disposal of the allied commander an enormous force of men for future operations in this sector or on other fronts.

METZ FORTS WITHIN RANGE.

Having accomplished the task of wiping out the salient the offensive movement continues to push forward and further straightening of the line is probable. The Americans at this stage of the drive command positions favorable for the direct invasion of German territory, if such a course should be decided upon. Although the important German fortress of Metz is in no immediate danger its outlying fortifications are within range of American heavy guns at Pagny. In their haste to get out of the salient with as little loss of men and military supplies as possible, the Germans left the railway equipment from Verdun to Commercy, Toul and Nancy virtually intact. The capture of this line of railway adds greatly to the facilities of troop movement toward Verdun, which has been a great handicap in the past to the Allies.

THIRTEEN MILES ADVANCE.

LONDON, Sept. 14.—The maximum depth of the new positions taken by the American forces in the St. Mihiel sector is thirteen miles from the former line.

St. Mihiel

LONDON, Sept. 13 (7 p.m)—Twelve thousand prisoners have been taken by the Americans in their offensive at St. Mihitel. The entire salient has now been captured.

All the villages in the St. Mihiel salient were captured by the Americans and the front in this sector was reduced from some forty miles to a little under twenty miles.

News from the St. Mihiel sector shows that the battle line now runs directly from Pagny, on the Moselle River, to Hattonville, and then along the foot of the heights of the Meuse.

Pagny, a town on the Moselle River, is on the western border of Germany.

In addition to the 12,000 prisoners who have been counted large numbers of Germans are still coming in.

Waiting to be Taken

Of the 8,000 prisoners taken 3,500 were captured in one district near Montsec by an American division. Among the prisoners were Major Schmesig, a count. He and his staff had their baggage packed and were waiting to be captured. In a majority of cases the prisoners put up comparatively little resistance before surrendering. In many instances the detachments which had escaped the barrage in their trenches and dugout made a perfunctory resistance with their machine guns and then therw up their hands.

Yanks Squeezing

NEW YORK, Sept. 13.—The Americans' advance into the St. Mihiel salient is continuing with remarkable rapidity.

The country is so easily defended by a comapratively small force because of its natural strength that a progress of eight miles in twenty-four hours equals the best any shock troops on either side have been able to accomplish at any time on the western front. It is a remarkable tribute to the efficiency of American training that so much has been accomplished in so little time. The Germans are unfortunate in their defences in this one respect that the rolling terrain is a strong encouragement for individual initiative. The Americans' genius is pecularly adaptable to individual effort, and for this reason Gen. Pershing's men are in their element in the present combat.

Squeezing Neck of Pocket

The purpose of the Americans is to squeeze the neck of the St. Mihiel pocket so tightly as to isolate it before the Germans inside the wedge are able to escape. The full success of nipping operations of this nature has not yet been attained by any allied operation since the present series of German retreats began. The Germans held the Marne and the Montdidier pockets until most of their men got away, and they are trying to do the same thing at St. Mihiel.

Reports that the Americans have reduced the exit from the St. Mihiel pocket to a width of six miles strongly suggests that only those Germans who retire now on the run will be able to get away. Artillery bombardment of the entire mileage can easily be maintained, and bombing attacks from the air can increase the havoc among the enemy to a demoralizing extent.

Huns to Lose Supplies

It is practically certain that most of the supplies stored by the Germans at St. Mihiel will fall into possession of the Americans. The Germans are now trying to hold back the American attacks to move the heavy guns to places of safety in the rear, but this work is certain to result in extensive enemy casualties.

The total number of prisoners taken by the Americans show that the German resistance has been weakened, not only because of the vigor of the American attack, but also because of falling morale. Nearly ten thousand captives made in 24 hours in so powerful a defensive area as the St. Mihiel wedge is an extraordinary achievement. It will cause dismayed comment among the Germans at home, which the Kaiser is powerless to suppress.

In a day, by a single stroke, General Pershing's army has opened the way for an advance into the iron and coal mining regions of French and German Lorraine. The announcement that the St. Mihiel salient has been eliminated, and that the Lorraine Heights of the Meuse near Combres to a point near Norroy, on the Moselle, which is but a little over thirteen miles from the Citadel of Met, will give much joy to the people of France. The presence of the enemy on the west bank of the Meuse below Verdun for four years has been a perpetual menace of invasion from the east. Belfort, Epinal, Luneville, Toul—even Verdun itself, could not guard against the incursion of an enemy who already had a footing on the west bank of the Meuse.

That is of the past, never to come again in our time. To-day from the Swiss border northward to the outworks of Metz there is a greater portion of territory that was German when the war began now in French occupation than there is of territory that was French when the war began now in possession of the Germans. And an American army, having driven the Germans out of a considerable section of southern Lorraine, capturing in the process many thousands of prisoners and much war material begins to get ready for the larger task—the reoccupation of northern Lorraine, and the conquest of that part of France's lost provinces now known as German Lorraine, with its great iron mining and smelting industries.

Lightning, Thunder, Rain, Mud, Yet British Smash German Lines

With the British Armies in France, Sept. 13.—An electric thrill ran the length of the new British front at the news that the Americans had attacked on a big scale far at the other end of the long line.

"Good for the Yanks," said many a Tommy and many an officer.

In the region before Cambrai the Yorkshire troops, New Zealanders, and others have pushed through 4,000 yards of the Hindenburg line. With rain pouring down, thunder attempting to rival the roar of the guns the lightning vieing with the flashes of batteries, the British swarmed out from the edge of shattered Havrincourt Wood and despite the treacherous footing on the chalky, muddy slopes they overran the first trenches of the Hindenburg system, advancing to the long stone wall surrounding Havrincourt chateau and Creot Hill.

They found different obstacles when they captured the same territory last fall, but knowledge of the ground aided them in this advance. They smothered the German machine guns and went on, stopping only when the village of Havrincourt was completely taken. Thursday's operations made freshened German resistance in the neighborhood of Gouzeaucourt of doubtful value and presage an earier withdrawal there and further south.

Men's Canadian Club Organize For The Season of 1918-19

In the auditorium of the Y.M.C.A. building last evening the annual meeting of the Men's Canadian Club was held and was fairly well attended, Dr. H. A. Yeomans, President, occupied the chair and in opening the meeting referred to the fact that the past year had been a successful and useful one for the Club. Good speakers had been procured and good audiences secured. The members of the Ladies Canadian Club has assisted materially the Mens' Club. This season promised great possibilities for the members in the line of interesting and instructive addresses upon the great questions of the hour.

SECRETARY'S REPORT

Mr. A. Drummond, Secretary of the Club, in presenting his report referred to the able speakers, which the club was able to procure during last winter. The lectures were given in the Y.M.C.A. hall and the auditorium of the High School. The lecturers were heartiy thanked for their varied instructive, comprehensive and patriotic addresses.

The thanks of the Club was also due to the press for their reports of the lectures, also to the Educational Board and the Y.M.C.A. Directors for the use of their room, to Professor Hunt and several ladies and gentlemen the Club are greatly indebted mental and vocal numbers at several meetings.

TREASURER'S REPORT

The report of the Treasurer, Mr. J. Elliott, showed that the sum of $86 had been received during the year and a balance of $10.81 was on hand.

TOPIC FOR DISCUSSION

The following letter from Rev. Dr. Scott, Pastor of Bridge Street Church was read:

"We should this year plan to have in addition to whatever pubic lectures may be arranged for at least one meeting a month for the purpose of study and discussion of distinctively Canadian issues to be led different local members. In view of the critical period of reconstruction in social, national, financial and economic affairs it was highly important that Canadian manhood should be prepared to intelligently meet these great issues in the near future. I believe that some such plan would greatly add to the interest of the Club membership and if successfully carried through would give us the sense of making some contribution to the future of Canada.

Uncle Sam's Army Starts For Metz

NEW YORK, Sept. 13—The American offensive has started against the German positions south-west of Metz. It is impossible however, for Von Hindenburg to be sure of General Pershing's ultimate intentions. The possibility certainly exists that the Americans will suddenly shift their attack more to the eastward if the St. Hihiel salient begins to be drawn in, and may undertake to establish themselves well within German territory before winter puts an end to the fall activity of military operations.

Von Hindenburg has suddenly had this new problem thrust upon him, while faced with the grave responsibility of trying to move his troops out of western France with a minimum of losses. The timing of the American offensive has been made to develop, this very dilemma for the German general staff. It is certain that General Von Hindenburg must quickly move heavy reinforcements into the St. Mihiel sector if he is to prevent the Americans from crushing in his front and bringing about a disaster. At the same time he cannot afford to weaken his imperilled front in Picardy and Flanders to supply reserves to oppose the Americans.

MENACE AGAINST HUN SOIL

The American threat must be read by the German general staff as a menace directed against German soil. The defence of German soil has the prime call upon Von Hindenburg's forces. Yet he has been unable to accumulate a sufficient reserve force for operations outside the Picardy and Flanders sectors. Therefore, the American attack will have to be met by drawing upon the permanent German reserves whose number has already been reduced to dangerously small proportions.

The headquarters of part of this permanent reserve force was Metz up to the time of the German offensive which began last Marsh. As Von Hindenburg became more and more involved in his failing efforts to win a decisive victory, he called upon the Metz depots to make good his losses in Western France. To what extent the Metz reserves were thus depleted is not known, but it is highly probable that Von Hindenburg has not enough reserves at present in Metz to hold the St. Mihiel angle. If the Germans attempt to cling to the salient they will have to secure reserves elsewhere. Time must be consumed in moving them forward and in an operation of this nature, speed is of the utmost importance. These are not the only conditions operating against the Germans.

CAMBRAI AND ST. QUENTIN IN DANGER FRENCH AND BRITISH CLOSING IN

ALLIED PRESSURE CONTINUES ON ALL FRONTS

HEAVY COUNTER ATTACKS OF GERMANS REPULSED WITH HEAVY LOSSES—BRITISH MAKE PROGRESS SOUTHWEST OF LA BASSEE AND TAKE PRISONERS—"QUIET NIGHT" REPORTED ON FRENCH FRONT—CAMBRAI AND ST. QUENTIN MAY BE OUTFLANKED AS RESULT OF MOVEMENTS OF FRENCH AND BRITISH ARMIES IN THAT SECTOR.

Special Despatches to The Intelligencer, Canadian Press, Limited.

LONDON, Sept. 14.—The Germans made a heavy counter attack after a severe bombardment of the new British lines, but were repulsed at all points.

After local fighting with the enemy in which prisoners were taken the British also have made progress southwest of LaBassee and are pressing forward on Auchy-les-LaBassee. Further north German attacks on new British positions at Havrincourt were repulsed with heavy losses.

CAMBRAI AND ST. QUENTIN IN DANGER.

LONDON, Sept. 14.—On all fronts the Allies continue their pressure against the German lines. Cambrai and St. Quentin are in danger of being outflanked by British and French. West of St. Quentin French troops have occupied the village of Savy, and northwest of the town British troops have gained ground.

A "QUIET NIGHT" ON FRENCH FRONT.

PARIS, Sept. 14.—From the entire French front there is nothing to report, says this morning's official statement.

FRENCH BEGIN NEW DRIVE.

LONDON, Sept. 14.—French troops began a new attack at dawn this morning on both sides of the Ailette River and between the River Aisne and the Vesle River. The attack was in the direction of the Forest of Coucy, at the southern end of the St. Gobain massif, and was progressing satisfactorily this morning. South of the Ailette River the French captured Mont Desiages and the villages of Allemont and Sancy.

HAIG'S FORCES PRESS ON.

LONDON, Sept. 14.—(Official)—Field Marshal Haig's forces have occupied Auchy-les-La Bassee, in the Lys sector. Several attempts made by the Germans to recover their former positions at Gouzeaucourt and Havrincourt were unsuccessful. In the course of the night a strong bombing and liquid fire attack was made on British positions northwest of Gouzeaucourt. This attack temporarily forced the British advanced post to withdraw, but the Germans were beaten off.

Canadians On Nord Canal Recapture Lost Bridgehead

With the Canadians in the Field Sept. 13—The enemy did not hold for long the bridgehead he established this side of the Nord Canal at Sauchy-Cauchy. Quebes troops raided this post last night, and not only drove the enemy across the canal, but carried the war into his own territory, returning with prisoners. Under the worst possible weather condition our troops holding the extremely difficult salient formed by the Sensee and Nord Canal are digging themselves in. Not content with cross-shellfire from the north and east, the enemy has gas-shelled the villages in this sector, including Excourt, Rumancourt, and Saudemont.

Had it not been overshadowed by the brilliant offensive of the past month, the gallant defensive work in this triangle in which Quebec, Eastern and Western Ontario, Manitoba and Aberta troops are engaged, as well as former mounted units, would rank as a major instead of a minor operation.

Toronto Excited Over Phenol Poisoning in Preserves

TORONTO, Sept. 13—The citizens of Toronto appear to have phenol on the brain, judging by the stead stream of letters pouring to the Department of Health, containing compaints of the presence of the acid on rings for preserving jars. It would seem that every ring sold in the city had fallen under suspicion.

In addition to the hundreds of letters, the telephone of the department is kept on the buzz by anxious housewives who are worried over their preserves.

"I am quite sure there is phenol in my preserves," declared an agitated voice over the wire. "I was afraid that the fruit was not keeping and opened, it and there was a strong smell of carbolic acid.

The official at the department end of the wire tried to reassure the owner of the voice that there was little danger, and that imagination was responsible for any number of srange tricks, but with no success. Nothing would suit but to send a sample down to the City Hall to have analyzed.

"That is the way it has been going on all day," said the official. "Everyone seems to think that their fruit has been poisoned. Why take any new rubber rings," and he produced one which had been sent in by a citizen. "Smell it. There is a faint odor not unlike carbolic acid. Everyone who has handled rubber rings has smelled that odor, and thought nothing about it until the report that the Germans or their sympathizers were trying to poison us. If we were to analyze samples of all the fruit complained of during the past twenty-four hours we would have a mighty big stock of preserved fruit on hand."

While Dr. Hastings is not in the city, other officials of the department are positive that there is no absolute ground for alarm on the part of the citizens.

HAD FACE BURNED
BY FUMES OFF RINGS

GALT, Ont., Sept. 14.—When Mrs. Sam Lane, 20 Albert street, opened a box of rubber rings for fruit jars, her daughter having told her of the story that they were alleged to be poisoned, she found the story was nearer true than she thought. The action of shaking the box created fumes which burned her face and made her eyes bloodshot.

A trained nurse who was called in gave the opinion that the fumes were phenol, very much the same as carbolic acid. An investigation is being made by the chief of police and medical health officers.

The rubber rings were purchased in a local store.

Valuable Gold Ore At Boston Creek

Most Recent Discovery is On Claims Adjacent to Miller-Independence

BOSTON CREEK, Ont., Sept. 14.—The most recent discovery of rich gold ore in the Boston Creek district has been made on the claims owned by Messrs. James Hughes and Thos. Middleton, of Haileybury. These claims lie adjacent to the Miller-Independence on the west, and have been placed under option to Mr. J. B. Flynn and associates of New York at a price which is said to run well up into six figures. Further work is being done on the vein in which the rich strike was made. The vein lines in the general trend of the rich discovery of the Miller-Independence to the east. The two owners of the claims were old prospectors and are well known in the mining camps of the north. Hughes was originally a part owner of the property which eventually became what is now known as the Teck-Hughes at Kirkland Lake, while Middleton was an original part owner of the Miller-Middleton property, which is now a valuable portion of the famous Hollinger-Consolidated Mine at Porcupine.

Pressed Buttons Miles Away

French Army Headquarters, Sept. 14—Ham, the largest town in the devastated country which the Germans spared in their retreat, was visited with destruction even more complete and less justifiable than Noyon which they methodically destroyed by fire. When the inhabitants were evacuated infernal machines were placed in the houses and fires started by pressing buttons miles away.

Save for the blowing up of the bridge Ham had not suffered previously by shell fire, neither side being interested in bombarding the place. The only excuse the Germans could make, that it blocked the road against pursuit, is invalid. The destruction of the bridges alone made it impossible for the French to enter the town until they had been replaced.

Phenoln Found In Jar Rings

BRACEBRIDGE, Sept. 14—Isabel Brown, the Toronto cook, who was accused of attempting to poison Mrs. Matthew McDermott of Port Carling, was honorably acquitted Thursday afternoon by Judge Hahaffy. It was shown by the analyst's report that phenol poison was contained in the rubber rings which were used by the accused on fruit jars, and that this serious condition was unknown to the cook. Crown Attorney, Thomas Johnson said that he would make no further inquiries as to the source of the rubbers, or the extent to which they were in use, as he believed such an investigation should be made by the Attorney-General's Department.

Miss Brown has been detained in jail for several days pending an investigation by Crown Attorney Johnson. She was employed as a cook at the summer home at Port Carling of Mr. J. A. Catto, of 21 Roxborough Street east, Toronto. A couple of weeks ago she was making red-currant jelly, and used new rubber rings in sealing the jars. A jar of the jelly was then given to Mrs. McDermott, a neighbor. After eating the jelly, Mrs. McDermott was stricken seriously ill and a doctor was called in. The jelly was blamed for bringing on the sickness and Crown Attorney Johnson sent the jar of jelly to L. Josyln Rogers, Professor of Analytical Chemistry at the University of Toronto, for a report.

The analysis, according to the report read by Mr. Johnson in court, showed that the rings used in sealing the jar contained phenol, and that the top portion of the jelly was permeated with the poison from the ring, the odor of carbolic acid being detected from the rubber. While there was not sufficient poison on the ring to cause death, there was enough to result in sickness to the person eating the jelly tainted with the phenol.

GLASS COMPANY DETECTED POISON

HAMILTON, Sept. 14—Dyson Lisson, 30 Beechwood avenue, about a month ago bought a bottle of maple syrup of a local grocer. On his tasting it it left a bitterness in his mouth, and he took it back to the grocer. All the bottles in the shop were opened, and had the same bitterness of taste, and an order of carbolic acid. It was all thrown out. A few days ago Mr. Lisson bought some rubber rings for fruit jars. His wife boiled them before using them and discovered they had a carbolic acid odor, and his belief is that he has come into contact with the phenol poison and that the syrup and rings were poisoned as a result of German activities. J. W. King of the Dominion Glass So. some time ago found a quantity of tainted rings and had them replaced before any were distributed

Device To Enable Blind to Read

NEW YORK, Sept. 14—The London Chronicle of August 28 contained the following:

An instrument called the optotone, has been invented by Dr. E. E. Fournier d'Albe to enable blind people to read ordinary print by the transmission of the letter values into sound. It owes its existence, indirectly to the fact that one day about forty-five years, an unsatisfactory feature was noticed in the working of Valentia, off the coast of Ireland.

The trouble was found to lie in the silenium used at the station, and this led to the discovery that silenium responds in a certain way when exposed to light. Working from this fact Dr. Fournier d'Albe has produced his optotone.

The method employed is to throw intermittent light on five different "frequencies" on the type of an ordinary book or newspaper. The book lies face downward over the instrument. The reflected light is received on a silenium tablet, which transmits to a telephone a set of sounds corresponding to the various shapes of the letters.

A Daily Chronicle representative witnessed an interesting experiment at the British Scientific Products Exhibition at King's College. A blind girl, Miss Mary Jameson, who has acquired this new alphabet of sound, submitted to a test, and read a portion of Dante's "Inferno."

In conversation Miss Jameson mentioned that it had taken her ninety hours to familiarize herself with the series of tiny sounds, almost like the dots and dashes of the Morse system, into which the alphabet of ordinary people has been translated. During the test the rate of reading was about one word a minute. But Miss Jameson said she was able to read the sounds more quickly when her attention is not diverted by the presence of a number of listening people, and the rate is increased with each attempt.

British Drop Bombs On Metz Railway

LONDON, Sept. 14—The reports from the headquarters of the independent air forces, says:

"In spite of the strong wind several attempts were made to bomb targets along this front. Bombs were dropped on the railway at Coutrelles and direct hits were attained on the tracks. The village of Verney (south of Met) and the railway west of it were also bombed with good results."

Agrement Soon Re Grand Trunk

OTTAWA, Sept. 14.—Agreement between the Government and the Grand Trunk Railway Co. as to the terms upon which the former shall take over the Grand Trunk and Grand Trunk Pacific lines is reported here to be much nearer than has been generally supposed.

It has been stated that a final arrangement respecting the management of railways owned and controlled by the Government would not be made until the Cabinet had definitely determined its attitude toward the Grand Trunk and Grand Trunk Pacific Railways. Hence, it was said, a purely temporary arrangement for the management of the Canadian Northern and the lines of the existing Government railways system would be made.

It has been generally understood that there was a difference between the Government and the Grand Trunk directorate as to the annual payment to be guaranteed by the former for the old Grand Trunk lines and also as to the Government's attitude toward the Grand Trunk's investment in the Grand Trunk Pacific.

Cattle Values Firm At Once

Union Stock Yards, Sept. 14.—Wednesday's market provided the usual week-end opportunity to clean up a lot of odds and ends, chiefly common light butchers and cows. There were no choice steers or butchers forward, and it was surprising that the market should develop a shade firmer tone for all grades before the close. It was an evidence that the packers were in need of cattle. A few odd butchers which sold from $11.25 to $11.50 topped the quality list for the morning, but a few choice cows here and there cashed in from $10.25 to $10.50 and a couple at $11.00. Bulls also were a trifle firmer at the close. There was not a killer left in the pens two hours after the opening bell.

Stockers moved out pretty freely at the higher values of the week. Milkers and springers were very little in evidence.

Lamb values eased off 50c., the general run of quotations varying from 17 to 17 3-4. Sheep and calves were steady with the demand for the common calves scarcely so active as earlier in the week.

Hogs were steady at $19.50 to the packers and $19.75 to outsiders.

The receipts were 35 carloads, with 355 cattle, 93 calves, 702 hogs and 970 sheep and lambs.

DIAMONDS FOUND IN BRITISH COLUMBIA

GREENWOOD, B.C., Set. 14.—Diamonds—real diamonds of both weight and quality—are reported to have been found at Rock Creek, twenty miles from here, in a piece of float chromite thrown into an automobile owned and driven by Angus Cameron, a well-known Greenwood resident.

Cameron recently located several chromite claims a short distance west of Rock Creek. A piece of float chromite was thrown into his car while he was at the claims and remained there for several days. Upon cursory examination Cameron found eight fine diamonds embedded in the clay adhering to the chromite.

One of these was half the size of a pea. Another is much larger, but its weight and quality have yet to be determinated.

The find has naturally caused something of a sensation and one prospector asserts that diamonds may be found within a mile of Greenwood. In addition to chromite, platnium and other valuable rare minerals, Greenwood now promses to be the centre of a new diamond mining field.

Diamonds have long been known to exist in the district, and are frequently referred to in the report of McConnell and other Dominion geologists, but have not heretofore been reported of sufficient size to possess commercial value.

Chaplain's Report On Work Overseas

No Opposition to Religion Among Soldiers, Says Captain Woodcock of Brockville

TORONTO, Sept. 14—"There is no opposition among the soldiers at the front to religion, but they know little about it, for they have never been taught. There is no religion in the average Canadian household. There are no atheists among the men at the front, they all believe in God. If the church at home is what it ought to be, the returned soldier problem is solved."

So spoke Capt. Woodcock of Brockville, one of the overseas chaplains of the Anglican Church, in addressing the general synod at St. James Parish Hall yesterday. Capt, Woodcock wear, two blue chevrons and a gold stripe denoting a wound. The synod was hearing reports from the chaplains who had been overseas, among whom was Bishop Due Pencier of New Westminster. The Bishop told vividly of his work among the men in France, saying that every night at 6 o'clock he had held confirmation service. At one of these services the staff from general headquarters came in and occupied the front seats. Afterwards Sir Arthur Currie had come to him and asked about the service. Bishop Due Pencier said he talked to him for some time, and Sir Arthur Currie said, "When you come again I would like to be confirmed."

That the Y.M.C.A. was forced to give free coffee and to make monthly statements of money affairs because the chaplain service had been doing so was another statement made by the bishop during his remarks.

WARM FRIENDSHIP

He spoke about the warm friendship that existed among the chaplains of different religions. It was a case of standing together for the great principles and letting the smaller matters alone. He said the lessons he had learned from his work at the front were: The great effect of spiritual forces, the dependence of one person on another and the great influence of personality.

Other who spoke on the work of the chaplain service at the front were Capt. Arthur Carlisle, Windsor, and Canon McIntosh.

Greetings from the City of Toronto were extended in the morning by Mayor Church, and the official welcome was given to the visiting delegates from the United States, Bishop Darlington of Harrisburg, Pa., and Bishop McCormick of Western Michigan. In the afternoon the synod welcomed Canon Smart as the representative from the Diocese of Newfoundland, who spoke strongly in favor of the church in Newfoundland uniting with the church in Canada.

ACID ON RUBBER RINGS NOT ENOUGH TO KILL A FLY

GALT ,Sept. 14—When some more alleged poison rubber rings were submitted Thursday by Dr. Radford, M. O.H., to a test, he found that while there was no doubt carbolic acid on some of them, it was not in sufficient quantities to kill a fly. The idea of German agents was dispelled when it was found that the rings were made in Toronto.

The Eleventh Hour

By LEWIS ALLEN BROWNE

Copyright, 1901, by L. A. Browne

"Oh, Tom," cried Kathryn Hill as she unceremoniously entered Tom Cate's studio with the air of one always certain of a welcome, "I've found just the word I wanted for my story. You know, that hateful Miss Squills had 'dynamorphosteopalinklaster' in"—

"Merciful heavens, Kit!" exclaimed Tom in mock horror. "Come up early next Sunday morning and bring the rest of it with you. Besides, can't you see I am terribly busy this morning?"

"Pot boiler, isn't it?" she asked as she glanced carelessly at the sketch, and as Tom nodded, his mouth being occupied with various drawing implements, she continued lightly: "Oh, bother! Let it wait, Tommo, and listen to me."

"No, Kitty, dear," he made answer solemnly. "It is an unhappy fact that a poor artist's masterpiece may wait indefinitely, while his pot boilers must be finished at a specified time; but you may talk to me just the same, only, please, please do not leave any more such words lying around loose for me to become entangled in."

"Now, Tom, do not become desperate, will you, when I tell you I have another word about twice as long? You see, as I was trying to tell you, that horrid Miss Squills used the word 'dyn'"—

"Stop!" commanded Tom, with a look of horror and a wave of his unoccupied arm.

"That little word, Tommo, dear, is the name of an instrument used for the breaking of falsely united fractures, and Miss Squills worked it into her story of 'A Surgeon's Love.' Gus Burleigh spoke in such praises of her apparent knowledge, all through her use of that word, that I became a tiny, wee bit jealous, so I"—

"Gus Burleigh!" sneered Tom. "What does he"—

"I have the floor, sir," interposed Kitty. "You're out of order. Allow me to continue, if you please. I have a story mapped out that will positively put hers to shame."

"Make it look like thir"—

"Hush, Tommo, don't use that dreadful slang phrase. I shall call my story 'The Dentist's Daughter,' and the new word I have just learned and intend to use is 'methylbenzoinethoxyethyltetrahydropyridinecarboxylate!' Now, isn't that a—a"—

"Corker!" ejaculated Tom.

"Well, yes, it is all that," admitted Kitty, "and don't you think Gus will consider me marvelously learned when he sees that?"

"If he ever tries to pronounce it, you will be obliged to come out in black for the poor boy, but does it—er—mean anything in particular?"

"Certainly it does, goosie! It is chemical for cocaine."

Tom worked in silence a few moments before he said:

"Er—Kit, I suppose our long standing and successful platonic friendship will soon be a thing of the past, eh?"

"Not necessarily, Tommo, dear. I'm sure Gus will be sensible," was her sober reply.

"It will be an innovation for him, then," Tom could not refrain from saying with ill concealed savageness.

"May I inquire when the momentous event will take place?"

"If you think you should know, I have promised to give him a definite answer tonight," she confessed.

"Tonight!" he echoed. "What a coincidence! To tell you the truth, as is due you, Kit, I intend to throw myself at the feet of Clara Rogertly tonight. Shake!" He put out his ink stained hand and clasped hers, but neither cared to look each other in the eye.

"Too bad we were never suited for each other, now, wasn't it, Kittie?" he asked, with a forced laugh, after a depressing silence.

"That is not for me to say, sir," she replied with assumed dignity, "but be careful, Tom, dear, remember we are such an excellent example of true platonic friendship to all our friends and acquaintances."

"To be sure," he hastened to affirm. "And, say, Kit, this—this—our proposed step will never change all that, will it?"

"Never, Tommo, never!" she answered him, whereupon they shook hands, and Tom procured a bottle of ale from his icebox, used in the concoction of rarebits. Of this they drank twice, once for her "intended" and again for his "intended," as Tom gravely worded it.

While he was replacing the bottle and glasses Kathryn leaned over the easel to examine Tom's "pot boiler." In so doing she tipped over a vase, catching it before it fell, but scratching her wrist upon one of the metal tipped arrows it contained.

It was but a mere scratch, yet it pleased her fancy to tease him by pretending serious injury.

"Oh, Tommo, Tommo," she cried, "see how your ugly old arrows have scratched me!" And she held up her plump wrist that he might see the little red scratch upon which a few red drops were slowly appearing.

Tom turned white as the lace encircling her wounded wrist as his glance took in what had happened. He sprang and picked her up in his arms, placing her upon a couch, from which he brushed the accumulation of books, pipes and tobacco jars with a sweep of his arm.

"My God, Kit!" he cried. "Those were poisoned arrows; some that were sent on from the accursed Philippines! Oh, Kittie," he groaned as he knelt beside the couch and clasped her in his arms, "what shall I do?"

She became white as Tom as she realized what had happened, yet she smiled.

"You might try a doctor," she suggested, seeing he was too wild to act.

Tom heard her murmur something about "doctor" and made a dash for the telephone. It seemed ages before central connected him with a physician. After telling the doctor to come as quick as God would let him he returned to Kit, who was lying white and still, with closed eyes.

Tom placed the wounded wrist to his lips and endeavored to draw out the poison from the scratch. Kathryn opened her eyes.

"Tommo, dear," she whispered.

"Kittie, oh, my darling, tell me, do you feel better? Oh, what a fool I have been—what a blind fool! It is you, only you, whom I love!" cried Tom, with deep emotion.

Her disengaged arm went around his neck. "You were not alone, Tommo, dear," she said. "I have been another fool. And now, oh, Tom, is it too late?"

Just then the doctor arrived. Tom told him in a few words what had occurred.

The doctor examined the arrows and commenced to laugh heartily.

"Poisoned fiddlesticks!" he ejaculated. "Why, those things are made right here in town, just to sell!"

"What!" shrieked Kathryn as she landed upon her feet with one bound.

"Thank God!" murmured Tom as he sank into a chair.

The doctor daubed a little collodion upon the scratched wrist and left the room, laughing.

Tom sat staring at Kathryn as she wound her handkerchief about her wrist. His gaze was so steady she blushed and turned away.

"Kittie," he said entreatingly, "did you mean what you said?"

"What did I say?" she asked in a low voice without looking at him.

"You know what I mean, Kittie. Do you yet think we have been fools? I do!" he said eagerly.

"Thanks!" she said, with a poorly assumed dignity.

"Oh, Kit, Kit," he said as he went to her, "won't you say 'No' to Gus tonight?"

"If you will stay away from Clara's," she whispered.

"This will be an awful blow to platonic friendship as well as to some people whom we know," said Tom as he handed Kathryn into a carriage half an hour later.

A Black, Hard Name.

Few persons are aware that the Chinese language is dependent on intonation for its meaning and that a slight difference in sound may so distort a person's meaning that a courteous salutation may be turned into a cause for regret.

A young woman in San Francisco, who had become interested in the Chinese there, went to one of the men who owned a paper in which he wrote both Chinese and English editorials, and asked him to teach her some phrases. When told that the language consisted of something like a small library or two of reference books, she was about ready to back out. However, being anxious to learn even a few things about the mysterious people, she undertook a lesson or two.

The young lady being apt at learning new things, thought she was better posted than she was and, meeting the teacher on the street one afternoon, put her newly acquired information to the test.

It was with unusual confidence that she bade him "good afternoon" in a blithe voice and was stepping down from the curb to cross the street.

"Wait," said the editor. "I cannot let you go, Miss C., without explaining. You think you said a good day to me, but instead you have called me a very black, hard name."

A Wary Youngster.

Some of the small boys who get into a business life young can be relied upon for good common sense. A man in one of the big shops uptown was much pleased at this attribute in a boy he employed. He was a bright, honest boy, quick and reliable, and when a second boy was needed they sent for Sam. Couldn't he get them a boy? They wanted a boy as good as he was, and he must know of one. After some thought he finally agreed to send one, and the next day the boy arrived, and Sam was called to identify him.

"Do you know this boy, Sam?" asked the employer.

"Yes," answered Sam. "I know him."

"And you know him to be a good, honest boy?"

"I have played with him all my life, and I have always thought he was."

"But you will vouch for him?" persisted the employer.

"No," answered Sam indignantly. "I won't vouch for any one. I wouldn't vouch for my own brother. How do I know what temptations you are going to put before him?"—New York Times.

Napoleon's Ambiguous Praise.

At one time before the Franco-Prussian war, when Napoleon III. was a visitor at London, amateur theatricals were arranged for his entertainment.

A Mr. Brown, who took a principal part in the entertainment, prided himself on his knowledge of French. During the evening he was one of the cast in a French comedietta and immediately after that played the part of an Englishman who spoke broken French.

During this latter sketch Napoleon III. laughed frequently, and when Mr. Brown was presented to the emperor at the close of the evening he was complimented in this ambiguous manner: "Your bad French was as good as your good French. Allow me to congratulate you."

Naturally Mr. Brown retired a little mystified.

The Plain Truth about Shoe Prices

LEATHER is scarce and is growing scarcer. A large part of the available supply must be used for soldiers' boots. Importations have practically ceased and we are forced to depend upon the limited quantity of materials produced in Canada.

The cost of everything which goes into a pair of shoes is high, and is going higher. Workmen by the thousands have joined the colors, and labor is increasingly hard to get. It is not merely a matter of high prices, but of producing enough good quality shoes to go around.

These conditions are beyond the control of any man, or any group of men. They fall on all alike. No one is exempt—neither the manufacturer, the dealer, nor the consumer.

You must pay more today for shoes of the same quality than you did a year ago. Next Spring, prices will be higher still.

These are hard facts. They will not yield to argument. They cannot be glossed over. We cannot change them, much as we would wish to do so.

But you, as a wearer of shoes, can help to relieve them if you will exercise prudence and good judgment in purchasing. See that you get real value for your money. Spend enough to get it, but spend nothing for "frills."

See that the manufacturer's trade-mark is stamped upon the shoes you buy. High prices are a temptation to reduce the quality in order to make the price seem low. But no manufacturer will stamp his trade-mark upon a product which he is ashamed to acknowledge. Remember this, and look for the trade-mark. It is your best assurance of real value for your money.

Apples in Ontario Are a Fair Crop

TORONTO, Sept. 14—The latest crop report just issued by the Fruit Commissoiner's Branch of the Department of Agriculture at Ottawa indicates that the price of barrelled apples must be high this pear.

A very large proportion of the ultimate selling price, it is pointed out, will be required to cover cost of labor and material.

In most parts of Ontario barrels can not be obetained for less than 75c and in some sections the price is as high as $1. Added to this, there is an extreme shortage of labor, even at high prices.

Under these circumstances, the report suggests there is for the marketing of lower grades particularly, much to favor bulk shipment, which will place apples of fair quality within the reach of the consumer at a moderate figure.

APPLES IN ONTARIO

The report serves to show that along the north shore of Lake Ontario, between Belleville and Toronto, and including Prince Edward County, there is quite a fair crop of some varieties of apples. The quality, however, is below the average, and orchards have not been given as much attention as formerly.

There are some commercial orchards however, in which the quality is good Fruit is generally small on account of prolonged dry weather. The leading varieties are Wealthy, Snow, McIntosh, Greening, Ben Davis and Russet. On these there is about 35 per cent of a normal crop, of about 25 to 35 per cent more fruit than a year ago. There is a very light crop of Spy and Baldwin, the latter variety having been severely injured by the cold winter. Pewangee and Ontario trees suffered from the same cause, and the crop of these varieties is practicallly a failure.

SERIOUS INJURY TO TREES

Much the same condition exists in Western Ontario. Fall varieties are one half of a normal crop and winter varities 35 per cent. In some districts winter injury to tress is reported to be serious. It is not expected that here will be many apples to be moved after local markets have been supplied. Essex County reports a full crop of apples of good quality. Greenings are about ready.

There is a fairly good crop in the Georgian Bay district. Here again the dry weather has prevented normal development. The best varieties are Snow, Greening, Ben Davis, Baldwin and Russet. Fall varieties are generally better than the later sorts. Well-sprayed orchards have a very fair showing of clean fruit, but there are numerous reports of apple scab, codling worm, tent caterpillar, etc., which indicate a want of proper care.

INSECT PESTS COMMON,

"It will be noted," continues the Fruit Commissioner, "that orchards have been given inadequate attention in many parts of Ontario and Quebec, and that apple scab, as well as certain insect pests, are quite common. his is undoubtedly the result of a chain of circumstances which have developed since 1915 and which have caused almost general discouragement. In the first place, weather conditions in the poor cropsmCdi ngnotacasqe have each year been more or less unfavorable, and probably have been the main factor in the poor crops which have grown up; the advancing price of farm machinery, spray material, etc and the increasing scarcity of labor have added to the growers' troubles; freight rates have taken at least two decided leaps in the past three years; the exigencies of war made it necessary to place a ban on shipments of apples to Great Britain, thus closing off Ontario's principal market.

DECLARED ORCHARD STRIKE

"The fruit grower is human, and like any other human being, became 'fed up' and decided that to continue spending money in an effort to produce high-quality friut was not worth while; in other words, he declared a strike, as far as his orchards were concerned, for the duration of the war. There are, of course, some orchards which have received better attention and which have continued to produce fairly good crops of clean fruit. These are exceptions, and as long as the majority of orchards remain in their present condition the bulk of the crop must be of the lower grades.

"The natural remedy to this condition will come when the grower realizes that there is no demand for poor-quality fruit, and that it is a barrier in the way of profitable production. He will also have to be impressed by the high price being paid for No. 1 grade and the present impossibility of meeting the home demand for high-quality fruit. Ontario No 1 apples have become a rarity, as the pendulum of supply and demand regulates the price, then we may safely argue that the price of No 1 Ontario apples must remain high for some years to come."

NIAGARA FRUIT OULOOK

Summarizing the latest reports received covering the condition of tender fruits in the Niagara Peninsula, the Fruit Commissioner says:

"Our earlier reports of the peach crop were approximately correct; the total yield will be slightly less than 40 to 45 per cent. of an average crop. St. Johns are now being marketed and early Crawfords are about ready.

'Bartlett pears are also moving. They have sized up well and the crop will be about as anticipated or slightly better than a medium crop. Clargeau and Kieffer are also showing a medium crop, but other varieties are not so favorable.

"Plums are running lighter than was at first promised. The dry weather of the past month greatly handicapped proper growth and the fruit is of small size. Lombards, Damsons, Yellow Egg, Quackenboss and green gages are now being marketed; Reine Claude and Monarch will be ready next week."

TOO MUCH JONAH.

An intimate knowledge of the Biblical experiences of Jonah, inside and outside the whale, is of less value to the children of Quebec than knowledge which will help them to earn a living, in the opinion of L'Autorite, a French-Canadian weekly published in Montreal, which has come out strongly for national schools. L'Autorite in attacking church schools charges that they are responsible for French Canadians as a class failing to rise above the status of "hewers of wood and carriers of water and lowly scavengers, knowing all that is necessary in useless matters and being ignorant of what would be useful to them." The editor of L'Autorite manifests considerable courage in taking this stand on the Quebec educational policy, but he no doubt knows whereof he speaks.

RAILWAY PORTER POET.

A short poem entitled "The Day" was published some months ago in an English paper. It caught the popular ear and within a few weeks it was being read throughout the Empire. The author of the volume, of which "The Day" is the title poem, is Henry Chappell, a railway porter at Bath, England. He writes spontaneously, musically, and with intelligence and excellence of form, says the Toronto News. His verses are a scourge to the Hun and a solace and inspiration to the Britons. He sounds the Imperial note and immortalizes the valiant deeds of the Empire's sons. "The Soul of Britain," "The Voices," "The Price of Victory," "The Rose and the Maple Leaf," "The Martyr of Brussels," all possess the vigor and color of Kipling and perhaps finer beauty of expression. He sings a new song "To the Sea-Plane." Here is a representative verse:

"A tiny speck in the evening sky
Nearer drawing across the main,
She cleaves the path that the swallows fly
Flecked by the sunset's crimson stain,
Homeward winging in graceful flight
As her feathered kin to the shore at night."

SWEET THINGS GREATEST OF EVILS.

Some of us like a lot of sugar and some of us can do with a very little, and now that it is our patriotic duty to add sugar to the growing list of things we must go light on, some of us will feel the sacrifice more than others. Already some good patriotic souls are mortifying their flesh by drinking their tea without sugar and it is altogether likely that they will become so accustomed to sugarless tea that they will prefer the cup that cheers that way. We imagine that it will be harder to learn to like coffee unsweetened, but no doubt that also is possible. The main thing is to keep on hitting the Hun with sugar, coal, gasoline and every other old thing, including T.N.T. and hot and cold steel until the Kaiser hasn't a leg left to stand upon or a son to hoot for him and loot for him. Perhaps sugar isn't good for us anyway and we may be healthier without it—in fact a lady physician has written a book to prove that sweet things are dangerous and should be avoided by those who wish to live long in the land. The Toronto Star, discussing the anti-sugar book, says:

> There may be consolation for the scarcity of sugar in a book written by Dr. Alma Arnold. This physician says that sweet things are the greatest of all evils, the next three in the order of evil being coffee, meat and alcohol. Sugar, she says, ferments, fills the system with gases, and creates a dyspeptic who is as bad as a tippler. Combined with vegetables or fruits, sugar is "a greater poison in our system than whisky." Also, strong sulphuric and other acids are used in the refining process. She tells of a robust man who was "worn to a frazzle" after a day's tramp. The trouble was too much sugar. After adopting her advice urging abstemiousness in this respect he was a new man.
> But while this fearful indictment may reconcile us to abstention from sugar it rather weakens the plea for saving sugar for the soldiers and the civilians in allied countries. We do not want to set up fermentation in our friends, fill them with gases, give them dyspepsia, poison their systems, and weaken them so that they will be worn to a frazzle after a day's tramp. We had better stick to the idea that sugar is a good thing, which we are willing to eat sparingly in order that our friends may not want.

FAITHFUL UNTO DEATH ARE THE PADRES.

One of the most inspiring chapters of the war yet to be written will chronicle the heroic sacrifices of the army chaplains, Protestant and Catholic, many of whom have already given their lives on the field of battle because they valued their lives less than the opportunity for faithful service in the cause of humanity. The Toronto Star pays the following tribute to a brave Canadian chaplain recently numbered among the casualties:

> Another Canadian chaplain has been killed in action. Among the casualties reported during the week appeared the name of Hon. Capt. W. H. Davis, M.C., of Edmonton. He had long been serving at the front as chaplain with the th C. M. R. of Toronto.
> Capt. Davis was awarded the Military Cross for his valuable and courageous service to the wounded in No Man's Land at Passchendaele. With a Red Cross Flag tied to a stick he went out under fire seeking the wounded, friend and foe alike, and rendering them such aid and consolation as he could. Returned officers and men of his battalion have spoken, and many still at the front have written, of Capt. Davis in terms of the highest admiration, saying of him that he went over the top with his unit on all occasions, and shared all the dangers and discomforts of the war with the fighting unit to which he was attached. Over the top of Vimy Ridge, where the Canadians had dug in, he conducted an impressive funeral service as the dead were interred by night, enemy shells falling the while about the burial party.
> The story of this brave and good man, faithful unto death, is probably that of many another chaplain in the Canadian and British armies. Whole armies have gained a new idea of the clergy from the way in which these men have voluntarily shared the hardships and dangers of war, going into battle unarmed, cheerful, resolute in duty.

WHAT IS CELLULOSE ACETATE?

London Daily Chronicle.

Cellulose acetate is one of the most interesting scientific commercial products which have been evolved during the present generation. It was first obtained in 1864 by a French chemist, Paul Schuetzenberger, but in the latter years of last century and the opening years of this successive patents were taken out by English, American and German chemists, which not only improved upon the original invention, but widened considerably the scope of its application. It is particularly during the last ten years that cellulose acetate has attained such great industrial importance.

One of the most interesting developments is the manufacture of non-inflammable cinematograph film. In fact non-inflammable celluloid made from cellulose acetate can replace the ordinary celluloid in all its applications.

The chief use of the celluloid acetate and nitro-cellulose in war is in the manufacture of dope for the treatment of the wings of airplanes. Both solutions have the effect of waterproofing the fabric and, what is equally important, of tightening it to the tensity of a drum-skin. But as nitro-cellulose is inflammable it is obvious, as fire is one of the airman's most dangerous enemies, that acetate cellulose, which is non-inflammable, is the much more suitable preparation, especially as it is more resistant to water.

This particular dope is a solution obtained by dissolving cellulose acetate in certain solvents. When the dope is applied to the fabric the solvents evaporate, leaving a film which has the tightening and water-proofing effect. To get the most suitable dope it it of the greatest importance to use a cellulose acetate which is readily soluble without leaving a residue, and which is stable, that is, not affected by atmospheric influences, and which can be supplied of uniform quality.

What Was This Animal?

Listowel Banner.

When coming to work Friday morning, Mr. Fred Bender, the grocer, spied a coon in his pathway. His nose couldn't have been working well, for he mistook it for a skunk, and declined to interfere. Rather than get mixed up in the affair at all, he passed the information to Mr. Jake Ament, who, with Mr. Caruso, the Italian, secured a barrel and went on the hunt.

The coon, ostrich-like, tried to conceal itself in a corner of the steps of the Anglican church, and proved an easy victim. Before it had decent opportunity to fill its pursuers with "needles", the barrel was clapped over it, and it was later placed in a box on exhibition.

Many went to see it, and the boys carried quills away for souvenirs. It was given oats and grass to eat, but there were spectators around most of the time and it indulged but little. Friday night, while in the office of the feed stable, it chewed its way out of the box. Saturday Mr. Ament turned it over to Lloyd Mayberry, who put it in a box, from which it escaped Sunday night, eating its way to freedom.

Orillia Packet

The End of a Meatless Day.

(Tune of Perfect Day)

Came Fritz to the end of a meatless day,
As he sat with a hungry thought
Not a sausage would ever come his way
For a famine the war had brought.
He pictured the feeds of long ago,
The frankfurts and lager beer.
"Gott strafe everyone," he cried in woe
As he wiped away a tear.

For years he had toasted well the day
When the hour of the Hun was due,
But now he was feeling far from gay,
He was savage and hungry too.
Not a dog or a cat or a piece of horse
Could be found in all Germany,
So he turned to his feed of bread and grease,
For a starving Hun was he.

So this is the end of a meatless day:
Not a sausage, a chop or a stew;
It leaves poor Fritz that he needs to pray
With a will both sincere and true.
Before very long he will fade away
For he's getting both feeble and done.
It's awful to think of a meatless day
To a starving, ill-fed Hun.

Where'er thou be,
On land or sea,
Or in the air,
This little prayer
I pray for thee,—
God keep thee ever,
Day and night,—
Face to the light,—
Thy 'scutcheon white,—
That no despite Thine honor smite,—
With infinite
Sweet oversight,
God keep thee ever,
Heart's delight—
And guard thee whole,
Sweet body, soul,
And spirit high;
That, live or die,
Thou glorify
His Majesty;
And ever be,
Within His sight,
His true and upright,
Sweet and stainless,
Pure and sinless,
Perfect Knight!

Teutons Will Offer Armistice

Inspired Dutch Press Says Emperors Have Arrived At Agreement

WASHINGTON, Sept. 14.—An inspired article in the Dutch press says that the two emperors, at their recent conference, decided that the time would be ripe, at the beginning of the winter, when all war operations would be paralyzed to propose an armistice instead of a straight peace conference and adds that the proposal of an armistice in itself might be an indication that Germany not only was ready to free Belgium and indemnify her from internal fund, but also to discuss the evacuation of Northern France and the restitution of German colonies, and even to settle the Alsace-Lorraine problem in a way to save French feelings. Fnally, on condition of certain idemnities and concessions, Germany might consent to revise the Brest-Litovsk treaty.

If this proposal for an armistice is rejected, the Dutch paper holds that the moral position of Germany would be greatly strengthened.

A CORNER ON ARBUTUS

By Louise Robinson Rhodes

Copyright, 1901, by L. R. Rhodes

Norven, Mich., April 20.

Dear Bill—I have a scheme. Do you want to go snucks? You know those little pink flowers folks go daffy over in spring? Well, Sis says there's heaps growing round here. Trailing arbutus they call it. I thought it would be a good plan for me to get a few bushels for you to sell. Sis says she'll help, only she won't believe I'll get bushels. But I will, though. Say, there's a boy sits right across the aisle from me who plays hookey every spring and fall. Goes off in the woods and stays a week or two hunting and fishing. Nobody ever can find him. He shoots deer, rabbits, squirrels and things and has dandy times fishing. He has a camp kit hid somewhere, nobody knows, and just goes when the fit comes on. When he comes back, he's good as pie the rest of the year. He's looking out of the window now. Wonder if he's fixing to go soon? Gee, don't I wish I could sneak with him? But he hain't got any ma. Sis says she's going to write your sister pretty soon. The teacher is looking at me as if I am too still. I've been sneaking this in school. Guess I'll have to stop and do something to liven things up. If you'll go snucks on the arbutus, let me know. Yours truly, GRUBS.

Norven, Mich., April 22.

My Dear Genevieve—The first warm days of spring are with us, and I feel as if new blood were coursing through my veins as it is through the arteries of the great trees around us. I am so much better, the doctor says, we may not have to spend another year among the pines. Dear old pines! I shall miss them when we go. Just now they are putting out tender green fingers which point lovingly at the spring sun. Here and there great patches of adder tongues flaunt their brilliant yellow as one passes.

And, oh, Genevieve, the arbutus will be out next week. Grosvenor wants me to help him gather it for sale. You can guess how like sacrilege it seems to sell them, yet there may be a pleasure in sending the beautiful bits of fragrance to brighten other people's lives as they once did mine. I am learning to pick up the little bits of pleasure trying to forget that I ever presumed to long for great happiness. Write me soon, and tell me all about yourself and what people are doing in that dear world "down below." Faithfully yours,

MARIAN NORTHWAY.

Norven, Mich., April 25.

Dear Bill—The box goes tonight by express. It don't look such an awful lot, but Sis says it's awful small bunches they sell for 10 cents, and not very big for a quarter. Most likely your sister will know about how much. Say, work Doc Graham to the limit. I guess he likes arbutus, for I remember he used to wear it in his buttonhole and seems as if he brought Sis some once or twice when she was sick last spring. I don't believe Sis likes him, for she won't ever talk about him. Say, the fellow I wrote about is gone again. We found some dandy fish in a basket on the steps the other morning. They were for Sis, a paper said. We suppose it is him. Say, maybe the old maid over in Pike street would take some arbutus. She used to have her yard full of flowers. Don't forget to stick Doc Graham, and perhaps Miss Marks, who used to be my Sunday school teacher, would take some if you told her I got it. The recess bell has rung, so, so long. GRUBS.

Norven, Mich., April 27.

Dear Bill—The second box started tonight by express, as I telegraphed you it would, but thought I would write and tell you I'm glad you froze that Smith boy out. Don't suppose his flowers were as nice as ours anyway. Course he knew you could lick him, but most likely he sold out because he's too lazy to do the work. Sis said it wa'n't right to coerce him to sell out to you. Ma didn't say anything then, though she looked funny. I heard her tell Sis afterward that she believed every boy was a primitive man and that it was only by slow evolushun that he became a gentleman. After awhile she talked to me in her room. If that Smith kid has got any more arbutus to sell, you might let him, but chase him out of your ward anyway. Sis is writing to Gene, so you will hear all the news I guess. Yours, GRUBS.

P. S.—The fellow that went is back. He helped get this lot of arb. Have you stuck Doc Graham yet?

Norven, Mich., April 27.

Dear Genevieve—I enjoyed your little note very much, though it was quite too short. It was like a brief call from home friends. How I wish I could really have a glimpse of your dear self and give you a peep at our paradise!

Yesterday afternoon I spent gathering arbutus for Grosvenor. I wandered "over the hills and far away." My path lay along a track where the red ore glistened like blood from the wounded heart of the range. The great pines had been cut away to let the miners steal the iron framework of the hill. A bluejay flitted before me, scolding all the way from his nest to the tamarack swamp.

Perhaps I fell a-dreaming as I gathered my fragrant burden, for a sad, deep purple had settled over the valley before I turned ho[illegible]rd. A soft darkness had setf [illegible] everything before I entered the town. The miners were passing like gnomes into the hills, and everything seemed so uncanny that I was genuinely startled when some one suddenly took my basket from me.

It was only a schoolmate of Grosvenor's, who had joined me unobserved. He is a descendant of the old voyageurs who first ventured into this region, and their wild love of nature breaks out in him occasionally, with most disastrous effect upon his education. He seems to know that I, too, love the natural world and has a sense of comradeship. When he took my basket, he already had an armful of most perfect blossoms. He had heard I wanted some.

Well, dear, this letter has lasted far into the night. My eyes are heavy, and I lay down my pen with the wish that your dreams may be as sweet as the fragrance of my room. Faithfully yours, MARIAN.

Norven, Mich., April 30.

Well, Bill, here goes the last box. We've cleaned up pretty good out of it all, haven't we? What are you going to do with your money? Guess I'll put mine toward a gun. I want to go off with the chap I told you of awfully. Ma says a camera would be nice. Then I could take views of this part of the country to take home with me. Say, did you know we are going home next fall? Marian's a lot better. Gee, but you did stick Doc Graham. Asked you all about Sis, did he? Well, he needn't have, for Sis don't like him anyway. When he came last night, she cried. Ain't girls soft? I wouldn't cry if a fellow came to see me that I didn't like. Ma likes him, though. She kissed him once. He's real nice to me, so I ain't kicking, but it don't seem fair to bother Sis when she ain't real strong yet. The fellow I said is whistling for me to go fishing with him, so here goes.

GRUBS.

Norven, Mich., May 1.

Dear Genevieve—John has came. He does care, and mother said she guessed it all along. He did not dare tell me when I was ill for fear I did not care and would feel sorry for him. Isn't he thoughtful? We are to have the quietest little wedding in the early fall, and then I shall see you for a little while before we go to Georgia for the winter, for I am not to give up the pines altogether.

This is the happiest Mayday I have ever known. I cannot write more now, as John is waiting for me to go walking. We will try to find a few last sprays of arbutus. Lovingly your friend, MARIAN.

Smith, Smyth and Smijth.

It is curious how the little letter "y" has proved a huge differentium. For, whereas the "Smiths," as a rule, have been money making, the "Smyths" have shown themselves chivalrous and aristocratic. While the Smiths were Roundhead the Smyths suffered for Tory or Jacobite principles, according to the London Mail. Apropos of these variations in the spelling of the great patronymic Mr. Compton Reade propounds a theory which should prove of comfort to both branches of the family. He hotly combats the notion that the Smyths, Smythes and Smijths have assumed a variation of spelling to lend an aristocratic flavor to a homely name. "Nothing," he declares, "can be further from the truth. The original form was Smyth, just as the modern 'cider' is a corruption of the ancient 'cyder.' So far from the Smyths having Smythed themselves I can discover barely one notable instance of the change from 'i' to 'y,' but I can trace numberless instances of Elizabethan Smyths having become Victorian Smiths. The roco spelling of the word Smijth is apparently due to the ingeniousness of some mediaeval clerk, who, in writing Smyth, took upon himself to dot both points of the 'y,' thus producing 'Smijth.'"

Careful of His Feelings.

"Tom, dear," said young Mrs. Newlywed very gently, "it was kind and thoughtful of you, and I appreciate it ever so much, but a man should never undertake to select anything for his wife to wear."

"What do you mean?" he asked in surprise.

"These buttons you brought home for me," and she held up a half dozen red poker chips. "I found them on the mantel in your room, and I knew, of course, that you had brought them home for me."

"Y-you can't use them, can you?"

"No. But I appreciate your thoughtfulness just the same. You got them at a bargain, didn't you?"

"Um—yes."

"Well, you were cheated. I don't see how anybody who makes buttons could have been so silly as to forget to put in the holes that the thread goes through when you sew them on."

And Tom said he would take them right back and exchange them.

Magicians' Society.

Mystic and unique is the seal, right in line with the mysterious character of the organization that bears the monogram of the Society of American Magicians of New York. It is usually printed in red and white and is remarkable for the initials "S. A. M.," worked together in such a way that they are readable upside down or downside up.

Another curious feature of the seal is a pair of serpents in a circle, with their tails in each other's mouth—the Egyptian sign of eternity. The motto of the organization, which is made up of all the magicians in the country and holds its meetings on the first Saturday evening of each month, is, "Magic, Unity, Might."

The first letters of the three words are an acrostic spelling "Mum," which is the spirit of the association, the purpose of the club being to prevent the exposure of their secret methods and the betraying of the mechanical means of the magician to arrive at his surprising ends.

Brusiloff, Russ. Hero, Victim of Bolsheviki?

COPENHAGEN, Sept. 14—Gen. Brusiloff, former comamnder-in-chief of the Russian armies, has been killed in Moscow, near the Sabrin prison, according to despatches reaching here from Kieff.

Gen. Brusiloff had a great military reputation before the Russian armies ceased to exist last year. He commanded in the mid-Carpathians in 1915, having previous to that captured the stronghold of Halicz in the early days of the war. In the summer of armies which captured 400,000 Austrians and swept beyond Lemburg and Pryemysl. Last summer he was appointed commander-in-chief by Kernesky and had started a great drive on the south-western front when the Russians on the northern front began tao hold meetings to decide whether they would attack or not. The eventual breakdown of the Russian armies halted his drive an military career.

Pleasure And Peril Go Together

Jack Canuck and Uncle Sam have declared against motoring for pleasure on Sunday. The Allies need so much gasoline, and it is growing so scarce that its use for pleasure must be curtailed. The Fuel Controller has made known his request; it is the duty of every motor car owner to comply. Canada can save 225,000 gallons of gasoline next Sunday, which means a monetary saving—considering gas, oil, and wear and tear—of more than $150,000. Serve your country by foregoing a pastime. Pleasure and peril go together.

Mackenzie-Mann And Their Banker Receive $8,500,000

OTTAWA, Sept. 14.—The Government has sent a check of $8,500,000 in part payment for the Canadian Northern Railway, and people are asking "how much of it will Sir William Mackenzie get?" But public curiosity is not likely to be gratified. The Government has not concerned itself with the problem of who should receive the money, but has made the check payable jointly to Mackenzie and Mann and their bank. All parties must sign before the money is paid, so it is "up" to them, and not to the Government, to decide what share each will receive.

It will be recalled that Mackenzie and Mann covenanted to turn in approximately five-sixths of the 600,000 shares of C.N.R. stock. What they actually did turn in was slightly in excess of that, namely 510,000 shares.

How Award Works Out

When the arbitrators awarded 10,800,000 for the C.N.R., although it was understood that $10,000,000 was to be the limit, there was some curiosity as to what the result would be. It now transpires that $10,000,000 was only the limit for the purpose of fixing the price to Mackenzie and Mann; that is, the shares turned in by Mackenzie and Mann are paid for as though the whole 600,000 shares of the C.N.R. were worth $10,000,000. But the shares turned in by other people will be paid for as though the 600,000 shares were worth $10,8000,000. In other words:

Mackenzie and Mann turn in 510,000 shares for which they receive fifty-one sixtieths of $10,000,000.

Other shareholders may, if they wish, turn in the remaining 90,000 shares, for which they will be paid in each case their proportionate share of $10,800,000.

If al the 91,000 shares are turned in the Government will pay out $1,638,000 for them, so that, with the $8,500,000 which goes to Mackenzie and Mann and their bank) the total 600,000 shares wil cost Canada $10,138,000.

There is $25,000,000 Convertible

While the Government now controls the C. N. R., there is still outstanding not only the 91,000 shares already mentioned, held largely, it is said, by Toronto associates of Sir William Mackenzie), but $25,000,000 of covertible debenture stock, and, in addition, stock in a number of the subsidiary companies.

The $25,00,000 C. D. stock earns 5 per cent. interest if—there is a big "if." It ranks very low as a 'creditor," and the interest is only to be paid in all other claims are satisfied. For the past few years it has not been paid at all, and plenty of the stock can doubtless be bought at 37 cents on the dollar.

It is called "convertible" because, while really a bond, its holders have the opinion of exchanging it for stock at any time. Only one has done so since the Government got control. He owned $500 worth, and apparently did not think that there was much chance of getting 5 per cent. interest on it. Or, at any rate, he reckoned there was a better chance of a C.N.R. dividend on ordinary stock than C.N.R. interest on convertible debentures. It may appear an anomaly to talk of a Government road paying 'dividends," but it is to be remembered that the road is still to be run by a separate directorate, and presumably, if there are profits, dividends will be declared.

A. G. M'KAY ELECTED BY ACCLAMATION

Edmonton, Alta., Sept. 14.—Hon. A. G. MacKay, Minister of Municipalities and Public Health, in Premier Stewart's reconstructed Cabinet, was the only candidate put up at the nominations in Athabasca, Thursday, and is therefore confirmed in office by acclamation.

When the sexes have equal rights will men wear war gardens on their street.

If a woman is unable to think of anything else to say she repeats what she said to other people.

Guard Baby's Health In The Summer

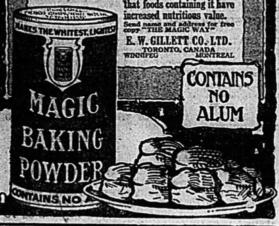
The summer months are the most dangerous to children. The complaints of that season, which are cholera infantum, colic, diarrhoea and dysentery come on so quickly that often a little life is beyond aid before the mother realizes he is ill. The mother must be on her guard to prevent these troubles, or if they come on suddenly to cure them. No other medicine is of such aid to mothers during hot weather as is Baby's Own Tablets. They regulate the stomach and bowels and are absolutely safe. Sold by all medicine dealers or by mail at 25 cents a box from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.



MAGIC BAKING POWDER

The use of the ordinary kinds of baking powder is not attractive to the woman that regards purity and nutrition as important factors in home baking. Women are coming more and more to realize that Magic Baking Powder is the perfect baking powder and that foods containing it have increased nutritious value.

Nothing But Heart Failure Can Prevent a Real Victory

MANCHESTER, Eng., Sept. 14—"The worst is over," Premier Lloyd George declared here in receiving the freedom of the city.

"The news is now distinctly good—really good," he said. "The tunnel is long and there are some steep gradients still to be climbed, but it is getting shorter. The worst is over.

'Nothing but heart failure on the our achieving a real victory. part of the British nation can prevent

"The casualties in the latest advance were less than one-fifth of the total suffered in the advance of 1916. The main difference between 1916 and 1918 is the unity of command."

For a League of Nations

Premier Lloyd George said he was all for a league of nations, and that, in fact, a league already had been begun. The British Empire, he said, was a league of dominions, and that the allied countries fighting the battle for international rights were now a league of free nations.

"To end all wars," the Premier said, "we must impose a durable peace on our enemies. The Prussian military power must not only be beaten, but Germany herself must know and the German people must know that their rulers have outraged the laws of humanity and that Prussian strength cannot protect them from punishment.

League of Fox and Geese

"This must be the last war," Mr. Lloyd George said. "Don't let us be misled that the establishment of a league of nations without power will in itself secure the world against a catastrophe. A league of nations with the Prussian military power triumphant would be a league of fox and geese—one fox and many geese. The geese would greatly diminish in numbers."

The only sure foundation for a league of nations, the Premier said, was a victory for the allies. Peace must be of a kind, he added, that commends itself to the common-sense conscience of the nations. As a whole it must not be dictated by extreme men on either side. Continuing, the Premier said:

Building a New World

"We shall neither accept for ourselves nor impose upon our foes a Brest-Litovsk treaty."

The Premier said:

"We cannot allow the 'Bolsheviks' to force on us a peace so humiliating as to dishonor the national flag and to make a repetition of the horrors of this war inevitable."

"When a satisfactory peace is secured, then we can proceed with a clear conscience to build up a new world. The war's first lesson was the immense importance of maintaining the solidarity of the British Empire.

England's Transportation Feat

"The advent of the Amercans additionally depressed the Germans. There is no finer feat in the history of English industry that the transportation of the Americans across the Atlantic. The Germans did not expect more than two divisions. That was another miscalculation. Hundreds of thousands of Americans are there now and the Germans know it. They are the advance guard of at least 10,000,-006 of the finest material in the world.

"When we suffered our reverse on March 21 we still had large reserves, of rome of which the Germans did not know. I have already expressed gratitude to those who criticized the Government, charging we had no reserves, as it was so successfully misleading to the Germans.

Fortunate in Foch

'We were extremely fortunate in securing the services of Foch as supreme commander. He is specially fitted for the particular conditions of this war, where battles are fought on a three hundred mile front.

Premier's Wonderful Popularity

Premier Lloyd George's arrival at Manchester was the occasion for a great popular demonstration.

Thousands of girls from the munition factories, with flags and banners were drawn up on the railway station platform while great crowds lined the whole route of the Mansion House to which the Premier drove amid the cheers of the throng.

At various stopping places on the way from London to Manchester, the Prime Minister received the heartiest receptions. At Rugby, Crewe and Stockport some hundreds of persons d assembled. They cheered and waited, evidently expecting speeches, but the Premier, who was busily working in his saloon, merely bowed his thanks.

Curing Skin Troubles

So many people, both men and women, suffer from skin trouble, such as eczema, blotches pimples and irritation that a word of advice is necessary. It is a great mistake for such sufferers and those with bad complexions to smear themselves with greasy ointments. Often they could not do anything worse, for the grease clogs the pores of the troubled skin and their condition actually becomes worse.

When there are pimples or eruptions, or an irritating or itching rash, a soothing boracic solution may help to allay the irritation, but of course that does not cure the trouble. Skin complaints come from an impure condition of the blood and will persist until the blood is thoroughly purified. It is well known that Dr. Williams Pink Pills have effected the best results in many forms of skin disorders and blemishes. That is due to the fact that these pills make new, rich blood, and that this new blood attacks the impurities that give rise to skin troubles and disperses them; so that Dr. Wiliams' Pink Pills cure skin disorders from within the system—the only sure way.

It should be added that Dr. Williams Pink Pills have a beneficial effect upon the general health. They increase the appetite and energy and cure diseases that arise from impure blood.

You can get these pills through any medicine dealer or by mail at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50 from The Dr. Williams Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

MUST DESCRIBE CONTENTS

TORONTO, Sept. 14—The attention of the public is directed to the requirements that every parcel post packet for the United Kingdom, Ialy, France and other destination overseas, including those addressed to soldiers, must be accompanied by a Customs declaration affixed to the parcel by the sender giving a definite statement as to the nature and value of the contents.

The Post-Office Department advises that a large number of parcels reach the General Post-Office daily which cannot be sent forward on account of the Customs declaration not being properly made out, the senders declaring the contents indefinitely as soldiers' comforts, clothing, dry goods, eatables, sundries, etc. It is therefore, necessary to return such packets to the senders, in order that the declarations may be properly filled in. This not only entails unnecessary labor on the part of the Post-Office officials, but may cause delay in despatch. Care should therefore be taken to see that the declarations are properly filled in as required by the Postal Regulations.

Blank Customs declaration forms can be obtained on application at any Post-Office.

THE GLORY OF THE MARNE

C. Fox Smith.

The rivers broaden to the sea
In power and wealth and pride,
And stately ships from all the world
Do berth with every tide.
But Marne hath never port nor pier,
Warehouse nor wharf nor quay,
And the very name of her is lost
Before she finds the sea.

The rivers run rejoicing down,
And singing as they flow,
In rain or sun their course assigned,
Pursuing swift or slow.
But Marne goes weeping all day long
And is not comforted,
Her trampled banks and blood'e pools
And shallows choked with dead.

Yet hath she glory for all time
'Mid rivers great and small,
And nobler dower than pride or power
Is hers among them all.
For Marne hath seen the hosts of hell
Turned backward from their [illegible]
[illegible] stormy dawn of Hope arise
On Earth's war-darkened soul
And Marne hath fame for evermore
While the floods of Time shall roll!

Big Drive Starts Here Next Week

K. of C. Army Hut Fund Campaign Ready to Start-Organization Perfect—Success Assured

The citizens of Belleville will have one more call made on their generosity and patriotism next week when the Knights of Columbus make their appeal for $5,000 to aid the Canadian Army Huts. During the week $500,000 will be raised in Canada. It is confidently expected that the good citizens of Belleville will come forward once more to aid those glorious men in France, who are fighting the battle of freedom. From the way the war is going at present this may be the last appeal. Therefore, special effort should be made to double the objective placed for Belleville. The citizens are more prosperous than ever before, and the war is in no small way responsible for this prosperity. We are living in luxury, or at least in comfort, while our fighting men are sleeping in mud and fighting for miles in shell-torn country, sometimes going for days without sufficient nourishment to sustain one of us here at home.

The Army Huts are an organiaztion authorized by the Dominion Government, and under the direction of the Military Chaplain service. The fund supplies comforts for those men, who are so badly in need of comforts, right up under the enemy's guns. There are no sales in the Army Huts, everything is free. The administration expenses are paid by the general fund of the Knights of Columbus. Therefore every dollar that is given to the Army Huts Fund goes to supply comforts for those men at the front. In dispensing of comforts no distinction is made. The men at the front are brothers fighting for the one cause and under the one flag. Therefore they are treated as brothers in the Army Huts, the slogan of which is "Every Soldier Welcome and Everything Free." Surely thoughtful citizens who can realize the blessings of the security that these men are giving us will not fail to make a supreme effort to give every dollar they can afford to this appeal.

A canvass of the homes will be made Wednesday, Thursday and Friday, September 18, 19 and 20th, so preparation should be made meet the canvassers with a generous subscription.

The headquarters of the campaign committee for Belleville District is at the corner of Bridge and Front Sts., old Balmoral Block. Meeting will be held there nightly, and all who are willing to assist this work in any way should call in and voice their willingness. It will be appreciated by the hard working committee and will serve as an incentive to the canvassers and workers.

Remember next week you, who occupy the trenches at home are expected to go over the top once again for humanity. Our fighting men at the front have never failed us. Will we at home fail our fighting men?

Called By Death

JAMES S. KETCHESON

Great sorrow has entered the home of ex-Mayor H. F. Ketcheson in the death of his son, James, in his sixteenth year, from injuries sustained by the accidental discharge of a revolver last Sunday. Preliminary hopes raised by the strong resistance offered by the lad's wiry constitution to the serious wounds inflicted by the large bullet which entered the body were reluctantly abandoned as the days went on and the end came yesterday afternoon shortly after four o'clock to the great grief of the family. The sympathy of the entire community goes out to Mr. and Mrs. Ketcheson and family in their sudden and sad bereavement. James, or "Jim" as he was popularly called, was a remarkably clever boy with a future bright with promise, a typical Canadian lad, alert and ambitious and fully alive to the responsibilities and privileges of young Canada. With three soldier brothers, two of whom were seriously wounded, Jim, although too young for active service overseas, was determined to do his bit, and devoted his vacation to National Service, working four months this summer in the army of the food producers on a farm as a Soldier of the Soil, supremely happy in being able to assist in the great world struggle for freedom and righteousness.

Everybody knew "Jim" Ketcheson and his friends were legion for few could resist the friendly spirit engendered by his cheery smile and neverfailing good nature. He was all boy, bubbling over with the optimistic spirit of youth, and blessed with abundant health and energy.

James Scantlebury Ketcheson was born in Belleville on November 12, 1902, was educated at the Public School from which he graduated into the High School. He took a prominent part as a member of the Public and High School Cadets, was a member of the Y. M. C. A. and the Bridge Street Methodist Church Sunday School.

He is survived by his father and mother, ex-Mayor H. F. Ketcheson and Mrs. Ketcheson; three brothers, Lieut. William Ketcheson (now overseas) Lieut. David Ketcheson and George Ketcheson; five sisters, Mrs. E. B Westover, West Selkirk; Miss Ethel Ketcheson, Deaconess at Methodist Deaconess Home at Toronto; Misses Nellie, Bessie and Ada at home.

The funeral will take place Monday afternoon.

MRS. JENNIE STAPLEY

Mrs. Jennie Stapley died last evening at the residence of her sister, Mrs. R. Holliday, Marshall Road, Sidney Township, after being ill for some months. Deceased was born in Sidney and had lived in this vicinity all her life. Her husband, Robert Stapley, preceded her to the tomb some months ago. She was a member of the Methodist church. One son, Robert Ernest William survive.

Music and Drama

"THE GARDEN OF ALLAH"

Next Tuesday night at the Griffin's Opera House Liebler Company's big stage production of "The Garden of Allah," on its sixth annual tour will be given.

Throughout the wonderful series of stage pictures, native Arabs, dancing girls and the beasts of the desert fill the stage, lending a rare tinge of reality to this spectacular offering. The climax of the magnificent settings is reached in the scene of Count Anteoni's garden where the riot of tropical color is delightful. Sharing honors with this scene is the famous sandstorm on a stretch of desert, in which real sand it utilized, enhanced by the magical lighting effects.

Miss Edna Arches Crawford injects into her portraya of "Domini Enfilden" all the necessary romanticisme of the role, and her audiences have been most enthusiastic over her work. Playing opposite Miss Crawford is Mr. Paul Gilomre as "Boris," the renegade monk, and in the great confession scene their exhibit their emotional and dramatic talent to excellent advantage.

LEE KIDS MAKE BIG HIT

The famous Lee children, Katherine and Jane, William Fox "Baby Grands" again created roars of laughter at Griffin's last night where they are appearing in their latest six part comedy offering "Troublemakers." Pauline Frederick again delighted her many admirers in a Paramount picture of unusual interest entitled, "Her Final Reckoning. "My Wife's Husband," a very amusing sunshine comedy, and an excellent chapter of "A Fight for a Million" series completes a splendid varied program all of which will be shown tonight for the last time.

Beautiful Edna Mayo is appearing at the Palace Tonight in Essanay's 5 part production of "The Chaperon." Besides the above offering "The Rag Doll" a highly amusing Kalem comedy, and "The Mirror of Fear" a thrilling detective story will also be screened.

"DOUG" FAIRBANKS AT GRIFFIN'S MONDAY

"Doug" Fairbanks heads the photoplay programme at Griffin's on Monday and Wednesday of next week in his latest pepperine packed comedy "Bound in Morocco" and no doubt the many Fairbanks "Fans" will be on hand to witness his latest vehicle for patrons are always assured a real treat when a Fairbanks is announced for exhibition. Jane Gail, the famous same programme in a part society drama entitled, "Souls in Pawn." The Universal screen magazine and the 20th chapter of "The Eagle's Eye" series will also be exhibited.

"THE PHANTOM BUCCANEER"

"The Phantom Buccaneer," one of the most thrilling screen attractions ever produced, is a new Essanay feature. Adapted from Victor Bridges' gripping novel, "Another Man's Shoes," this vivid picture is a masterpiece of photoplay. Opening with an exciting battle scene which makes the audience clutch its seats, it carries this tense, dramatic action through to the end. In scenic splendor, as well as acting, the great feature is a marvel of the camera's art.

"The Phontom Buccaneer" is being presented at the Palace Monday to Wednesday, matinee daily.

Its cast is notable. Richard Travers, one of the most widely known stars in motion pictures, is seen in the lead. Appearing with him is Miss Gertrude Glover. An excellent company of more than 100 persons supports them. Three other plays of merit are also being exhibited.

AN IMPORTANT DISCOVERY
SWOLLEN VEINS RELIEVED

That Absorbine, Jr., would relieve varicose veins was discovered by an old gentleman who had suffered with swollen veins for nearly fifty years. He had made unsuccessful efforts to get relief and finally tried Absorbine, Jr., knowing its value in reducing swellings, aches, pains and soreness.

Absorbine, Jr., relieved him and after he had applied it regularly for a few weeks he told us that his legs were as smooth as when he was a boy and all the pain and soreness had ceased.

Thousands have since used this antiseptic liniment for this purpose with remarkably good results.

Absorbine, Jr., is made of oils and extracts from pure herbs and when rubbed upon the skin is quickly taken up by the pores; the blood circulation in surrounding parts is thereby stimulated and healing helped. $1.25 a bottle at druggists or postpaid. A liberal Trial Bottle will be mailed your address for 10c in stamps. Booklet free. W. F. Young, P. D. F., 187 Lymans Bldg., Montreal, Can.

The ward is strangely hushed today,

At midnight Number Twenty died.
So many weeks of weary hours
He lay and heard the busy tread,
As patient as the wistful flowers
That shed their fragrance near his bed—
So all we saw, in passing by,
His questioning glance, his dreamful face.
We shall regard resentfully
The stranger that must fill his place.
What visions wrapt him through the dim
Slow hours? Like wraiths upon our sight
All common changes seemed to him
Of dawn and day, of eve and night;
Each brought its sounds of whispering feet,
His face's glimmering, ghost by
[illegible]
To sea-worn eyes foretells some far
Relief—a port of quietude;
And homing to that bourne, we heard
The call so many wanderers know
From meadows lulled by bee and bird
Where he was happy long ago—
Where simple things were ecstasy,
And life a game among the flowers,
And every hurt and malady
Was healed by gentler hands than ours.
Not jacinth wall and golden street
Perchance so rapt his dying gaze,
For him, Heaven's wonder was the sweet,
Lost wonder of his childhood's days;
Perchance he sought no blissful shore,
No place with hosts of myriad blest,
But just to lay a child once more,
His tired head on his mother's breast.
Ah, well, today all dreams come true
For those closed eyes where riddles cease;
He leaves the warring world he knew,
And ratifies, ere we, his peace.
God rest him, then; [illegible] but we must turn
To face the same sad tasks again—
To tend new convoys, and discern
The same dream in the eyes of pain.

AN IMPORTANT DISCOVERY SWOLLEN VEINS RELIEVED

That Absorbine, Jr., would relieve varicose veins was discovered by an old gentleman who had suffered with swollen veins for nearly fifty years. He had made unsuccessful efforts to get relief and finally tried Absorbine, Jr. knowing its value in reducing swellings, aches, pains and soreness.

Absorbine, Jr., relieved him and after he had applied it regularly for a few weeks he told us that his legs were as smooth as when he was a boy and all the pain and soreness had ceased.

Thousands have since used this antiseptic liniment for this purpose with remarkably good results.

Absorbine, Jr., is made of oils and extracts from pure herbs and when rubbed upon the skin is quickly taken up by the pores; the blood circulation in surrounding parts is thereby stimulated and healing helped. $1.25 a bottle at druggists or postpaid. A liberal Trial Bottle will be mailed your address for 10c in stamps. Booklet free. W. F. Young, P. D. F., 457 Lymans Bldg., Montreal, Can.

This is one of the poems which won a prize in the London Bookman's competition, open to soldiers, sailors, airmen, and others on active service. The writer of this one is a V.A.D. wardmaid, Alberta Vickridge.

The ward is strangely hushed today;
The morning nurses sober-eyed
Regard the screened space where they say
At midnight Number Twenty died.
So many weeks of weary hours
He lay and heard our busy tread,
As patient as the wistful flowers
That spent their fragrance near his bed—
So oft we saw, in passing by,
His questing glance, his dreamful face,
We shall regard resentfully
The stranger that must fill his place.
What vision wrapt him through the dim
Slow hours? Like wraiths upon our sight
All common changes seemed to him
Of dawn and day, of eve and night;
Each brought its sounds of whispering feet,
Its faces glimmering, ghost by ghost—
Yet scarce he left his dream to greet
Those comers who would mourn him most,
For in his sight shone such a star
As, after tempests loud and rude,
To sea-worn eyes foretells some far
Relief—a port of quietude;
And, homing to that bourne, he heard
The call so many wanderers know
From meadows lulled by bee and bird
Where he was happy long ago—
Where simple things were ecstacy,
And life a game among the flowers,
And every hurt and malady
Was healed by gentler hands than ours.
Not jacinth wall and golden street
Perchance so rapt his dying gaze;
For him, Heaven's wonder was the sweet,
Lost wonder of his childhood's days;
Perchance he sought no blissful shore,
No place with hosts of myriad blest,
But just to lay a child once more,
His tired head on his mother's breast.
Ah, well, today all dreams come true
For those closed eyes where riddles cease;
He leaves the warring world he knew,
And ratifies, ere we, his peace.
God rest him, then; . . . but we must turn
To face the same sad tasks again—
To lend new convoys, and discern
The same dream in the eyes of pain.

"God Help Us!"

Cleveland Press.

Falling back before the slow moving but ceaselessly advancing hosts of British, French, Americans, the German foe prays to God for help.

"God help us!" screams the frightened Baron Ardenne, Hun general.

They stand deep in the blood of slaughtered babies, non-combatant men, women, nurses, wounded, and beg for God to help them.

They stand convicted of crimes unmentionable and pray for God's help.

They wallow in scenes of their horrible depravity and cruelty and plead with God for help!

They bring to the world the most awful of all wars and hope that God will help!

They violate their most sacred pledges and call upon God for help!

They tear down altars and demolish churches and expect God to help them!

They kill clergymen and violate the sisterhood of the church—and pray to God for help!

They steal the graven images from cathedrals and cast them into cannon, yet pray to God for help!

They enslave a captive people and beg God's help!

They torture innocent women and children and prisoners—but pray to God for help!

And they are not repentant, yet pray for God's help!

They are not willing to end their riot of barbarian lawlessness but pray for God to help them!

The God we have come to know and worship is NOT the accomplice of the murderer, the robber, the ravisher, the Hun!

Church Will Face Big Issues When Men Come Home

TORONTO, Sept. 12.—What is the present and what will be the post-war attitude toward the Church and its services of more than 100,000 sons of the Anglican communion in Canada, who are now overseas fighting for Canada, the Empire and civilization?

In what way will be directed the tremendous influence Canada's soldiers will have on their return, as a result of the glorious name they have carved out for themselves in the history of the world?

These were the questions that faced the General Synod of the Church of England in Canada this afternoon, at a joint meeting of the House of Bishops and the Lower House. The joint session was arranged as a result of the presentation of a resolution yesterday afternoon by Mr. Justice Hodgins, urging prompt action to ascertain, from returned chaplains, what changes have grown out of the war in the attitude of the soldiers toward the Church and its services.

Before beginning the regular program of the afternoon, Rev. Canon Frank Smart, of Newfoundland, was presented to the gathering as the first official delegate to the Synod of the Church of England in Newfoundland.

Canon Smart in presenting greetings from the Bishop of Newfoundland and the Synod of Newfoundland, declared that his visit to Toronto was his first trip outside the island in 30 years.

"I come," he said, "as the first official delegate to the Church of Canada and I hope I will be the last. I hope that the next Newfoundlander to come to the Synod will come with his bishop as part of the Synod. When Newfoundland does come into the ecclesiastical confederation of Canada, I hope Canada will remember that Newfoundland has something to give as well as something to receive."

In this connection Canon Smart mentioned a musical contribution Rev. William Bullock's hymn, "We Love the Place of God." His country, he declared, also has contributed generously in men, and he mentioned Archbishop Bond, Bishop Pinkham of Calgary, and Rev. John Antell.

In closing he asked for the moral support of the Church in Canada, and for intercession in prayer.

What Soldiers Think.

The importance of obtaining at once accurate information regarding the attitude of Canada's soldiers toward the Church and its services was recognized at last night's session of the General Synod of the Church of England in Canada. On motion of Mr. Justice Hodgins, seconded by Mr. E. G. Henderson, it was decided to devote the afternoon's session to a joint meeting of the House of Bishops and the Lower House for receiving reports from returned chaplains regarding their work and observations regarding the attitude of Canada's fighters to the Church. The House of Bishops concurred in the decision of the Lower House.

In presenting his resolution, Judge Hodgins explained that the Anglican Communion of Canada has more than 100,000 sons overseas.

After the departure of the bishops, at the afternoon's session, the House of Delegates proceeded to organization.

The first roll call showed 176 delegates present, and on the call for temporary chairman, Dr. L. H. Davidson, K.C., of Montreal, was elected by acclamation.

The election of prolocutor for the Lower House resulted in a keen contest, three ballots being necessary before Dean Lloyd, of Halifax Diocese, was elected with 88 votes to 64 for Precentor L. N. Tucker, of London, his nearest competitor.

Ven. Archdeacon Inglis, of Toronto, was elected clerical secretary by acclamation, and Francis H. Gisborne, KC., I.S.O., was accorded a like honor. His Honor Judge McDonald, M.A., D.C.L., was re-elected treasurer of the synod.

TO every home there comes a time when every thought, every hope, every prayer for the future centres on the recovery of one loved one. In that hour of anguish, every means to recovery is sought—the highest medical skill, trained nurses, costly treatment. Does the price matter?

* * * *

It may be so great as to stagger the imagination—a sum beyond the possible.

But does anyone ask, "Can we do it?" Money or no money, they do it. And somehow they pay.

It may mean doing without things they think they need. It may mean privations, sacrifices, hardships. They make unbelievable savings, they achieve the impossible, but they get the money to pay.

* * * *

To-day in this critical period of our nationhood, there is imperative need for MONEY—vast sums of money. Only one way now remains to obtain it.

The nation must save, every community, every family, every individual Canadian must save.

If anyone says "I cannot save" let him consider to what extent he would pinch himself to relieve the sufferings of a loved one at home; and surely he would not pinch less for our fighting brothers in France.

Without suffering actual privations, nearly every family in Canada can reduce its standard of living, can practice reasonable thrift, can make cheerful sacrifice to enrich the life-blood of the nation.

You who read this, get out pencil and paper NOW. Set down the items of your living expense. Surely you will find some items there you can do without.

Determine to do without them.

Start TO-DAY. Save your money so that you may be in a position to lend it to your country in its time of need.

SENSATION AT ENQUIRY

St. Johns, Que., Sept. 13—The enquiry into the St. Johns election scandal which the Government consented to allow Mr. Justice MacLennan to hold following the demands made in Parliament by the Liberal party and Mr. Jos. Archambault, M.P., for Chamblay, came to an abrupt adjournment this morning when Mr. Francis Chandwick, deputy clerk from Ottawa admitted that he had been authorized by the officials of the Government that the ballot boxes ordered by the judge could not be produced.

Not only counsel for the prosecution of the charges but also the judge himself, expressed their astonishment at the non-compliance of the court's order. The Governor-in-Council has ordered this enquiry, declared Mr. Justice MacLennon, if the officials of the Government will not provide the documents I don't see how the enquiry can go on.

MARRIED AGED MAN AND SECURED FORTUNE

TORONTO, Sept. 13—In the Police Court yesterday, Eliza Debard, alais Hogate, was remanded for a week on a charge of bigamy. The police of Detroit had sent word that Debard lived here for 20 years with a rich man, whom she married in February this year while he was on his death-bed, and eventually secured his fortune, which some say amounted to $80,000. The second chapter of the story dealt with the arrival in Toronto of a son of the deceased rich man and the laying of the charge of bigamy against his "stepmother."

PRINCE RUPERT SUPPLIES SPHAGNUM MOSS FOR SOLDIERS

WINNIPEG, Man., Sept. 14—Sphagnum Moss, an excellent substitute for absorbent cotton in making dressings for our wounded men on the battle fields of Europe, grows profusely on the hills about Prince Rupert, B.C., and at the request of the Red Cross authorities in Toronto, the citizens of Prince Rupert recently devoted a day to the collection of this moss, with the result that a full car load has been obtained and sent forward by the Grand Trunk Pacific Railway. The value of Sphagnum moss as a dressing for wounds was learned from the Indians of the north country, who for centuries have made various kinds of dressings from this moss, and it is now to be prepared and sent in large quantities from Canada, thereby saving thousands of tons of cotton.

A BELATED SACRIFICE

It seems a small thing to save on gasoline, as the Fuel Controller asks, but it is not as small as it looks. If 150,000 motor cars stopped joy riding in Canada on Sunday alone it would save perhaps $100,000 on gasoline. What other personal sacrifice could be made so easily, to such good purpose and with such a good example?

Motorists may say they must keep up their morale by motoring just as less well-to-do people maintain theirs by simple pleasures. Canada is about the last of the fighting nations to curtail its pleasures. It is asking very little to request the suspension of unnecessary and unreasonable motoring,

THE HONOR of the TENTH

By Eileen Moretta

Copyright, 1912, by A. S. Richardson

The honor of the Tenth had been smirched. The rank and file growled it out in barracks, the officers whispered it to each other, and as the colonel sat on the veranda of his bungalow and admitted it to himself he laid much of the blame on his own shoulders.

The robber bands of India, known as dacoits, had been busy around Aliwal, and squads of British cavalry were being sent out every few days to destroy them. Your true dacoit is not only a robber, but a fighter as well. He robs his own race whenever opportunity offers and fights the British whenever and wherever he meets them. He is a good shot, a brave foe, and there are honor and promotion to be had in wiping him off the face of the earth. Young Danforth had lately joined the Tenth. He had family and political influence and a fortune behind him, and he had a personality which made friends. There could be no greater privilege than to be sent out at the head of a detachment to give the dacoits a whirl. When the time came that the colonel could do young Danforth this favor, he had a long and quiet talk with him. He posted him as to the characteristics and tactics of the foe and warned him of the pitfalls that even veteran officers might fall into. He was to find the enemy and destroy him, but he was cautioned against impetuousity and useless sacrifice of men. This expedition was to be the young officer's "try out." He had never been under fire, and he could not claim full kinship with the regiment until he had.

They gave young Danforth a British sergeant and corporal and thirty-eight Sikh troopers. Under an officer in whom he has confidence there is no better soldier that the Sikh. His only weak point is that he must have his foe in front of him. Danforth had the luck to strike a band of robbers within twenty miles of the post. They had captured a village and were pillaging. It was testified to by a dozen Sikhs that he was as cool as an old veteran. He sent scouts forward to ascertain the strength of the enemy and the lay of the land, and at the head of his forty men he charged into the village and routed out the band of 150. He lost two men and killed a dozen, and it was a little affair to be proud of. He held his men well in hand and was on the watch for trickery, and had all the troopers been Europeans all would have gone well. As the robbers retreated over broken ground men were flung off from either flank to create an ambush. They were few in number and only half hearted, but as they opened fire the Sikhs bolted. There were confusion and a rout and the pursuers became in turn the pursued. When the flight ended, the sergeant and corporal were missing.

A court martial was demanded by young Danforth. No sooner had the detachment returned than the remnant of the Sikhs began to whisper about incompetency and cowardice. They praised the officer for his fight at the village, but they declared that his cowardice when he found himself in a tight place had brought about disaster. His defense was straightforward and clear. There was not an officer who doubted one of his statements, and he was honorably acquitted of the charge; but a stain had been left behind. It was felt by men and officers that to be even suspected of cowardice was a smirch on the name of the regiment. It was agreed that the Sikhs had lied to excuse their own cowardice, and there was the verdict of the court martial, yet the cloud was not dissipated.

Young Danforth could not fail to notice the change in the attitude of his brother officers. They did not cut him, but they had to make an effort to be friendly. Pretty soon hints were thrown out that it would be well for him to transfer or leave the service. Then he went to the colonel and said:

"I was charged with cowardice by the Sikhs. Had my sergeant and corporal lived to come back with me I could have had witnesses to prove to the contrary. The court martial took my word, however, and I was honorably acquitted. I realize that I am tainted. There are hints that I ought to transfer or resign. With your permission I shall remain right here and hope for something to happen."

"I believe that the Sikhs perjured themselves," quietly replied the colonel, "and perhaps it will be the wisest thing you can do to stay on."

The words were kind and fair, but no grip of the hand accompanied them. In his heart of hearts the colonel had hoped the subaltern would go away, though at the same time he realized that only an innocent man would have cared to remain. Young Danforth led no more expeditions, and months rolled away before anything happened to put his case in a more favorable light. Then a number of dacoits were captured. Among them were two or three who had fought him that day. They boasted of how they had driven his Sikhs; they praised the courage he had exhibited in seeking to rally them. There was an increase of cordiality after that, but the subaltern gave no sign that he noticed it or was pleased over it.

A few months later there arrived a party of civil officials and their wives who were on a junket. They had several elephants with them for tiger hunting, and within twenty miles of the post was the game they were after. Young Danforth was one of the three officers decided to arrange and manage the hunt. With the civil commissioner of Nepal and his wife was Lady Clifton, and the two ladies were by no means novices in the sport of tiger hunting. When the hunt had been fairly entered upon, they occupied a howdah on the back of a big elephant together and would not admit any one else. A tiger had been driven by the beaters into a swamp a mile long by half a mile broad, and into this spot, grown up to reeds and bushes until the eyes could scarcely penetrate, crashed the elephants and horses. The idea was to drive the tiger out upon clearer ground to the west, where he could be reached, and everybody made as much noise as possible. He was a crafty beast, and for two hours he refused to break cover.

The elephant on which the two ladies were mounted had taken the lead and been steady enough, but after awhile something rattled him, and he bolted across the swamp toward the trees. His mahout used every exertion to stop or turn him, but the old fellow was in a panic. To the surprise of everybody, the tiger followed at his heels, though in a furtive way, as if bent only on escape. With the elephant making a mad rush for a low branch tree that he might get rid of the burden on his back Lady Clifton took swift aim at the tiger and wounded him. The wound provoked his anger, and he sprang forward on the elephant's rear just as the tree was reached and the branches swept the howdah to the ground. A second later and the two ladies lay on the earth among the fragments, both stunned by the fall, and the tiger stood with his paws upon the body of Lady Clifton and growled and snarled at the dozen spectators.

Fortune had given young Danforth his opportunity. As a sort of terror held everybody else helpless, he flung himself from his horse, grabbed a hog spear from the hand of a chattering native and advanced upon the beast. He had to cover sixty feet of clear ground, and those who looked on said that the tiger's eyes blazed fire and every hair on his back stood up as the officer walked steadily forward. A dozen voices called to him to look out, but he made no halt. As he drew nearer the beast crouched for a spring, and when he was within ten feet the spring was made. Down went the man on his knees and up went the spear, and when the onlookers glanced again the man was on his feet and unhurt and the tiger was rolling over and over on the earth with the point of the spear sticking out of his back.

The ladies had not been seriously hurt, but at least one of them had been saved from the tiger's maw. Young Danforth was the hero of the hour. Every officer in the regiment took him by the hand and offered congratulations, and his colonel patted him on the shoulder and said:

"My dear boy, it was the coolest, bravest thing I ever heard of, and it makes us all proud of you."

"But the Sikhs swore that as a leader I got rattled and lost my head," replied the officer. "I was honorably acquitted, but I have been made to feel that I smirched the honor of the Tenth. Until I can wipe that out I am an outcast."

The civil commissioner wanted to show his gratitude, and Lady Clifton had influence she wanted to bring to bear, but the subaltern remained the subaltern. He was biding his time, and he had not long to wait. The dacoits came down from the hills again, and he was given the chance he so longed for. This time his fifty troopers were all Englishmen, and he not only attacked Mooltan, the greatest robber chieftain of them all, in a chosen position, but routed his force and captured the leader. That would have been a deed to boast of, but the subaltern was not satisfied. Leaving part of his force to hold the position and the prisoners, he pressed on into the foothills with the remainder and attacked and captured a camp and brought off the sergeant and corporal who had been made prisoners in the first affair. There was a second court martial at Aliwal on the return of the troop, and when the sergeant and corporal had proved that the Sikhs were liars and cowards the old Tenth held a jubilee and declared that its honor was never so bright. At the dinner they toasted "our comrade and hero."

Scared the Papuans.

There is no opening for a dentist in New Guinea. The Papuan can sever the wirelike rattan creepers which entangle him in the forest at one bite and sharpen his teeth on the flinty sugar cane sticks which he is constantly chewing. In "A Collector's Rambles" Mr. Sherman F. Denton relates an amusing incident which attended a display of Yankee dental achievement.

The natives had been going through some very clever tricks for our amusement, but we in turn were unable to astonish them by anything we could do until my companion, Shelley, told them he could take his teeth out and put them back again. "No," they said, "you cannot do that, for that is impossible." In reply Shelley tapped his teeth with his nail to show his audience that they were teeth, and then, extracting the plate on which he had two or three artificial ones, he opened his mouth, showing the gap where they had been.

The Papuans waited to see no more, but all started for the small door at once. In their haste to get out they stuck, and I feared for a few moments they would tear the house down. Those who were unable to get out at once howled in their fright and created a great uproar, and, in spite of our telling them that we were only in fun, they could not be persuaded to come back again for a long time, and then they came only under the promise that we would never do that again.

Twelve Tire Tests No. 11

This series of twelve tests is designed to take the uncertainty out of tire-buying.

Universal Usefulness

NOWADAYS many tire-makers are urging motorists to use non-skids on rear wheels and smooth-treads or "driving" tires on front wheels.

The reason given is that ordinary non-skids, with their small projections, make steering difficult when used in front, the effect being much the same as driving over rough roads.

Though some non-skids are unsatisfactory on front wheels, it is evident that the use of two different kinds of tires involves serious disadvantages.

In the first place it becomes necessary to carry an additional spare in order to be properly equipped for emergencies.

Secondly, a smooth-tread driving tire does not afford protection against skidding. The ideal tire is a non-skid constructed so that it protects against skidding and yet steers easily and smoothly.

Such a tire is the Michelin Universal Non-Skid. It is a Universal tire in fact as well as in name. Its patented tread is the most effective rubber non-skid ever devised. Yet this tread is so broad and flat that it steers just as smoothly and easily as a plain tread.

When used on all four wheels Michelins ensure the utmost economy, satisfaction and safety all around.

Ludendorff Flays Defeated Germans

At the British Front, Sept. 13—Gen. von Ludendorff's indictment of Gen. von der Marwitz's 2nd German Army for the defeat of August 8 by the British is the most damning criticism of the enemy's tactics and morale since Gen. von Arnim wrote his condemnatory report after the Somme battles of 1916.

The capture of this document by the British comes as another important document on the enemy morale to back up the testimony of German prisoners that the old punch is no longer in the German military arm.

To a long list of damaging German documents it is possible for me to add this one of Ludendorff's dated German Great Headquarters, August 8, based on reports from officers sent to this sector to find the reason of the defeat and signed by Ludendorff with this comment:

"Fact, that the troops were surprised by the massed attacks of tanks and lost their heads when the tanks suddenly appeared behind them having broken through under the protection of a natural and artificial fog.

NO OBSTACLES EXISTED

"Fact that scarcely any positions or obstacles worth mentioning existed either in the villages and broken ground farther back to make methodical resistance possible there.

"Fact, that the available artillery allowed to the battalions at rest and the reserves at disposal of the higher command were wholly insufficient to establish fresh support against the enemy, who had broken through, and against his tanks."

The following conclusions are drawn from these facts:

"First, as I have already ordered, considerably more must be done to obtain information regarding the enemy's intention by taking prisoners, watching the ground by means of special observation posts, report centres, aerial reconnaissance and listening sets, as, owing to the present situation, we must also expect surprise atacks on other front. The closest vigilence is necessary at daybreak and in the early hours of the morning, as surprise attacks usually begin at this time.

MEN NEED BUCKLING UP

"Because of certain lassitude often prevalent among the men in the morning after the strain of their nerve and endurance during the night, the supervision of troops at this time is specially necessary in view of our late experience. Sufficient has been said on my part with regard to the organization of infantry and artillery in depth.

"Second—Far more must be done than hitherto has been the case in the construction of defences against tanks. The dislike of the troops for trench-digging must be combatted by all the means possible.

"Third—The principle that the troops, even if enveloped, must if necessary, defend their battle zone for days to the last round and the last man if they do not receive further orders, appears to have been forgotten."

A second document, which should be coupled with Ludenroff's stigmatizing document, was issued in July, and goes into detail regarding what German prisoners should and should not tell their captors and augments Hindenburg's castigation of traitors within the army, saying that for a man to allow himself to be taken prisoner by the enemy without defending himself to the utmost is a dishonorable act, equivalent to treachery.

HORRIBLE FATE

For him who gives information to captors which falls into German hands this is his and his family's fate:

"Criminal proceeding will invariably be instituted against the man who has forgotten duty and honor. This entails in the first instance great unpleasantness for his relatives— parents, brothers, sisters, wife and child—and apart from this, after the war the heaviest penalties for himself. There is no question of remission of punishment or amnesty for such traitors any more than for deserters. They and their names will be branded, their home and property lost forever.

That Absorbine, Jr., would relieve varicose veins was discovered by an old gentleman who had suffered with swollen veins for nearly fifty years. He had made unsuccessful efforts to get relief and finally tried Absorbine, Jr. knowing its value in reducing swellings, aches, pains and soreness.

Absorbine, Jr., relieved him and after he had applied it regularly for a few weeks he told us that his legs were as smooth as when he was a boy and all the pain and soreness had ceased.

Thousands have since used this antiseptic liniment for this purpose with remarkably good results.

Absorbine, Jr., is made of oils and extracts from pure herbs and when bbed upon the skin is quickly taken by the pores; the blood circulation in surrounding parts is thereby stimulated and healing helped. $1.25 a bottle at druggists or postpaid. ## 13,000,000 Enroll For War Purposes

Million Between Ages of 19 and 37 Go to Camp in Few Weeks

WASHINGTON, Sept. 14—While American soldiers at the front in France stood ready with French and British forces for what may prove the greatest battle of the war, 13,000,000 other Americans registered Thursday for military duty, and gave the most inspiring demonstration of patriotism in the nation's history.

There was no delay in starting the machinery by which the man-power of the country will be made available to bring the war to a speedy and triumphant end. Out of the tremendous bulk of men who responded—with every race and creed represented—there will come soon from camps at home three millions and more fit for warfare and eager to go overseas.

The work of mobilization, it might be said, already is under way, for district boards will select men over 19 and below 37 to comprise the big contingent included in the October draft calls. This means that many available soldiers will have only a few weeks at home.

The drawing to fix the relative standing of 13,000,000 will not take place under three weeks, perhaps; but meanwhile district boards will start at once numbering serially all of the cards filled out to-day. Questionnaires immediately will be sent to men of the 19-37 class, while older men will be classed later.

Must Go On Or Sink the Ship

Germany in Midst of Raging Hurricane, Says Cologne Paper

LONDON, Sept. 14.—A despatch to the Daily News from Rotterdam says it is not necessary to accept the stories of mutiny and shooting at Cologne and from elsewhere to be convinced that the German public is in a condition of semi-panic, in which further reverses are likely to lead to a serious outbreak. The Cologne Gazette is constrained to give first place to a two-column article by Herr Wegener under the heading "In the Midst of the Hurricane."

He preaches the old text that by indulging in feelings of alarms the Germans are playing the Allied game. His own language is little calculated to allay the fears of any but the most undiscerning. He says:

'Our position is more serious than ever before in the thousand years in the history of our people. We fight almost the whole world and have no one and nothing but our own strength to count upon.'

The cries of alarm, however, are like a shout of fire in a crowded theatre, he says, which may bring disaster unless by pleading or the use of force calm can be maintained.

HOW MASONIC PIN GOT HOME

TORONTO, Sept. 14—Before Capt. H. L. Rous went to war, Ashlar Lodge A.F. and A.M. Toronto, presented him with a Masonic pin, and now this symbo has come back, as shown by the following letter from the Masonic Bureau for Allied Armies in France, to W. H. Best, Secretary of Ashlar Lodge:

'We are sending you a Masonic pin which belonged to Bro. H. L. Rous, a member of your lodge. It has come into our possession under the following circumstances:

"A brother-Mason, a French soldier was ordered by his captain, somewhere on the Belgian front, to inspect a poster that had been placed about fifty yards in front of the trenches just taken and cleared.

'He noticed a sheet of white paper, to which this pin was attached and he handed it to us yesterday when on leave.

"This happened about a month ago and we do not know what has become of the owner. However, we made immediate inquiries at headquarters, and, as soon as we know anytihng definite, we shall write or cable you, according to the nature of the news.

"We are extremely happy to see that Masonry, notwithstanding this terrible war, is still fully alive, even amongst our bitterest enemies, which shows that the work we have undertaken will strengthen Freemasonry, where it is necessary.

The mystery of the pin remains unsolved, but at the present time Capt. H. L. Rous is safe in England, according to his brother, C. M. Rous, of Rous and Mann, Limited.

The Heart of a Range

BY its fire-box the usefulness, efficiency and durability of a range is measured — it is the heart of the range.

It must be scientifically proportioned to the whole range,

—It must be both heat-resisting and heat-conserving.

McClary's exclusive process semi-steel linings, fitted to expand and contract at different degrees of heat, has the tough durability that makes for long life under constant usage.

And the close-grained texture and toughened hardness of that semi-steel resists the permeating destructiveness of fuel gases.

Then the fire-box is built wide to give maximum utilization of the fire body and it is just the right depth to maintain a steady, dependable body of fire—under perfect control.

No part of the Pandora Range has been given such close study by its makers as the fire-box, because the fire-box is the most important and most difficult problem in building a perfect range.

British and Canadians in U.S.A.

ON September 28th the work of British and Canadian Railway Mission in the United States automatically comes to a finish under the new treaty which has just been signed between Canada and the United States. Col. J. S. Dennis, who was given leave of absence from the C. P. R. to take an active and leading part in this mission, and has been made a C. M. G. in recognition of his services, has recently been addressing a series of meetings in the Middle West, with very notable results in the shape of recruits. His explanation of the treaty and of the work of the Mission have been widely quoted in the United States and are reproduced here:—

"Before the United States entered the war, and while you were a neutral country, it was illegal under the provisions of your Criminal Code for any of the allied nations to recruit their citizens resident in the United States for military service. I am not committing any breach of confidence now in saying that in spite of this provision certain Britishers were enlisted in the United States and went forward to fight, and, as you know, some over-zealous persons in San Francisco were imprisoned for breach of the law but were released after the United States entered the war.

"Very shortly after the United States entered the war, the Criminal Code was amended so as to give the Secretary of War the right to issue a permit to properly accredited commissions of any of the allied countries to come into the United States and recruit their citizens for military service, and it was under a permit of that kind that the British and Canadian Recruiting Mission came here in June, 1917, and have been recruiting Britons and Canadians since that date. When this Mission was established, the information available from your last census indicated that there were about 400,000 Britons and Canadians resident in the United States. When your Government called upon all men between 21 and 31, irrespective of nationality, to register, the returns showed that 286,000 Britons and Canadians were included in the ten million men who registered, and the names and addresses of these men were given us by the Draft Boards and carefully card indexed by us. The military age in Great Britain and Canada is from 18 to 45, so it is quite safe to assume that if we add to the 286,000 men between 21 and 31, who registered, those between 18 and 21 and 31 and 45, we are safe in saying that there were 350,000 Britons and Canadians of military age in the United States, and these are the men we have been trying to reach through the Recruiting Mission.

"Now let me tell you what we have been able to do through the Recruiting Mission since it was established. We opened recruiting depots in all the main centres, from the Atlantic to the Pacific. We asked these resident in the United States to come forward and meet the agonizing need of the countries of their birth for men to win the war. What has been the result? Fourteen months of concentrated effort and hard work has induced some 65,000 Britons and Canadians to volunteer up to last week. Of that number we have been able to accept and dispatch to the armies about 42,000. I said a moment ago that there were 350,000 Britons and Canadians of military age. 65,000 have volunteered. What has become of the remaining 285,000? It is for the purpose of dealing with this large number who have failed to respond to their countries call that this treaty has been entered into.

"Why did these Britons and Canadians come to the United States? They came because they thought the opportunities here were better than at home. You welcomed them—you gave them every chance to share with you the bountiful resources with which nature has blessed your wonderful country—they have been allowed to take advantage of all the privileges of citizenship, but have not become citizens, and in that they failed in their duty to you and to the flag that has protected them. 285,000 of these men are living in your midst and have not responded to the call of the country of their nationality. They say Great Britain and Canada can't reach us because we are in the United States and Uncle Sam can't get us because we are Britons or Canadians, so why should we worry. Well, this treaty was entered into to meet that situation and now they are going to be given every reason to worry.

"This treaty is really an historical event. It is true that a treaty on offices with officers and non-commissioned officers who have been on active service, and most of them have been wounded. We brought military units with bands from Canada. We have covered the country with posters; have sent appeals through the mails on three different occasions; have carried advertisements in the papers and have held public meetings and recruiting rallies without end—all for the purpose of carrying the urgent appeal of Great Britain and Canada to their citizens similar lines was entered into a short time ago between Great Britain, France and Russia, but it has remained for this war to make history in the completion of treaties between allied countries, under the provisions of which the citizens of one allied country resident in another allied country can be forced to do military service in the army of the country of their residence, instead of in that of the country of their nationality.

Col. J. S. Dennis.

"The treaty provides that a period of sixty days is granted during which the Britons and Canadians in the United State can volunteer. That period expires at midnight on September 28th next; sixty days from the date of ratification of the treaty on July 29th last. Every Briton or Canadian who volunteers during that period will be given a certificate if he is found medically unfit, and this certificate will be exchanged for an exemption certificate, issued by the British Ambassador at Washington, which certificate will be recognized by the United States as exempting the holder from military service.

"Provision is also made for exemption during the sixty day period by the Ambassador for certain specified causes, as set out in the regulations, and practically similar provisions exist regarding American citizens resident in Great Britain and Canada; these cases being dealt with by the American Ambassador in England, and the American Consul-General in Canada. You will, therefore, see that the treaty is reciprocal and perfectly fair in its provisions.

"Now, what is going to happen to the Britons and Canadians who have not volunteered or been exempted when midnight strikes on September 28th next? I will tell you! From that date and for all time thereafter they and their children and grandchildren after them will be branded in the eyes of the world as men without a country—duty dodgers, duty shirkers and slackers, who would not respond to the agonizing appeal for help from the country of their birth and nationality, and who had to be turned over through the provisions of a treaty to the country of their residence to be forcefully made to do their duty, and our sincere hope is that early in the morning of September 29th, Uncle Sam will take every one of these Britons and Canadians by the back of the neck and march them down the street to the nearest military camp. Why am I justified in saying these hard things? Well, I look back to the sacrifice made by Britain and Canada during the past four years and the lavish way in which Britons and Canadians have shed their blood in the cause, and then I look on these Britons and Canadians here who have made no sacrifice; have enjoyed peace and plenty, high wages and comfortable living, and I ask you is it fair that while your boys are going to the front as volunteers or under draft regulations these British and Canadian slackers shall be allowed to sit in peace and fill the positions made vacant by the departure of your sons, and to act as if the country of their birth has no call on their services in its desperate need?

"Is there any Englishman within sound of my voice who, after the 28th of September next, will ever again presume to call himself an Englishman and thus attempt to share in the standing given that name throughout the world by those English regiments that have fought when they stood outnumbered fifty to one until they died?

"Can any Scotchman ever claim kinship with the land of the heather, knowing that the glens of Scotland are depleted of men up to fifty years of age to re-inforce these kilted battalions of the British army, who, in this, as in every other war, have been foremost in the fight?

"Is there any Welshman who can hope to face the hills of Wales and claim citizenship with men from those hills and valleys who, under the badge of the leek, are fighting in France?

"Can any Scotchman ever again claim the wrongs claimed by Ireland, presume to class himself with the men of the British Guards, the Connaught Rangers, the Munsters, the Inneskillings, and those other units of the fighting Irish race, and, finally, is there any Canadian who, after the 28th of Septehmber, will presume to head north and cross that imaginary boundary separating Canada from the United States and hope that they will be any welcome for him there, and that he will be allowed to share in the name "Canadian," now known throughout the world as signifying citizenship in a country that voluntarily went three thousand miles to war, and on many a bloody battlefield proved that the name designated a virile nationality?

"I have endeavored to put the position of Britons and Canadians in the United States clearly before them and must leave the final decision to them. They must decide whether they are going to play a man's part or be forever ear-marked as men without a country and absolutely lacking in the red blood that we are justified in saying is recognized throughout the world as characterizing Britons.

155 SQUARE MILES FREED FROM HUN YOKE BY AMERICAN ADVANCE

REJOICING OF THE INHABITANTS

WHAT GEN. PERSHING'S TROOPS ACCOMPLISHED IN 36 HOURS — EASE WITH WHICH VICTORY WAS WON PROVES HOW GREAT HUN MORALE HAS DECLINED—BARRAGE NOT GREAT—FRENCH TROOPS SINGING "THE MARSEILLAISE," ADVANCED WITH THE AMERICANS—A FRENCH UNIT SURROUNDED BY THE ENEMY RESCUED BY YANKS — ALLIED AVIATORS BUSY — GERMAN BOY SOLDIERS TAKEN PRISONERS — CAPTURED GERMAN OFFICER SAYS AMERICANS WERE TERRIBLE ADVERSARIES.

With the American Forces in Lorraine, Friday Sept. 14 —Thirty-six hours of fighting netted Gen. Pershing's forces approximately 155 square miles of territory in the St. Mihiel salient, which has been in German hands since the autumn of 1914.

WEAKNESS OF GERMAN ARMS

American Army Headquarters, Friday, Sept. 14—Nothing could better illustrate the increasing weakness of the German arms than the ease with which the Franco-American forces entrusted with the task advanced in the St. Mihiel salient. It is true the operation was admirably planned and carried out, but one rarely has witnessed anything like the ease of that first day's fighting.

There was, of course, a barage, but not a very terrific affair as barrages go.

After the barrage there was nothing very startling in the way of gun fire and the machine gun rattle produced an effect by only coming now and then.

WOUNDED BUT HAPPY

PARIS, Sept. 14—The first batches of wounded who arrived at an evacuated hospital behind the battlefront Friday from the St. Mihiel fighting front forgot their sufferings in their joy over the beating the Germans had been given, says the correspondent of La Liberte behind the fighting line. A captured German officer when interrogated declared the Americans were "terrible adversaries," the correspondent reports.

The wounded men in talking of the engagement described the fighting as of the severest sort, especially in the series of dense woods scattered about the sailent and also along the railroad line. Scarcely two hours after the attack was launched the Germans started to counter attack with three divisions, which, however, were unable to stop the American advance.

"The American troops," adds the correspondent, "showed magnificent bravery and disregard of danger, while some of the French regiments went into battle with their colors flying and the men singing the Marseillaise."

AMERICANS TO THE RESCUE

PARIS, Sept. 14—A French detachment boxed up in a copse and surrounded by machine guns, was rescued by the Americans, according to a United States officer who arrived here, wounded, from the St. Mihiel battle field Saturday. The Americans, without waiting for orders, rushed forward, turned the copse and attacked the enemy from the rear, wiping out the machine gunners.

ALLIED AVIATORS BUSY

LONDON. Sept. 14—While the American First Army was pressing forward through the St. Mihiel salient allied aviators were intensively bombing the German railroads around Metz and Courcelles, according to a communication issued by the Air Ministry. The aviators also attacked the Metz station and transports with good results.

FOURTEEN-YEAR-OLD SOLDIERS

American Headquarters in Lorraine, Sept. 14—The groups of from 100 to 300 prisoners streaming back through the advancing guns in St. Mihiel salient were the most mixed lot imaginable. There were some fine big gunners more than six feet tall, and there were children of 14, frightened out of their wits.

JOYFUL RECEPTION

With the American Forces in Lorraine, Friday, Sept. 14—The Associated Press found on every hand, evidences of long control by the Germans. Bills for electric lighting, and supplies had been paid with curious currency on which the Germans had printed French monetary terms.

The inhabitants of the salient were absolutely ignorant of the events of history in the past four years, knowing only what their captors had told them. Here the sad stories heard in the whole of the reclaimed districts of France were accentuated by the long years of German control which had isolated the people from news of relatives and of world happengs.

The civilian population almost wholly fell in line because of the forcible removal of particularly every male of military age, welcomed Newton Baker, the American secretary of war, and Generals Pershing and Petain when they visited St. Mihiel a few hours after it was captured. The village in effect was their official host, but in reality, they were the guests of women and children.

Aged women and girls crowded about Secretary Baker and the two generals accompanying him, to express their thanks and pay homage. It was not merely curiosity it was an emotional outburst following almost three years of the conquerer's suppression.

Repeal of M.S.A. Will be Discussed

Special Despatch to The Intelligencer, Canadian Press Limited

QUEBEC, Sept. 16—The thirty-Trades and Labor Congress of Canada was opened this morning in Columbus Hall with 418 delegates from all parts of the Dominion in attendance. According to the P. M. Draper, secretary-treasurer of the Congress, the principal subjects to be discussed will include the question of coolies labor in Canada, a question which Mr. Draper says is causing real concern to labor men, particularly in the Maritime Provinces. Resolutions will also be submitted asking for the repeal of the Military Service Act, urging the federalization of all unions in Canada as a means of meeting capitalism. Another question around which much interest centres is the fight for the Presidency, the strongest opponent of J. C. Walters, the present holder of that office, being James Simpson, who is supported by the Toronto Typographical Union. Mr. Simpson is at present in New Zealand where he is conducting a temperance campaign.

South African Liner Sunk by Huns

189 Missing Including Ninety Women And Children—Torpedoed in Heavy Sea

LONDON, Sept. 16.—The British steamer Galway Castle, of 7,988 tons, gross, was torpedoed and sunk Thursday morning. She had 960 persons on board.

The passengers included 300 women and children. The bodies of three of the children, who had died, were brought ashore.

The missing from the torpedoed Galway Castle number 189. They include 120 passengers, 36 naval and military officers and men and 33 of the crew.

Ninety third-class passengers lost were, without exception, women and children.

The liner floated for two days in charge of the captain and volunteers.

The Galway Castle left port for South Africa on Tuesday last, and was torpedoed on Thursday in a stormy sea.

The Central News' account of the sinking says that one of the lifeboats was driven by a stormy sea against the ship's propeller and smashed. One of the steamer's passengers, the account adds, was Henry Burton, Minister of Railways of the Union of South Africa, who was saved. Another was Major Rabuntine, a member of the South African Parliament, who was drowned.

The Galway Castle was built at Belfast in 1911. London was her port of register. She was owned by the Union Castle Mail Steamship Company.

The vessel was thought to have been in Government service. Prior to the war she ran between England and South Africa, carrying passengers.

Not Peace But Truce Wanted by Huns

Special Despatch to The Intelligcneer

LONDON, Sept. 16—A. J. Balfour, British Foreign Secretary, speaking at a luncheon given to-day to a number of visiting Dominion journalists, said he had read of the proposal made by one of Great Britain's principal enemies and as an individual he said: "I cannot honestly see the slightest hope that the goal we all desire, the goal of a peace which shall be more than a truce, can really be attained in that way." The Foreign Secretary said he was utterly unable to see that a conference proposed by Austria could have the desired end.

Huns Lose Over 1,000 Planes During Aug.

With the French Armies, Sept. 16 —The recent German official communique claiming the destruction in August of 565 allied airplanes and 52 observation balloons while the Germans themselves lost only 145 airplanes and 86 balloons is ridiculously false. The enemy exaggerates the number of his victories as grossly as he minimizes the number of his losses.

French aviators and anti-aircraft cannon alone in August shot down 280 German airplanes and burned 66 balloons. The French daylight bombardment groups accomplished an enormously useful task, dropping last month more than 269 tons of explosives upon the battlefields between the Aisne and the Somme while the night bombarders dropped 261 tons of projectiles on enemy stations and communication routes. Additionallly many hundreds of thousands of cartridges were fired against German land troops and supply convoys.

In August the British flying corps destroyed 502 German planes, damaged 220 others and burned 46 Drachens, while admitting the loss of 240 machines. Italian aviators downed 50 opposing airplanes in flames and four balloons. The Americans vanquished 22 airplanes and burned on Drachan. The Belgians accounted for one German airplanes and seven balloons.

Altogether the Germans lost about 729 airplanes and had 324 damaged, while 109 Drachens were burned and two Zeppelins destroyed, in addition to receiving upon their troops, camps and stations almost 1,700 tons of bombs.

In brief, August was far from being a glorious month for the Germans aerially.

MORE NURSES NEEDED

WASHINGTON, Sept. 14.—Denial of recently published reports that the nursing needs of the army had been met was made today by Brigadier-General Charles Richard, acting surgeon-general, who stated that 25,000 nurses must be obtained before the end of the year. "It is estimated that before July 1 next we must have 50,000," he said.

HUN TRICK TO GAIN TIME SEEN IN AUSTRIAN PEACE PROPOSALS

AUSTRIA CATSPAW OF GERMANY

ALL MILITARY AND STATE LEADERS OF GERMANY CONFERRED IN BERLIN YESTERDAY ON AUSTRIAN PEACE NOTE—LONDON NEWSPAPERS INDIGNANTLY CHARACTERIZE AUSTRIA AS CATSPAW IN EFFORT BY GERMAN HIGH COMMAND TO GAIN TIME TO REORGANIZE SHATTERED FORCES—OFFER OF PEACE TO BELGIUM REGARDED AS SHAMELESS INSULT—LONDON, PARIS AND WASHINGTON RECEIVE AUSTRIAN PROPOSAL VERY COLDLY—ALLIED ADVANCE HAS FRIGHTENED THE HUNS.

Special Despatches to The Intelligencer, Canadian Press, Limited.

AMSTERDAM, Sept. 16.—There were important conferences in Berlin on Sunday regarding the Austrian peace note. Chancellor von Hertling and all military and state leaders of Germany were present.

REPUDIATED IN LONDON.

LONDON, Sept. 16.—The Austrian invitation to the belligerents to meet in informal peace discussion is given a warm reception by the London morning newspapers. The reception, however, is not that of cordiality but of indignant repudiation of the note, which is seen by commentators as a German trick by which Austria is made the catspaw in an endeavor to gain time for the German high command to reorganize its shattered troops. The offer of peace to Belgium is regarded as a shameless insult.

A HUN TRICK.

NEW YORK, Sept. 16.—The Associated Press this morning issued the following: "While Austria was preparing her note to the belligerent nations proposing that they meet in formal discussion of peace terms in a neutral country, Germany was making ready to make another offer of separate peace to Belgium. If official sentiment is reflected by newspaper comment at the Entente capital the efforts of the Central Powers to reach peace by negotiation are doomed to failure. In London and Paris the offer of Austria was very coldly received, while at Washington it is pointed out that the United States will not entertain any peace tentatives that can at best bring about only a temporary respite from hostilities and will leave Germany and Austria free to break the peace of the world at any future date. Even in the German press there seems to be little hope that the Allies will agree to meet representatives of the Central Powers.

Along the battlefront the British are creeping nearer the Hindenburg line in Picardy. Maissemy, northwest of St. Quentin, has been taken. The German retirement in Flanders is still going on and the British are pressing closely on the heels of the enemy."

British Troops Continue To Press in On Hindenburg Line

Special Despatch to The Intelligencer Canadian Press Limited

LONDON, Sept 16—(Official)—British troops last night advanced their line north of the Arras-Cambrai Road and established posts in the vicinity of Saughy, Coughy and Oppy. On Flanders front the British pushed ahead in successful operations on Comines-Ypres canal front for a depth of two miles.

SUNDAY WAR BULLETIN

Special to the Intelligencer, Canadian Press, Limited

AMSTERDAM, Sept. 15—Austro-Hungary has invited all belligerent governments to enter into non-binding discussions at some neutral meeting place with a view to bringing about peace. The Holy See and all neutral countries will be notified. An official statement from Vienna making the above announcement has been received in Amsterdam. The object of the conference would be to secure an exchange of views which would show "whether these prerequisities exist which would make the speedy inauguration of peace negotiations appear promising."

LONDON, Sept. 15—The British made further progress in the region northwest of St. Quentin and in Flanders near Labasse last night.

AMSTERDAM, Sept. 15—The Austrian proposals suggest there be no interruption in the war, but "Discussions would go only so far as would be considered by participants to offer prospects of success."

In Memoriam

In loving memory of Private J. H. Meloy.

He bravely served his country
And fought with might and will,
And just two years ago to-day,
He died upon the battlefield.

But he is not forgotten,
Although so far away,
By his Mother, Sisters and Brothers,
Upon this fatal day.

From Mrs. Adamson and Mr. W. Meloy.

Old Ideas Die Hard

But when you tire of treating eczema internally as a blood disease and apply Dr. Chase's Ointment you will soon be convinced which form of treatment is most effective.

Naturally and gradually the skin is healed as you apply this soothing, antiseptic ointment. The new skin is soft and smooth, and you only wonder that you did not try this treatment sooner.

Interior of the Dance Hall in the Street of the Ouled Nailes—one of the big scenes in the Liebler Co.'s great scenic spectacle, "THE GARDEN OF ALLAH" that will come to Griffin's theatre tomorrow night.

Music and Drama

"THE GARDEN OF ALLAH"

That weirdly wonderful drama of the soul, "The Garden of Allah," now on its sixth annual tour, and which will come to Griffin's Opera House tomorrow night is a startling example of stage ingenuity. Colorful stage pictures, bizarre, fantastic, and picturesque, will breathe the life and atmosphere of desert life in the Far East into this great story by Robert Hichens.

You are put in tone and harmony with the sentiment of the drama by the very first view—a sunrise in the desert. Across the blooded rays creeping slowly into the heavens moves a caravan of chattering Arabs, with their swaying camels, their plodding donkeys and bleating goats.

Quickly the action of the play then takes you past a view of the desert from a distance, to a crowded street teeming with life and activity. Then to the interior of a dance hall where emotions and passions are flung loose in wild abandon. Then your eyes are allowed to feast on a wonderful garden—a refreshing oasis in the whirl of picturesque action.

Then the choking thickness of a sandstorm in the heart of the desert produces the inclination to cover your face to protect it from the bitting particles of sand. Then comes the desert with the storm over and the sky filled with blinking stars shown in the stillness of fading light. And then at last you leave the drama at the gate of the monasery, where stillness is only broken by the melancholy cooing of the doves in the belfry.

Prominent in the company of one hundred are Miss Edna Archer Crawford, Mr. Paul Gilmore, Mr. Walter Edwin, Miss Pearl Gray, Mr. Leo de Valrey, Mr. Edward Everett, Mr. John Ridgeway together with a host of Arabs and their camels, horses, donkeys, goats, pigeons, etc.

"DOUG" FAIRBANKS AT GRIFFIN'S TONIGHT

The universally popular, "Doug" Fairbanks is appearing at Griffin's tonight and Wednesday in "Bound in Morocco." In this his latest screen offering 'Doug" introduces many new hair-raising stunts, and the story abounds in many situations which are said to be screamingly funny. Besides the above offering Gail Kane is appearing on the same programme in a gripping 5-part drama entitled "Souls in Pawn," adapted from the novel by Julius Kring Furttberman. A new and sure to be popular photoplay will be offered on the same program in the first presentation locally of "The Screen Magazine" containing a varied list of incidents of unusual interest. The latest chapter of "The Eagle Eye" series with King Baggot and Marguerite Snow in the stellar roles will also be exhibited.

"PHANTOM BUCANNEER

There are few actors who can play a dual role, and, in so doing, inject such perfection into each character that neither will betray the other to the audience. Each actor has his mannerisms. It is those which are so difficult to conceal. In "The Phantom Bucaneer'" his latest Essanay feature, which is being presented at the Palace Tonight to Wednesday, matinee daily, Richard C. Travers has achieved this feat to as near perfection as it has ever been done on the screen. The plot of this thrilling drama demands two persons of striking physical similarity, one is Stuart Northcote, an adventurer with villanous designs, the other Jack Burton, an impoverished young Englishman. The former merges into the latter as the play progresses. Mr. Travers is first seen as Northcote. He is the busaneer at the head of a murderous revolutionary force in a South African republic. As a villian of the deepest dye—an actor of heavy drama he is subperb. Then appears Jack Burton. He has nothing in the world to call his own, so he can safely look upon life with a cynical eye. He is fanciful and devil-may-care in spirit. He exudes cheerfulness and that "Peace on Earth good Will to Men" feeling. In these two widely varying roles each putting forth the most exacting demands upon his portrayer Mr. Travers appears, and he executes the technique and adopts the personality of the individual characters so exhaustively that the spectator forget the double. Another thrilling chapter of "The Woman in the Web" series and an excellent comedy will also be screened.

Thurlow Shooting Affray Investigated

This morning John Fitzgerald appeared before Police Magistrate Masson on a charge "that he did in the Township of Thurlow, on the 5th day of July, 1918, unlawfully assault one Ross Reid, thereby occasioning him bodily harm."

Many spectators were present in the court room to hear the trial.

Upon being arraigned the accused pleaded not guilty and elected not to be tried by the magistrate.

Mr. Carnew, County Attorney, represented the Crown, Mr. W. C. Mikel, K.C., for the injured man, Col. E. D. O'Flynn and Mr E. J. Butler for the accused Counsel for the defendant asked for the seclusion of the witnesses, which was approved by the County Crown Attorney, but the magistrate gave his decision to have them excluded from the court room, which was done.

This case is the outcome of a shooting affray which took place on the night of July 5th, when a number of persons assembled to commemorate the wedding of a son of Fitzgerald. During the proceedings Ross Reid was shot and severely wounded. While he was able to attend court he is still suffering from the effects of the wounds received.

The Victim's Version

Ross Reid in his evidence testified that he lived in the 2nd Concession of Thurlow Township and knew John Fitzgerald, who lived near witness. On the evening of July 5th, about 10 o'clock, a chivari party was in progress at Mr. Fitzgerald's place. Witness had a shot gun in his possession. One of the boys had the side of a plough to make a noise, also a bugle. Considerable noise was made, and the gun was discharged. The party was then in close proximity to Mr. Fitzgerald's house. Witness saw Mr. Fitzgerald come to a window, and he had a gun in his hand. Mr. Fitzgerald came outside. It was not a dark night and Mr Fitzgerald should have been able to see the boys. When Fitzgerald came near the party he said, "boys, will I shoot?" Witness replied "Sure, let her go." Fitzgerlad replied, "I'll let her go; d— you, I will shoot you." Defendant levelled the gun and fired. Witness received the charge of the gun on the left side, just below the rib. Witness was turning away when he was shot. The wadding of the gun, pieces of his coat, shirt and overalls entered the wound. Two of the boys helped him to the road. Witness was then taken to the Belleville hospital, where he was confined until August 25th. He was still suffering from the wound. Witness was a married man and had a family. There had never been any disagreement between witness and Fitzgerald.

To Mr. Butler—Witness and Fitzgerald had exchanged work and were on friendly terms. Mr. Fitzgerald was the first person to come out of the house after the party arrived. No person knocked at the door. When Fitzgerald came out the first thing he said, "Boys, will I shoot," and witness said "let it go" Fitzgerald said, "I will shoot," and he did." Witness believed that Fitzgerad intended to shoot, but perhaps not to kill. Witness never said it was an accident, but others had said it was. Mr. Fitzgerald visited witness at the hospital, and had paid some money to the doctor. Witness' brother Ernest was near him when he was shot. Witness never said that Fitzgerald should be punished. He did not want to prosecute but he wanted to have all his expenses paid.

COMMITTED FOR TRIAL

As a result of the investigation Fitzgerald was committed for trial and later appeared before Judge Deroche, who fixed Monday next as the date of trial. In the meantime Fitzgerald is out on bail himself in $2,000 and one surety of $1,000.

Toronto and Ontario generally, loyally observed the request of the Fuel Controller to refrain from Sunday motoring.

The Big Drive Has Started

Subscriptions Pouring in to K. Of C. Hut Fund—Off to A Good Start

While the actual canvass of the City does not begin until Wednesday, headquarters of the Campaign at the corner of Bridge and Front Sts., opened this morning and citizens started in immediately with their subscriptions. From the interest being shown no doubt is entertained that long before the week is out the $5,000 objective will be reached and passed. The citizens are not only anxious to help with their money, but also with their work. There is a spirit of comradeship being displayed that is worthy of the cause for which all are working

Army Huts are now established in Bramshott, Whitley, Shorncliffe, Purfleet and Seaforth in England, where the men in training camps can always find recreation. In London a building at No. 24 Grosvenor Place, opposite Buckingham Palace Gardens, has been rented together with an annex, where large number of Canadian soldiers; who are constantly on leave, make this their headquarters and it is always taxed to capacity. This club is always open to all soldiers of the British Empire and United States, irrespective of race or creed. It provides home life constantly to these soldiers and there is bed accommodation for about 125 men in all.

In France the Army Huts are established in Le Treport, Etables, and the Canadian Casualty Clearing Station. Army Huts are located with the Canadian Railway troops. In the Canadian Corps Area the Huts are distributed among the Canadian Divisions with headquarters in a ruined French town, as near as possible to the front with recreation room and canteen. Up to March of this year 80,000 letter heads and 51,000 envelopes had been distributed free to the soldiers, and now that an arrangement had been tntered into with H. M. stationery to obtain, upon repayment, any amount required. During April and May 100,000 letter heads and 50,000 enveloped were distributed. Hot coffee and refreshments are served in the Huts, and there are no sales whatever. Everything is distributed absolutely free. In all Huts is hung the slogan "Everyone Welcome and Everything Free."

In the Army Huts of the army of our great Alliles, the United States, Canadian soldiers always find a warm welcome and last year the K. of C. raised $28,000,000 to establish and maintain this movement. This year the people of the United States will raise another $50,000,000. There is no distinction made in the Huts of the United States. Every soldier is welcome, be he British, Canadian, French or American. The comforts are free and no charge is made.

The Canadian K. of C. have undertaken to reciprocate in the Canadian forces through the Canadian Army Huts. Therefore Canada is to raise $500,000 this week. Belleville's share of the $500,000 is $5,000 and as Canada's fighting men have led the world on the battlefield of France, so Canadians at home should not be found wanting, and the Army Huts should be over-subscribed. The headquarters at the corner of Bridge and Front Streets is open at all times. It is hoped that each citizen of Belleville will step in there and make a voluntary subscription.

Atrocities of Hun Fiends Worse Than Ever Reported

Bishop is Applled by Hun Atrocities--Rt. Rev. M. F. Fallon Tells Of Deeds of Infamy of German Airmen—Religion at Front

LONDON, Ont., Sept. 14—Convinced by first-hand knowledge gained during a five months' visit to the battle front in France and Belgium, of the truthfulness of revelations concerning German cruelty, Bishop M. F. Fallon has brought back with him if possible, a deeper seated reverence for the cause of the allies than possesed him before his departure.

His lordship was tendered a warm reception by Catholics and Protestants of the city at St. Peter's parish hall last night, and during the course of an address on his experiences he dwelt for a time on the bombardment of the Canadian base hospitals at Etaples and Toulon, where numerous ntario nurses and soldiers were foully murdered. He declared that he had at times doubted some of the stories of atrocities he had heard, but he was a witness to the destruction of these hospitals. He condemned the English system which he says kept from the world the full details of crimes such as would make any man want to fight to avenge them, if he had a drop of red blood in his veins.

The Attack on Toulon

At Toulon, he said, an officer was on the operating table,—his life in the balance. Two surgeons worked over him and with them nurses and orderlies, when suddenly a high explosive bomb crashed through the roof, killing or burning to death, the patient, and all of his attendants.

"Then," continued the Bishop, "while the buildings were in flames these chivalrous Germans swooped down to cruelly machine-gun the nurses and orderlies as they sought to rescue the patients trapped in the wrecked and burning buildings."

These were circumstances, his lordship thought, had been too long withheld from the world.

Then came the bombardment of the Etaples hospital, which he also inspected. There 300 nurses and soldiers were cold-bloodedly slain by the German raiders.

At Court of Inquiry

That day one of the German raiders which had participated in his outrage descended because of motor trouble in the Canadian lines.

With General Watson he heard the interrogation of the Germans, and to his audience repeated what occurred.

"Did you know you were bombing hospitals?" General Watson demanded of the Hun.

"Yes," he at once replied.

"Why did you do so?" pressed the general.

"Because," came the answer, "these are our orders, and if we didn't do as we are told we would have our ears pulled when we got back."

Such Crimes Are Abhorrent

Such crimes, the bishop asserted, could have but one objective, to set the face and heart of every decent man against them.

Before going overseas, he said, he did not believe all of the stories of atrocities, and especially the claim that the Germans had cut off the hands of children. But in France General Sir Arthur Currie had said to him: "I saw it." The general added, 'The war will never end as far as I am concerned until the Germans are given a taste of war on German soil."

War Not Over

'But do not let us begin to talk of the war being over,' he counselled. "Let us talk of the war going on until it is properly over, and until the Germanic powers realize that they never again may slaughter mankind or seek to dominate the earth."

The bishop touched in different asides, upon religion at the front. He spoke particularly of visiting the Catholic chaplains, but declared that "there is no sense in dividing lines." The Anglican clergyman who is the colonel at the head of the chaplain service, he described as a "perfect," thorough high grade gentleman, who always insists that the Roman Catholics shall have all that they are entitled to in matters of religion." And so among all the padres at the front. After the raid on the Canadian hospitals he participated at the general burial service.

Queen Tried to Save Tree

Bishop Fallon dwelt upon the work of the Canadian forestry units, and told of the cutting down of an oak in Windsor Forest which had been planted by William the Conqueror. There was a seemingly well authenticated story that the King and Queen had disputed about the wisdom of the action. The Queen wished to have the tree preserved, but the King overruled the wishes of his wife.

Still a Home Ruler

"You expected that I might say something on Ireland? Well, I will, and I might say a lot more. Let it be understood that I believe in self-Government within the British Empire, and wthout exceptions.

"Do I make myself clear?" he asked, adding, "If I don't I did elsewhere. If home rule is not good for Ireland it is not a good thing for Canada, but if it has made Canada prosperous, contented and loyal, then it is a right which should be conferred upon Ireland."

"But they don't understand the Irish over there. Nor must it be permitted to be said, as it sometimes is, that a man's religion has anything to do with the political rights which shall be accorded him. I said so in England publicly and privately.

Letters to the Editor

OBSERVATIONS ON A GASLESS SUNDAY

To the Editor of The Intelligencer.

Dear Sir:—While out walking yesterlay I observed a man trying to buy gasoline at a local garage. He was refused. I also noticed the street bus going to the station drawn by horses, and while on Front street I counted many cars well filled with joyriders and noticed one garage selling gasoline. It is this class of people who are responsible for strict laws in Canada, when they will not adhere to the request of our Government. To them I would like to say that their actions indicate that they think it more necessary that they should have a good time on Sunday than that there shall be plenty of gasoline for military operations.

Get the picture in your minds of a Canadan boy who has been at the front for several years. He has been in the trenches, he has been "over the top," he has been wounded, wet, tired and sick, and still he stays with it—and yet when the request is made to cut out Sunday driving for pleasure you won't do it.

You're some patriot, aren't you.

"OBSERVER."

CONTRACT TO PURCHASE NEW CUBAN SUGAR CROP

WASHINGTON, Sept. 15—The sugare equalization board announced yesterday that it had closed a contract with the Cuban Minister for the purchase of the new Cuban sugar crop at a price of about $5.50 a hundred pounds, free on board at Cuban ports. The purchase was made on behalf of the American, British, French and Italian Governments.

The crop will begin to become available in December, and the allies portion will be allocated under the direction of the food administration. The remainder will be available for consumers in the United States.

THE THEATRE "CARRIES ON."

"Henry," he said, "there aint no use talkin', the show people are a whole lot more generouser than any of these here millionaires. Henry, ah wants you to know they'se the most liberal handed folks ah ever tied up with. They'se mah notion of the kind of folks we's a-gwine to meet a sittin' along that old Jordan sho' when we done quits down beah."

"Don' you jeopardize none o' yo' consolation bettin' on dat, Gawge. 'Taint actors 'll be settin on dat ol' Jordan sho'; dey'll be standin' knee deep in mud, a-helpin' folks across."

Such was part of the conversation of two Pullman car porters at the Pennsylvania railway station in New York recently after saying good-bye to the all-star theatrical company which had just completed a three-weeks tour of the larger cities of the United States presenting J. Hartley Manners' tragi-comedy of the great war, "Out There," for the benefit of the American Red Cross Society. Both darkies were lovingly caressing a large wad of bills, remembrances from the members of the all-star company who had been in their care during the journey.

"Good-bye kid," said George M. Cohan as he swung along after his Japanese valet. "Put all that coin in some nice little old Liberty Bonds. Don't try putting out a show with it. Take a tip from yours sincerely."

Unselfish Sacrifice.

Thus ended a remarkable patriotic undertaking which produced the amazing sum of $683,248 for the Red Cross. Fifteen of the most prominent stars of the theatrical world gave their services free of charge and paid their own personal expenses for three weeks on tour, playing mostly one-night stands, appearing in seventeen cities and giving twenty-three performances. More than that, every one of the company made great personal sacrifices involving considerable money, cancelling profitable theatrical contracts and seriously interfering with existing business arrangements.

The all-star cast included such well-known names as Miss Laurette Taylor, originator of the part of "'Aunted Annie" in "Out There"; James T. Powers, George Arliss, Chauncey Olcott, James K. Hackett, George M. Cohan, Miss Julia Arthur, Mrs. Fiske and Mme. Eleanora de Cisneros, the famous operatic singer. Mr. Burr McIntosh participated in the tour as auctioneer of the autographed program sold at each performance while De Wolf Hopper was out ahead of the show auctioning off the boxes and principal seats, which were sold in this way at premiums over the regular prices, realizing a large sum of extra money for the Red Cross.

Klaw & Erlanger laid out the tour and succeeded in having the principal theatre in each city visited donated free of charge.

To The Bravest.

The result of the tour was that the sum of $683,248 was raised for Red Cross purposes in one of the most remarkable and successful theatrical enterprises ever attempted. Autographed programs realized $165,000, auctioned off by Burr McIntosh, who despite an injury, appeared on crutches at each performance and "did his bit" to the Queen's taste. As Miss Taylor wrote on a program which she autographed for his own personal souvenir:

> "To the bravest of us all—the man who had no feet > and walked—the man who had nothing to sell and sold it."

De Wolf Hopper, the popular comedian, described as "the master of the marshaled adjective, wit, eloquent orator, and supremely popular Good Fellow," was pressed into service as advance agent de luxe, travelling one week behind the two regular advance agents and conducting an auction sale of boxes and first choice seats in every city visited.

Trials and Tribulations.

The tour from its inception to its triumphant conclusion was not without its trials and tribulations, principally caused by the short-sightedness and narrow outlook of some of the members of local Red Cross societies. The National Red Cross organization stipulated that the local Red Cross Chapter in each city to be favored with a visit should endorse the scheme. This caused a mass of correspondence and misunderstandings and the employment of special advance agents to convince some influential members of local organizations that a "gold brick" wasn't being handed them. Some cities originally listed for a visit were passed up as impossible on account of the fatuous opposition of members of local Red Cross executives. On the other hand there were cities, notably New Haven, Connecticut, not included in the original program, which burned up much money in telegrams and long distance phone messages begging the privilege of a visit from the celebrated all-star cast who had so generously at great personal sacrifice donated their time and talents to the Red Cross for three weeks in a "barn-storming" tour which meant much discomfort and inconvenience.

"Hem-and-Haw" Stand Abandoned.

New Haven was accordingly substituted for one of the "Hem-and-Haw" stands and the result was distinctly gratifying. New Haven was the smallest city played with the single exception of Wilmington, Delaware, and the total receipts were $31,091 for one performance, including $16,931 gathered in by the persuasive ability of auctioneer De Wolf Hopper in seat premiums and $7,100 for the autographed program.

One of the most amazing features of this remarkable tour was to find that any skepticism existed as to its success and the opposition of some local Red Cross Societies containing members of little faith and less vision. In one city the advertising appropriation of $500 was a bone of contention, objection being taken by members of the local Red Cross Society to assuming responsibility for this expense. The theatre manager relieved them of all anxiety on this score by assuming the advertising liability and the printers' bill was engulfed in a shower of money totalling $78,075, the proceeds of three performances, showing once more how unfounded was the lack of faith of some people in the willingness of the general public to patronize liberally a really great performance for a greater object.

Picayune People Make Trouble.

As a rule, however, the tour from start to finish was received everywhere with unbounded enthusiasm, the difficulties referred to being exceptions which would have made little difference were it not for the fact that any break in the route as mapped out would result in the necessity for an entire re-arrangement of the plans, loss of time, longer jumps and fewer performances, with less money for the Red Cross.

The many interesting incidents of the tour would fill a large book, but the promoters and participants have contented themselves with publishing a small souvenir pamphlet giving a brief synopsis of the outstanding incidents and general results, compiled by John F. Toohey, general press-representative of the tour and a well known theatrical publicity man. Mr. Toohey's story is one of the most interesting tales of patriotic endeavor published since the war began—a plain tale of facts, fascinating in the extreme, which throws the spotlight on the great human heart of the theatre.

CRISP COMMENT

When the Kaiser boasted that he would stagger humanity it was no empty boast, as events have proved, but the Baby Butcher is doing some staggering himself just now.

Cash campaigns and tag days come pretty often, but not nearly as often as Hun gas, wet days and screaming shells "over there."

The man who drinks three or four big cups of tea at a sitting is inclined to remark "What is one small teaspoonful of sugar among so many?"

Some people were evidently unaware that yesterday was a "gasless" Sunday, but they are wiser now, for pleasure motor car riders yesterday were greeted with unfriendly stares from pedestrians and in some cases pointed remarks which could not fail to bring home the fact that a campaign to save gasolene for war purposes is in progress.

The presence of a sign board setting forth the schedule of fees which those wishing to visit Belleville are compelled to pay before crossing the toll bridge is a hideous substitute for the sign of a free bridge which should be there, the glad hand signifying WELCOME. That schedule of tolls also represents increased prices for food products from Prince Edward County farms sold on the local market. The well-to-do patrons of the market can afford to pay toll bridge prices, but the people who have to make their few dollars go as far as possible feel the pinch and will welcome any effort which will tend to lower prices for the necessities of life. The High Cost of Living will not be mitigated by the continual maintenance of a toll bridge.

The Allies have thrown a terrible scare into the Huns, and from the least to the greatest of them they want the war stopped right now and called a draw without any indemnities or annexations either way. When the big Hun offensive started last March and the Allies were falling back all Hunland went crazy over indemnities, annexation of territory and a world dominated by Kaiserism. Why, they even demanded that Great Britain surrender Gibraltar—now they don't want even a piece of Belgium and are willing to go fifty-fifty with France on Alsace and Lorraine. Marvellous what a difference a few guns make, and a threatened invasion of Germany with the fear of some of their own military medicine being administered.

OTHER VIEWS

The Coal Shortage in Italy.

Signor Galli in London Times

People in England have no idea of the plight of Italy as regards coal. There is no rationing in Italy, because the coal merchant has long gone out of business. Practically all the coal imported goes to the railways and the munition works. What little is left when these requirements are met is doled out by the Commisserato Carboni, mostly to industries which in the national interest it is desirable to keep going. All the coal and wood we can get is not nearly sufficient. Today it is no uncommon thing to see a train stopped between stations waiting for fuel to get up steam. Last winter our hospitals were without coal. English people think of Italy as a land of perpetual sunshine and warmth. The fact is that in the north—in the Lombardy plain behind the fighting line—the winter is much more severe than in England, so that in that region the sufferings of the sick and wounded were terrible. Throughout Italy gas is supplied only in the eight largest cities, and only for two or three hours a day. The sun does not always shine in Italy. Kerosene and candles are dear, hard to get, and altogether beyond the reach of the mass of the people. So after sun-down they sit in the dark.

Glucose and Corn Syrup.

Canada Food Board.

If you lack sugar for preserving, try glucose. Glucose prevents fermentation of fruit and crystallization of the syrup in jams and jellies which sometimes occurs on the top. Glucose can be bought in all grocery stores in the form of syrup, put up in cans under different names, or you can buy glucose five pounds at a time and make the syrup at home, adding 10 pounds of sugar and 3 quarts of water to each 5 pounds of glucose. After boiling for a few minutes the syrup is ready for preserving purposes.

For home preserving the pure white corn syrup gives the best results. The yellow or golden corn syrup, with which many people are familiar as used on the breakfast table, may be employed in preserving, but it has a distinctive flavor which makes it less suitable than white corn syrup. The fruit jar should be filled with the prepared raw fruit, then covered with syrup and finished off in the usual way.

The Calmness of Von Hindenburg.

Vancouver World.

Von Hindenburg may preserve his calm and feel as right as the German equivalent of a trivet. But the collapse of his western front on the Marne and before Amiens and Arras will excite him a little sooner or later.

From Arras to Rheims that front is battered and broken. The "Hindenburg line" is in danger. Capture of Ham and Guiscard threatens to split the German armies at a critical point. The defences south of the Chemin des Dames are likely to go.

If these facts leave von Hindenburg calm then he must surely be a superman such as his fervid admirers like to picture. Or it may be, that his calmness is that of his counterfeit presentment in Berlin—the calmness of wooden insensibility to what is happening around him.

The Poet's Corner

LORRAINE!

Lorraine will probably be a glorious page in American history in view of the offensive which is being conducted by Gen. Pershing's 1st Army on the St. Mihiel front. It is remarkable that one of the most popular songs across the line for some months has been, "Lorraine, My Beautiful Alsace-Lorraine." The writer, Alfred Bryan, who copyrighted the words in 1917, was surely a prophet when he wrote:

Beside a campfire gleaming a grenadier was dreaming,
His thoughts went back again to other years,
Night shadows found him, and as they gather round him
Tenderly he murmured through his tears.

Lorraine, Lorraine, my beautiful Alsace-Lorraine,
You're in my heart forever to remain,
I see your village steeple, your quaint, old-fashioned people,
And I wouldn't care if I could be there again.

Lorraine, Heart of France, part of France,
Some days when all my worries are through
I'm coming to you, Lorraine, Lorraine,
O welcome me home once again
To live and die in my Alsace-Lorraine.

SLIGHT BLAZE ON SUNDAY

RELATIVES ASKED FOR

Chief of Police Newton of this city, is in receipt of a communication from Marysville, Ohio, asking him to look up the relatives of a girl who gives her names as Cassie Williams, otherwise known as Billy Howell. She states that she was born in or near Belleville, and lived here for 17 years. Five years ago she left for Toronto, and from then proceeded to Cleveland, Ohio. Her father, she states, was born in Ireland, and she has a sister named Margaret. She claims not to have heard from them in five years. Persons knowing anything of the girl's relatives are requested to communicate with Chief Newton.

MEMORIAL SERVICE

A memorial service was held in the Tabernacle Sunday School yesterday for the late Malcolm French, who recenty fell in action. The service throughout was very impressive, and one long to be remembered by all present. The remarks by his Sunday School teacher, Mr. Height, the superintendent, Mr. Walmsley, and Rev. Mr. Moore, Rev. Mr. Baker and Mr. Bell, all pointed to the excellent character of the late soldier. Even the hymns selected and the music by the orchestra, had a very touching and impressive effect. The orchestra opened the service with "O Canada," and concluded with the Dead March in Saul, after which Mr. A. Wannacott sounded the 'Last Post."

BLAZE STOPPED IN TIME

At a few minutes before 7 o'clock this morning the fire brigade was called to the residence of Mr. T. E. Ketcheson, corner of Bridge street and Bleecker Avenue. A blaze was discovered in a grate leading from the furnace and it had evidently been smouldering some time as three joists were partially burned through and others charred. Fortunately the blaze was extinguished before any serious damage was sustained. Chief Brown and his assitants did excellent work in saving the residence from destruction. Loss covered by insurance.

JEWISH DAY OF ATONEMENT

Total abstinence from food or drink will be maintained during the 24 hours. In all Jewish places of worship special services will be held to-day until sunset. Business places conducted by those of the Jewish faith were closed all day to-day.

THE MAKING OF A FAMOUS MEDICINE

How Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Is Prepared For Woman's Use.

A visit to the laboratory where this successful remedy is made impresses even the casual looker-on with the reliability, accuracy, skill and cleanliness which attends the making of this great medicine for woman's ills.

Over 350,000 pounds of various herbs are used anually and all have to be gathered at the season of the year when their natural juices and medicinal substances are at their best.

The most successful solvents are used to extract the medicinal properties from these herbs.

Every utensil and tank that comes in contact with the medicine is sterilized and as a final precaution in cleanliness the medicine is pasteurized and sealed in sterile bottles.

It is the wonderful combination of roots and herbs, together with the skill and care used in its preparation which has made this famous medicine so successful in the treatment of female ills.

The letters from women who have been restored to health by the use of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound which we are continually publishing attest to its virtue.

Couldn't Believe What She'd Heard

Trys Tanlac Herself And Finds Everthing Said About it, True

"I could hardly believe all the good things I heard about Tanlac till I tried it myself, and it did me so much good that I started my husband on it, too," said Mrs. Ethel Burne, of 2038 Dundas Street, East Toronto, the other day.

"For about a year," she continued, "I suffered from a stomach trouble and nervous breakdown, brought on largely by my worrying about my husband, who was with the army in France. My appetite failed and I couldn't eat even a piece of toast without having trouble afterwards. My stomach felt like it was burning up inside and I was constantly belching up gas and pieces of undigested food mixed with nasty bitter water. The gas would press against my heart and my left side hurt so I could hardly bend over to do any work. I was so nervous that I would lay awake sometimes all night without sleeping a wink and though I took all kinds of medicines I couldn't get rid of my misery.

"I have taken four bottles of Tanlac now and can eat anything I want and never have a touch of indigestion or gas afterwards. That nervousness is all gone, I sleep like a baby, don't have that tired miserable feeling and have picked up some in weight. I am entirely relieved of that burning in my stomach and pains in my side and am feeling better than I have in a long time."

"Tanlac is sold in Belleville by Ostrom's Drug Store, in Trenton by J. H. Dickey, in Deseronto by W. J. Malley, in Stirling by J. S. Morton, in Frankford by W. J. Lettimer, in Madoc by J. Will Vince, in Marysville by T. . McAlpine, in Ormsby by Jas. Campbell and in Thomasburg by J. H. Blakely."

FIRST GASLESS SUNDAY

The request of the Dominion Fuel Controller that pleasure riding in motor cars be discontinued for several Sundays in order to conserve the gasoline supply for war purposes resulted in a marked absence from the streets of the city and country roads of automobile parties on pleasure bent. The threatening aspect of the weather in the afternoon helped, no doubt, in the saving of gasoline, but there was a general disposition on the part of automobiles owners to comply with the request of the Fuel Controller. Of course, there were some automobile parties to be seen, plainly out for pleasure, but it was noticeable that members of these parties were as a rule, either uninformed as to the need of gasoline saving or too thoughtless to comply with the request. Garages were generally closed for the day and it was almost impossible to secure any gasoline. Several cars were noticed bearing the sign: "This car out on business.". Taken altogether the first galess Sunday was a distinct success in this vicinity giving promise of more general observance on succeeding Sundays.

CHEVROLET CAR STOLEN

Belleville police have been notified to be on the lookout for a Chevrolet car which was stolen in Trenton last night. It was a 1918 model. The body of the car was of dark green, and the markers bore the number 88187. The face of the rear lamp was broken. The car was provided with Goodyear tires. Two layers of the front spring were cracked and were encircled with a clasp.

MAJOR WATSON RETURNS

Major R M. Watson, who went overseas with the 80th Battalion from this city returned here on Saturday. It is possible that the Major may be attached to another Canadian Battalion. He had been on active service for some time in France previous to returning to Canada.

WM. J. WALLACE WOUNDED

Mr. W. J. Wallace, of Wharf street city, received the following telegram, relative to her husband:

"Sincerely regret to inform you 412331 Pte. Wm. John Wallace, infantry, officially reported admitted to 26 General Hospital, Etaples, August 29th, Gunshot wound hip. Pte. Wallace was formerly of Montreal. He enlisted with the 39th Battalion of this city.

SAILOR FUND GROWING

The local Sailors' Fund is slowly growing toward the $2000 mark and needs some patriotic citizen to give it one more good boost toward the mark, which will prevent Belleville's contribution being altogether unworthy of the patriotism and wealth of the citizens. This morning a contribution was received from Mr. J W. Johnson, who has been very ill, for some months, but has never lost touch with local and world events. Mr. Alex Ray, the local representative of the Ontario Naval League, is keeping the list open as long as possible in the hope that it will go "over the top" for $2,000 at least. Has everybody paid an installment on their debt to the sailors? Don't be a slacker—give something if only ten cents.

LIEUT. FLEMING KILLED

The sad news came to Capt. and Mrs. John Fleming, 263 Foster avenue, that their son, Lieut. Allen E. Fleming, had been killed in a motor accident at Eghan England. Lieut. Fleming won his commission through having rendered especially valuable services to the Empire, having gone overseas as a private in 1916. He was mentioned in despatches for meritorious service and served in various capacities, being secretary to Gen. MacDougal, for a time. Recently he was on staff duty in connection with the forestry operations and was highly regarded for his efficient methods. Many friends in Belleville and elsewhere will regret to hear of his death and great sympathy is felt with the sorrowing relatives. Lieut. Fleming was married in England, and an infant child is left..

CHARGED WITH VAGRANCY

A young man, who gave his name as Ernest Fox, was at an early hour this morning brought to the police station here, and locked up by Constable Clute of tht G.T.R. It is alleged that Fox had a hand car on the railway track near Trenton and was also in possession of a gun. A charge of vagrancy was registered against him and upon that charge he was remanded for a week. A more serious charge may be preferred against him. He had among papers taken from a ten and a five dollar bill of the International Bank, which he claimed were given him by his brother, who he stated is overseas. The bills are of no particular value.

Military Medal is Won By 100 British Women

The highist honor English war women have won is the Military Medal.

The soldiers' silver medal "for bravery in the field" has now been conferred on nearly a hundred plucky British women.

Among many wonderful examples of courage recorded in the official citations are these:

Sister Charlotte Lillian Annie Robinson.

"For conspicuous devotion to duty and courage when a stationary hospital was struck by four bombs from an enemy aeroplane and one wing was practically cut in two, many patients being buried in the debris. Sister Robinson at very great personal risk went in among the ruins to assist in recovering the patients, quite regardless of danger, her one thought being to rescue the patients. She displayed magnificent coolness and resource."

Courage While on Night Duty

Sister Nellie Galvin.

'For bravery and devotion to duty during an enemy air raid when four enemy bombs were dropped on the building occupied by the hospital, causing much damage to the ward in which Sister Galvin was on night duty. She remained in the ward attending to the sick, several of whom were wounded, and carried on her work as if nothing had happened. She displayed the greatest coolness and devotion to duty."

Staff Nurse Beatrice Dascombe.

"For gallantry and devotion to duty during an enemy air raid when her ward, being destroyed by a bomb and herself wounded, she insisted on remaining at her post and ettending to the wounded."

Sister Mary Ellen Davis.

"For gallantry and devotion to duty during an enemy air raid. When the sisters' quarters were wrecked and bombs were falling, she showed a fine example and assisted materially in controlling the situation and attending to the sisters who were wounded.'

Severely Wounded by Bomb

Miss Katherine Margaret Freshfield.

"For gallantry and devotion to duty during an enemy air raid. The ward in which she was working was destroyed by a bomb, but she continued to attend to her patients, and was herself very severely wounded."

Commandant Winifred Eleanor Sarah Mount Batten.

"For gallantry and devotion to duty during an enemy air raid. She superintended the work of convoy, drove an ambulance car herself during the raid, and by her own safety ensured the prompt removal of the wounded to hospital."

Nurse Mary Gwynnedd Campbell.

"For gallantry and devotion to duty during the enemy air raid, when buildings were set on fire. She moved about in full glare regardless of imminent danger, taking patients to safety, and inspiring confidence in all."

Britisher Wins Croix de Guerre

Following is the citation of the French army conferring the Croix de Guegro on Miss A[illegible]ia Mackinnon, British nurse attached to the French Flag Nursing corps:

"A nurse who, under difficult circumstances of the withdrawal of the ambulance under enemy fire, continued to attend the sick and wounded to the last minute, with remarkable courage and sang froid, thus demonstrating the qualities which all her chiefs have recognized in her during the three years that she has devoted herself to the French soldiers."

It is now learned that the Germans have made peace offers to Belgium.

Soldier of Christ, well done,
Praise by thy new employ,
And while eternal ages run
Rest in thy Saviour's joy.

DROWNING OF WOMAN BEING INVESTIGATED

WHITBY, Sept. 17—An inquest into the drowning of Mrs. Arthur G. Booth, 91 Hayden street, Toronto, in the Rouge River, Saturday, was held at Rosebank yesterday afternoon by Coroner Dr. McGillirary and a jury.

Crown Attorney Farewell conducted the inquiry for the Crown.

The body of the woman was identified by Mr. Walter Booth, a brother-in-law. The jury paid a visit to the scene of the drowning, accompanied by Frank Baines and Patrick Wade, who found the body Saturday evening at 11 o'clock.

Joseph Stoneburg said he saw Mrs. Booth standing on the river bank about 6.45 fixing her hair. When the body was found the woman had her gloves on. Her hat was discovered about fifty yards down the stream.

Term in Jail for Dr. J. M. Johnston

TORONTO, Sept. 16.—Following the action of a higher court in sustaining the conviction in May last of Dr. J. M. Johnston upon a charge of performing an illegal operation, Judge Winchester this afternoon, in the Court of General Sessions, imposed a sentence of two years less one day at the Ontario Reformatory at Burwash, Ontario.

Crown evidence produced at the trial at the preceding sessions, told of the woman having gone to the doctor and of her having pleaded the straightened circumstances of the family finances as a reason for the performing of the operation.

The defendant maintained that the operation had never been committed, and stated that the sum of $25, paid him, had been merely for his professional advice. It was pointed out by Crown Attorney Thurston, however, that this charge was exorbitant, and Judge Winchester agreed with the Crown's contention that the amount constituted the sum paid for the performance of the operation.

Dr. Johnston is well-known in the city as a doctor of ability and as a man of affluence. He is the holder of property from which the annual income is said to aggregate at least $20,000.

Babies Cried For Parents

PLYMOUTH, Sept. 17—Heartrending scenes were witnessed here when hundreds of survivors of the torpedoed steamer Galway Castle were landed at seven o'clock Thursday morning. The passengers were mostly women and children, and it is believed that whole families have been lost.

Among the survivors were little tots scarcely able to walk, crying in vain for their parents. Parents were searching in all directions for news of their children, and women were seeking vainly for their lost husbands. It mattered nothing that warm, dry clothing was distributed to take the place of the scanty attire the survivors snatched as they left the ship. Their one thought was to get news of their relatives and friends.

WITHOUT WARNING

There seems no reason to doubt the vessel was torpedoed without the slightest warning. The explosion occurred between the engine-room and the stokehold, a fact which is taken to rule out any possibility that the ship struck a mine. The explosion caused compartively little noise, but caused the ship to buckle in a most extraordinary manner. She was injured at the extreme bottom and was bent and torn clear to the upper deck and seemed likely to break in two at any moment.

United Farmers Enter Candidate

BEAVERTON, Sept. 17—The United Farmers of North Ontario, at their convention here yesterday nominated R. H. Halbart, of Melanchton township, Dufferin County, as their candidate for the Commons in the bye-election caused by the death of the late Col. Sam Sharpe. The convention was well attended, and about 25'' delegates from the various Farmers' Clubs throughout the constituency were present.

T. C. Windatt of Thorah presided, but while the executive committee were busy with preliminaries, Mr. Halbart addressed the convention at some length, contending that the farmers were loyal and determined to win the war, but that the production of food was one of the great essentials and that if inexperienced help could be used for this purpose the expenditure of the teaching of scientific agriculture was unnecessary.

After a motion that it was the opinion of the meeting that an independent farmers' candidate should be nominated had been carried, 10 farmers were placed in nomination, but all withdrew except Mr. Halbart and R. C. Brandon, of Cannington.

The ballot showed a large majority for Halbart. The latter, who is president of the United Farmers of Ontario,, acepted the nomination and declared that, if elected, he would have the backing of all the United Farmers of Ontario.

Knights Templar, Origin And Growth of The Order

Since the meting of the Sovereign Great Priory of the Knights Templar of Canada recently at Belleville for the first time many people have been asking "What are Knights Templar." With a view of answering this question we have obtained the following information on the subject for which we are indebted to W. C. Mikel, K. C., and officer of the King Baldwin Preceptory at Belleville.

The Knights Templar is a secret fraternal organization closely connected with Freemasonry. Membership cannot be obtained except by persons who are Master Masons and also hold the degree of a Royal Arch Mason. Membership in the Knight Templar is necessary to obtain admission to some of the other degrees connected with Masonry. It has sometimes been described as the aristocracy of Masonry, but this is not a correct description if by it the idea is intended to be conveyed that it seeks social eminence or creates class distinctions. Just as the object of its progenitor was to help and protect pilgrims on their way to the holy places so the object of modern Knight Templars is to help and protect those who seek to aim at higher and better things.

Originally Military Order

The Templars were originally a military order, having been originated at the time of the Crusades in A. D. 1119. History tells us that it was formed by Godfrey de Bouillon, Hugues de Payen, and Geoffroi de Saint Aldemar. King Baldwin II. gave them part of his Palace for their quarters. This Palace stood near the Church of the Holy Sepulchre on the site of the Temple of King Solomon hence they took the name "Templars" (Templique Solomonici) and the Houses of the order at Paris, London and elsewhere were called Temples.

Members of Noble Birth

At first its members consisted solely of Knights, but was from time to time extended to others, first to persons of noble birth, then to Chaplains later to men-at-arms, (fratres servientes) mercenaries, retainers, and craftsmen all grouped as knights. At the head of the order was the Grand Master. There were various Provinces throughout the world in its early history, located at Jerusalem, Tripoli, Antioch, Cyprus, Portugal, Castile, Leon Arajon, Auvergne, Aquitaine and Poitou, Engand, Italy, Apulia, Sicily and elsewhere.

Fought in Crusades

The Knights assisted Richard Coeur de Lion to obtain a victory in the Crusades Wars in 1191 and it is said 20,000 Knights were killed in the wars of the Crusades.

Persecution and Torture

The wars of King Phillip in Flanders having depleted that Monarchs Exchequer, he decided on a bold attempt to get possession of the wealth accumulated by the Knights Templar. He procured persons to make untrue charges against the Templars, and a number of the leading members thrown into prison and subjected to the most cruel torture for years, claiming that by this means he had procured confessions from the agony racked Knights.

On March 19th, 1314, Jacques de Molay the Grand Master of the Order, and Geoffrey de Charney the Master of Normandy, were taken to the Isle des Juifs in the River Seine and slowly roasted to death. While this barbarous treatment was going on they continued declaring that the confessions wrung from the Knights were untrue and that the order and its members were innocent of the charges made.

Order Suppressed

The Templars' treatment in England was not so severe, but William de la More the Master of the Temple in England died a prisoner in the Tower of London. The order was suppressed and its property taken. The torture, cruelty and injustice to which the order was subjected, for a time obscured its prominence but ultimately served to call the attention of the world to its good deeds.

Since 1745 the order of Knights Templar has been steadily growing till now it is many times greater in wealth, numbers and influence, actually and proportionately, than it ever was in the world history.

Masonic Order

The Knights Templar had always been closely associated with operative Masons and their various buildings, guilds and societies by reason of their having employed these guilds to build Temples, churches and other edifices in Europe.

On the supppression of the order it is asserted that most of the remaining Knights joined the societies of operative Masons and through their efforts operative Masons became speculative Masons. The Knights Templar have always exercised a great influence in Masonry and there has not been a grand member of Speculative Masonry in recent times who has not been a Knight Templar.

Do Much Good

The Knights Templar have directly and indirectly been the means of doing a great deal of good along charitable religious and patriotic lines, but work of this kind has not been made public as it is not their custom to do so. The fact that it has attracted some of the best men in every community throughout the world to its service, bears testimony as to the worth of the order.

Don't Destroy Infected Fruit!

OTTAWA, Sept. 17—The Canada Food Board has issued a request that the fruit infected, or supposed to be infected, by phenol or some other substance on the rubber bands on the jars be not destroyed. The trouble, first located in Muskoka, seems fairly-widespread, and a great loss might result if all the fruit infected is destroyed.

Experts are now investigating, and are hopeful that ways and means of saving this fruit will be discovered.

In the meantime, the board asks that the fruit be held. The public is asked not to destroy it until it is definitely and positively known that it cannot be made of use.

Labor Defeats Radical Moves

QUEBEC, Sept. 17.—The opening session of the Dominion Trades Congress, was devoted to defeating measures introduced by radical members of the trade union movement. J. D. Houston, a machinist of Montreal, put a resolution before the convention asking for the repeal of the Military Service Act. He claimed that conditions had altered materially since the Congress had taken a stand upon the question of compulsory service. It seemed to him that in proceeding to Siberia the allies had "gone to work and made a new war."

The resolution was defeated by a vote of 304 to 114.

NEARLY MURDER, ATTEMPTED SUICIDE

WINDSOR, Sept. 17—Jealousy is believed to have been responsible for a nearly fatal assaut and an unsuccessful effort at suicide on the part of Archibald McComb, forty-two years old, and his pretty thirty-year-old wife, at their home in Ford. The couple had been quarreling at different times during the day, and this culminated in McComb felling his wife with a blow on the head with a heavy wooden mallet. She fell unconscious and bleeding and McComb, believing he had killed her, rushed to his bedroom and locked the door. When the police arrived soon afterwards they found him unconscious in a pool of blood, with a razor lying by his side. He had gashed his throat four times, but missed the jugular vein each time.

Husband and wife were both removed to Hotel Dieu, and are expected to recover. The couple have three children, the oldest a boy of eleven.

Tried to Bring in Liquor in Autos

NIAGARA FALLS, Sept. 16—An alleged violation of the Ontario Temperance Act was discovered at 4 o'clock Saturday afternoon, when Customs Officer James Hern, on the lower Grand Trunk steel arch bridge, caught an Italian, who gave his name as Basile of Hamilton, accompanied by another Italian, name unknown, seated in an automobile, in which they attempted to smuggle a cargo of whiskey into Canada from the American side. They had a specially made tank located on the running board; one compartment contained gasoline, evidently for the inspector, but his eye being keen, he located the back compartment, which contained about seventy gallons of whiskey. The pair also, it was found, had 24 bottles concealed under the seats. The officer seized the car and handed the pair over to Provincial Officer Kelly, who had been on the lookout for them, who placed them under arrest.

About 9 o'clock Saturday evening another car entered Canada over the same bridge, with two men and two women in it. The man running the car gave his name as Antonio Pasio unknown. After Customs Officer a Polak, of Hamilton, and his companion was another Polak, name unknown. One of the women claimed to be Pasio's wife; the other name J. Junk had made an examination he found 67 bottles of gin and 3 bottles of whiskey tucked away under the front and rear seats. Then he seized the car for smuggling, the quartette were handed over to Provincial Officer Kelly, who placed them also under arrest. One woman was allowed to return to Hamilton for necessary funds to defend themselves.

Both parties will be prosecuted by the Provincial police authorities today.

Music and Drama

"GARDEN OF ALLAH" TONIGHT

Silence— a silence which keeps the audience quietly seated a minute longer than is usual in the eager rush to the exists—occurs after the final curtain of "The Garden of Allah" now on its sixth annual tour and which comes to Griffin's Opera House tonight for a limited engagement of one night only. It enthralls through the beauty of its magnificent stage pictures and the power of its pliosophy.

The silence is a tribute to the wonderful impression which this play produces—the audience completely capitulating to the final memories of the story.

In brief it tells of "Boris," the young monk, who goes out to the desert in search of peace and contentment, and there at its edge, he meets "Domini Enfilden," a beautiful young English woman, deeply religious but whose life has been one of sorrow Boris is rude to Domini and encounters her displeasure, but in his strange wild nature, she finds unusual attractions and they are finally married. Their honeymoon is spent on a desert trip, in which the sandstorm forms one of the relaistic stage pictures graphically shown to the audience. Out of the storm comes "Count Anteoni" and "Faher Roubier.' Borics is then unmasked by the Count, and the raging elements of the sandstorm seems puny in comparison to the mighty struggle of the soul which leads Boris to confess his past life to Domini.

"The Garden of Allah" is rich in climaxes, rivalled only in power by the witchery of stagecraft, which produces a series of scenes with all the hunting mysticisms of the Orient.

"THE PHANTOM BUCANEER"

Richard C. Travers acts with himself in a cafe scene in Essanay's thrilling feature, 'The Phantom Bucaneer' which is being exhibited at the Palace tonight, and Wednesday, matinee and night. On one side of the table he is garbed in evening clothes and displays an air of affluence, across from him he also sits, garbed in the rather shoddy clothes of a down-and-onter. He discusses with himself the proposition of merging into one person, accepts the proposition, and gives himself $10,000 to seal the bargain. The audience sees two Richard Travers whereas there is but one. The feat is performed by clever manipulation of the camera. The closing chapter of "The Woman in the Web" series, and a very amusing Musty Suffer comedy entitled 'Musty B. Young' is also being exhibited.

....."DOUG" FAIRBANKS.....

A large audience thoroughly enjoyed the splendid programe of photoplays screened at Griffin's last night. The feature offering of the evening "Bound in Morocco" with the inimitable "Doug" Fairbanks in the stellar role, was hugely enjoyed being brimful of many amusing situations and many thrilling moments. Gail Kane is also appearing on the same programme in a 5-part spy drama of unusual interest, entitled "Souls in Pawn." The Universal Current Events reveals many scenes behind the front lines and other timely topicals. The Screen Magazine shows the manufacture of machine guns and many other items of unusual interest including some very amusing patriotic cartoons "The Eagle's Eye" series shows up the working of the I.W.W.

The programme is one that can be recommended to all local lovers of the photoplay and will be exhibited for the last time tomorrow night. "The Garden of Allah" Company holding the boards at Griffin's tonight.

Two Airmen Capture Battery of Hun Guns

With the American Army on the British Front, Sept. 17.—The capture of a German battery by two British airplanes was one of the unique incidents of the recent fighting in this area.

The two airplanes, fighting scouts, sent out to harry the German infantry in the course of an important local action undertaken by the British and American troops, had dispersed a battalion of German infantry marching up towards the battle area, when they sighted a quarter-mile behind the German lint a suspicious group of objects under some trees. Near the group of objects were forty or fifty horses which were evidently being harnessed to something. The secret was soon out. The Germans were trying to remove a battery of field guns before the British and American infantry appeared on the scene.

Without horses this task would be impossible so the airmen decided quickly that the horses must be either killed or stampeded. The airmen dived down until they were less than 100 feet from the ground. Then they opened fire, aiming at the guns and the demoralized gunners, but seeking chifly to frighten the horses as much as possible. The horses required little encouragement in this direction, for their drivers deserted them in search of cover and soon the animals were galloping off in all directions.

For nearly a mile the airmen followed them across the fields. Then the airplanes were turned once more toward the battery. Here it was found surprisingly easy to drive off the remaining men of the battery, and very soon the reason became obvious, for only a short distance away, across the ridge, the British and American vanguards were advancing.

The last cartridge in the airplanes was gone and the two scouts landed in the field nearby, then walked up to the guns and in a few minutes calmly handed them over to the British commander.

THE VICTORIA CROSS

Every Recipient of This Coveted Honor is the Ward of a Grateful Country

The Victoria Cross, one of the most coveted of military decorations, and the most rarely conferred, was instituted during the Crimean war, and is made from the bronze of captured cannon, says a writer in Scribner's Magazine. It is not a Maltese Cross, but a cross pattee, its obverse centre bearing the royal crest of a lion passant, gardant, upon the British crown, above a ribbon inscribed "For Valor." On the reverse is a circular space reserved for record of the act that gained the decoration. The name and rank of the recipient are on the bar above. The ribbon is red for the army and blue for the navy. The cross was instituted in 1856, but its award was made retroactive, so that it happened that the first Victoria Cross was awarded for an act of valor on June 21 1854. The recipient was "Mr. Lucas," then mate on board H.M.S. Hecla. A live shell fell on the deck of the Hecla and, without an instant's hesitation, Mr. Lucas picked it up and threw it overboard. The Victoria Cross is a dignified piece of sculpture, dominated by a lion worthy of Barye. Its possession, like those of most of the British crosses, confers a sort of military "degree," in certain case, permitting the wearer to write V. C. after his name. Moreover, the cross carries with it an annuity of £10, which, in case of extreme want, may be increased to £50. Every recipient of a Victoria Cross is a ward of a grateful country.

21 Hun Towns Were Bombed

LONDON, Sept. 16— Twenty-one important German towns have been bombed by the British independent air force during the month of August, according to information from an authoritative source. The objectives were railway stations, chemical and other factories and blast furnaces, and the towns in cluding Frankfurt, Mannheim, Metz, Sablons, Saraburg, Thionvillle, three times each; Burbach, Coblenz, Cologne, Darmstadt, Karlsurhe, Luxemburg, Offenburg and Treves.

The total weight of bombs dropped in these raids was more than 100 tons.

During the past three months the indenpendent air force has made 219 aerial raids over German territory. The extensive damage done has been confirmed by photographs in many cases. The German territory thus brought definitelly into the war zone represents a belt in the Rhine Valley approximately 250 miles in length

K. of C. Drive in full Swing Success Assured

Great Interest Being Shown in Army Hut Fund

The first day of the K. of C. Army Hut Fund Campaign saw the drive off to a good start. All classes of citizens are showing their interest and people in all walks of life have been calling regularly at the Campaign headquarters, corner of Bridge and Front Sts., with generous subscriptions, and it is expected that the $5,000 objective will be reached before the end of the week.

When it is considered what this Fund means to our boys out there, no one can afford to let this opportunity go by without contributing to the utmost of his resources. The local committee are working day and night to make this fund a success, and the same thing is going on from one end of Canada to the other. In the Belleville district reports are pouring in from Trenton, Tweed, Deseronto, Stircentres where the same interest is being shown.

The canvass of the city will be made tomorrow, Thursday and Friday, and it is hoped that every household will be waiting for the canvassers with a generous contribution. It should be kept clearly in mind that these men, who are canvassing, are working for those boys in France, who are giving their lives freely to make the world a fit place to live in, and protect us from the inhuman Hun. Surely no home that is being protected can afford to turn away these canvassers without a subscription. A list will be made of the contributors and published. Statements will be made showing where every dollar was expended. In the Army Huts everyone is welcome and everything is free. Therefore at home everyone should give to the utmost.

BOLSHEVIKI GOVT. ARE EVACUATING MOSCOW!

AMSTERDAM, Sept. 17—The Bolsheviki Government is moving from Moscow to a small town, according to despatched received here.

Bolsheviki, Paid Millions By Kaiser, Betrayed Russia

Lenine and Trotsky Exposed by United States as Hirelings o Berlin— American Agents in Russia Uncover Secret Official Documents Revealing Amazing Intrigue

WASHINGTON, Sept. 17—Proofs removing any doubts that Lenine and Trotsky, the Bolsheviki leaders, are paid German agents—if indeed any doubt remains—are laid before the world by the United States Government in the first intalment of an amaz series of official documents disclosed through the Committee on Public Information.

Obtained in Russia by American agents, these documents not only show how the German Government, through its Imperial Bank, paid its gold to Lenine, Trotsky, and their immediate associates to betray Russia into deserting the allies, but give added proofs, if any are necessary, that Germany had perfected her plans for a war of world conquest long before the assassinations at Sarajevo, which, as the work now is convinced, conveniently furnished her pretext.

These documents further show that before the world war was four months old, and more than two years before the United States was drawn into it, Germany already was setting afoot her plans to "mobilize destructive agents and observers" to cause explosions, strikes and outrages in this country and planned the employment of "anarchists and escaped criminals" for the purpose.

Ranking in their sensational nature, with the notorious Zimmerman note, proposing war by Mexico and Japan on the United States, these documents lay bare a new strata of Prussian intrigue, a new view of the workings of kulture to disrupt the allies, standing between the world and Kaiserism. They disclose a new story of human treachery for gold which might almost well be described without sacrilege as placing its perpetrators on a pedestal with Judas and his 30 pieces of silver.

The intrigue appears to have been arried down to the last detail with typicial German system. It will be revealed completely in a series of seven articles furnished by the Committe on Public Information for publication each day, beginning to-day, until the series is complete.

The disclosures show that the Bolsheviki Revolution which threw Russia into such orgy of killing and excesses as the world seldom has seen, actually was arranged by the German general staff. They show how the paid agents of Germany betrayed Russia at the Brest-Litovsk "peace" conference; how German staff officers secretely have been received by the Bolsheviki as military advisers; how they have acted as spies on the embassies of the nations with which Russia was allied or at peace, how they effectually have directed the Bolsheviki foreign, domestic and economic policy wholly in the interest of Germany and to the shame and degradation of Russia.

GERMAN DEFENDS RUSS

They show how a picked German commander was detailed to "defend" Petrograd against the German army.

Originals of documents, photographs some of them marked "very secret," or "private," and many of them bearing the annotations of the Bolsheviki leaders themselves, some of them containing references to "Comrade Trotsky" or "Comrade Lenine," comprise the damning record. Some of the originals, it is shown, although deposited in the secret archives of the Bolsheviki, were required to be turned later to representatives of the German general staff in Petrograd that they might be destroyed. But evidence of them remained in the fabric of roguery and into the vacancies they fit perfectly.

The Bolsheviki leaders, themselves, informed their "comrades" that the German Government had required the return of the order of the German Imperial Bank, depositing 50,000,000 gold rubles in a Stockholm bank for Lenine and Trotsky, and that at the same time the accounts of the bank had been "audited" to conceal the payments.

HIGH LIGHTS OF GERMAN BOLSHEIKI INTRIGUE

Lenine, Trotsky and associates sold Russia to the German Government for $25,000,000

Germany's plans for war of world conquest perfected long before assassination at Sarajevo furnished the excuse.

More than two years before the United States entered the war, Germany launched plans for outrages in America. Anarchists and escaped criminals to be the destructive agents.

Orgy of killing and excesses, known as Bolsheviki Revolution, arragned by German general staff.

Brest-Litovsk "peace" conference was stage-setting for Russia's betrayal.

German staff officers secretly directed all Bolsheviki policies, foreign, domestic and economic.

German officers spied on embassies allied or friendly to Russia.

Picked German general detailed to "defend" Petrograd against German army.

All industrial concerns in Germany ordered on June 9, 1914, nearly two months before war, to open sealed orders containing mobiliation plans.

Pact at Kronstadt July 1917, turned over Bolsheviki policies to German officers.

Germans dictated membership of Bolsheviki "executive central committee."

Assassination of Russian national leaders arranged by German officers.

Destruction of Polish legionaries in Russian army ordered.

Disorganization of Roumanian army and deposing of Roumanian King planned.

Substitution of officers satisfactory to Germany in command of Russian troops instead of patriotic Russian generals provided for.

Soldiers Coming From Kingston

A special meeting of the City Council was called for last evening the object of which was to secure for military purposes the canning factory building situated in this city.

The members present were Mayor Platt, Aldermen Curry, Donohue, Robinson, St. Charles, Hanna and Treverton.

Mayor Platt stated that the military authorities were anxious to secure the canning factory building here for the segregation of some 300 to 500 soldiers during the winter months. The object was that soldiers coming here would be placed in the building, throughly examined medically, detained there a number of days and then when found free from all trace of disease, passed on to the Armouries and thence overseas. This is apart from those who are coming later to take possession of the Armouries.

Ald. Curry—How long would the building be required.

Mayor Platt—About 6 months. The military authorities want the city to pay the rent of the building, but we are unable to state what that would be as Mr. Samuel Nesbitt of Brighton, the owner, could not be located.

All the members present spoke in favor of securing the building as it would be of much advantage to the city to have the soldiers located here.

Special Committee

Ald. Robinson moved, seconded by Ald. Treverton, that a special committee composed of the Mayor, Aldermen Robinson and Hanna be appointed with power to act to secure on as reasonable terms as possible the canning factory building for the use of the militia during the fall and winter months.

The motion was unanimously adopted and the Councl adjourned.

TOOK LICENSE NUMBERS OF AUTO USERS

WINDSOR, Sept. 16— Those who disregarded the first "gasless Sunday" in Windsor were, according to police records, limited to perhaps half a hundred car owners, and the license numbers of these are in possession of the police. Many citizens constituted themselves "Hawkshaws" for the day and kept accurate tab on the license numbers of any cars that passed. A few drivers heard derisive remarks as they whized past, but no attempt at interference was shown. The thorough manner in which the day was observed by citizens generally furnished the theme for more than one sermon in city churches in the evening.

U-Boat Failed To Hit Ship

Attack on Steamer Ninety Miles Off American Coast— 96 Canadians Aboard

An Atlantic Port, Sept. 16—After a lull of nearly three weeks the German U-boats renewed activities in American waters last night by firing on a ship when she was about ninety miles from the coast. The steamship was coming here in ballast and had ninety-six wounded Canadian officers on board, who were on their way home to recuperate. Five shells were fired at the ship.

The peculiar feature of the attack was that the officers on the bridge could not hear a sound from the submarine when the shells were fired. They could see the flash of the gun and heard the explosions when the shells struck the sea. One of the Canadian artillery officers, who watched the shooting from the deck, said that in his opinion the U-boat was using a deck mortar, instead of the usual 5.9 Krupp gun, which is similar to the United States six-inch gun, because there was no loud explosion when it was fired.

The Back Aches

Possibly you do not realize that this indicates derangement of the kidneys. Neglect usually means the development of Bright's disease. You know how dreadfully painful and fatal that is.

There is quick relief for the kidneys in the use of Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills. This medicine is known in the great majority of homes as the greatest of regulators.

Boats for Belleville In Heavy Blow

Engineer of Tug Dixon Washed Overboard and Drowned near Kingston— Molasses Boats in Peril

KINGSTON, Sept. 17—William Watts, an engineer on the tug Dixon, which was towing a molasses laden barge, was drowned Sunday night by falling overboard, about 20 miles west of here. As yet the body has been unrecovered.

The unfortunate seaman in some manner fell overboard, and his absence was not known until his cries were heard. Joseph Wiliams, of Oswego, a fireman on the tug, tried several times to reach the drowning man but was unsuccessful, and the engineer sank to a watery grave.

The late Mr. Watts was taken on the tug at Detroit, and little is known of his family. He was on the Dixon for some time, and was returning west when he met his death. The tug returned to the city and efforts were made to recover the body, but they were unsuccessful.

The tug was bound for Belleville having in tow the barge, Islewido, while the oil-burning tanker, Louisa, accompanied under her own power. The Louisa and barge carried 100,000 gallons of molasses to be discharged at the Government Wharf Belleville into the tank cars for distribution and came from New York where they were loaded direct from tank steamers from Cuba belonging to the Sugar Products Co., then they came through the New York State Canal to Oswego. Capt. Griffith is in command of the Louisa. Shortly after leaving Oswego the weather which had been stormy for days became worse and the vessels had a hard time keeping afloat, finally having to run for Kingston. The eningeer was washed overboard while making some repairs to the injector.

Obsequies

JAMES S. KETCHESON

The last sad rites in connection with the deplorable death of James S. Ketcheson of this city, took place yesterday afternoon, when the body was laid away in the family plot of Belleville cemetery. That Jim, as he was familiarly called, had many friends, was evidenced by the number present at the obsequies. At the family residence corner of Queen and Albert Streets, an impressive service was conducted by the Rev. Dr. Scott, pastor of Bridge Street Methodist church, assisted by Rev. Dr. Baker, Rev. A. M. Hubly and Rev. D. C. Ramsay. Rev. Dr. Scott referred in feeling terms to the departed. Appropriate hymns were sung at interpropriate hymns were sung at intervals during the service. At the grave Dr. Scott conducted the committal service. The cortege from the house to the top of Murney's hill was led by units of the boys Cadets Corps and Scouts, of which deceased was a member. Many of the pupils of the Belleville High School also attended in a body with some of the teachers. The floral tributes were numerous and very beautiful in effect. The bearers were companions of the deceased, namely Clark Diamond, Allen Boyle, Fred Deacon, Asa Yeomans, John Marshall and Gerald Vermilyea.

MRS. J. STAPLEY.

From the residence of Mrs. Halliday on the Marshall Road, yesterday afternoon, the funeral of the late Mrs. J. Stapley took place. At the house and grave at Belleville cemetery Rev. S. C. Moore of the Tabernacle Methodist Church officiated. The bearers were Messrs. W. Badgley, G. Wilson, F. Westlake, J. W. Cross, A. Rapson and C. Frederick

REMEMBERED HIS PALS.

Somewhere in France a Hastings County soldier boy was doing his bit for God and Home and Native Land. His parents who reside near Belleville a few days ago purchased a money order for twenty dollars and some five franc notes to send to their boy over there; but a few hours later the dread news came that his name had been added to the Honor Roll of the immortals who have given their lives that freedom and righteousness shall not perish from the earth. The twenty dollar money order and the five-franc notes had not been mailed when the message came that their boy had laid down his rifle and taken up his crown in the Better Land where the currency is character and golden deeds. The parents in the midst of their grief thought of the other boys over there and handed the money order and five-franc notes to Mr. D. V. Sinclair to be given to the Y.M.C.A. overseas fund. They considered that the money belonged to their boy and knew from his letters that no better disposition of it could be made than to provide comforts for his pals still on the firing line. Thus through the mist of bitter tears and the shadow of sacrifice shines that great and kindly light of human sympathy—the thought for others—which makes the rugged road of life worth while travelling after all.

AUSTRIA'S WICKED PARTNER.

The Hun peace offensive, which always blazes up when the Kaiser's military machine is being severely mauled, has shifted headquarters to Austria. There is a reason. The German liars have confounded themselves in such clumsy fashion so many times that they know the curtain of world-wide credulity has been rung down on them for the last scene in the last act of "Peace by Negotiation." Hence the new setting. But the voice of the Kaiser is just as easily identified whether it uses the Berlin local service or the long distance line from Austria, and meets the same reception. Austria is more than willing to sound the peace note, and is, from all accounts, more in need of immediate peace than Germany on account of desperate internal conditions and the fact that she is chained to a selfish and domineering ally. That the Austrian move toward peace will be abortive is a foregone conclusion, but it may be followed by an overwhelming demand from the people of Austria that a separate peace be arranged on any terms and let the Kaiser stew alone in the noxious mixture he has brewed for himself and Germany.

AN ESTIMATE OF THE PREMIER.

The Christian Science Monitor, published in Boston, Mass., pays this tribute to Canada's First Minister:—

"Few statesmen of the present day possess to a greater degree the ability to say the right thing at the right time and in the right way, than Sir Robert Borden, the Prime Minister of Canada. This ability has, indeed, been uniformly characteristic of his career, but especially during the momentous part of it comprised in the last four years. It had its cause, simply enough, in the fact that Sir Robert, subordinating all considerations of party, determined from the first to have before him no standard of action but the simple though remorseless one of the highest good, not only of his own country, but of all humanity. The man who, in the face of the most bitter opposition, even from his own friends, strove untiringly to achieve union government at home; who has never discouraged in the effort, but as soon as those he would serve blocked one channel, sought for another, the man who saw the justice of conscription and the imperious necessity for prohibition, and placed them both on the statute book, in spite of the storm which these proposals roused in many quarters; the man who has thus thought what was right and done what was right, finds no difficulty in recognizing the right way to say the right thing, or to say it in the right way."

.·. CRISP COMMENT .·.

The packers certainly have a rind—they have the nerve to jack up the price of bacon another notch.

The Huns have more faith now in their talking ability than in their fighting, but the Allies have no faith in the Huns either as fighters or talkers.

Hindenburg may be dead but his vocal organs go marching on in the attempt to convince the German public that the disasters on the Western front are really German victories. A post mortem held on Hindy might reveal him just as dead as German hopes for victory on the field of battle.

Sir Robert Borden has strongly impressed upon the British Government Canada's will that there should be a clean-cut victory over the Germans, and no compromise peace. The Vienna peace-feeler finds no response in this country.—Mail and Empire.

Self-appointed vigilantes took the numbers of autos carrying pleasure parties on Sunday and the names will be listed for future use. Next Sunday it is likely that a general effort will be made to get the numbers of all autos carrying joy riders in disregard of the request of the Dominion Fuel Controller. Cars on business should be plainly marked.

Higher prices and smaller portions in restaurants, the outcome of the conservation campaigns of the Canada Food Board, will be the subject of an investigation by Dr. McFall, the Cost of Living Commissioner. The hall roomers who have not starved to death ere this will welcome the investigation as a possible rescue from short rations and long checks.

If you can smile these dark and dismal days when the high price and scarcity of coal keeps the dampers closed for fear of worse days yet to come; if you can smile at the bills of the butcher, the baker and grocer—then as Kipling says, "yours is the Earth and everything that's in it, and—which is more—you're a Man, my son." But there hain't no sich animile!

Harry Nimmo in "Black and White" for September says: "No truck or trade with the Hun. He has all Hell for his territory and plenty of customers."

Germany must pay. That seems to be the universal determination now. As the Philadelphia Record says: "If Germany is to continue to exist she must pay the whole butcher's bill. That will give her some idea of the high cost of living."

The Toronto Globe very rightly says: "The motorist is asked to give up his Sunday pleasure jaunt to save gasoline. If he thinks he has a grievance he might communicate with the boys in the tanks at the front. They need the gasoline.

Others would also like to have the answer which the Cleveland Plain Dealer wants: "A Toronto man was arrested for supporting two wives and three families. It is to be hoped that before they send him to prison they will obtain from him exact details as to how he did it."

OTHER VIEWS

The Aims of the War.

New York Tribune.

When is peace?

The answer is that there can be neither peace nor war with Germany.

We have had both.

She cannot be trusted to keep the peace. She has no word to break, no faith to forfeit. Her signature to a treaty of peace among nations would be a ghastly thing.

Nor can she be trusted to possess the means to war. We have had war with her. She has disgraced the weapons. Civilization in self-defence has been forced to do nameless and abominable things. This shall not happen again. It is largely what the war is about.

First, Germany must be defeated on her own soil and disarmed. The power that threatened the world must surrender to the world—unconditionally. The Allied people are then naturally constituted a League of Nations to say on what terms Germany shall survive at all, and if these be less severe than Germany's terms to Belgium or Serbia, that shall be owing to nothing that Germany may claim as a right, but to the conscience of the Allied nations.

An American on the Entente.

Philadelphia Public Ledger.

Now that we have a clear vision of the situation and perceive the appalling menace that hung over us unrealized, from the moment that the bandit chiefs of Berlin decided that the time was ripe to set out on their long planned slave raid across the civilized world, we cannot find language to express out gratitude to the nations that have held the pass while we were slowly awakening to our danger and arming for our defence. Had France faltered, for instance, nothing could have saved us. Had Britain hesitated, Mittleuropa would have "Europa" by this time, and we would have lived and traded and prospered only as the Kaiser permitted.

Terrible Consequences.

London Daily Chronicle.

Small boys selling Sunday evening papers were screeching "Great German Victory" on the highways and byways of London, but nobody took any notice of them. Judging by what the paper contained it should have been "Great German Retreat." What would have happened in Berlin if a newsboy so far forgot himself as to offer a "Great British Victory" to patrons in the Postdamer-Platz doesn't bear thinking about.

A Jitney Prince.

Montreal Star.

A factious London journalist has nicknamed the Kaiser's unfortunate offspring the Half-Crown Prince. If he had ever travelled on this side of the Atlantic he would have known that the name is unsuitable. A half-crown is worth twice as much as thirty cents.

Why Not the Zeezies?

Nashville Southern Lumberman.

Now that we are launched into the Siberian campaign, an attractive prize should be offered to the genius who can devise some short, snappy, pronounceable nickname for our new allies, the Czecho-Slovaks.

A Parallel Situation.

Syracuse Herald.

That European conflagration has about reached the stage now where the chief feels justified in telling the reporters that the fire is under control, although all the apparatus will be needed for some time yet.

A Laugh or Two

Pony and Dog.

A little boy had a pony and a dog, and his generosity was often tried by visitors asking him—just to see what he would say—to give them one or both of his pets.

One day he told a man he might have his pony, reserving the dog, much to the surprise of his mother, who asked:

"Why, Jacky, why didn't you give him the dog?"

"Say nothing—say nothing, mother, When he goes to get the pony I'll set the dog on him."

Camouflaged Ladies.

The fourth Earl of Chesterfield was on one occasion at a grand assembly in France where Voltaire was one of the guests. Suddenly the French writer accosted his lordship with the words:

"My lord, I know you are a judge, which are the most beautiful, the English or the French ladies?"

"Upon my word," replied Chesterfield, with his usual presence of mind, "I am no judge of paintings."

Careful Hospitality.

A man presented his open cigar case to his neighbor on the right who thanked him, saying he did not smoke. His neighbor on the left also refused, with the same reply. The smoker was putting his cigar case away, when his wife whispered to him:

"John, have you forgotten Mr. Jones, over there?"

"Oh, no," was the reply, "He smokes."

Danger Everywhere.

Little Millie's father and grandfather were Republicans, and as election drew near they spoke of their opponents with ever-increasing warmth, never heeding Millie's attentive ears. One night, as the little maid was preparing for bed, she cast a fearful glance across the room and whispered in a frightened little voice: "O mamma, I'm afraid to go to bed. I'm afraid there's a Democrat in the closet."

At Ayer.

A little girl in New England was returning from a visit to Camp Devens.

"Father," she said, "where is the war, in France or back here?"

"Why, in France, of course, my dear," was the reply.

"Then why do they sing about bombs bursting in Ayer?"

A Queer Ornament.

When those soldiers from the Antipodes were in New York a little while ago a woman was heard to say to another:

"There goes one of them Australians."

"How do you know?"

"You can tell by the kangaroo feathers in his hat."

Shocked the Servant.

"And why did you leave your last place?" an English lady asked of an applicant for housework.

"Well, mum, it was like this," replied the woman. "One day missus ses to me: 'Caroline,' she ses, 'get a wet cloth and give the Old Master a wipe over,' she ses, so I gave her notice on the spot."

Castor Oil Will Win the War.

If castor oil will win the fight
I will not count the loss a blight;
I'll find a substitute to ease my pain.
Though suffering day and sleepless night,
I'll cut the stuff and fell contrite—
Go, take it all and grease an aeroplane.
They say that children cry for it,
And smile and sob and sigh for it,
I've read the ads. but passed them by amain;
Let doctors fume and pry for it,
I'll wink the other eye for it;
Go, take it all and grease an aeroplane.

The Poet's Corner

IN A RESTAURANT.

London Daily Mail.

The hors d'oeuvres of an earlier day
No more in lavish show are seen,
The former generous display
Has dwindled down to one sardine.
And should I make demand for more
I should be told: There is a war.

And each succeeding course reveals
A falling-off at least as great,
But who expects pre-wartime meals
To blossom on a wartime plate?
It would be rash, indeed, to count
On more than half the old amount.

And, since the cost of food has soared,
My gentle host is fain to touch
All those who seek his festive board
For very nearly twice as much.
That those who come to dine should bear
The increased cost is only fair.

The less I get, the more I pay,
That is the plain and simple rule,
Yet somehow that is not the way
We worked such problems out at school.
It almost seems to me that here
I have unearthed a profiteer!

HOMESICK.

Give me another pillow and raise my head a bit,
Today I am feeling fine, nurse, and soon I shall be quite fit;
I know I'm minus a leg, nurse (that bomber had got a good aim),
But I've got my eyes, and I've got my hands, so I'm still ahead of the game.

It must be the English sunshine, a-flickering on the walls,
That started me thinkin' of home, nurse—I can hear the waterfalls
Singin' their songs to the mountains, and when I close my eyes
I see the pools where the loon laughs and the trout rise to the flies.

Lyin' here racked and helpless, I've plenty of time to dream
Of hills all green with maples where poplars guard the stream,
Of silver birches gleamin' like ghosts in haunted dells,
And pines stand at attention, tall silent sentinels!

Homesick? Of course I am, nurse, and proud I am of it,
That is the land I fought for, and I'm not ashamed a bit.
And he will fight for his own, nurse, who claims to be a man,
And if he won't, well—let it go—HE AIN'T CANADIAN!

Tired? Well, just a trifle. I've been talking quite a string,
(That Fritzie sure did get me with his bloomin' lucky fling),
So I'll lie and dream of home nurse, till twilight spills and falls,
And blots out the English sunshine a-flickering on the walls.

Temperance Thrives In This Province

TORONTO, Sept. 17.—Yesterday the Ontario Temperance Act had its first birthday. It's a healthy little baby and is progressing admirably, say its closest relatives.

Police are Pleased.

Lieut.-Col. H. J. Grassett, chief of Toronto police, paid this tribute:

"From the police point of view the Act has given entire satisfaction. Arrests for drunkenness and disorderly conduct on the streets have been decreased. I consider the measure, as a war measure, one of the best that could have been passed. In fact I do not know what we would have done without it."

Over $500,000 in fines have been imposed in the Toronto Police Court for breaches of the Ontario Temperance Act since the measure came into force two years ago.

Half Fines Paid.

In the past year over $300,000 in fines have been imposed and, according to Treasurer Melville, over 50 per cent. of the fines were paid, so that the Toronto Police Court exchequer was enriched in the past twelve months as a result of infractions of the Act to the extent of over $150,000. And since its enforcement in 1916 the total returns to the municipality in fines aggregated close to $300,000.

A harvest of good results has been reaped from Ontario's two years of prohibition. The outstanding fact is the irrefutable and extensive decrease in crime of all kinds.

Cases of drunkenness have fallen off steadily and in equal measure other forms of delinquency have been on the downward trend.

Comparison of Arrests.

The comparison of arrests for drunkenness for the first eight months of the year follows:

| | 1918 | 1917 |
|---|---|---|
| January .. .. .. .. .. .. | 229 | 360 |
| February .. .. .. .. .. .. | 312 | 389 |
| March .. .. .. .. .. .. .. | 439 | 437 |
| April .. .. .. .. .. .. .. | 237 | 400 |
| May .. .. .. .. .. .. .. .. | 239 | 411 |
| June .. .. .. .. .. .. .. .. | 284 | 324 |
| July .. .. .. .. .. .. .. .. | 183 | 329 |
| | 2143 | 2946 |

Decrease, 727.

Dominion Alliance Views.

The officials of the Dominion Alliance and the Committee of One Hundred—organizations largely instrumental in bringing about "Dry Ontario"—are well satisfied with the results of the first two years.

"The Act has vindicated itself for the second year," said Vice-Chairman W. S. Dingman of the Ontario Board of License Commissioners. "It is now reinforced by the Dominion order-in-Council prohibiting the importation of liquor except for medicinal and manufacturing purposes.

"No doubt the public have noticed the large number of instances recently of the detection of illicit stills as well as the large number of ingenious disguises for the importation of liquors. This means that the stocks of liquor which were lawfully imported are becoming exhausted. As a result "blind piggers" are beginning to work at high pitch.

"We have detected liquor concealed in bales of hay, in shipments of potatoes and in one instance we found a barrel of whiskey floating in a barrel of vinegar. I daresay they got by us many times but our officers are getting more expert.

Many Hotels Closed.

While it is true that a number of hotels have had to close their doors, the fact remain that in Ontario today there are over a hundred more standard licenses than existed before September, 1916. The great influx of Exhibition visitors sufficiently demonstrated the ability of the local hotels to cope with unusual demand upon them for accommodation.

The hotelmen do not see things altogether in this light. Many of them declare that prohibition has spelled ruin for them. In a number of cases the proprietorship has changed and their condition, they say, is precarious, at best.

If you issue Marriage Licenses, tell the young folks about it in our Classified Ads. They all know a license is necessary, but they don't all know where to get one. This paper is popular with the young people.

It is wise to say a good word for yourself or your business, whether your stock in trade be merchandise or labor. Want Ads. are the most direct line of communication to the best buyers.

A Bag of Potatoes Must Weigh 90 Lbs.

Dominion Fruit Inspectors Will Enforce Legal Standard

While 90 pounds has been the legal standard for a bag of potatoes in Canada for a number of years, and has been generally adopted in most of the large commercial potato districts, there has not, until this season, been machinery for enforcing this standard. The sections of the Inspection and Sale Act respecting the weight of a bushel, bag or barrel of certain commodities, have now been transferred for administration to the Department of Agriculture, and the Dominion fruit inspectors are charged with seeing that these sections are complied with. Any one, whether a grower, jobber, wholesaler or retailer, who sells or offering for sale potatoes in any bag containing less than 90 pounds, renders himself liable to the penalty provided by section 356.

The lack of uniformity in the weight of bags of potatoes has been a grievance in the trade for years as in many cases bags of potatoes sold as being of standard weight proved, when actually weighed, to contain as little as 74 pounds and in some cases even less. While in most cases the failure to give the full standard weight has not been with intent to defraud, the effect on the consumer is the same.

Then, again, many retailers, receiving bags weighing less than 80 pounds instead of the 90 required by law, have perpetuated the evil when selling by the peck or gallon. Instead of selling 15 pounds to the peck many purchasers have found that they received only 12 pounds. One purchaser who bought a gallon of potatoes a few days ago found when he weihed them that he had been given exactly six pounds ten ounces, instead of the 7½ pounds to which he was entitled; in other words he had paid for 14 ounces of potatoes which he did not get. With the weight of a bushel of potatoes clearly defined as 60 pounds, there is no excuse for a peck of less than 15 pounds or a gallon of less than 7½ pounds being offered to or accepted by any purchaser of potatoes in these measures.

Should be No Rise In Price of Beef

MONTREAL, Sept. 17.—Major "Foghorn" Roderick Neil McDonald appeared before Judge Leet in the Police Court here charged with wearing a military uniform while not on duty. After a lengthy argument as to the status of an officer when placed on the reserve of officers, in which counsel for the military authorities contended that it was equivalent to a discharge, the case was continued. Major McDonald recently returned from the front on a furlough of three months. While enjoying this furlough he was placed on the reserve of officers.

A Bit of Progress

By KATHERINE BATES

(Copyright, [illegible], by the McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)

The sunlight fell so hotly on the pile of guano bags crowding the little wharf that the man leaning against the heaped-up sacks could hardly believe that it was May, and not July. He drew his eyelids together and through his lashes looked down the gleaming river toward Norfolk, three miles away. On either side of the river truck farms stretched away toward the pine forests farther inland; just now the farms were at their greenest, strawberry fields, cabbage patches, acres of spinach, all in verdant strife. The river ducked in here and there, flinging clear, shimmering streams a little way back into the country, and the marshes around these inlets gave a rank, yellow tinge to the green outlook. Now and then a pine grove not yet cleared away led the greens to the other extreme, to the dark somber hue which had little but name in common with the brightness of the water-grass. The man on the wharf sighed as he noted these varying shades.

"It would take me to make this pay," he said. "Yes, sir, what this here fertile patch of old Virginia needs is an Iowa man—J. Archibald Jernigan could make his pile here, but none of these lazy Southern truckers will make their salt."

The cool sound of the incoming tide swishing against the wharf turned his thoughts from the farms. There would be shade on the other side of the guano bags; he sprang upon them and dropped down into the shadow, dropped down beside Ianthe Yarbrough, who lolled in placid ease against the bags.

"Beg pardon, miss," said Mr. Jernigan, startled into a stammer, although his was by no means a hesitating nature.

"Don't mind me," said the girl calmly. "I heard you talkin' to yo'self, but I reckon I'd let you come over if you wanted to."

She smiled at him with indolent interest and Mr. Jernigan smiled back.

"Daughter of the gentleman over there?" he asked, politely, waving his hand toward a clump of pines around a small white house.

"Yes, this is pa's place. From Norfolk?"

He swelled with the importance of the man who comes from a distance. "From Wellsville, Iowa. Fine state, Iowa."

"You are a long ways from home," she observed.

Mr. Jernigan drew down his mustache.

"An aunt just died down there—in Norfolk—consumption. Doctors sent her here, no money spared, none whatever, but I come on and buried her a week ago tomorrow. Aunt that brought me up."

"I'm cert'nly sorry she died," Ianthe said softly.

"Lamentable, lamentable, but we must all die, and she was past sixty. Pretty country you've got 'round here, Miss—er—Miss?"

"Did you walk down yonder road?" she asked with a sudden increase of interest. "Sweet honeysuckles is all in bloom over there, gullies on each side the road jus' filled with it, and yalluh jasmine climbin' over everything it can lay vines on—smelled as sweet as it looked, didn't it?"

"Very nice smell, very nice, indeed," agreed Mr. Jernigan, "but ain't yore pa goin' to be a little late with his kale for the Boston and New York markets?"

"I reckon," she answered. "Mos' folks round here are too late for the markets." She laughed a little as she added: "Pres' Lewis, who has the truck patch next our, never does get anything to market in time."

"I infer he don't prosper," said Mr. Jernigan. "I'd like to give him a few notions about trucking."

She turned to him quickly. "Would you? Oh, do—for pa can't put up with his bein' so way behind; pa'd like to be—be progressive, and Pres' frets him. You see, Pres' don't get on, no, he don't prosper, jus' as you say."

"Is there any—any special reason why he'd better be prospering?" Mr. Jernigan asked, looking delicately away toward Norfolk.

Ianthe picked up a long pole lying on the wharf near her; she bent back, and looked around the corner of the wharf prodded with the pole the mud where the tide still left uncovered oyster shells and various bits of debris.

"Well," she at last said frankly, "there's me."

"Quite a reason," he said gallantly. He looked at her attentively, and repeated, "quite a reason."

"Yes, I reckon I am," she agreed. "S'pose you do give Pres' some new ideas? I don't know as he could carry them out, but he could talk them to pa, and after all talk does about as well as goin' with pa. You tell me them, and I'll tell Pres'."

"Well, there's English walnuts—this sorter land and yore climate orter be just the thing for them," he began. In time he warmed to his topic, and Ianthe drank in his wisdom as eagerly as ever heathen drank in the gospel. But the sound of a horn at last broke in on the conference, and Ianthe lazily struggled to her feet.

"Ma's blowin' me up—well, 'm cert'nly obliged to you. You don't know any more for another time?"

"I don't know as—[illegible]

[illegible] Pres' will be obliged, too."

Mr. Jernigan looked at her wonderingly. "Talk about the selfishness of men," he thought, "women ain't made of anything but that self-same article." Aloud he said with dignity: "I am going to say I didn't know as I had anything mapped out yet, but of course I don't get to the end of my ideas in half an hour."

His tone seemed to remind Ianthe of the hospitable traditions of Virginia.

"Come along to supper," she suggested, "only don't talk to pa as if you knew much, or maybe he'll suspect Pres' didn't make up those fine new notions".

For many weeks after this Mr. Jernigan stayed in Norfolk, although he was badly needed in Wellsville. He spent his mornings conscientiously doing the many sights of the neighborhood—Soldiers' home at Hampton, Fortress Monroe, Hygeia hotel at Old Point, every one of which would have been run to far greater advantage had an Iowa man been at the head—and in the afternoons he taught Ianthe Yarbrough the essentials of progressive trucking. Her father had taken a liking—naturally—to him, and often he went to supper with the Yarbroughs. After supper he and the father sat on the front steps and smoked, while he watched—a little grimly—Ianthe and Pres' Lewis sauntering by the river. Pres' was a tall, dark, lazy-looking boy, who evidently had no finickiness about accepting another man's cerebral fruits. He profited by the hints Ianthe gave him during the river bank strolls, and when Mrs. Yarbrough was through with the dishes he and Ianthe came to the steps, and new ideas scintillated. Over the porch of the little house grew a Mareschal Niel rose, its hundreds of buds making the air sweet, but Mr. Jernigan's bitter heart did not let him enjoy the sweetness. Yes, his heart was bitter. He said to himself as he sat listening to Pres' talk, sat watching Ianthe crush the rose leaves against her cheek, that his vexation referred purely to a matter of good sense. "Waste is what I can't stand—owe that to the back-East bringing up Aunt Mary had—and waste it surely would be for him to get that fair flower of the South!"

There had to come an end—Wellsville would no longer be put off, and one night when Mr. Jernigan went into the Yarbrough sitting room for his hat, after the usual placid evening on the steps, he made himself say: "Well, folks, I guess this is the end of my visits. I must get back—and come to Wellsville, all of you, and I'll see that you meet the elite."

They were all standing, but Ianthe dropped into a chair.

"Going—" she said.

Pres' turned to her—then the color rushed to his dark cheeks. He stepped toward Mr. Jernigan.

"You've been talking crops to her, you have? You've been making love to her—you've—"

Mr. Jernigan laid a hand on the boy's mouth. "Stop your fool talk," he said. "Miss Ianthe—"

Ianthe sprang to her feet. "I don't care two strawber's if you are goin' way—I don't, I don't," she cried, throwing open the door leading to the steep stairway, and then going upstairs as fast as she could.

Mr. Jernigan retreated dignifiedly. "I shall call upon you tomorrow," he said to the dazed Mr. Yarbrough. "Good night, Mrs. Yarbrough, ma'am—good night, Mr. Lewis. Let me wish you success in your trucking in case I don't see you tomorrow."

He did not take the road toward Norfolk. Through that misty gray light, the light that wraps one around, the light that the dwellers on the Elizabeth river call a June evening, he made his way to the wharf where he had first seen Ianthe. There were no guano bags there now, but he sat down on the planks where she had sat, and took up the long pole which still lay there. He laughed, whistled and sang as he whipped the water with the pole—sang with subdued nasality. "She don't—don't care—two strawber's—two strawber's—no, she don,t she don't." Then he drove the pole into the mud, and meditated. Ianthe was by him, Ianthe in the purple calico which made her eyes too look purple. "No calicos," he said suddenly. "Wellsville's best quality silk for Mrs. J. Archibald."

Bird Guided by Magnetism?

One of the many explanations that have been offered to account for the fact that migrating birds are able to find their way by night and in cloudy or foggy weather is that they are sensitive, in some way, to currents of terrestrial magnetism, and therefore direct their flight by the magnetic meridians. This suggestion was put forth by M. A. Thauzies, a French pigeon fancier, who declares that carrier pigeons make poor flights during the occurrence of magnetic storms. He also asserts that the general use of wireless telegraphy has diminished the reliability of these birds to a surprising extent.—Popular Science Monthly.

School Children Are Underfed.

Of the 1,000,000 school children in New York city 110,000 are undernourished and in need of attention, while the condition of 590,000 others is only "passable," according to Dr. Henry Dwight Chapin, head of the children's division of the Postgraduate hospital. This medical man said much of the malnutrition of children is caused by war prices. He said that the disparity between wage increases and the mounting cost of food has caused mothers to give their children tea and coffee instead of milk, which had increased from 9 to 15 cents a quart in the last year.

SELL COCKERELS NOW

How Fall Fairs Can be Made a Great Success.

Attend Your Local Fair to Improve Education and to Have a Good Time.

(Contributed by Ontario Department of Agriculture, Toronto.)

THE marketing of thin chickens is not conserving our meat supply nor is it the most profitable method to the producers. Present prices of market poultry admits of the liberal use of feeds and the marketing of well-fleshed birds.

The best birds to flesh or fatten are those of the heavier breeds, such as Wyandottes, Reds, and Rocks. The light breeds, such as Leghorns, seldom pay to fatten unless they are very thin in flesh.

The birds intended for fattening should be confined to a small pen or slatted coop. The process is not difficult if you will but pay attention to a few points that are essential.

Do not feed the birds for the first day they are shut up. You should give them something to drink, but it is best to give no feed. After the first day feed very lightly for two or three days and then gradually increase the ration, being very careful not to overfeed. We usually start chickens on very finely ground grains at the rate of three-quarters of an ounce of grain per feed to each bird, feeding twice daily. This can be increased gradually to two or three times this amount. Generally the most profitable gains are made during the first fourteen to sixteen days feeding. Such birds will not be excessively fat, but should be fat enough to cook and eat well. Some markets demand a fatter bird.

The most profitable gains are made on birds weighing from three and one-half to four and one-half pounds when put up to fatten.

The grains fed should be finely ground and, if at all possible, should be mixed with sour milk. Mix the feed to a consistency of a pancake batter. The more milk the chicken will take the better bird you will have in the end. Milk appears to have no good substitute for fattening chickens. If you cannot get milk then add ten to fifteen per cent. of meat meal to the ration and mix with water. The addition of a little green food daily will help matters. Many people get better results by feeding a little salt. About one-half pound to one hundred pounds of dry grain is sufficient. This mixes best by being dissolved in water and adding a little at each feed. Be careful not to use too much.

The best grains available now are a mixture of ground barley, cornmeal, finely ground buckwheat, and shorts. Oats are good if part of the hull is sifted out, as are also ground brewers' grains. We have used with good results a mixture of two parts of ground barley, two parts cornmeal, and two parts shorts, mixed with twice the amount of sour milk. In general feed about one-third shorts and then whatever finally ground grains you may have about the farm.

If at all possible mix the ground grains with sour milk.—Prof. W. R. Graham, O. A. College, Guelph.

Importance of Attending Exhibition.

Fall exhibitions are a permanent feature in the life of Ontario, and are of particular interest and import to the farmer and his family. True, many of the smaller shows might be greatly improved by the introduction of more new educative features, and some of the larger exhibitions have been criticized in the past for tardiness in placing agriculture in its due place, but at the present time, with things agricultural to the fore-front as they are, exhibition managements realize the value of a strong agricultural and live-stock department and are making this a leading feature of their work. In fact, no fall fair, large or small, could exist let alone prosper, without the products of the farm well represented.

Bearing this in mind, it is important that all attend their local fall fair and their nearest large exhibition. A well-managed fair is an education. The best live stock of the various types and breeds, the highest quality grain, roots and vegetables, the newest devices to aid the farmer and his wife in their work, and the most up-to-date special attractions are all there and each has its value to those who attend with the purpose of improving their knowledge. It is worth while to watch the judging being done to get an idea of approved type and to have one's interest stimulated that he may go home and do better work in breeding live stock or in the production of farm crops. Study the work of the judges. It helps to fix in the mind the proper type of live stock of the various breeds and the requirements of all farm crops. The boys and girls should be taken to the exhibition and encouraged to study and learn as well as to enjoy themselves.

Exhibitions also have their place in the social welfare of the people. It is profitable to get away from work for a few days and mingle with others, there to discuss matters of interest to all, and to see what progress is being made in industry other than that from which the fair-goer gets his or her living. It makes for bigger men and women with a wider viewpoint. A little clean, wholesome amusement is necessary in order to get the most out of life.

Go to the exhibition with the idea of improving your education and at the same time to have a real good time. It is profitable to get away from work occasionally and the exhibition offers not only an opportunity for pleasure but also for profit. —Prof. Wade Toole, O. A. College, Guelph.

TWO $1,000 FINES.

Niagara Falls, Ont., Sept. 17.—Tony Bastile, an Italian from Hamilton, and Antonio Paso, a Polack from the same city, were each fined $1,000 in the police court here yesterday by Magistrate Fraser, charged with violating the Ontario Temperance Act. They came from the American side at different times on Saturday in automobiles.

Should "Foghorn" Wear Uniform

OTTAWA, Sept. 17.—The cost of living branch of the Department of Labor has furnished to Hon. T. W. Crothers, Minister of Labor, a report concerning goods in cold storage throughout the Dominion. The fact that certain cold storage firms are hoarding butter is emphasized by the report, which is, in part, as follows:

The quantity of butter in storage is excessive. It is not true that the whole trade is involved in this hoarding but certain members of the trade are holding larger amounts that is right and the law allows. It is gratifying to note that the Food Board has already taken steps to force this butter into channels where it will be used.

The amount of cheese in storage at the first of the month is less than a month ago, and very much less than a year ago.

There is very little change in the amount of eggs in storage. It is not yet the time of year to move eggs from storage and apparently very few were put in during August.

The stocks of margarine have declined. This will be a source of gratification to all concerned.

The total stocks of pork are about the same as last month, but a larger proportion of it is completely cured and available for immediate shipment. The stocks of beef have increased. This fact agrees with other evidence that no new high records of prices should occur in the near future.

Evidently the stocks of mutton and lamb on hand a month ago have been sold for consumption, as we suggested. The stocks have declined very decidedly. The stocks of fowl, which increased last month, are still insignificant.

The stocks of fish are greater than a month ago, and much greater than a year ago.

The following statement comparing holdings on Sept. 1, 1918, with Sept. 1, 1917, is taken from such limited lists of firms as the records of last year allow:

|  | 1917. Lbs. or doz. | 1918. Lbs. or doz. |

| Butter . . . . | 19,824,423 | 24,645,793 |

Exempt Bonds, Says Lord Shaughnesy

The Only Way to Secure the Money Canada Needs is by Tax-Free Bonds

CALGARY, Sept. 17.—"The chief thing is for Canada to get the money, and the only way to get it is from exempted bonds," stated Lord Shaughnessy on Saturday morning in an interview, when questioned as to what he thought of any proposal to tax Victory Bonds.

"If they are to be taxed, either the rate of interest must be increased or the selling rate reduced. Manifestly it would be fairer and more equitable to all if the bonds were taxed, but the Minister has thoroughly considered all these points and considers that the best way to get the money for Canada's own use, which is very necessary, is by the system of tax-exempted bonds. Securities that are free from taxation this way have proved very attractive to the buyer, and there is no doubt that it is the best way to raise the money."

The special train conveying the President and his party arrived in Calgary this morning at 7 o'clock, and as the train left for Banff two hours later Lord Shaughnessy, in response to a request for an interview, stated that he had said all that he cared to say to the press for the present and had nothing more to say. Mayor Costello was present to greet his Lordship as well as a number of local railroad officials.

WOMEN FIGHT POLICE ARRESTING EVADERS

WINNIPEG, Sept. 17—Amazons, armed with pitchforks, met a detachment of military police who raided Winnipeg Beach district yesterday, and from all accounts made a great deal of trouble for officers and men of the raiding party.

The evaders were brought into the city, and some excitement was experienced in getting by a number of pitchforks, armed women, who were determined that the authorities would not take their men away to war.

To win this war every ounce of the strength of each of the allied nations must be put forth to meet the organized, trained and disciplined efficiency of the Central Powers—that gigantic, ruthless force which is the result of fifty years of planning and preparation.

And every ounce of every allied nation's strength is in the hands and brains and hearts of the individuals of each nation, because they are free peoples.

Now the individuals of each nation must live as well as fight, therefore a proportion of the effort and material of each nation must be diverted from war purposes to living necessities.

So the less each individual takes for himself or herself for personal use the more effort will there be left for fighting and winning the war.

Every cent you spend represents that much effort because somebody must do something for you in order to earn that cent—somebody's effort must be given to you instead of to the war.

Therefore the less you spend—the less of somebody's effort you take for your individual use—the more will you leave in the national surplus for war effort.

The war can be won only by the surplus strength of the allied nations. The money each individual saves represents that surplus strength.

So the truly loyal Canadian will use less, spend less, and save more, to help to win the war.

Anglican Bishops in Toronto Represent The Whole of Canada

Synod Now Meeting at St. James' Cathedral in Governing Body Of Anglican Church From Atlantic to Pacific

TORONTO, Sept. 16—It is exactly three years ago since Toronto City was visited by such a procession of gaitered ecclesiastical legs as have descended upon us during the past week. That was upon the occasion of the last general synod of the Church of England. At that time the 1918 meeting of the general synod was arranged to take place in Winnipeg, but the railway companies refused to allow any special rates on fares, and it was finally rearranged that Toronto should again be the centre.

The synod of the Church of England in Canada differs from that held in the mother country in that its membership is composed of an equal number of representatives from both the laity and the clergy. The synod of England is purely an ecclesiastical one. One reason for this may be that there the church is a national institution supported largely by the state, while in Canada each diocese is dependent for the support of its churches upon the bounty of the congregations.

APPOINTED BY CROWN

The appointment of bishops, too, in England, is made by the crown, as also certain livings are held and distributed in the same manner, while in aCnada a bishop is elected at and by the assembly of the synods. Three different kinds of synod are held at which the business of the church is arranged, for the word synod signifies an assembly of church delegates of ecclesiastics meeting for the discussion of church affairs.

First, the general synod, in session at the present time, which stands for the entire Church of England in Canada, and is attended by representative bishops of every province.

The provincial synod, which was first formed a few years and is composed of the group of dioceses in the provinces, meeting annuallly for the discussion of important business, and the diocesan synod, which also meets every year.

The position of the Church of England in Canada with regard to the authority of the mother church has been described by Bishop Reeve as that of a loyal daughter who has set up housekeeping on her own behalf. Having her own house she is free to manage it, and all her own affairs in her own way, but nevertheless remains loyal to the traditions of the old home.

The Church of Canada is divided up into 26 dioceses, 25 of which are represented at the present synod, the absent bishop being the Rev. T. G. Anderson of Moosonee.

In point of area, the largest diocese in Canada is that of Mackenzie River, under Bishop T. R. Lucas, D.D. In point of population, however, that of Toronto sands higher than any other in the Dominion. Archbishop Hamilton is the oldest ecclesiastic present at this synod in point of years and consecration. Right Rev. W. C. Pinkham, of Calgary, appointed in 1887, is second, and Bishop Reeve, assistant of Toronto diocese, is the third in age.

The youngest bishop present, both by appointment and years, is Right Rev. C. D. Schofield, of Columbia.

There is a great diversity in the size of the various dioceses. Many which are lacking in point of population make up on the side of area and have churches scattered over a region which in the mother land would seem incredible for distance.

A WIDE DIOCESE

The Right Rev. George Thornloe, of Algoma, who was consecrated in 1897, presides over a diocese extending from Muskoka, Ont., to Sherbrooke, Que.,

Other bishops at present in Toronto are:

The Right Rev. F. E. Robins, appointed to the diocese of Athabasca in November 1912.

The Bishop of Caledonia, the Most Rev. F. H .Du Vernet who was consecrated at Prince Rupert in 1904. He was formerly vicar of St. John's Church, West Toronto.

Bishop Roper of Ottawa, was also a former Toronto rector, in charge of St. Thomas' Church, also lecturer at Trinity College.

Bishop Henry Allen Gray of Edmonton was the first judge of the juvenile court in Alberta.

The Right Rev. John Andrew Richardson, of Fredericton, N.B., was appointed in 1906.

A well-known misionary bishop is Right Rev. Isaac O. Stringer of the Yukon.

The Most Rev. Samuel P. Matheson, Archbishop of Rupert's Land and primate of all Canada, is the most important man present, his position in the Church of England upon his side being equal in authority to that of the Archbishop of Canterbury in England.

Bishop John C. Farthing ,of Montreal, is a well-known preacher.

Other bishops present are Right Rev. John Doull, of Kootenay, Bishop Bidwell, of Ontario; Bishop Adam De Pencier, of New Westminster; Right Rev. W. R. Clarke, Niagara; Bishop Worrell, of Nova Scotia; Bishop Rev. Wiliams, of Quebec, the Right Rev. David Williams, of Huron; Bishop Joseph Lofthouse, of Keewatin; Bishop J. A. Newnham, of Saskatchewan, Bishop F. E. Robins of Athabasca; Right Rev. McAdam Harding, of Qu''Appellle and Bishop Thornloe of Algoma.

The principal subject under discussion at the present meeting of bishops is the revision of the prayer book As an outcome of the war, a broadening of the vision of many of the younger clergy and the closer sympathy that has arisen in many points with the views of the laity and those of other church, also in order to create more of such broadness and sympathy where it is still non-existent, the discussion of many clauses in the prayer book as it now stands will be thoroughly dealt with at the general synod, as also any question of church authority with regard to the marriage of a man to his deceased wife's sister. All such questions come only within the jurisdiction of the governing synod.

The Church of England in Canada has about 661,700 members, 211,000 communicants, 1,800 clergy. There are about 2620 churches and four ecclesiastical divisions. Visiting bishops to the present synod from the United States are Bishop Darlington of Harrisburg, and Bishop McCormick of Michigan.

LORD SHAUGHNESSY ON RECONSTRUCTION

Lord Shaughnessy, who with six of the C. P. R. directors, is making his annual inspection trip over the western lines of the railway, left Winnipeg by special train, and has been spending the week-end at Banff and Lake Pouise. At Brandon, when the train made a short stop, the President of the C. P. R. was in a jovial mood, and the exchange of greetings with citizens was mutually enjoyed. The fine appearance of the grain fields was the subject of comment, together with the problems arising out of the transportation of the crop. Baron Shaughnessy stated that while he did not wish to be quoted as opposed to Government Ownership of Railways, he considered that before the Electorate shoud be asked to approve of such a program or policy, the dangers as well as the advantages should be carefully weighed. Canadians and Canadian institutions, he considered, will speedily solve the problems arising out of the transition from war to peace, and the Government will be ready with a program providing for the employment of soldiers not as soldiers, but as citizens engaged in the productive activities of peace. Canada should find a ready market for the output of the product of peace industries in the reconstruction which will follow peace in ravaged France, Belgium and other lands.

"More than over am I convinced, ever since arriving here and reading of the great American triumph at St. Mihiel salient, that the war will be over within twelve months," said Lord Shaughnessy this evening when he met a crowd of representative citizens at Moose Jaw. The C. P. R. President met many old friends and subordinatos, and declared that the further west he went so far, the better the crops became. "Of course, continued Lord Shaughnessy, "this is not a period of construction, and while we have plans as you know of moment for the West, they must necessarily wait, only believe me, the time is appreciably nearer, soon there will be a great perod of development, and it is to Canada with its resources and freedom that the steps of so many will turn."

But it was to the time when peace shall come that Lord Shaughnessy referred as containing matter more to his imagination and conjecture, and he certainly lent the belief that our ideas of the reconstructon in the Dominion were much too shy, that the possibilities were legion in the development of the country, for now we were on the threshold of an agricultural and industrial era which would be one of the brightest perods in history.

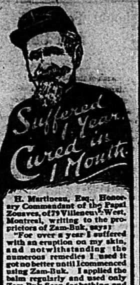
It's So Different Now, And Germans Squeal

WASHINGTON, Sept. 17.—The American offensive at their very doors, and stories of a long range gun about to be turned loose upon their towns, is giving the war a new aspect to the Germans. An official despatch from France Saturday says there are evidences of excitement everywhere across the German border, and quotes the following from the Mulhausen Tageblatt:

"The American offensive in upper Alsace, and the long range gun supposed to be intended to reduce to ashes the towns of this country, is madly alarming the inhabitants.

'Even people of a high rank tremble at the news like little children listening to ghost stories. Of course, the evacuation of Mulhausen and the whole of Alsace is again in question, and it is said that all measures for the actual evacuation of the Grand Duchy from Baden to Friburg have already been taken."

The German papers remind the public that those who spread such rumors, of the punishment they may incur, and say there is not the slightest reason for anxiety, but at the same time continue to publish the reports.



Suffered 1 Year. Cured in 1 Month.

H. Martineau, Esq., Honorary Commendant of the Papal Zouaves, of 79 Villeneuve West, Montreal, writing to the proprietors of Zam-Buk, says:

"For over a year I suffered with an eruption on my skin, and notwithstanding the numerous remedies I used it got no better until I commenced using Zam-Buk. I applied the balm regularly and used only Zam-Buk Soap for bathing, and in a comparatively short time could see some improvement. After continuing the treatment for a month the disease—although of over a year's standing—had entirely disappeared. In my estimation Zam-Buk is the only remedy for skin troubles."

For ringworm, scalp sores, abscesses, ulcers/boils, running sores, salt rheum, teething sores, "barber's rash," pimples, blood-poisoning, piles, cuts, burns and scalds Zam-Buk is equally good. 50c. box, 3 for $1.25. All dealers or Zam-Buk Co., Toronto.'

Included in the exceptions is the shooting of wild ducks, which is to be allowed in the Point Pelee Park each year on Wednesdays, Thursdays, Fridays and Saturdays of each week from October 1 to December 15, both days inclusive. The other exceptions are that noxious, predatory or dangerous animals and noxious birds within the park may be killed by any forest officer acting under the park's administration, and that with the consent of the Minister of the Interior animals and birds within the park required for scientific purposes may be captured or killed at any time by any forest officer.

Reassuring News About a Captive

COBOURG, Sept. 14.—Mr. Pillar of this town, formerly of Toronto, has received a letter concerning his son, from A. K. Zapfe, written from The Hague, which contains a photograph, which will be of special interest to all fathers, mothers, wives and others who have relatives who are prisoners in Germany. The letter is written to reassure Mr. and Mrs. Pillar of the welfare of their son, whom, the writer says, he left on June 24th at Soltau, where "he is comfortably placed as chef of Barracks 9." He adds "you will be happy in the prospect of having him with you in the course of a few months. I fully expect all our boys captured in 1915 will be in Canada before Christmas. I hope so, at least, for I could appreciate one of the happy old-time reunions."

He further states that Mr. Pilar's son has his own bunk or small room, which he shares with an elderly Belgian and a young chap of the Bedford Regiment, and says: "You need have no fears for his physical welfare, for he looks the picture of health, and I am sure feels A1."

KEPT TAX-GATHERER BUSY

Imposts Were Levied on Almost Everything in England a Century and a Half Ago.

It is interesting to note that the entertainment tax of the present day was anticipated over 150 years ago by the inventive genius who proposed that all places of public diversion, including playhouses, operas, masquerades, Ranelagh, Vauxhall, Sadler's Wells and Astley's—the famous resorts of the fair and the fashionable of his day—should be taxed, says London Tit-Bits. Another proposal was that the very statues in the gardens—and the lakes and the groves, the grottoes and the temples of those days were thick set with statues of heathen gods and goddesses—should have a price put upon their heads.

Time was when taxes were put on the watches attached to the seals that dangled from the fobs of the beaux or hung on the girdles that encircled the waists of the belles. Those who owned clocks were also regarded as fit subjects for special taxation.

The "guinea-pig" tax—the tax a householder had to pay for every person in his household who wore a pigtail and covered his hair with powder—had its day and passed away. So, too, had a tax on soap—the impost that gave Lord North his nickname of "Old Soapsuds"—and a tax on salt. Gloves and mittens were once taxed, and so also were scores of other articles and the shops in which they were sold.

JUST HOLDING PAL'S PLACE

"Blind" Beggar Gives Somewhat Laughable Reason for His Presence on That Particular Corner.

Professor Walker was standing at the corner of One Hundred and Tenth street and Fifth avenue waiting for a bus, when his attention was attracted by the rattle of a few coppers in a tin cup held by a blind man who was squatted against the park wall, relates the New York Times.

The professor was fumbling for a small coin when the bus swung round the corner and in his hurry to catch it he tossed the penny toward the cup as he turned away. His aim not being good the coin was on its way to the ground when the beggar swung the cup under it with all the skill and dexterity of a ball player.

The professor was so astonished and indignant that he allowed the bus to go and approached the pretended blind man.

"Here," he began, "you are not blind. I saw you catch that penny. You are a fraud."

"Yes, boss," admitted the beggar, "you has it right. I ain't blind myself, but you see this here corner is a good stand and if the blind man that always sits here was to leave it some other blind man would see the place and grab it. So you see, boss, I'm just holding the place for the real blind man. It's his afternoon off. He's gone to the movies."

Beavers Teach Engineers.

A group of Uncle Sam's army engineers received an unexpected lesson in engineering at Bronx park. They learned in the space of one hour how to repair a broken dam and prevent a disastrous flood. Their instructors were nine beavers, who were romping in the water of the pond. Above them was a dam 200 feet long and several feet high. Suddenly came a rush of water. The swollen stream broke into a torrent. Old man Beaver appealed to his offspring and the eight sprang after him. They seized pieces of timber, earth, rocks and sod. They worked with feverish haste. Stone by stone and timber by timber the water was slowly held back. One hour after the water broke the dam was repaired. "If we can hold the Huns like those chaps stopped that flood of water the war will be over in six months," commented one of the officers. "I reckon science hasn't taught us so much, after all," said a bystander. "Those beavers know more about their specialty than we do about war or building canals."

Gas Masks and Whiskers.

To be clean shaven or bearded like the pard is the alternative presented to the German first-line troops. The reason is the gas mask. Some authorities hold that the mask cannot be relied upon to protect any but clean-shaven faces; others again hold that a dense hirsute growth within the mask acts as an additional air filter. But it must be a real patriarchal beard—no mere 7 or 14 days' bristles, says an article in the Deutsche Tageszeitung. The writer holds that the full beard is a peculiarly Teutonic attribute, and should be cultivated as such. Besides, according to ancient traditions, it adds to "frightful aspect," he naively adds. Gas tests at the front in airtight cubicles are carried out every fortnight, and full-bearded men testify to the additional security afforded by their beards.

Could Not Save Comrade.

A fruitless but daring attempt to rescue a man under the most unfavorable conditions was recently made by William R. Ransford, a seaman of the national naval volunteers, and Allen J. Jackson, a wardroom cook. The man lost was a seaman named W. A. Wells. He slipped and fell overboard from the forward turret of the U. S. S. Iowa. It was cold weather and the water was full of floating ice. Nevertheless Ransford and Jackson went overboard after the man, but were too late to save him from drowning.

150 To 160 Million Bushels of Wheat

Estimate of W.P. Hinton Vice-Pres. And General Mgr. Of G.T.P.

EDMONTON, Sept. 17.—A wheat crop of from 150,000,000 to 160,000,000 bushels is estimated by W. P. Hinton, Winnipeg, Vice-President and General Manager of the G.T.P., who, with other officials of the railway, was a visitor in Edmonton to-day.

"There have," said he, "been various estimates, from 135,000,000 to 190,000,000, but the figures I have given may be taken as nearly accurate although this year it is difficult to make any sort of definite estimate."

BELGIUM'S SHARE IN THE WORLD'S WAR

Belgium's military effort has not been confined to Yser, everybody is aware of it. King Albert's soldiers have also gloriously shared in East African and Russian war operations. In Rüssia, for instance, Belgian co-operation has not ended with the departure of the valiant automobile-cannon corps, now having just competed a triumphal journey in the United States, amidst the enthusiastic cheers of the American people. Indeed "Il Secolo" (July 21st, 1918) reproduces a despatch from Moscow, received on July the 18th, published in "Berliner Neueste Nachrichten" in which it is reported that Belgian together with French and English officers, are organizing military resistance in Moormania.

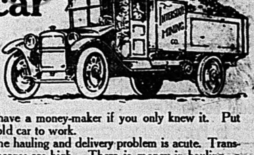
Don't "trade in" that car



INTERSTATE MINING CO.

YOU have a money-maker if you only knew it. Put your old car to work.

The hauling and delivery problem is acute. Transportation charges are high. There is money in hauling—a profit or a saving for you if you have an old car.

Take a 1913 Cadillac as an example. How much do you expect on a "trade in"? Yet the power plant is O.K.

Hook it up to a Smith Form-a-Truck Universal and you have an ideal 2-ton truck good for years of hard service.

This costs you a cash outlay as follows:

|---|---|
| 1 Two-Ton Smith Universal (attached) | $800.00 |
| 1 Truck Body and Cab - - - - - - | 150.00 |
| | $950.00 |

Now, what do you get back?

A saving on delivery and hauling costs of $10 per day (any truck owner will agree that this estimate is conservative).

300 working days - - - - - - - - $3,000.00

That is over $2,000 the old car earns—the first year. Add to that the new life you give your business—the increased efficiency, the saving in labor costs, the advertising value—the relief from delivery troubles. And you still have the truck almost as good as ever—ready to repeat the first year's earnings.

Look into this proposition. Don't "trade in" the old car. Let us tell you how to make money with it. Phone or write.

Dandruffy Heads Become Hairless

If you want plenty of thick, beautiful glossy, silky hair, do by all means get rid of dandruff, for it will starve your hair and ruin it if you don't.

It doesn't do much good to try to brush or wash it out. The only sure way to get rid of dandruff is to dissolve it, then you destroy it entirely. To do this, get about four ounces of ordinary liquid arvon; apply it at night when retiring; use enough to moisten the scalp and rub it in gently with the finger tips.

By morning, most if not all, of your dandruff will be gone, and three or four more applications will completely dissolve and entirely destroy every single sign and trace of it.

You will find, too, that all itching and digging of the scalp will stop, and your hair will look and feel a hundred times better. You can get liquid arvon at any drug store. It is inexpensive and four ounces is all you will need, no matter how much dandruff you have. This simple remedy never fails.

Munich Paper Pours Vitriol, Calls Kaiser Blind And Dumb

His Speech Show Viewpoint, Declares Bavarian Journal—Harsh Words For All-Highest

LONDON, via High Power Government Station, Carnarvon, Wales, Sept. 18.—The Munich Post makes a bitter personal attack on the Kaiser and comments scornfully on his assertion that Germans do not cherish hatred or envy. It says:

"In the nations of the entente he sees only people yellow with envy. He is convinced that the enemy is determined to crush and destroy us although Germany's greatest enemy, Lloyd George, has spoken quite otherwise.

"All his senses appear to be blind and dumb, even to the stirring and critical conditions surrounding him in Germany. Thus no word regarding Prussan franchise reform escaped his lips. At the moment when amidst the most violent party strife a new Germany is about to be formed he utters the almost inconceivable and perverted sentence. 'It is no time for factions.'

"The speeches of William II. from his accession until his pronouncement at Krupps' show us in what strange, romantic and distorted colors he views the world."

Many Germans Fall When French Advance

With the French Army in France, Sept. 17.—The sacrifices the Germans are making to stay the slow and steady advance of Gen. Mangin's forces toward Chemin des Dames are made evident by the large number of the enemy dead found on the field of Saturday's and Sunday's operations. The number of prisoners which increased during the day to more than 3,500, also is very large for the length of front attacked.

The dead are thickest around Laffaux mill and east of Vauxaillon, where the enemy counter-attacked violently to-day in a vain effort to regain the positions he lost Saturday.

General Mangin's troops not only maintained all their gains, but pushing on from Vauxaillon, captured the plateau to the south-east which gives them a vantage ground of great importance. Extending the field of battle to the south, the French also made appreciable gains by occupying Mennejean farm and ground considerably to the east of that position.

Further south they took by storm Hill No. 169 north of Celles-Sur-Aisne.

The Germans came back repeatedly in strong force all along this front and fought stubbornly, but with no other result than to increase their extremely heavy losses.

While the sections seem to be only details when compared with the recent larger operations, their significance appears clearly from the valiant efforts made to stop them.

Further advances by the French on the high ground west and south of the Cremin des Dames will make the German positions there very precarious.

4,000 IN QUARANTINE

GREAT LAKES, Ill., Sept. 18.—Approximately four thousand men are in quarantine yesterday as the result of Spanish influenza breaking out in the aviation camp of the Naval Training Station here.

Capt. W. A. Moffatt, Commandant, has called off the prize Kennel Show, which was to have been held here next week, on account of the epidemic.

Japanese in Siberia Take Hun Naval Base

Booty at Bhabarovsk Includes 17 Gunboats, 4 Other Vessels And 120 Guns

TOKIO, Sept. 18—Japan's cavalry and infantry battalions captured the enemy naval base at Khabarovsk on Septembtr 7, acording to official announcement Monday reporting operations on the Ussri River front in Siberia. They took 17 gunboats, four other vessels, a wireless station, 120 magazines, one munition warehouse, 70 horses and much other material.

A despatch from Ilovannaya, Trans-Baikalia, says that the Siberian Government at Omsk, a fortified town of Asiatic Russia, has declared war on Germany and has ordered the mobilization of the 1918 and 1919 classes.

HARBIN, Sept. 11—A movement exceeding, perhaps, that of the Czecho-Slovaks is being organized by Polish officers to form a Polish division to fight in Siberia westward to their oppressed fatherland as integral units in the American army.

Young Aviator Instantly Killed

Machine Caught Fire Near Leaside and Crashed to Ground

TORONTO, Sept. 18—Cadet Harry Saunders, whose parents live at Erin, Ontario, met almost instant death yesterday afternoon when his machine caught fire while practising flying exercises at Leaside Camp. The machine crashed to the ground and young Saunders was terribly injured. His body was severely burned. It was removed to the City Morgue in the Military Ambulance and Chief Coroner Arthur Jukes Johnson communicated with. An inquest will be held.

Canadian Railway Troops Win Honor

Repair Bridge Blown Up by Enemy And Bring in An Abandoned Train

LONDON, Sept. 18.—The Canadian Associated Press learns that the Canadian railway troops at the front are doing smart work in repairing the lines captured from the Germans a few nights ago.

The Hun in his hasty retreat before General Byng's forces, blew up a railway bridge at a strategic point, and it looked like as if this advance would be held up.

Canadian railway men hurried to the scene and in less than 48 hours had cut the end of a girder which had been bumped into a gully and used the remnant as pier support. The new temporary bridge provided a medium for the supplies taken forward and established connection with railways further ahead.

At another place the Germans were forced to abandon an engine and two dozen cars. In the darkness the Canadian railway men got steam up in the abandoned engine and hastened a dozen cars to the rear. The next night the captured engine fetched in the second dozen cars under artillery fire at the expense of three slight casualties.

Poison Mystery Finally Solved

No Need to Destroy Preserved Fruit—Use it With Safety

TORONTO, Sept. 18—That the quantity of carbolic acid found was so small that the entire amount would not give a humming bird a headache, is the report made by the chairman of the Canadian Research Council, after an investigation into the alleged cases of poisoning of fruit by phenol contained in the rings of fruit jars. This forms a portion of an official statement issued yesterday by Hon. I. B. Lucas, attorney-general for the purpose of setting at rest the sensational rumors that have been circulated in connection with the recent charge of poisoning at Bracebridge.

INFLUENZA EPIDEMIC SWEEPS NEW ENGLAND

BOSTON, Mass., Sept. 18—Influenza and pneumonia caused more than seventy deaths in New England within the 24 hours ending tonight. At Boston there were 35 deaths from influenza, including three naval men and 27 from pneumonia. In Brockton and nearby towns where the shoe-factories have been badly crippled by the spread of the disease, 12 death from influenza were reported.

At the forts in Boston harbor it was stated that all the hospital beds were occupied by influenza patients. At camp Devons there are 3,500 cases mainly among negro soldiers from the south.

Medical Officers For Siberian Force

KINGSTON, Sept. 18.—Announcement is made of the selection of Captain J. S. Box, M.C., and Lieut. Connell from this division as members of the medical staff to go with the Siberian expedition. Captain Box is chosen because of his experience with Eastern conditions, having successfully participated in a campaign against typhus fever in China early this year. He will be attached to the Stationary Hospital. Captain Box in addition was in Field Ambulance service in Macedonia with a British regiment, spending a year or more on the borders of Bulgaria, and there he met with malarial conditions. He has lately been attached to the field ambulance at Barriefield camp. Captain Box is a Queen's graduate, and was one of the champion football and hockey players.

Lieut. Connell will be in charge of the laboratory department. He is a son of Lieut.-Col. J. C. Connell, dean of Queen's Medical College of this city.

NURSES TO MOVE.

Kingston, Sept. 18—Queen's Military Hospital nurses who have been quartered in one of the court rooms in the Court House, are hereafter to be quartered in Chateau Belvedere, on King street, which place the Militia Department is about to lease for $5,000 a year. The military authorities want the court room for offices of the Casualty Depot, but the Kingston Bar Association and County Council are not inclined to permit the placed to be used for that purpose, as work of the courts here has been handicapped for the past year and a half owing to the Court House being occupied by nurses.

RUSSIAN PRIEST ARRESTED; MAKES HIS ESCAPE

Quebec, Sept. 18—Potrokoff Trotosky 35 years of age, was arrested yesterday evening here in a beer garde non St. John street by the military police, after he had made utterances considered detrimental to the allies and favorable to the Bolsheviki. Trotosky, when arrested, carried the sum of $700 about with him, was well dressed, and had papers attesting that he was a Russian priest. He was lodged at St. Louis street barracks. It was reported today that he escaped during the night and was nowhere to be found.

PREFERS KHAKI TO PRISON

KINGSTON, Sept. 18—A soldier named Gray, sentenced recently in Toronto to ten years' imprisonment for objecting to doing military service on conscientious grounds, was released from the penitentiary yetserday and taken to Toronto. He expressed his willingness to go overseas rather than remain in the penitentiary. It is thought that others of conscientious objectors serving terms in the penitentiary will change their minds and don khaki in exchange for their liberty.

Allies' Envoys Approve Reply

Leaders of U.S. Senate Also Express Agreement With President's Action

WASHINGTON, Sept. 18—Austria's peace offensive is a closed incident so far as the American Government is concerned.

Secretary Lansing sent to the Swedish Minister yesterday the note, authorized by President Wilson flatly rejecting in two short sentences the proposals of the Austro-Hungarian Government for secret and non-binding peace discussions. It was started on the cables at once for transmission to Vienna by the Foreign Office at Stockholm.

The President's action—including the precedent setting brevity of the reply and the promptness with which it was delivered—drew expressions of approval during the day everywhere in Washington, at the Capitol, among officials and throughout the allied Diplomatic Corps. Similar responses from the other nations at war with Germany are expected to follow quickly.

SENATE APPLAUDS

In the Senate Senator Lodge of Massachusettes, Republican floor leader, and the ranking minority member of the Foreign Relations Comittee, voiced the feelings of Congress on the subject in a prepared speech, hartily approving the President's course as bot hwise and right. The United States, the senater said, can talk peace only to a Germany beaten and deprived of power further to harm a wronged world. On the House side Representative Fees of Ohio, Chairman of the Republican Congressional Committee, spoke in approval declaring that the quick reply might "jar upon diplomatic ears, but is justified as a rebuke to the double dealing of the enemy.

Frankfort Station Heavily Attacked

LONDON, Sept. 18.—British air squadrons have again bombed the airplane works and chemical factory at Mannheim, railways at Metz-Sablons and Treves and the station at Frankfort. The air ministry announces these attacks in its communication last evening. It says:

"On the afternoon of Sept. 16 our squadrons made two separate attacks on the airplane works and chemical factory at Mannheim, with excellent results. The enemy attacked our machines over the objectives. Three of our machines are missing.

"A German home defence airdrome at Hagenau was attacked by a squadron, and bursts were observed on and near the hangars. One hangar was seen in flames. All our machines returned.

"Last night our machines attacked three hostile airdromes with bombs and machine gun fire. Good results were obtained.

"The railways at Metz-Sablons and Treves were very heavily attacked and three fires were started at Metz-Cablons. Bombs were dropped all around the Treves station. The station at Frankfort was also heavily attacked and bombs were dropped with good effect.

"The night at first was calm, but later high winds got up. At present even our machines have not been located.

"Sixty tons of bombs have been dropped in the last three days."

SUSPECTED OF MURDER

CARLETON PLACE, Ont., Sept. 17—Mike Johnson, twenty-two years of age, a Russian, residing at 197 Clark Street, Montreal, was captured near this town this morning and identified shortly after 2 o'clock this afternoon by Thomas Mattingly, the C.P.R. foreman, as the alleged murderer of Carleton Wells, the C.P.R. sectionman who was shot and killed yesterday morning.

HUNS BEING PAID WHEN CAPTURED

BRANTFORD, Sept. 18—Lieut. Roy Brown, former Treasurer for the Red Sox in the Canadian League, writing to T. J. Nelson, President of the Sox, tells of the capture by his men of the Paymaster of a German battalion, just as he was giving the Huns their pay. The boys took 2,000 marks with him. What happened to these was not stated, but one was enclosed.

Eleven Persons Killed in Big Fire

Nine Girls, Man And Boy Trapped in Newark Factory

NEWARK, Sept. 18.—Trapped in a cloakroom on the top floor, eight girls a boy and a man perished here yesterday in a fire which destroyed the plant of the American Button Company. Another girl was killed when, seeking to escape from the flames, she leaped from a window. Nine other girls were injured, several fatally.

At 2 o'clock the factory hummed with the industry of more than 300 young women engaged in making buttons for army and navy uniforms. At 3.30 the building was a flame-swept ruin, the top floor of which formed a tomb for workers who had been driven into the cloakroom, by flames and smoke.

Church Needs Policy Towards Veterans

TORONTO, Sept. 18.—Criticism of the Government and the Church for failure to express appreciation of the sacrifice of the soldier upon his return to civil life broke out in the Synod yesterday. With but two brief addresses the Synod appointed a committee consisting of Dean Starr, Mr. Justice Hodgins, R. W. Allen and Capt. Rev. Cooring, to bring in recommendations as to the Church's best policy towards returned men.

"I think our past lack of expressed appreciation reflects very badly on the Church and the Government," said Dean Starr, in seconding Mr. Allen's motion. "We were all outspoken in urging them to take up this admirable duty, but we have not even a God-speed for them when they relinquish their post in the army. The men are very bitter about it."

In moving for the appointment of the committee Mr. Allen said the Church had a right to do all it possibly could for the returned men and in return the veterans could assist the Church materially by giving it the benefit of their experiences.

By unanimous vote the Synod appointed Chancellor Davidson to replace J. G. Brock on the Executive Council representing Montreal.

Social Service Work.

"Social welfare is one work in which all Churches of Canada can unite," asserted Rev. Dr. Shearer, general secretary of the Social Service Council of Canada, before the Synod.

"I want to give Sir Robert Borden the honor," he continued, "of taking the initiative in abolishing party patronage in party politics in Canada. It is one of the reforms that are caused by the great reform atmosphere created by the war. His great Union Government also wiped out the liquor traffic.

"It's society that must right the great wrong against the little ones, 25,000 of whom die every year, for the most part from preventable diseases."

Cardinal Farley Died Last Night

MARMONECK, N.Y., Sept. 18—Cardinal John M. Farley, Archbishop of New York died at his country home here last night. The aged Prelate had been sinking rapidly since he suffered a relapse last Saturday following partial recovery from an attack of pneumonia.

In 1891 he became Vicar-General of the Archdiocese of New York; the following year he was appointed Auxiliary Bishop of New York, becoming Administrator on the death of Archbishop Corirgan in May 1902, and Archbishop in September of that year. MOOSE JAW, Sask., Sept. 18.—About 12.30 o'clock last night William Bromley, a driver for the Dominion Express Company walked into the Central Police Station and horrified the sergeant in charge by calmly stating he had murdered his five children by cutting their throats and that they had better lock him up. Bromley was accompanied by his wife who heard the terrible news for the first time, when her husband who appeared perfectly sane to her told the story to the police. Bromley was left at home with the children while his wife went to a picture show. She returned some time about 11.30 o'clock, but Bromley refused to allow her into the house. She argued with him and he finally asked her to go to a Police station with him and she would then learn the reason. The policeman, who rushed to the house found the children in bed, each with its throat cut so badly that the heads were practically severed from the body.

To Relieve Catarrhal Deafness and Head Noises

If you have Catarrhal Deafness or are hard of hearing or have head noises go to your druggist and get 1 ounce of Parmint (double strength), and add to it ¼ pint of hot water and a little granulated sugar. Take one tablespoonful four times a day.

This will often bring quick relief from the distressing head noises. Clogged nostrils should open, breathing become easy and the mucus stop dropping into the throat. It is easy to prepare, costs little and is pleasant to take. Anyone who has Catarrhal Deafness or head noises should give this prescription a trial.

"THE PHANTOM BUCCANEER"

Richard C. Travers, the talented Essanay star, is appearing at the Palace for the last time tonight in thrilling drama of conspiracy and love entitled "The Phantom Buccaneer." On the same programe is the closing chapter of "The Woman in the Web" series, and a highly amusing "Musty Suffer" comedy will also be exhibited.

DEEP MYSTERY IN "BOUND IN MOROCCO"

Baffling mystery, the kind that will make you grasp the edge of your seat and gasp, is one of the many interesting features of Douglas Fairbanks' new Artcraft photoplay. "Bound in Morocco," which will be shown at Griffin's for the last time tonight.

The picture opens with Mr. Fairbanks bound hand and feet with chains. The scenes that follow assist in clearing the mystery and these are provocative of thrill after thrill, while the unexpected happens almost every minute. Due to the numerous new stunts which are employed by Mr. Fairbanks in his escape from an angry mob of Arabs, who are mounted on camels, three cameras were used throughout the filming of the picture, and in this way one of the three photographing machines was sure to record the stunt.

Mr. Fairbanks is capably assisted in "Bound in Morocco by a capable staff of players, chief among them are Pauline Curley, Tully Marshall and Frank Campeau. Gail Kane is also appearing on the same programmo in a five-part drama entitled "Souls in Pawn." "The Screen Magazine," The Universal Current Events and a splendid chapter of "The Eagle's Eye" series will also be exhibited.

"GARDEN OF ALLAH"

One of the most fascinating, as well as one of the most luxurious, spectacle plays given to the stage in recent years is "The Garden of Allah," a dramatiaztion of Robert Hichens' colorful novel, the scenes of which are laid in northern Africa. Although in its seventh season of successful production it retains its enthralling interest, judging by the reception which greeted its appearance at Griffin's Theatre last evening.

Both play and novel are too well known to need sketching. The theme is that of a soul desiring both the "lust of the flesh" and peace of mind at the same time. With this struggle is interwoven a love story of primitive intensity, which closes in lofty self-sacrifice. Though not convincing in its spiritual aspects, the play wins popularity by the picturesque dressing given it by its author and playwright.

Camels, dancing girls, bands of swarthy Arabs—these lend a note of bizarre color to the play, appealing to the senses with unerring charm The present company presenting the Garden of Allah is a capable one, headed by Mis Edna Archer Crawford as Domini Enfilden, the lovely English girl who found love and life awaiting her on the edge of the desert. Miss Crawford acted with a grace and sincerity that made the role distinctive, as was also that of Paul Gilmore, who played the difficult role of Boris Androsky, the rugged but vacilating Trappist monk-husband. A dignified figure always is that of Count Anteoni, a role played by Walter Edwin with finish and restraint. As usual, the scenic investiture was sumptuous in detail and richness of color, and the entire performance satisfied those who had seen the play before, as well as those for whom it was a first-night feast.

The first rise of the curtain reveals a scene of the great Sahara desert stretching away like an ocean of sand, its countless dunes rising and falling like mighty swells and the morning sun sending its ruddy rays—messengers of its gladsome coming to illuminate and revivify the world.

And then across the sand strange beings pass like spectres that seem to come into one's presence from the mysterious past and who, saying not a word, bow in homage to the new day.

The desert then vanishes and a town hotel is seen, alive with strife and turmoil. This gives place to another and again another filled with restlessness and trouble, the silence having been replaced by the noise of the weird babble. Another change and one is before a wondrous garden, a vision of the way the world ought to be and may have been in the beginning.

The scene vanishes in its turn and one is in the very center of a real sandstorm—a storm that makes its own darkness, whose fierceness is a tempest of dashing sand. And then it is night and the stars are out in all their glory. The Milky Way seems almost to touch the earth. And then last of all is the scene of the monastry—the place where peace and rest have their home and the tired soul is safe.

In the midst of all these wonderful scenes, the principals and supporting company, the Arabs, camels, horses donkeys, goats, etc., fill their roles and do their parts so impressively that the illusion is very remarkable with many dramatic climaxes.

Don't Spoil Your Hair By Washing It

When you wash your hair, be careful what you use. Don't use prepared shampoos or anything else, that contains too much alkali, for this is very injurious, as it dries the scalp and makes the hair brittle.

The best thing to use is just plain mulsified cocoanut oil, for this is pure and entirely greaseless. It's very cheap, and beats anything else all to pieces. You can get this at any drug store, and a few ounces will last the whole family for months.

Simply moisten the hair with water and rub it in, about a teaspoonful is all that is required. It makes an abundance of rich, creamy lather, cleanses thoroughly, and rinses out easily. The hair dries quickly and evenly, and is soft, fresh looking bright, fluffy, wavy and easy to handle. Besides, it loosens and takes out every particle of dust, dirt and dandruff.

Day of Reparation Awaited By France

PARIS, Sept. 18.—Deputy Albert Thomas, formerly Minister of Armaments, has just returned from a tour on the western front, during which he visited the battlefields of the Somme and the Marne. Describing the trip, Mr. Thomas says:

"It was a terrifying spectacle to see the villages in the Somme district battered out of recognition by French and British artillery.

"A few months ago the battlefield was limited, Villers-Bretonnenaux was almost intact, and so were the villages near Amiens. Now, whether you approach it up or down the line, the horizon opens up a field of devastation. The farms and villages in the Marne, the Ourcq and the Somme regions have been destroyed. Thiescourt has been splintered by shell-fire. On the Lassigny battlefield dead horses still lie.

"Montdidier, perched up on its hill, displays only broken and damaged house, while in Santerre, where one shell alone could blow a house to atoms.

"Noyon, perhaps, is not so badly damaged by warfare, but it is mined and filled with poisonous gas and is dangerous ground for our advancing troops. Years must pass before the fields in the Somme and Artois regions can again be cultivated.

"The day will surely come when laws of reparation will be voted and applied, but how many milliards will they represent and who shall pay? as such desolation and destruction justified by war? No Proof abounds in many places of the will to ruin, to strike a hard blow at the economical life of our country."

Discussing a future peace, Thomas says:

"So that peace shall be lasting, that nations may not rise one against another. Governments have said there shall be no punitive indemnity, no levying of tribute as in olden days, that the peace shall be a just one. But does justice exclude payment for reparation? Does it not, on the contrary command that the victims shall be indemnitized by the one who has been the cause of the damage?"

General Mangin's forces are still fighting fiercely south of St. Gobain Forest and took six hundred prisoners yesterday.

Acids In Stomach Cause Indigestion

Create Gas, Sourness and Pain How To Treat.

Medical authorities state that nearly nine-tenths of the cases of stomach trouble, indigestion, sourness, burning, gas, bloating, nausea, etc., are due to an excess of hydrochloric acid in the stomach and not as some believe to a lack of digestive juices. The delicate stomach lining is irritated, digestion is delayed and food sours, causing the disagreeable symptoms which every stomach sufferer knows so well.

Artificial digestents are not needed in such cases and may do real harm. Try laying aside all digestive aids and instead get from any druggist a few ounces of Bisurated Magnesia and take a teaspoonful in a quarter glass of water right after eating. This sweetens the stomach, prevents the formation of excess acid and there is no sourness, gas or pain. Bisurated Magnesia (in powder or tablet form—never liquid or Milk) is harmless to the stomach inexpensive to take and is the most efficient form of magnesia for stomach purposes. It is used by thousands of people who enjoy their meals with no more fear of indigestion.

Wm. J. PLANE

At an early hour this morning William J. Plane, aged 58 years, died at the Hastings County House of Refuge from an attack of paralysis. Deceased was born in Madoc Township and was a farmer by occupation. For the past 10 years he had been an inmate of the House of Refuge. Mr. Plane was unmarried. The remains will be taken to Madoc Township for interment.

M. S. MADOLE

Mr. M. S. Madole, a well-known and popular hardware merchant of Napanee, died this morning. For years the deceased had been in business in the neighboring town and upon several occasions contested the riding of Lennox and Addington in the Liberal interest. Mr. Madole was a prominent member of the Methodist church.

COOPER.

This is a town not heard from in some time, but is still alive and thriving in war time.

Lots of rain. No one is heard to grumble about dry weather.

The pulpit of the Presbyterian church was occupied by Rev. Mr. McTavish of Madoc on Sunday last.

A number from around our burg attended the memorial service held in Queenston Methodist Church in honor of Sergt. Fred Glover to show their respect for the fallen hero and sympathy for the bereaved family who feel the blow very keenly.

Miss Jennie Cassidy has gone to Albert College at Belleville to resume her music we will miss Jennie's bright smile from our midst.

Miss Lena Rollin has returned from Toronto to visit her mother for a few days.

Mrs. Jas. Rollins and baby, Jean, is visiting her parents at Crookston.

More farms are changing hands in our vicinity. Mr. John Rollin has disposed of his to his nephew, Mr. W. Rollin, and the latter has sold his to his cousin, Will Rollin, son of H. Rollin.

Our settlement was once known as the Allan Settlement, but we may change the name now to Rollin, as we have only one family of Allans here at present.

Mr. R. R. Hannah went to Toronto last Saturday with two cars of live stock shipped from our station by Reynolds & Hannah.

Mr. Jas. Long has loaded several cars of lumber shipped to Messrs. Hart & McDonough, Toronto, this week. It seems a pity that the railway does not see its way clear to give us an agent here as there would be, and is, enough business done to have one here all the time.

Mr. Jas. Rollin expects to eat Sunday dinner in the new house. Mr. Tucker of Madoc is there this week putting in the furnace and Mr. Ed. Fox is finishing up the carpenter work.

CARDINAL HASTENS BACK.

Rome, Sept. 18.—Following Austria's announcement that a note had been sent to the Vatican, Cardinal Gasparri, papal secretary, who was on a vacation, returned immediately to this city.

OUR WEEKLY SERMON

BY REV. A. M. HUBLY

"THE BIBLE" AND "THE SPIRIT"

"The wind bloweth where it listeth, and thou hearest the sound thereof but canst not tell whence it cometh nor whither it goeth: so is every one that is born of the Spirit."—John iii:8.

The Bible and the Holy Spirit are inseparable in operation for the glory of God and the salvation of men. Nothing in the heart and mind of man can be hid from the Spirit; and the Bible will show to man himself the defects of his inner life. The great thinker, Coleridge, said: "The Bible is like no other book in the world, because it finds us deeper down than any other." Elihu said: "There is a spirit in man, and the inspiration of the Almighty giveth them understanding." I think we might interpret both Coleridge and Elihu as saying, in the language of today: There is something in the heart of man which responds immediately and intuitively to the scripture.

I mean to say, that by the application of the word, by the Holy Spirit, whether heard or read by a seeker after truth, the change in personality which Jesus designated as being "born again" is effected. The light of the knowledge of the glory of God in the face of the incarnate word begins to shine in the heart, to illuminate the soul.

Quickened by the Holy Spirit, we need only to let the Bible speak and we will recognize it as the truth. It bears witness of its own divinity, and all of who are of the truth hear its voice.

In the time of the Crusaders King Richard of England was kidnapped and imprisoned in an Austrian castle. We read that Blondin, his beloved troubador, found him by playing under the frowning castle walls through the land, a sonnet only known to the king and himself. As the minstrel played beneath the walls of a certain castle he heard some one within repeating it note by note, and he knew it was his beloved king's voice. The faithful troubador knew that he had found his hidden monarch.

Simply by the manifestation of the truth, the Bible commends itself to the conscience of men. The key fits the lock of the soul and by the light of the Spirit each is seen as coming from, and belonging to, the same divine Creator. For this reason the Bible to the Spirit-born soul becomes integral parts of a living whole.

This why the Book is prized by man and understood to contain the word of life. It lives as a fruitful tree in every land. Its leaves are for the healing of the nations. Though translated in tongues far removed from its own dialect it is appreciated wherever human blood is found, when the ear harkens to and the heart receives its wondrous truths. In the frozen Arctic or sun-scorched tropics its fragrant blossoms and its goodly fruit differ not. It demands the loyalty of men to high and noble ideals in all countries, independent of race or color. It is the Book of books along the Nile, the Congo, the Amazon, the Mississippi and the St. Lawrence. It has counsel and guidance for men that plow the seas or travel the lands, the navigator of old or new waters, or the explorers of old and new continents, the mariner on the blue Atlantic or the caravaneer on the Arabian sands. It is a well of refreshment in the valley of Bacca, and a cooling zephyr on the heated mount of pleasure. It is a character-builder in the family at home, and a messenger of peace in the strife of battle.

The Bible is immense in its variety of means and exhaustless resources to meet the soul needs of men. It is in the spiritual realm what nature is in the material world.

It reflects all the higher moods of the inner life and brings man face to face with the Deity. It pays little heed to human prejudices or anticipations, but like a wind from heaven "bloweth where it listeth." It is spirit and life, breathing not only in the charities of the gospel, not only in the lyrical sallies of the inspired epistles, not only in the greatness and magnificence of the compassion or benevolence of God, announced by the Holy Ghost throughout the sacred pages of this wonderful Book, but also in the stern language of the prophets, and in the warnings, precepts and statutes, and in its impressive lessons of narrated history, and in the revelations of divine justice and human responsibility, which abound in both Old and New Testaments.

"Where it Listeth"—Not only where our sense of literary beauty is stimulated as in St. Paul's picture of charity, but also where this is not the case, and where neither precept nor example stimulate, but where we are left face to face with historical fact or ethical material, which inspires no spiritual enthusiasm, but which suggest, to most of minds critical difficulty. Let us be patient. In due time we shall understand; in the meantime take comfort in the truth that presents the Spirit as the director and applier of the word, and that "He bloweth where He listeth."

It is in faith and confidence that the Holy Spirit accompanies the divine word wherever it goes, that the Bible Society, with its characteristic consecrated enthusiasm prosecutes its world-wide work. Year after year the millions of copies of the scriptures go out of that buzzing industry known as the British and Foreign Bible Society Publishing House in London, England, and every year they go in greater numbers. The society has been at work for one hundred and fourteen years, and every year new doors for its entrance into dark places have been opened. Every year has afforded increase of opportunity for service. Translations into different languages and dialects have gone on unchecked till over five hundred have been made.

Even during the war this work of translating and revising the word of God into the vernacular of the various nations and tribes has steadily progressed. For the past eleven years one new translation every six weeks has appeared. During last year versions have been published for the first time in seven new tongues.

The soldiers and sailors of the different nations now engaged in war have demanded a large supply of Bibles and Testaments, so that during the past three years the society has sent out more than thirty million copies of the scriptures. These have been Bible, Testament or some one or more complete book of either old or new Testament.

Who can estimate the value of this work in the world as it is today?

Believing that the Holy Spirit can, and will interpret the word, and apply its truth with His infinite power to every man who refrains from sinning against Him, we may expect to see a great harvest of souls to be gathered by the angels of God when all the conflicts of this life are ended.

"The Harvest is the End of the World and the Reapers are the Angels."

As "the seed is the Word," those of every generation who interest themselves in sowing the seed, may, with joy anticipate an interest in the harvesting. In every calling in life, men who stay themselves upon keeping the precepts and appropriating the promises of the Bible, may be sure of being sustained by the Holy Spirit's power in all the temptations and conflicts of life. We see an example of this in Daniel. During all the troubles of the nation, from the King Nebuchadnezzar's insanity, and the murders of his successors, amidst the swirl of intrigues, traitorous plots and cruel persecutions, this one man stood firm, like a pillar amidst blowing sands. Nothing moved him to refrain from keeping the law of his God nor to neglect the seasons of prayer which it enjoins.

So God honors His own word, and keeps the steadfast soul, which by the truth, is anchored to that which is within the veil."

While "the fashion of this world passeth away, they that doeth the will of God abideth forever."

Let me say in closing, that the Bible Society is about to make its annual call upon the people of Belleville for money contributions toward meeting the increased expenditure of the passing year. I am sure all who acquaint themselves with the society's report will likely desire to contribute if possible to so laudable a work.

Since I have been honored with the presidency of the Belleville Branch the amount to the credit of our city has yearly increased.

In 1910 the amount raised was one hundred and eighty-nine dollars. Last year it was three hundred and eighty-dollars and ninety-four cents, thanks to the people who have cheerfully and liberally responded to the solicitations of the lady collectors who have so kindly assisted in perpetuating the society's usefulness. These ladies will canvass the city, beginning this week or shortly after. I bespeak for them your good will and generous response to their appeal.

Let us all pray often that the spiritual comfort and power of the Holy Spirit may flow through the word of God as it is read in these dark days by sick and wounded soldiers, airmen and sailors, by prisoners of war, by refugees, by widows and fatherless children, and by all who are bereaved, anxious or desolate, and that by God's grace the hearts of Christians may be kept peaceful in the midst of strife. That the word of God may triumph in the interest of a righteous peace.

Four Thousand Dollar Fine On a Russian

SAULT STE. MARIE, Ont., Sept. 18—Wasyl Enchuk, a Russian, aged 37 years, was Monday fined $4,000 with the option of five years' imprisonment, by Magistrate A. Elliott, who had associated with him during the trial Magistrate J. T. Mackay, in the Police Court Monday. On being found guilty under the War Measures Act of having objectionable matter in his possession, the accused was arrested on a charge of being Secretary of a Russian Revolutionary Society which he had organized, and which has a membership of 30, and was holding secret meetings in a foreign section of the city.

The papers found in Enchuk's possession urged Russian workmen in Canada to organize to fight all Government authority, the capitalist and religion. The Soo organization was also endeavoring to enlarge its influence in other industrial centres of Northern Ontario, chiefly at Copper Cliff.

An official interpreter from Ottawa arrived in the city Sunday to vouch for the correct interpretation of the document presented to the court, and the guilt of the accused was established. The fine imposed is a record one for the local court. Crown Attorney G. W. Goodwin prosecuted, and Uriah McFadden appeared for the defendant.

It is learned that the interpreter in the present case has received threats by mail from members of the of the Russian Revolutionary Society at Sudbury, threatening his life should he take part in the prosecution of a trial about to take place in that town in the near future.

Never Feels Need
Of Medicine Now

Tanlac Completely Restored
Health Several Months Ago

"Positively, if Tanlac had been made especially for my case it couldn't have relieved me more quickly and completely than it has," said Mrs. Agnes Kerr, who lives at 680 Ossington Ave., Toronto, the other day.

"For several months," she continued "I was in such a weak and rundown condition from stomach trouble and nervousness that my whole system was affected. My food did not agree with me, and after eating anything I had an uncomfortable feeling of tightness in my stomach and would be distressed for hours from the gas that formed from my undigested food. I felt fidgety and nervous all day, and many a night I was so restless that I could hardly sleep at all, then I would get up in the morning all worn out, and with no life about me, and I was so weak and listless that I could not do a thing. I fell off in weight and kept going down and feeling so awful that I saw I would have a breakdown if I didn't get hold of something to stop it.

"I took three bottles of Tanlac, and it certainly put me right back on my feet again. That nervousness left me, and I haven't been troubled with gas or indigestion for several months. My food agrees with me perfectly and gives me proper nourishment, and I am stronger and better in every way than I have been in a long time. After Tanlac built me up so wonderfully last spring I stopped taking it and I haven't felt the need of a dose of medicine since."

"Tanlac is sold in Belleville by Ostrom's Drug Store, in Trenton by J. H. Dickey, in Deseronto by W. J. Malley, in Stirling by J. S. Morton, in Frankford by W. J. Lettimer, in Madoc by J. Will Vince, in Marysville by T. [illegible] McAlpine, in Ormsby by Jas. Campbell and in Thomasburg by J. H. Blakely."

TWELVE HUN DIVISIONS DISBANDED LATELY.

With the American Army on the Metz front, Sept. 18.—It is established that the Germans already have disbanded 108 infantry battalions, equivalent to twelve divisions, to make up the losses resulting from the year's fighting.

Five thousand women are being mobilized for certain auxiliary service. Boys of fifteen also are being used.

WOULD RESTRICT MARRIAGE.

Toronto, Sept. 18.—A resolution moved by Bishop Williams of Huron calling for full support for legislative action by the Provincial Government banning marriages between parties affected by social diseases was carried at the Anglican Synod yesterday afternoon on the recommendation of the Social Service Council.

Germany Knows The War is Lost

ROTTERDAM, Sept. 18—The peace overtures by the Central Powers caused a sensation here, although a few persons who are closest in touch with German feeling were less surprised than others. I have the best reason to believe that this feeling is one of unrelieved depression and anxiety, which is not confined to the working classes, who are suffering most, but is extending now to the intellectuals and the middle class.

Even in military circles, where the "last ditchers are still endeavoring to stay, if that is still possible, the smash of national morale, the conviction is growing that the war is lost. Vice-Chancellor von Payer, when he said a few days ago that the fear of another winter of war was the chief cause of anxiety among the people, might have added with truth, "the fear of a fifth winter of war without the slightest grounds for hope of recovery and with almost the certainty of disaster." The Imperial German Government recently took measures to inform itself in detail of the morale existing among all classes. Replies from al parts of the country reflected the danger of a fast approaching crisis.

That little that has been published of the statements made recently to Chancellor von Hertling by a trades union deputation confirms this. Information that has reached here in the last two or three days tends to show that the German high command has long been convinced that the position of the Central Powers is hopeless because of the failure of the March offensive. Agreeing accounts indicate that the German Government, as well as the high command, really believe it impossible to prevent America's powerful participation in the war.

Ludendorff's failure on the west front and thet stream of fighting men being poured unchecked across the Atlantic has brought about a condition of mind in which the question is no longer "Shall we win?" but "How much shall we lose?"

As Absorbine, Jr., is a powerful germicide as well as a liniment, it is effective for prophylactic and aseptic uses; it destroys the germs in cuts and sores; it may be diluted and used successfully as an antiseptic and germicide for the mouth and throat.

Athletes will find it efficient for limbering sore, stiff muscles. A good formula for a rub-down is one ounce of Absorbine, Jr., to a quart of water or witch hazel.

It is composed of vegetable extracts and essential oils and is positively harmless. Get a bottle to-day and keep it in your desk, in your traveling bag, in your medicine cabinet or in the side pocket of your automobile. It is health insurance of a high type.

New Polish Army Formed in East

HARBIN, Sept. 18—A movement exceeding, perhaps, that of the Czecho-Slovaks is being organized by Polish officers to form a Polish division to fight in Siberia westward to their oppressed fatherland as integral units in the American army. According to conservative estimates an army of more than 100,000 trained militarists is immediately available in the regions of Harbin, Nikolsk and Vladivostock.

Horse Meat For Canada

Dominion Govt. May be Asked To Sanction This Move

CALGARY, Alta, Sept. 18— A movement to permit the sale of horse meat in butcher shops throughout Canada has received the indorsement of all leading live stock oragnizations in this section of Canada and soon will be formally placed before the Dominion Government in the form of a recommendation, according to the Alberta Horse, Cattle, Sheep and Swine Breeders' Association.

Horse meat, sold under the same regulations as obtain in various European countries, would result in a great economic saving, the Association says, adding that "thousands of light horses that have ceased to be of economic value consume large quantities of feed annually."

Figures dealing with the sale of horse meat in Europe were made public. They showed that one-sixth of the 660,000 families in Paris eat horse flesh, and that Germany, as far back as 1909, used 79,000,000 pounds of horse flesh annually. In 1909 Germany also consumed 6,900 dogs, the figures showed.

"A GALLANT GENTLEMAN"

No officer in the Canadian army had more friends than Lt.-Col. Elmer Jones, D.S.O., whose kindly genial manner and manly character endeared him to every one fortunate enough to call him friend, and his friends were legion, including many in Belleville who sincerely regret that his death on the field of battle has robbed the Canadian army of a gallant and most useful officer and many of a much prized friend and comrade. Lt.-Col. Jones was born and brought up in Brockville, took up the profession of law and was practising in Vancouver when war broke out. As soon as possible he wound up his business affairs, came east and became an officer in the Canadian army, leaving Kingston with his battalion for overseas, and winning rapid promotion on the field of battle, became officer commanding. Brave and fearless to a fault his gallant deeds won him the Distinguished Service Order and later an additional bar for repeated acts of outstanding bravery and meritorious service. He was idolized by his officers and men, was a strict disciplinarian, but his kindly heart and keen judgment of human nature always tempered justice with mercy, inspiring respect and love among his subordinates. Canada, published in England, under date of August 31, contains a letter from Capt. R. J. Renison, C.C., in which the following appreciative references are made to Lt.-Col. Jones in describing the battle f Amiens, designated as the "Canadians Greatest Victory":

> It was here that Col. Jones fell leading his men, crippled though he was from a recent accident.
> The battalion was very fortunate in its commanding officer. Lt.-Col. Elmer Jones, D.S.O., was one of the most brilliant and beloved officers in the Canadian army. A man of wide culture, born in Brockville, he came over with the battalion early in 1915. A veteran of St. Eloi, the Somme and Vimy, he was a father to every man in the battalion.
> His influence over his officers was quite extraordinary. He called them all by their Christian names, and his humorous badinage touched the spot with unerring instinct. His last conference with his company officers was a lesson in the power of personality. He sat on a couch in the dugout with a hand and leg bandaged, for he had not recovered from a painful accident of the week before. In his quiet tone he gave each his final instructions. His confidence in them and their affectionate respect for him were beautiful to behold. As they left he said "Good-bye, boys, God bless you." Several times in the last three days he repeated to himself John McCrae's inspiring poem, "In Flanders' Fields."
> The colonel was hit with a machine gun bullet about a mile from the town. The wound was mortal. He died in five minutes without a word. He was a very perfect gentle knight and a most gallant gentleman. He was carried shoulder high by four prisoners, two of them officers, who were informed by the colonel's batman that they had never performed a more honorable task.
> We buried the colonel in a little British cemetery on the main road in an eastern suburb of the city which he had helped to deliver. The evening sun went down over the glorious pile of the cathedral only a mile away. When a few days later a great thanksgiving service was held there for the deliverance of the city, his spirit must have felt the reward of duty done for France, for Canada and mankind. A rough oak cross, made from a shovel handle marks his grave, with the silver identification disc from his wrist as his temporary epitaph.

TOMATOES GOING TO WASTE FOR LACK OF PICKERS.

"Tomatoes are going to waste all over the country for want of pickers and canners," said Miss Hart, of the Ontario Government Labor Bureau. "One man actually ploughed under about four acres of them —almost 12,000 bushels—because he could get no pickers."

Calls are coming in from all over for pickers and canners. Prince Edward county needs them, so does St. David's immediately.

Peaches are now coming on, the Crawford peach being at its best at present. Hitherto the pickers have been working on the early St. John peaches, but Crawfords are now demanding their attention.

"We want all the pickers we can get, both for peaches and tomatoes," said Miss Hart. "In fact, I'm afraid if we don't get them we will have difficulty in procuring the fruit this winter."

One canning factory reports that all their work at present is on overseas shipments, and that if more workers are not secured the civilian needs will not be able to be dealt with.

It will be a sad commentary upon the patriotism of Canadians if any great quantity of fruit or vegetables is allowed to spoil for the want of willing hands to gather them. Here is a chance for some of the patriotic societies of women to sound the call for volunteers to help the producers.

If pickers for fruit and tomatoes are as scarce as reported heroic measures are necessary. Half or whole holidays could be declared in communities and volunteers carried to the fields near by in automobiles, returning at night after an enjoyable and useful outing, and they could be paid in peaches, tomatoes or whatever they helped to pick. Closing down the schools for a few days is also worthy of consideration, allowing the older pupils to help avert the calamity of general food spoilage for want of workers. There are plenty of automobiles which would be cheerfully volunteered for the very patriotic service of transporting the workers to the farms.

.·. CRISP COMMENT .·.

Some say the war is to be decided on the eastern, some on the western front. Probably it is Foch's intention to merge these two fronts by driving the one in upon the other.—Toronto Star.

Austria's peace by conversation move has fallen very flat, and it is hinted that the answer of the Allies will be soon forthcoming in a new and mighty blow at the already shattered Hun armies on the Western front which will rock all Hunland with a feverish desire for peace at any price.

The "facts" upon which the Globe and the Star depend for their arguments concerning Imperial affairs and international politics are generally doubtful. Those newspapers would be perfectly qualified to write a critical review of Shakespeare's tragedy "Ananias and Sapphira."—Toronto News.

An insane and ignorant democracy is running riot in Russia and the horrors of the French Revolution are being re-enacted there. Eight hundred executions are reported as last week's record in Petrograd with four hundred more on the waiting list—waiting to be sacrificed for the new-found Russian "freedom" tinted with Hun Kultur.

The Ontario Government as a fish vendor is all to the good. Through the Government's efforts fresh fish at reasonable prices have been available all summer and people have become fish eaters to a larger degree than ever before. The Government's system of distribution of fish has been businesslike and satisfactory and the fish have been delivered in first-class condition.

Men who jam their hats on and start to march out of a theatre while the National Anthem is being played are either ignorant, foolhardy or pro-German. Surely they know that deadly danger lies for them in the indignation of those who line the passage way. That their poor weak headpieces are not seriously damaged is more on account of the supreme restraint which people are capable of than lack of willingness to administer a much-needed lesson, but there is a limit and some of these ignoramuses, or worse, are going to get jolted into at least a show of patriotism some of these nights if they don't stop irritating real Canadians.

A Laugh or Two

Their Devoted Livers.

Foreign Newspaper—"To the vindication of this principle the people of the United States are ready to devote their liver, their honor and everything they possess."

Grandfathers.

"Father, what kind of boats were the rams they used so much in the Civil War?"

"They were probably the ancestors of the ewe boats of today, my boy."

A Real Helpmate.

"The young physician says that his bride, although she can't cook, is a real helpmate to him."

"Yes; I understand that all his friends who dine with them become his patients."

Natural Selection.

"We are all ready to talk about the duty of others."

"Yes," commented Miss Cayenne. "Duty is something like the Darwinian theory. It seems perfectly all right for a lot of people we know, but none of us like to bring it home to ourselves."

A Hot One.

Miss Passay—Jack was talking to you about me, wasn't he?

Miss Knox—Yes; he asked me if you were thirty-five yet and I said, certainly not.

Miss Passay—What a ridiculous question.

Miss Knox—Just what I told him. I said, "How long do you expect her to remain at thirty-five?"

Needless Alarm.

A business-like man stepped into a butcher's shop. "A piece of beef for roasting!" he ordered briskly.

The meat, mostly bone, was thrown on the scales.

"Look here," remonstrated the man, "you're giving me a big piece of bone!"

"Oh, no I ain't" said the butcher blandly. "You're paying for it."

How He Cleared Himself.

While passing along a busy street in Dublin a lady was relieved of her handbag, and Sandy was arrested on suspicion of having snatched it. He was placed among a group of men, and the lady was asked to single out the culprit. She passed down the line until she came to Sandy.

"Officer," she said, "I think that is the man, although I did not see his face, but his clothes appear to be familiar."

"The lady's wrong, sir. I was wearing a different suit. Can I go now, sir?" said Sandy.

OTHER VIEWS

Just So.

New York Globe.

"There is a feller here who owns a queer animal," said the landlord of the Petunia tavern. "It has a head like a turtle and a body like a colt. There is a fin along its spine. It has feathers along its body, fur on its legs, and a spike or sticker on the end of its tail. It whistles up to 10 o'clock in the morning and then brays till noon. After dinner—" "Nonsense!" said the guest, whose countenance was shaped considerably like that of a rare old fiddle. "You don't expect me to believe a fantastic tale like that, do you?" "Well, I heard you saying a little while ago that you feared we could never whip the Huns and might eventually be compelled to conclude a German peace. Of course, if you believe that you will believe anything."

Contrast in Attire.

Baltimore American

It is just a little illustration in consistency that a Government standard suit show was opened in London by the Lord Mayor wearing a bright red robe with gold facings, an ermine hat, gold necklace and a fancy Queen Anne suit.

The Difference.

Nashville Southern Lumberman.

Owing to the scarcity of cloth, it is announced, women next year will wear their skirts shorter. Mere man, for the same reason, will continue to wear his last year suit a little longer.

A Complete Indictment.

Mail and Empire.

Maxim Gorky is reported to have accepted the post of director of propaganda for the Bolsheviki Government. He has the necessary qualifications—long hair and no morals.

His Stern Revenge.

Philadelphia North American.

The report that a U-boat officer saw a Broadway show and then went out and sank a United States ship is the clearest justification for German submarine warfare put out up to date.

Impost Approved.

Dallas News.

Personally we are in favor of taxing heavily every newspaper that has an excess of war prophets.

The Poet's Corner

A SONG OF WOMEN.

Our lips shall sing the victory,
Vow vengeance for defeat,
Our gold we bring with willing hands
Nor come with lagging feet.

With voices brave and kindly eyes
We arm our men to fight;
And when the last farewell is said
We stand and face the night.

At night the little lamps go forth
To seek the newly slain
The broken-into house of life,
That shall not stand again.

England! a splendid name for thee
With all we have to part;
Nor keep but women's heritage—
Fears and a breaking heart.

—E. C. in Westminster Gazette.

A TRIBUTE.

New York Herald.

Briton and French and Belgian,
Stalwart and strong and fine,
Brothers, we would a tribute pay
To you who have held the line!

You fought when the fight was fiercest,
You spilled your blood like wine,
Bleeding and dying and almost done,
You fought—but you held the line!

We are coming hundreds of thousands strong,
We will fight till we reach the Rhine,
But, comrades, we know the debt we owe
To you who have held the line!

Labor Men Talk Of War Reconstruction

QUEBEC, Sept. 18—Attacks on the aims of the officers of the Trades and Labor Congress of Canada and Labor leaders generally featured yesterday morning's session of the thirty-fourth convention here.

These attacks folowed the introduction of a resolution by John W. Bruce of Toronto, providing for a program of reconstruction after the war. He suggested a committee of five to draw up a declaration of principle. Secretary Treasurer Draper urged that the matter be left to the incoming executive

HAND PICKED DELEGATES

"When the conference was held with the Government last January," he said, "the fifty delegates were hand picked by the executive, and the masses were not consulted. Furthermore, they allowed themselves to be influenced by elaborate entertainments paid for by the Government."

"The more I see of the officers," declared Delegates Osborne, of Winnipeg "the more I believe there is more intelligence among the rank and file."

Delegate T. A. Stevenson, of Toronto, declared that when the majority of any convention elected officers it ill became and individuals to attack them.

"As far as I know," he said, "the officers all have come from the ranks."

VOTE OF COFIDENCE

By a vote of 256 to 45 the convention voted to leave the matter in the hands of the incoming executives. The defeat of an amendment to refer the executive's findings to the rank and file for revision was practically a vote of confidence in the officers The vote was 245 to 78.

Held Fifty Huns At Bay With Lewis Gun

LONDON, ept. 18—The deed for which Corp. Joseph Kaible, late of a Quebec battalion, earned the Victoria Cross was for conspicuous gallantry. During an intense bombardment fifty of the enemy were advancing. All of his section were casualties, and Kaeble jumped to the parapet and emptied a Lewis gun into the enemy trenches. Although wounded several times he continued to block the enemy by his determined stand, and finally, firing continuously, he fell mortally wounded into a trench and fired his last cartridge at the retreating Huns while he shouted "Keep it up, boys!"

The complete repulse of the enemy at this point was due to the bravery and sacrifice of this man, who died of his wounds.

A bar to the Distinguished Service Order has been awarded to Major Albert Esbrisay Carter, of New Brunswick. He was atached to a flying squadron, and a bar was granted for destroying thirteen enemy machines in three months.

The decoration to Lieut.-Col. Alexander Ross, of Regina, was given for conducting operations which resulted in the capture of many prisoners, five machine guns, and inflicting many casualties on the enemy.

Major F. G. Hogins, of the Engineers, has been gazetted a staff officer, replacing Major J. L. Bogart.

Opposes Giving Back German Naval Bases

Balfour Wouldn't Allow Enemy Control of Means Of Communication

LONDON, Sept. 18—In his address Monday voicing his personal views that such a conference as Austria-Hungary suggested in its peace note would be useless, Foreign Secretary Balfour said:

"Germany is going to insist upon return of her colonies. Here, again, is a point upon which there can be no misunderstanding. Germany sands on one side and we on the other. I say it is impossible to conceive that any conversations can bridge over a difference so deep, or to restore to the power of Germany those unhappy populations she missused, or give back to Germany control over those naval bases which can give her control of the means of communication, not only between the British Empire, but between the civilied nations of the world."

U. S. DELIVERS "PEACE" REPLY

Washington, Sept. 18.—The reply of the American Government rejecting the proposal of Austria-Hungary for a secret and non-binding discussion of peace terms, was delivered late yesterday to the Swedish Legation for transmission to Vienna.

RECEIVING WAR CROSS

The patriotic spirit and devotion with which Canadian women have so far performed war-service work and made sacrifices has never been equalled in the history of any country. Mothers, wives and sisters support this burden with strength and fortitude. But those who are already miserable from the complaints and weaknesses which are so common to women, should take the right temperance tonic for the womanly system.

If a woman is borne down by pain and sufferings, by nervousness or dizzy spells, by headache or backache, "Favorite Prescription" should be taken. It can now be had in tablet form as well as liquid at most drug stores. Send to Dr. Pierce's Branch at Bridgeburg, Ont., for a 10c trial pkg. of tablets.

For fifty years Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets have been most satisfactory in liver and bowel troubles.

Windsor, Ont.—"Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription made a new woman of me. For about six years I suffered with woman's trouble during which time I became all run-down, weak and nervous. I would have severe backaches and pains in my side. I doctored with the doctor but did not get cured of my ailment and was so bad that I could scarcely walk across the floor when I began taking the 'Prescription.' When I had taken two bottles I was much improved and four bottles completely cured me, and I have enjoyed better health than I ever did before taking this medicine. It is truly a wonderful medicine for women."—Mrs. Martha Mulcaster, 4 Albert St.

See-Saw Fighting on The Canadian Front

With the Canadian Forces in France Sept. 16—Dripping weather has given place to sunshine, and spirits, never dropping, have risen to the brighter skies. Intermittent local activity continues along the Canal du Nord. The German side permits of closer concentration, and posts have been taken and retaken always to our profit in the end. Four days ago the Germans took two of our small posts and established others after our men had exhausted their ammunition and withdrawn. Saturday we retook them all and extended our own occupation, killing and capturing several of the enemy. In no case have we left anything to the enemy but the uncertain posts. From information it appears that the enemy is hard pressed for men.

A reserve division encountered September 2 and badly smashed has again been thrust in. There is also evidence of hasty reorganization, prisoners captured giving indisputable proof of altered units. It is more than rumored that German women and boys are being brought further toward the fighting zone to release men for the lines. With the American attack in the St. Mihiel salient news of which substantiated Canadian confidence in their cousins, and the French drives further west, the strain on German resoucres becomes more evident.

A Misunderstanding

By WILLIAM AMORY

(Copyright, 1918, by the McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)

"But you are not listening."

Helen Fairfax turned her eyes back to her lover with a murmured "Forgive me." They were earnest eyes, shining with a tremulous love-light, and she was a clever girl, with keen mind and keener intuition, and he had grown into the habit of talking to her freely of his life, his profession, in a way that surprised himself.

But tonight her attention wandered. Tonight of all nights! Tomorrow he was to sum up his great case. Surely a woman should share the self-denial of a man's destiny. Was Helen, after all, like other women—given to moods, absorbed in the subjective—when the veil was lifted? They had been engaged six months; each day had been a fuller revelation of her nature. Was this the nearer view? Ah, no—banish the thought. Helen was Helen—there was no more to be said.

He took up the lines of the argument of his case and stated them to her, clearly, concisely, as though she were a man. This time her eyes did not wander from his face; they deepened, their pupils growing larger as she gazed. How splendid he looked! How alert; how alive!

How could she keep at this wide distance. How incidental and how futile sounded all that rapid flow of words! When would he have done, that she might throw herself upon his breast?

"Don't you think so?" he asked her, suddenly.

"Oh, Harold, I did not hear what you were saying."

"Not hear what I was saying? Haven't you been following? I never needed your co-operation more, your intellectual sympathy more, than I do tonight. You know how hard I have been working on this case; you know what a notable case it is. You know also, that the eyes of the legal world are upon me. My summing up tomorrow will be a crisis in the beginning of my career. Could you not follow me—help me by your sympathy—your interest?"

He waited to see the flash of protest in her eyes, for some little lance that she would thrust to cross his own, but instead she nestled her head into the curve of his shoulder and whispered: "Forgive me, I am moody tonight; very moody and absent-minded."

"We have no right to be moody nor absent-minded, dear," he answered seriously, "where another's interests are involved. It is a sign of weakness. And there is something besides love. A strong woman should keep even love at bay when a man has work to do—not lure him nor tempt him with it. I do not like to say it, sweetheart, but—I love you—and the wounds of a friend are faithful. I am disappointed at your failure to sympathize with my work tonight."

Two big tears welled in her eyes, but she said no word. Had Harold Ford been a hero, a knight of chivalry, he would not have stopped in his quest until he had found the source of those two tears; he was, however, only a very busy man of today. Not that the two are altogether incompatible, but that the combination is rare, and Harold did not happen to be both in the fullest sense; furthermore, he was deeply absorbed in an immediate practical affair. It was striking 11, and time for him to leave her. Though he said no more, and his good-night salutation lacked nothing outwardly, there was a mental reservation which, to the psychic sense of Helen, robbed it of its fullest bliss.

"Six o'clock tomorrow, dear," he repeated as he went out the door. "Six o'clock tomorrow," she answered.

Did her voice quiver, or was it fancy? He was conscious of saying to himself as he passed down the steps: "Are all women alike. I wonder—after all—tears and moods?"

The following afternoon, in the gathering dusk, he mounted the steps again. His attitude had changed. The stress and irritation of an absorbing effort had given place to a bouyant reaction. He had won his case, and won it in so brilliant a way that the triumph was the smallest part of his self-congratulation? Even the judge had said words to make a young lawyer's heart take courage. But what were the words, what was the triumph, what was anything, until he had shared it with Helen? He could see her in the gathering dusk, as he waited, her eyes glistening delight! He could hear her vibrant "Harold!" Poor child, had he been harsh last night? Ah, no, only impatient for a moment—and frank—to make her the utmost that she was capable of being. If he had unintentionally hurt her, he knew a potent balm to heal with, to make her rejoice. Why was the servant so eternally slow in opening the door? How long they were making him wait! He rang again.

"Tell Miss Fairfax I am here."

"Yes, sir." The servant stood silent and awkward.

Harold wanted to quicken him with a shove; what was the matter with the fellow? He walked into the library; the light was burning low; the servant followed him, and closed the door with an air of mystery that gave Harold a mingled shock of impatience and of fear.

"I was to give you this, sir, when you came," and the man held out a letter.

"Is Miss Fairfax not at home?"

"She is at home sir."

"Then tell her at once that I am here."

"Yes sir."

Harold was alone with his letter; he opened it and read:

"It is midnight, you have gone, and yet it seems as though you are still here—so close to me that I can see your eyes and feel your touch—Harold. Forgive me that I was not more as I should have been this evening, but—I was a coward. Dear, I have not been well for many weeks and yesterday I saw a specialist. He told me I had a most serious difficulty, and that I must undergo a dangerous operation at once, if I would save my life. Tomorrow is the day appointed. I implored him to wait, but he leaves town in a few days, and if I do not have it done tomorrow it could not be performed for two months, and that is too long to wait, he says; so there was no other way. Tomorrow—our day—when you are to vindicate my pride and hope in you; the day we have waited for so long. There was but one impulse strong within me, almost overmastering—to fly to the shelter of your arms—to seek your sympathy. But how could I tell you when it might imperil your calm, your poise—undo all you have worked for—hamper your ascent, in which tomorrow will be a stepping stone? No. You must not know. Your heart is too tender, I am too much your own for you to stand up in court and plead for legal abstractions when I am lying under the knife. I half hoped you would make me tell you all my heart—but now I am glad you do not know. You will have no shadow on your way tomorrow, and when you receive this it will be all behind us; it will have been over seven hours, for the operation takes place at 11 o'clock. Good-night—good by. I love you—it seems to me that I love you in a new way tonight. Harold—Harold—I must call you back and tell you, and feel your strength to make me strong; but no. I am your love—I must be brave. And then—why should I fear?

"God's in his heaven—

"All's right with the world.

"HELEN."

He crushed the letter in his hand, and reached the door with one bound, like an animal in chase. She was his own; his place was by her side; no man could keep him from her. As he opened the door he came face to face with her father.

"Harold, my dear fellow—"

"Let me go to her," and Harold tried to pass. Mr. Fairfax put his arm across the door.

"No, you must not, now; the doctors are with her; they will let no one in, not even me, and I am her father. Harold, my boy, we must be brave and stand by each other."

A withering quiet, like a blight, fell upon Harold. It seemed to paralyze his powers of motion and of speech. After a moment he heard himself saying, in a voice that sounded like a stranger's:

"What—do—they — the doctors—say?"

Mr. Fairfax looked at him pityingly, his own anguish stamped white upon his face.

"Don't lose heart, Harold," he said gravely. "We are hoping for the best, and McKenzie, the doctor who performed the operation, says the chances are in her favor."

Clocks That Time Speeches.

On the speaker's desk in the United States house of representatives is a little clock-like machine with a dial graduated in minutes from one to six and a single hand that goes once round the dial in six minutes. This is started and stopped by a tiny lever at the top. The speaker uses it in timing members in a debate wherein the speeches are limited.

The inventor, C. H. Graves of Philadelphia, designed it for keeping time on long-distance telephone calls, which are limited to three minutes. At the bottom of the dial is a scarlet mark. When you get your connection over the wire you press the little lever, which stands at O, and set the machine going. When the pointer is approaching the red mark you know your time is rapidly drawing to a close.

It is astonishing how few persons have any idea how long three minutes are. Nine out of ten will hurry their long-distance calls so that they use far less time than they pay for.

Tea in India.

For years past India, the great tea-producing and exporting country, has received large imports of tea from other countries. The imports have continued and even increased during the war, in spite of the glutting of the market with Indian tea, owing to the shipping restrictions. The imports are mainly low-grade teas, which are "transformed" into Indian teas by mixing with the genuine article. The bulk of the imports are from China, the Shan States, Ceylon and Java; but it is curious to learn that last year 16,000 pounds of tea went to Indian from the United Kingdom.

Oyster Farms.

One of the large salt-water farms of Japan consists of 50 square miles covered with 5 to 15 fathoms of water. Here the pearl farmer plants rocks and stones which are soon covered with oyster spat. The oysters are then left in special beds until the third year. When they grow large enough, a tiny speck of irritating substance is introduced into the bodies of these oysters and three or five years more are necessary for the foreign substance to become hidden in the layers of nacre which make up the pearls.

FALL FAIRS PAY WELL

Prepare Now to Harvest and Store Root Crops.

Best Mixtures and Methods of Making Bread With Flour of Various Cereal Grains.

(Contributed by Ontario Department of Agriculture, Toronto.)

TO the general farmer who grows good grain for seed, to the specialist in garden and truck crops, and particularly to the live stock man the Fall Fair offers an opportunity. It pays to advertise and the Fair is the place where the people see the goods produced, and seeing is believing. Moreover, the papers report the winnings and through these the exhibitor gets a large amount of advertising free which would otherwise cost him a considerable amount of money. Winning in close competitions under a competent judge adds dollars to the value of stock shown and increases the market price of any commodity as well as giving the exhibitor a standing not only in his own community but over a section of country corresponding to the size and influence of the show at which prizes are won. The Fair is a good place to make sales. Prospective buyers see the good exhibits made and enquire about the breeding stock at home. Stockmen show at Fairs largely to make sales rather than to win prizes although the latter is a factor in the sales and they are not disappointed as evidenced by the growing interest in the Fall Fair. Showing at the Fair, coupled with a judicious newspaper advertising policy, which should never be neglected, is good business. The two go together and work hand in hand. It pays to let others know of your good stock. Use printers' ink and show at the Fall Fair.—Prof. Wade Toole, O. A. College, Guelph.

Hints on Harvesting Root Crops.

Root crops should be taken up before the weather becomes too wet and disagreeable in the fall if in any quantity. It is slow work at any time and becomes much more so under cold damp conditions. Lift the roots with a digging fork and twist off the tops, putting them in piles and covering with the tops. If a large area is to be lifted, and one is expert with a sharp hoe, he can very quickly remove the tops, but they will not keep quite as well. The roots should be ploughed out, throwing them as much as possible on the top. Bins with slatted sides and bottom should be used for storage where possible, as this gives the roots a chance to sweat. If the storage room temperature is above 40F. cover them with sand. Carrots should not be deeper than two feet in a bin, others may be four feet. Where cellar storage is not available use pits. These should be three feet wide, two or three feet high and of any length. Run the pits north and south where possible, and have them on well-drained ground. Put a layer of straw on the ground and cover first with straw 6 inches deep then 6 inches earth, and as the frost gets harder cover with fresh strawy manure. Have ventilators every 15 or 20 feet, as all roots sweat in storage. These may be filled with straw during cold periods.

All roots should be as free from dirt as possible when put in storage. It is often advisable to leave a few days in small piles so that at the second lifting any adhering will be removed.—A. H. MacLennan, B.S.A., Ontario Vegetable Specialist.

Cereal Grains for Bread-making.

On this continent and in Europe we use wheat in much larger quantities than any other grain. This is because the flour made from wheat contains the constituents necessary to form gluten. Rye contains a similar substance to a lesser extent, while the other grains do not have any of this material. Gluten is a tough, elastic, tenacious substance, capable of considerable expansion. Consequently, when the gas liberated through the action of yeast seeks to make its way out of wheat flour dough the gluten expands, retaining the gas and causes the dough to rise. When the bread is baked the gluten is "set" or coagulated, and this accounts for the light porous structure of wheat bread. When surrounded by a proper crust the moisture is retained and the bread may be kept for several days and still be an attractive article of food. Rice, oats, corn and barley cannot be used alone to prepare bread of this type. They cannot be expanded by means of yeast for their is no cohesion in the mass. They may be used in making biscuits and cakes or quick breads, which breaks easily, dries out readily, cannot be safely transported, and must be consumed within a few hours after being prepared.

On the other hand, there is comparatively little difference in the composition of the various cereal grains and, consequently, one will furnish about as much digestible nutrients as another. If, then, in a time of wheat shortage like the present, we substitute some of the flour of corp, oats, barley, buckwheat, etc., for wheat flour in making bread, we do not decrease its nutritive value. We do dilute the gluten and thus limit the power of expansion of the dough and we make the bread darker, but we have retained the desirable features of bread. Silkiness of texture and whiteness of crumb were counted points of excellence in the bread of the old high patent flour, but under the present conditions of longer extraction of the wheat grain and the introduction of substitutes, it is wrong for the consumer to place a high valuation on these points.—Prof. R. Harcourt, O. A. College, Guelph.

CHURCHES MUST SAVE COAL

NEW YORK, Sept. 14.—An appeal to churches to use small auditoriums during the winter for the purpose of saving coal, was sent out in a circular letter from the New York state fuel administration. It was suggested that two-thirds of the normal coal supply mgiht be ordered.

"Fresh as new, my dear—
and I washed it myself"

"It's my old georgette—another tussle with the washer-woman and I believe it would have fallen to pieces. So, of course, as we must all make the old things do and save our money for Victory Bonds, I thought I'd wash it, myself, with Sunlight. Or rather—let Sunlight wash it, for there's no need of any rubbing—just soaping and rinsing. And see—isn't it just lovely? Fresh as new, isn't it?—I'm delighted."

Sunlight Soap

The purity of Sunlight is such that it will not fade or discolor anything washable—it contains absolutely no fillers or adulterants—it is the most economical soap your money can buy. It's all soap.

No Cast Iron Rule for New Prayer Book

TORONTO, Sept. 17.—A joint session of the Houses of the General Synod of the Church of England in Canada for the consideratin of the report of the committee appointed to revise the Common Prayer Book was held yesterday.

The Bishop of Huron, in presenting the committee's report, said that as a result of his six years' work with the revision committee he had come to the conclusion that the prayer book needed revision, so as to make it adaptable to the church in Canada. He did not suggest that any cast-iron rule should not be laid down, but it was urged that whatever action the Synod took should be final. The changes suggested by the committee fulfilled, he believed, the mission with which the committee were charged in 1911.

When the Lower House assembled at 19 o'clock a discussion took place at the instance of Chancellor Worrell, who moved that the constitution be amended to provide for an increased representation by the Dioceses of Toronto, Huron, and Montreal. Much opposition was raised to the motion, led by Canon Rix, of Caledonia, who urged that the increased representation as sugested would give more power to the larger dioceses than they were entitled to.

Eventually, on the motion of Chancellor Davidson, the question was referred to the Executive Council for consideration and report.

At noon the joint houses received a deputation from the Presbyterian Church in Canada, headed by the Rev. John Neil, who in extending greetings from the Church, said they appreciated very much the great work which the Anglican Church had done by sending so many men to fight their country's battles. During his visit to France, he said, he had met many chaplains of the English Church, and he had brought back with him a magnificent idea of the great work they were doing among the men at the front.

Rev. Dr. Sommerville and Dr. H. Cassells also extended greetings, and replies were made by the Bishop of Kootenay for the House of Bishops and by the Rev. Dr. Patterson Smyth, of Montreal.

Peace Kite Falls Flat At Ottawa

OTTAWA, Sept. 17.—Germany's latest offensive through her agents in Vienna is not seriously regarded in Government circles here. From an official source came the intimation that so far as the Dominion was concerned, the Teutonic peace feeler would find absolutely no response.

Canada's attitude, it is pointed out, was enunciated by the Prime Minister upon his return from the old country, and was in brief that there could be no peace with an unregenerate Germany.

As the terms of the Austrian note make no confession of wrong against Belgium and make no mention of restoration, Canada, it is stated could not become a party to any negotiations upon such a basis without departing from the principle laid down by the Prime Minister.

In official channels here, the note from Vienna is accepted as confirming information previously received to the effect that conditions in the dual monarchy are becoming intolerable, and that Austrian statesmen are taking this last chance of saving their empire from complete dissolution.

BOXING COMPULSORY IN FRISCO SCHOOLS IS NEW PROPOSAL

SAN FRANCISCO, Sept. 17—Boxing will be a part and parcel of the curriculum of the San Francisco high school if President George E. Gallaghere of the Board of Education and Superintendent Roncovieri have their way. A resolution is ready for the Board to have the physical instructors teach boxing.

And there's not likely to be any opposition.

"Put me down as in favor," said Superintendent Roncovieri. "I feel that boxing ought to be taught in every high school, and perhaps we can start lower down. I hope they put that through in a hurry."

High school teachers already interviewed have expressed themselves in favor of the move, and it is likely steps will be taken at once.

To do your duty during these trying times your health should be your first consideration. These two women tell how they found health.

Hellam, Pa.—"I took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound for female troubles and a displacement. I felt all rundown and was very weak. I had been treated by a physician without results, so decided to give Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound a trial, and felt better right away. I am keeping house since last April and doing all my housework, where before I was unable to do any work. Lydia E. # A Government Pen

By AGNES L. PRATT

(Copyright, 1918, by the McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)

From my position on a desk by the window I can look out over the greensward, just at present with beds of flaunting tulips and its great fountain, whose jeweled drops scintillate in the sunny air.

The grass is like a square of emerald velvet, bordered along its sides with gray, chiseled granite; and the lacquered iron seats scattered here and there, look inviting.

I, myself, am old and battered, having been busy for months recording the emotions of the human souls that stream in at the revolving doors yonder, and out again, at the one near me. I can see for myself that the building wherein I have an abiding place is magnificent. I behold the massive front of red brick, with costly trimmings of brown stone. Two immense electric lanterns throw floods of light, nightly, through the lace-like iron filagree that protects them, on the masses of humanity that beat with rythmic tread the wide sidewalk beneath the window.

In my short life, for the existence of a pen in the service of this great government must of necessity be abbreviated by the democratic handling it receives, I have recorded more than one pitiful life story.

It is not long ago the noble elms surrounding the green were bare and gaunt against a grayer sky, that a young men with hopeful eyes leaned over the desk where I was lying, idle for a wonder, and reaching out, grasped me tightly. As I flew, with impatient strokes over the white sheet, I found that I was writing thus:

"Dear Mabelle—I may write—may I not?—what I cannot say, for when I am with you my lips are ever silent. I followed you to the city, dear, I sought and found work—because—because—I wanted to be near you. And now I find that I want to be near you always, so much so that I am willing to brave your disapproval, which I have often seen growing in your clear, brown eyes—and ask you to marry me, dear—now, tomorrow—next week—any time, only that you will have it some time.

"I am in an awful hurry, or I would say more. But I have an appointment at the quarry and all this means money—and perhaps you—to me. I have stopped here, in the post office, to pen these few lines, with a horribly poor pen, by the way.

"Please answer at once, and say yes—to—Jack."

I could forgive him the ill-mannered reflection on my character, when I felt the pace his heart was going communicate itself to me through his fingers.

I hoped she would say yes as I rolled complacently over on my side, when he laid me down, and amused myself watching the gardener raking here and there among the stubbly brown grass that clothed the green.

Dipped thousands of times in ink, as I was daily, the foregoing episode had nearly faded from my mind, when presently it was abruptly recalled. A young girl in a jaunty gray jacket, with an aureole of violets shading her sunny brown hair, came hastily to the desk, picked me up, looked at me with disapproving eyes, laid me down, tried another pen, and then returned to her old lover, meaning myself. A straggling sunbeam kissed her shining eyes till they glinted an old-fashioned goldstone and lovingly caressed, with ruddy fingers, the chestnutty ringlets of hair beneath the violet aureole.

And, as I reposed snugly in the embrace of her gloveless fingers, she moved me rapidly over the paper and inscribed, in graceful characters, an application for a money order.

It was a prosaic culmination of my ardent and romantic desires, but I had only to wait a few moments when something followed. Without hesitation, though each stroke of my rusted tip was cutting through two quivering hearts, she indited the following:

"Dear Jack—I know what you will say when you read this—you will say I am hard-hearted, that I do not care—that I ought to leave all and cling to you, if I love you—but I cannot do what you wish me to. And Jack, dear, I do love you, too. But they, my parents, need me—need my help. I have left them up there, in the country home, while I go battling with the cruel world, so that I may be of use to them, who did for me as long as they were able. You know the whole pitiful story, Jack.

"A breath just now from the newly springing grass on the green brought it back to me, and I have half-closed my eyes so the tears should not fall on my letter. Father blind, mother his only attendant, and feeble herself, with only my arm—Jack, my woman's arm—between them and want. You would say, if you were here and I was talking now instead of writing this, that your arm was stronger than mine and you could do for them and me. But think, there would be four of us then, and could you do for four—and you a young man, with such prospects as you now have? Could you weight yourself with your own burdens and mine, too? No, it can never be.

"Better for both of us that we should put such thoughts far away from our hearts. This is a cruel old world, Jack, and diamonds, not hearts, are trumps. I must not marry while they live, unless—Jack, it is cruel, but I must sell myself for gold if I marry at all."

I was glad when she finished abruptly and laid me down where I could watch the streets pouring their seething masses of human beings, God knows where—I do not. Back and forth ebbs this ceaseless tide, but from what diversified sources it has come, and to what it is going, I know not.

In a few days he came in again, and I wrote for him a few words, a pitifully brief message:

"I am going to the Philippines. You have made it impossible that I should live here, and I care not whether I live elsewhere or not. A worthless life is best offered up on the altar of my country's service, and mine will be only another name to add to the list of poor devils already killed by pestilence or the bullet of a Tagalo."

There was nothing else, only his name. It was quite time that I should be replaced with a new pen. I had outlived my usefulness—but I continued to be overlooked and many a day and night have I lain there quietly on the desk by the window and thought of that brave fellow, off there, fighting where no glory could ever be his, crawling through tropical undergrowth and searching out the treacherous foe—to be finally wasted and killed by insidious disease—denied even the honor, doubtful, perhaps, of dying by the hand of the enemy.

It was only the other day. I know the brilliant bloom had just burst from the beds in front of my window, and great crystal drops from the fountain were blown by the madcap breezes of the spring when my soldier came in and stood near me. He had returned, and there was a happy light in his eye, a flush beneath the rich bronze tinting of his cheek. Evidently his enlistment and service had done him no harm.

He gave one quick glance across the rainbow brightness that crossed and recrossed the velvet greenness of the turf outside, grasping me, his old friend, he wrote hastily:

"Dear Mabelle—I have come home for good. My time is up, and I have great news for you, for while out there, fighting natives and sickness, and dreaming of you—my fortune here was being made. Something I had done in the old life—journalism—it seems attracted the attention of the great ones in power, where formerly I was almost an unknown quantity. So that I returned to find the struggle ended and a sure place waiting for me, at a salary that seems marvelous, almost. At least it will suffice for all of us, and your dear ones shall never know want while I live. I have written this to your old address and am not quite sure where I shall find you. A line will bring me to your side; and dear—let it be soon, please."

My heart sang with his for joy and I was glad that it was spring, glad the grass was soft and green, the flowers bright and the birds singing. For somewhere, up in the branches of the great elms, some birds were riotously chanting a greeting to all things new and beautiful.

The next day—yes, it was only the next day—she came again, but how changed! More beautiful, if anything, but something subtle had departed from her personality and had been replaced by another something that I could not define, but only feel. And she, too, lifted me and presently she wrote:

"Dear Jack—Dearer now, because impossible by my own wickedness. Your letter came to me last night, after following me about all day. I am glad you have come back and that you were not killed out there, as I was afraid you would be. I have watched the papers and my heart has ached; but Jack, dearest Jack, I have gone and spoiled all the beautiful happiness that life had in store for me—on the eve of its appearance. Last month I married—married for the gold I have needed so much—and for them—a man I did not love, a man who is old enough to be my father—and who—is not like you, Jack. And in less than two weeks, only two weeks ago—and it seems a lifetime to me—they were both gone—gone, Jack, to where they could never want what I had sold my soul and your love for. Mother went suddenly. Father just failed and then—he was gone. 'They held out their hands to me,' he said to me, one day—and he went to them. I have forged my chains, beautiful fetters they are, of solid gold and jewelled—but they burn into my flesh like fire, and they bind till, from very agony, I must groan. Pity me, Jack. If you are unhappy what must I be? Oh, wait for me—wait for me—Jack, perhaps—he is older than I—and perhaps some time—Forgive me, Jack, and forget me.—Mabelle."

I turned and looked out across the velvet green. Through its cool tree-shaded walls the throngs still surged, each heart knowing its own burden, carrying it silently and cursing or praying as was its nature.

The fountain sparkled in the sunlight, the flowers held their cups to catch its spray, great trees bent their heads as the fleecy clouds rolled above them; and only the song of the birds was wholly happy.

Her Specific Instructions.

The sex that Robert W. Chambers made famous is the same that delivers telephone messages to spouses something like: "A man called you up today—I think his name was Smith or Jones; no, it wasn't them—something like that, anyway; no, he didn't leave any message; he said you were to call him up at—now when did he say? Well, I forgot just when, but he left his number; wait a minute, I put it down on a piece of paper—just wait till I get it; Oh, dear, I remember I mislaid it somewhere now; well, anyway, he said you were to call him up."—Chicago Evening Post.

A Newspaper Clipping

By SUSAN CLAGETT

(Copyright, 1918, by the McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)

Hugh McIntosh sorted his letters rapidly, pausing for an instant to look at the superscription upon a small, square envelope, the handwriting of which he did not recognize. This he laid aside for the moment for more pressing business and then forgot it.

This was strange, for it was an insistent thing, lying as it did alone upon the desk in front of him. Once his eyes fell upon it and he stretched out his hand to take it up but was interrupted and not until he left the office, hours later, was he conscious that the letter was still unread.

He picked it up and slipped it into his pocket, thinking to read it at his leisure and again it was forgotten. Yet he was neither a careless nor forgetful man, but at this time he was absorbed by an important case that claimed all his energy and determination to carry it to a successful issue. Beside this, he believed it to be an invitation which he had no time to accept.

Two months later as he was passing the White House he collided with a woman in white who had suddenly stopped in his path to read the suffrage banner held aloft by a very tired-looking girl. With an apology he was about to pass on, when he caught a side view of the face under the broad-brimmed hat. "You," he said, stopping short and holding out his hand. "I thought you were in California."

"I was until two months ago," Mary Bowie answered, "and it is good to be back, even if my throat does contract with an ache every time a uniform passes me. War seemed farther away out there, but here, where almost every other man you meet is in khaki, it is very near."

"Yes," he said, looking at her with appreciative eyes, "living in Washington we are in the midst of things and the war is brought very close. But suppose we forget it for a time. Come and take lunch with me. I know a place where they give you wonderful rolls and a delicious salad. That is, of course, unless you prefer a hotel."

"My tastes are still simple," she replied with a laugh. "Rolls and salad sound good to a hungry woman."

"It is rather a shabby little place," he answered, almost in apology.

"What matter? Washington is a city of extremes. Two blocks up the avenue from the White House is shabbiness indeed. Walk down Seventeenth street until you reach the Corcoran Art gallery. What do you pass? Gentility, nothing more until you come to the wonderful group of buildings further on. That is the one thing about Washington—its strong contrasts."

"I did not bring you to lunch to talk about contrasts and extremes. I want to hear about yourself. Why didn't you let me know you were in town?"

"Don't you read the daily papers?" she asked carelessly. "I believe I was announced even to the details of my traveling dress, which was an old one, by the way, and did not deserve notoriety."

"I never read the society news and frivolity does not sit well upon you, my dear young lady. What reason did you have for not sending me your card?"

"Are you sure I did not?"

"Quite sure. It would have reached me if you had sent it."

"I forgot your address and did not think to look in the directory. You can give it to me now, if you will."

He looked at her steadily. "Are you quite sure that was the reason?"

"Why not? It is the best I can think of on the spur of the moment," she returned lightly.

"Why should there be a reason?" he asked again.

"Why do you always look for one?" she countered back. "Think of it as a woman's whim."

"Neither whims nor frivolity becomes you," he replied shortly, "but I will give you my card." He drew a flat case from his pocket and, not finding what he wanted, laid several papers upon the table. Uppermost on the pile was the unopened letter received two months before.

Mary Bowie's eyes widened, then became expressionless as she glanced from it to her companion, still searching for his elusive card. As he raised his eyes they, also, were caught and held by the square envelope.

"I forgot it," he said simply. "It reached me when I was absorbed in an important case. Of course it was inexcusable. I meant to read it when I had leisure, but whenever I started to open it I was interrupted. If you will pardon me I will look over it now."

"Let it wait. An hour or so will now make little difference to your correspondent."

"I have never corresponded with a woman in my life, and I doubt if this is anything more important than an invitation."

She placed a hand over the letter, still lying on the table. "Just a little longer," she said gayly. "There is no telling what news it may contain and you may wish you had read it alone."

He shook his head as he slit the envelope. "I will not have it longer upon my conscience."

As he opened the sheet he found it blank. Curiously he further unfolded it and a newspaper clipping dropped upon the table. It fell right side up and held his gaze. Over and over he read the printed words, then raised his eyes to the girl's face.

"You were right. It does contain news." He touched the envelope. "I have never seen your handwriting. Did you direct this?"

For answer she took a pencil and card from her bag and wrote his name upon it.

He placed it beside the envelope and studied the two. His glance again fell upon the printed slip which, after a moment's hesitation, he read aloud:

"Mr. and Mrs. Robert Bowie announce the engagement of their daughter, Mary, to Mr. William Berkeley. The wedding will take place in the early fall."

For a time he looked absently at the clipping, then his eyes sought and held hers.

"Not if I can prevent it," he said at last. "Do you think I will let you go out of my life without protest?"

"I have never been in your life." The reply came a trifle breathlessly.

"You have probably not realized it any more than I, but this," touching the slip of paper, "makes it very plain to me. The trouble has been I have never had time for play, but in the back of my mind has always been the certainty that you and I would live out our lives together. There has been no time for play nor for that delightful experience, courtship, and courtship is what a girl wants, is it not?"

"Surely it is her right." The reply held a touch of asperity.

"I suppose so and now I have no time for it. This letter came two months ago. It is now October, I will have to take you whether you will, or no. The courtship can come afterward." He looked at his watch. "There is just time to reach the city hall before it closes. Will you come with me and from there to some clergyman? I am afraid to let you out of my sight, Mary."

"And Mr. Berkely? I gave him my promise."

"This is a question between you and me. I love you. I hope you care enough for me to marry me. Some promises should be broken before they break one's life. And, Mary, we can be very happy together. If I had time you would find it out before, but I am pressed for time and the knowledge must come later. Will you come?"

She had risen and was fumbling rather aimlessly with her glove button.

"I think I had better tell you something first," she replied a little unsteadily. "I found I did not care for Mr. Berkely and at the eleventh hour broke my engagement. I discovered before it was too late that I cared for another man."

"And that man?"

"He was very stupid." She looked at him squarely now. "I had to find some way to make him know his own mind for I was sure he cared for me, but for many years he had taken me so as a matter of course that he did not realize it. You asked me if I directed that envelope. I did not, but I know who did. It was addressed to you at my request, and I think, Hugh, as you are willing, we will forget there is such a thing as a big wedding. I would rather go quietly with you to St. Mark's parsonage."

CONDUCTED BURIALS IN STATE

Large Amounts of Money Spent by Colonists of Virginia in Exercises Over Their Dead.

In colonial Virginia funerals were social as well as solemn occasions, as is shown by Mrs. Mary N. Stanard in her interesting review of the seventeenth-century customs of Virginians. When death entered the planter's home messengers were sent on horseback overland, or by sail or rowboat up and down the rivers to notify friends and relatives, while in the kitchen the big pot was put into the little one; for not only did the colonists bring with them the English custom of the funeral feast, but much of the company that would be ere long at the door would arrive hungry after a journey of many miles and would remain several days, consuming a great quantity of food and drink. The funeral expenses of John Smalcombe, who died in 1645, included a steer about four years old and a barrel of strong beer, which together cost nine hundred and sixty pounds of tobacco—nearly four times as much as the coffin, which cost two hundred and fifty pounds. Powder "spent at this funeral" cost twenty-four pounds of tobacco.

Snow Worms.

In Germany the term "snow worm" is applied to the larva of a beetle often found in the snow. Many species of insect are commonly found on glaciers. The most abundant of these are the springtails, which hop like miniature fleas or wriggle deftly into the cavities of the snow, but are so minute that the passerby needs to look for them in order to see them. Snow-loving springtails are not confined to glaciers; they occur in great numbers on the surface of melting snow on bright, sunny spring days through the northern United States.

Varied Interests.

Yes, by all means go in for a change of work, and know the vigor, enthusiasm of fitness that will come to you as a result. It is foolish, almost suicidal, to keep everlastingly pegging away at the same thing. Fresh thoughts always come with fresh tasks, and everyone of us should, if we have our own best interests at heart turn our spare hours over to some work that is absolutely new and strange to us.

SMELTING IN EXCELSIS

Canada's Only Refining Centre

The Great Smelter at Trail, B.C.

ALTHOUGH, as is well known, a world-wide attention was first directed to British Columbia by reason of the discoveries in the late "fifties" and early "sixties" of alluvial gold in the Fraser river, and in the streams of the Cariboo district—and for many years a rich harvest was reaped from these sources—mining as an important basic industry of the Province—and it is now by far the most important industry in British Columbia—was not fairly launched until nearly forty-five years later; and the building of the Trail smelter in 1896 by that brilliant young American financier and copper king, F. Auguste Heinze, not only made Rossland, whose mines have since produced gold, silver and copper to the value of $70,000,000 in round figures, but had the effect of enormously stimulating mineral development and the investment of capital in mining in other sections of the province. But Heinze was essentially a business man, and in establishing his smeltery was certainly not actuated by philanthropic or eleemosynary motives. It was no part of his plan to operate the smelter for the profit of anyone but himself. Hence although he received a land grant from the Provincial Government as a consideration for the construction of the smelter and of a narrow-guage railway to afford connection between the works at Trail and the mines at Rossland, and also obtained an assurance from the Dominion Government of a bonus of a dollar on each ton of ore treated, he also took care that the rate imposed on the treatment of customs ores should be a tolerably stiff one. In fact ere long, as the development of the mines progressed and it became necessary to market ore of a lower grade average, the margin of profit left to the miners after paying treatment charges became considerably restricted; and consequently the satisfaction was very general when in 1898 the reduction works and railway were acquired by the Canadian Pacific Railway, and the rates were at once reduced very materially. It is fair, however, to state that the new owners were in a much better position to undertake to smelt at a lower cost owing to the great cheapening of fuel following the development of the Crowsnest coalfield. In 1906, the smelter became the property of the Consolidated Mining and Smelting Co., of Canada, which also acquired at that time the War Eagle—Centre Star group of mines at Rossland, the St. Eugene lead mine at Moyie and other properties, (which since have been further augmented) and the capacity of the plant was greatly increased, so that the undertaking now ranks as one of the largest and most important of its kind in the British Empire. This is attested by the fact that the smelter has treated to date 5,179,307 tons of ore having a gross value of $94,315,754 and representing 1,778,921 oz. gold, 27,500,350 oz. silver, 458,326,524 lb. lead, 75,047,410 lb. copper, and 23,0?6,996 lb. zinc.

The site of the smelter was admirably selected having regard to engineering and commercial considerations and requirements on an elevated terrace of gravelly soil overlooking the Columbia river; and only a few miles distant are the magnificent Falls of Bonnington, from which the plant derives its power. Moreover, ore can be shipped for treatment to this centre most readily and advantageously from the various localities in both West and East Kootenay, and indeed from much farther afield. In consequence the Trail smelter has become almost a national if not an international institution, since in recent years it has treated in addition to British Columbia lead, zinc and copper ores, ores from the Yukon, Manitoba, and Ontario, from the United States and from China. From quite small beginnings the works have been expanded until they now cover many acres of ground, and when working at full capacity give employment to 1,000 men, a large proportion of whom are necessarily skilled. In this article it is not proposed to go into technical details, but it may be stated briefly that the main smelting plant consists of from copper blast-furnaces, four lead blast-furnaces, and two 12-ft basic lined converters, the product of which is refined locally, employing electrolytic methods. This latter, perhaps, is the most interesting part of the story; and as a national achievement reflects the greatest possible credit on those responsible for its successful establishment. Before the war the only useful metal in refined form produced in Canada was lead, which was exclusively undertaken at Trail; but all our copper and our zinc, both being by the way essential metals in the manufacture of munitions we shipped out of the country as matte or in other unfinished state, to be refined, and then to satisfy our own requirements for these metals in finished or unmanufactured form we repurchased at, of course, a vastly enhanced price representing the profits of manufacture in a foreign country plus the import duty. All of which was the reverse of good business. But the war, which has had so stimulative an effect on the national energies in general, influenced action beneficially in this direction also; and upon the urging of the Munition Board those in charge of the Trail Smelter set to work with a will, and succeeded after much experimentation in producing refined zinc electrolytically on a commercial scale. The plant now in operation has a capacity of from 60 to 70 tons of spelter daily, and last year produced 10,000 tons of zinc, having a value of $3,000,000, which, as is stated in an official report, marks "an epoch in the metallurgical history of Canada." So also with the refining of copper, which before the war was on many sides pronounced to be an undertaking that could not economically be conducted in Canada, but which during the past two years has been most successfully carried on at Trail, the two copper converters installed in 1916 enabling the matte from the copper furnaces that previously had been shipped away for further treatment, to be converted into blister-copper, which in turn is refined electrolytecally in a plane which has an initial capacity of 10 tons daily, but which since has been enlarged to handle twice that amount. Other products of the smelter are copper sulphate, lead pipe, shrapnel, wire, gold, silver, sulphuric acid, and hydrofluosilicic acid. In short, it is now as complete a metallurgical works as there is on the continent and as such has played a most important and useful role in furnishing the metals needed for munition making in Canada, thus contributing materially to the effectiveness of the Dominion's war efforts. Nor does this complete its record for patriotic achievement. Since its proudest boast is that it has an honor roll on which is inscribed the names of something like three hundred of its employees, who enlisted voluntarily for overseas service early in the war. Among these are several members of the engineering staff, all of whom have won distinction for conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty in the battlefields of France and Flanders.—N. L.

CANADIANS GET MEDALS AT HE FRONT

With the Canadian Forces in France, Sept. 17—Sunday a brilliant day, the corps commander presented medals to a brigade which distinguished itself in the Amiens fighting by the capture of Foquescourt and cleaned up an unusually strong nest of machine guns and trenches in that district. About fifty officers and men received medals or crosses.

The ceremony took place in the recent battlefield, amid ruined villags, barbed wire and trenches, to the music of four battalion bands.

ENGINEER SCOTT SAVES HIS TRAIN

C. N. R. From Winnipeg Was Derailed Near Sudbury Monday Morning

TORONTO, Sept. 17.—Passengers arriving on the C. N. R. train from Parry Sound last night told of the derailment of the C.N.R. train from Winnipeg this side of Sudbury at 8.30 o'clock yesterday morning.

Half a dozen coaches left the track, and passengers say but for the work of the engineer, James Scott, who quickly threw on the brakes, the whole train would have gone down the forty-foot embankment. As it was, Conductor Morris was the only one to be hurt and his injuries were only slight.

The passengers were taken back to Sudbury and took the C. P. R. to Parry Sound, from which place they came on to Toronto.

In And About The City

WON AT PICTON

At Picton yesterday the Ontario baseball team of this city defeated the Picton team by a score of 5 to 4. It was an excellent exhibition of baseball, both teams playing well.

WON HIS COMMISSION

Gunner Kenneth Ham, son of Mr. and Mrs. J. S. Ham of Napanee, has been granted a commission on the field. He went overseas with Trinity College Corps in 1916. His parents received a cable this week announcing his arrival in London, where he will take the prpescribed five months' course.

CELEBRATED 95TH BIRTHDAY

Mr. Jason Timlick, sr., of Brockville, on Sunday, 8th inst., celebrated the 95th anniversary of his birth. Mr. Timlock, who resides with his son, Mr. Jason Timlick, King street west, is still in possession of good health. He is Brockville's oldest citizen and practically the whole of his long and useful life has been spent in Brockville or its immediate vicinity. He takes daily interest in the world affairs and is living in hopes to see the day that the allies will declare a victorious peace.

ENJOYS THE GAME

Flight Lieut. Harry Rath of Tweed, is having some real exciting experience in Hun chasing at the front and characteristic of his manner when in trainng in this country he evidently enjoys the game. On August 9th he was chasing a Hun machine when of a sudden two other Hun planes made for him and naturally there were some doings. He succeeded in bringing down one of the three and then did some strategical movements far back of the line which he reached in safety but not without his plane being perforated with many bullets. On August 14th he got another Hun and on the 17th still another which goes to show that "Harry" is doing his share in maintaining the good name of Canada in this conflict. He reports feeling fine and speaks highly of the treatment of the troops.

WRECK AT KINGSTON.

Two employees were injured and two cars wrecked in an accident on the Grand Trunk Railway at Kingston Junction. A baggage car with the scenery of "A Daughter of the Sun" company was being attached to train No. 19, westbound, but the brakeman failed to make a good connection, with the result that the coach crashed into the baggage car. J. Cain, Toronto, superintendent of mail service, was thrown to the floor of the car and injured about the hips and badly bruised. A Montreal mail clerk suffered from shock and bruises. It required two hours to clear the track.

PLAY UP! PAY UP!

During the intermission between the first and second acts of "The Garden of Allah" last evening at Griffin's Theatre, Mr. F. E. O'Flynn gave a brief talk along patriotic lines, drawing attention to the necessity for keeping war effort up to the high water mark and permitting no slackening of interest in the welfare of our soldier boys overseas. Mr. O'Flynn asked for a generous response to the request for funds for the Knights of Columbus soldiers' comfort huts in the war zone and also pointed out various departments of war effort which should always be kept in mind, including the Red Cross penny bags, and Christmas parcels for soldiers. Incidentally he paid a deserved tribute to the Canadian post office service stating that since the war began he had been sending parcels weekly to soldiers in the war zone and every parcel had reached its destination in good time and in good condition. The present call is for support for those rest and refreshment huts so appreciated by the soldiers, and the public can not be too generous in this regard. Mr. O'Flynn read a letter recently received by him from a Belleville soldier on the firing line which well illustrated the magnificent spirit of Canada's fighting men, so worthy of the pride of the folks at home. He also read a poem aptly describing the warm welcome of a parcel of comforts and eats from home in the trenches and the sudden and great popularity of the recipient.

THE FARMERETTES

Whether from city or country find themselves living under an unusual train. The unusual work necessitates the use of different muscles and his development demands a good supply of pure, rich blood.

Because it goes directly to the formation of new blood, Dr. Chase's Nerve Food is of the greatest assistance in building up new cells and tissue and strengthening the muscles.

APPOINTED POLICE MAGISTRATE

At Brockville on Friday morning Mr. J. A. Albert Page was officially notified that an order-in-council has been passed by the Ontario Government appointing him to the position of police magistrate. He has been for some time discharging the duties of deputy police magistrate. His promotion was expected and is well received by the public.

PREPARING FOR THE SOLDIERS

Ten members of the Royal Canadian Engineers stationed at Brockville, arrived in this city last evening in command of Capt. Palmer. To-day they are busily engaged in preparing the armouries for the soldiers who will arrive here from Kingston the latter part of the week. The old school buildings on Catherine and Pinnacle streets will also be put in condition to be used for military stores.

NEAR THE $2,000 MARK

Belleville's contribution to the fund to protect the widows and orphans of Canada's sailors from want now bides fair to cross the desired two thousand dollar mark (minus a civic grant). Another substantial donation has been received in a check for fifty dollars from Mr. H. W. Ackerman, bringing that gentleman's total contribution to the Sailors Fund to one hundred dollars. Subscribers who have not sent in their contributions as yet should hand them in at once to Mr. Alexander Ray the local representative of the Ontario Navy League, as it is desirable that the fund be closed as soon as possible.

SLEEPS IN FLANDERS FIELD

Within the past few days a number of homes in this city have been saddened by messages from the Director of Records at Ottawa, conveying the intelligence that loved ones had made the supreme sacrifice, somewhere in France. Yesterday afternoon Mrs. Annie Buck, residing at 18 Everett street, was in receipt of one of these sad messages, notifying her that her son, Private Leroy Buck, was killed in action on September 3rd. Roy, as he was familiarly called, was a young man, scarcely 20 years of age. Some time before he enlisted with the 155th Battalion in this city, he endeavored to join a unit for overseas service, but was rejected owing to his youth. He became a member of the bugle band of the 155th Battalion, and went overseas with the battalion. He had been in France for some time and had been mentioned for bravery displayed. Pte. Buck was a young man of fine character and manly ways, and beloved by all who knew him. His demise will be sincerely regretted by many friends. He attended Queen Mary's School and was identified with the Baptist church. An elder brother, Pte. Howard Buck, is in France.

NEED A LESSON

During the presentation of "The Garden of Allah" at Griffin's Theatre last evening, some of the best scenes in the play were marred by the boisterous behaviour of several young men in the gallery who tried to be "smart" with audible comment of a coarse nature at times when complete silence was necessary to properly appreciate the excellence of the acting and the true beauty of the story. Three young men are said to have been the principal offenders, and the presence of a policeman in the gallery at future performances and an example made of disturbers would have a salutary effect and be appreciated by patrons as well as the members of the company appearing. It can not be expected that any theatrical production will appeal to all patrons alike, but those not satisfied have the privilege of retiring quietly and allowing the rest to enjoy the entertainment undisturbed.

MARK OF APPRECIATION.

On the evening of Tuesday, 17th inst., the ladies of the Church Help Society of John Street Presbyterian Church called at the home of Mrs. E. V. Brown, Pine Street, and surprised that lady by presenting her with a gold wrist watch. Miss Davis, president of the society, in a brief address voiced their regret at losing such an active member, and the pleasure it afforded them to make this recognition of their regard. The presentation was made by Mrs. W. S. Cook. Mrs. Brown thanked the society for their handsome gift and assured the ladies that it had always afforded her great pleasure to assist them in their various undertakings. Mrs. Brown leaves next week for Sawyerville, Que., where her husband has been appointed manager of the agency of the Bank of Montreal.

CANADIAN ELECTED.

At the session of the Sovereign Grand Lodge, I.O.O.F. now in progress at St. Louis, Missouri, Mr. Joseph Oliver, Past Grand Master of the Grand Lodge I.O.O.F. in Ontario, was elected Deputy Grand Sire on the first ballot. Mr. R. H. Ketcheson received a telegram last evening from Mr. L. B. Cooper, P.G.M., apprizing him of the election of Mr. Oliver to this important office. Mr. Cooper is one of the delegates appointed by the Grand Lodge of Ontario, I.O.O.F., to attend the Sovereign Grand Lodge at St. Louis.

WANTED A JOY RIDE

Police Officer Ellis last night caught two lads who were endeavoring to take a Ford car for a joy ride. The car was standing in front of the Griffin Opera House and the lads got into the auto and was about to turn it around when the officer caught them. One of the boys had in his possession a key which unlocked the machine. This morning the two lads appeared before the magistrate and were allowed to go after His Worship had given them a reprimand and a warning of what would befall them were they caught repeating such an act.

ALLOWED HIS LIBERTY

On Friday last two young men who gave their names as Arthur Chisholm and Harry Hayson and Nova Scotia as their homes, were arrested here on a charge of vagrancy. They were caught in the east end of the G. T. R. yards. This morning Chisholm was brought up before Magistrate Masson and allowed his liberty as letters of recommendation, etc., had been received from persons with whom he had been employed. He left the city at noon for Montreal. Hayson's case will be considered on Friday.

STR. OSSIFRAGE STRUCK SHOAL

Wrecking tugs pulling on the steamer Ossifrage, which struck on a shoal at Sparrowhawk Point, in the St. Lawrence river near Brockville, came near overturning the vessel. The boat was finally extricated, but the tugs had much difficulty in turning her around in the swift water. The Ossifrage was going down the river in charge of a pilot when she struck bottom. The craft is a small passenger steamer, and formerly ran between Detroit and Chatham. She is owned by the Chatham Navigation Company. The Donnelly Wrecking Company crew, on its way to Kingston from the scene of the Ossifrage, salvaged a scow which sank near Sister Island, opposite Brockville, last Friday.

Letters To The Editor

BOARDING OF CHEESE

To the Editor of The Intelligencer.

Dear Sir:—Kindly allow me through your widely circulating newspaper to refer to the serious conditions the Belleville Cheese Board has been placed wrongfully in, owing to about three-fourths of the cheese being taken by buyers without being put as they should be on the Cheese Board here. On Saturday only five hundred and thirty cheese were put on this board instead of about two thousand, with nine buyers to compete for them. The president of one factory which has boarded its cheese for the past seven or eight years says he did better by selling his cheese on the board than those selling off the board. Picton, Campbellford, Stirling and Madoc are boarding their cheese. An effort should be made to have all factories put their cheese on the Board regularly so as to reap the benefit by it.

On Saturday a resolution was passed to suspend any buyer for arranging to take cheese from the factories without it being put on the cheese board. If this resolution is put into effect without delay we may soon see good results. There will always be buyers for every box of cheese that the factories put on the Belleville Board no matter what may occur.

EXPORTER

Belleville, Ont., Sept. 18, 1918.

To the Editor of The Intelligencer:

Dear Sir:—

The theatre season is again with us and I am glad to know that we are to have some fine attractions this year.

But a word to the management. I hardly think it fair to accept peoples' money and alow the performance to be spoiled by crying of children and the running loose of small boys all around the front of the theatre.

People with babes in arms should leave same at home with the maid or stay home themselves and not be allowed to spoil everybodys' enjoyment after paying good money to be amused.

I think in fairness to the vast majority of theatre fans that on the night of the big shows babes in arms should be excluded and patrons should not be walked over by the small boy.

K. Of C. Subscriptions Still Coming in Strong

Nearly Half of Objective Reached—Kindly Feeling For Army Huts

The Campaign Committee for the K. of C. Army Hut Fund was able to report last night that over $2,000 having already been subscribed from the district for this most worthy cause. The actual canvass of the city began yesterday afternoon, and will continue to-day, tomorrow and Friday.$3,000 is still needed to attain the objective set. No doubt this objective will be reached, and it is hoped that it will be far surpassed.

The cause for which this money is given should appeal to every person with a spark of patriotism. The boys over there in France are suffering unheard of discomforts. We at home cannot even imagine the life that these boys are leading over there. No amount of sacrifice that we at home might make can compare with what they are doing for us, and yet there are people who speak of being bothered by subscription hunters, tag days, etc. If some of these people could be made realize what they are missing at home here, they would be very glad to meet every subscription hunter or tag day worker not only with a generous subscription, but with a word of cheer, which goes a long way.

The K. of C. Army Hut is going to supply some small degree of comfort for those boys out there that they would never know if it were not for these voluntary funds at home, and the women, who are doing this work and who occupy the home trenches.

It is the duty of every individual, man, woman or child, to assist in every way these workers, and no one should speak lightly of these workers, or should discourage another from giving as well as refusing to give for themselves, as they are breaking faith with those boys, who are giving their all for us. Therefore let the citizens of Belleville get together for the balance of this week, and by talk, by action and even by thought boost for the success of the K. of C. Army Hut Fund and put Belleville where it belongs, in the front rank of the generous towns and cities of Canada.

MOLASSES BOAT IN PORT

The Louisa and Islewide laden with 100,00 gallons of molasses for the Corby Company at Corbyville arrived in the harbor here this morning in tow of the tug S. O. Dixon.The tug and tank boats were seized at Kingston for salvage amounting to $50,000 by Francis King, K.C., acting for the Keystone Transportation Company On Sunday night the steamer Keyvive of the Keystone Line found the tug and barges drifting helplessly in a gale of wind off the Ducks, 20 miles west of here, and brought them to port. The engineer of the Dixon, named Watts, of Detroit, had been washed off the tug and drowned and there was no one else to man the engines. The boats were allowed to proceed to Belleville to discharge their cargoes of molasses and the owners will likely file bonds in court. Sheriff Dawson, of Kingston, accompanied the boats on the trip.

Grant Weir For Five Years

St. Lawrence River Power Co. Granted Application By Joint Commission

NEW YORK, Sept. 18—Permission has been granted by the International Joint Waterways Commission to the St. Lawrence River Power Company to put in a submerged weir in the South Sault Rapids of the St. Lawrence River, from the mouth of their power canal on the mainland, to Long Sault Island. Certain provisions were attached to the permission. The weir is to go in for five years, or till the end of the war, whichever is the latest date. It must then be removed. But the applicants can approach the commission a year before the period is up, and ask that it remain in.

Fortress of Metz Can be Reduced

LONDON, Sept. 19.—"Will the fortress of Metz meet the same fate as those of Namur and Liege?" This is the question which Major-General Maurice considers in his article in the Daily Chronicle, saying: "The armament of the fortress of Metz is not likely to be as vulnerable by howitzer fire as was that of the Belgian fortresses, and it is too much to expect that it will be silenced in the same way as were the guns of Namur. But permanent defences are not likely, when the attacker can bring against them as many heavy guns and howitzers as it can find positions for, and has all but an unlimited supply of shells, to prove more difficult to crack than elaborate field defences such as the Hindenburg line.

"If Foch decides ,in his own good time, to attack the defences of Metz there is no reason why the Allied troops, who have overcome the one, should not also overcome the other"

Editor Describes How He Shot Wife

NEW YORK, Sept. 19 — Mrs. Charles E. Chapin, wife of the city editor of the New York Evening World, was found dead with a bullet wound in her head in the bedroom of the Chapin apartment in the hotel Cumberland here last Monday.

Discovery of Mrs. Chapin's body followed receipt by Don Setiz, business manager of the Evening World, of a letter signed "Charles E. Chapin," in which the writer hinted at suicide and added:

"My wife has been such a good pal I cannot leave her alone in the world."

The police immediately began a seach for Mr. Chapin but up to a late hour Monday night he had not been found.

At the offices of the Evening World, it was said that Mr. Chapin has been in failing health for several years, and that for the past year he had been constantly under the care of a physician.

NEW YORK, Sept. 19—Charles E. Chapin, city editor of The New York Evening World, famous for the skill with which he directed his reporters in the solution of murder mysteries, yesterday in a police station told the story of how he killed his own wife. Chapin yesterday shot and killed her in their apartment in the Hotel Cumberland and surrendered himself to the police after failing to carry out plans to end his own life Smoking a cigar and continually pressing his hands on his head, he said, that he had been driven to the deed through desperation caused by the demands of his creditors.

Big Advance Made On Balkan Front

Bulletin, London, Sept. 18, (4.45 p. m.) Bulgarian resistance on the Macedonian front is weakening, and the allies troops have advanced an average of ten miles, according to the latest reports received from Salonika. Fifty guns have been captured. The Bulgarians fought well when the allied attack was launched, but their resistance has become less formidable as the allies have moved northward.

The support of organized labor is to be given to policemen and firemen in their maintenance of their right to form unions.

Endorse Laws Now in Force Against Social Diseases

TORONTO, Sept. 19—After a lengthy discussion, the General Synod of the Church of England in Canada rejecte a motion introduced by Archdeacon Howcroft of Edmonton, pronouncing against marriages between persons suffering from venereal diseases, and urging Provincial legislation prohibiting such persons from marrying until they had procured medical evidence of complete cure.

The Synod, however, passed a resolution moved by the Bishop of Huron endorsing legislation already enacted relating to the prevention of venereal diseases, and affirmed its belief that physical remedies or legislative enactments alone could not remove the evil.

There was a strong body of opinion in favor of the original motion, and some outspoken speeches were delivered by both clergy and laymen calling for definite action.

Rev. B. R. Waterman, of Ottawa, thought the Church was going too far in interfering with the private life of men and women. He, himself, had kept out of touch with social service work, because he believed it was asking the Legislature to do the work the Church should do.

EITHER STOP OR GO FORWARD

Chancellor Bury of Athabaska Landing said it was too late in the day for the Church to take the attitude that its work was purely and entirely spiritual. They had started on the road and they must either stop or go forward. What they wanted to do was to prevent men with these diseases perpetuating the blood curse in the generations that were to come. He said that innocent maidens were being betrothed to men who hid from the the fact that they were infected with disease.

The Bishop of Huron said he feared they were developing into a society for espionage in demanding health certificates from people about to be married. He thought the wisest course for the Synod was to pass the resolution above referred to.

PROBLEM OF DIVORCE

A resolution was passed instructing the Council for Social Service to watch all legislation relating to the question of divorce. A memorial from Montreal asking the Synod to reaffirm the Church's belief in the indissolubility of marriage, and to resist any attempt to facilitate divorce and re-marriage, and that a copy of such an affirmation be sent to the Mother Church of England. his was voted down.

Some discussion took place regarding Labor problems, a number of delegates contending that it was not the duty of the Church to interfere as between Capital and Labor. Many others thought the Church would come into closer touch with Labor by showing that it was interested in its problems.

The Synod finally decided to commend to the study of the clergy a series of proposals relating to social lowing declaration.

"To the toilers of America and to seeking to lift the crushing burdens of the poor and to reduce the hardships and uphold the dignity of Labor, this Council sends the greeting of human brotherhood and the pledge of sympathy and help in a cause which belongs to all who follow Christ."

Rev. W. G. Walton's appeal for aid in restocking the Ungava district with reindeer to relieve the food shortage in that country was referred to the Social Service Council.

Unanimous testimony in praise of the beneficial results of prohibition in Canada were given by the Bishops, clergy and laymen at the morning session of the Anglican General Synor, when the triennial report of the Council for Social Service was submitted by Canon Tucker. The Synod practically resolved itself into an old-fashioned testimony meeting. Bishops and even Archbishops rising and declaring themselvse as "converted men."

Late Telegraph Briefs

Sir Douglas Haig's report last night says that the British penetrated the enemy defences northwest of St. Quentin to a depth of three miles and captured more than six thousand prisoners. ## Would Expunge Damnatory Clause From Creed

TORONTO, Sept. 19—At the opening of yesterday afternoo's session of ing of yesterday afternoon's session of Caley of Toronto withdrew his motion given at the morning session deleting verses one, two, twenty-eight, twenty-nine, forty-one and forty-two from the Creed of St. Athanasius, commonly known as the "damnatory" clauses.

Mr. Lansing Lewis of Montreal then addressed the Synod, tendering to Dr. Caley and Rev. Paterson-Smyth the thanks of the laymen for their stand in the St. Athanasius creed. "Those of you who want to look forward to eternal fire are perfectly willing to do so—but I don't," said Mr. Lewis. "I won't lie to God, and please don't ask me to do so."

Rev. Dyson Hague, of Toronto, moved that the verses one, two, forty-one, and forty-two be deleted, and that the creed end with the Gloria Patri. Rev. Mr. Hague based his motion calling for the expurging of the "damnatory clauses," first, because so many members of the both clergy and laity could not conscientiously recite them, and secondly, because so many eminent scholars had declared them to be really no part of the creed. Were these verses expurged the great glorious truths of the Trinity contained in the creed could then be sung by all without any qualms of conscience. "Jesus Christ never said that those who do evil would go into eternal fire," said Rev. Mr. Hague.

Canon Daw, of Hamilton, rose to contradict Rev. Mr. Dyson Hague, and asked him whether Jesus Christ didn't say "into damnation."

Rev. Hague: "Into condemnation."

Canon Daw: "I don't care about the words 'damned or condemned,' they are nearly the same."

Rev Mr. Hague: "Me did not say fire."

Archbishop Mathieson, asked for his ruling, declared that no clauses could be expurged from the Athanasian creed.

Rev. Dyson Hague then withdrew his motion.

3 Tanks in Raid, First of Its Kind Since War Began

With the American Army in Lorraine, Sept. 18—Three tanks manned by American crews, performed a daring patrol raid on the Hindenburg line yesterday. This is the first time in the war that a small number of tanks have taken part in a daylight raid.

During the late afternoon a patrol of a few men, led by Lt. Harold L. Allen, New York City, was proceeding cautiously along the road running from Woel to St. Benoi (north-east of Vigneulles.) They were within the area of German outpost posi-wood.

Suddenly they heard a crashing noise among the trees and hid themselves until they saw three small tanks coming through the underbrush. Allen distinguished them as allied tanks and showed himself. An American lieutenant peered out, though keeping the gun levelled on Allen until convinced that he was a bona-fide American.

AN INVITATION TO THE TANKS

Doughboys accompanying Allen then appeared. The tank lieutenant asked them where they were going, Allen said: "We're going on patrol. Want to come along?" The tank lieutenant replied: "I've been ordered to take tanks to the rear, but I'm game. Sure I'll come along.

He started what was probably the first tank patrol in the European war. The tanks lumbered across fields into the Bois de la Haute-Voge and ther out the northern side of the woods, Allen, with his patrol, following.

Here they were on the edge of the Hindenburg line and under direct observation of the enemy sausage balloons. The foot patrol opened fire, drawing the fire of several machine guns.The foot patrol, including Allen, then took cover and the tanks went forward, stamping out every machine gun nest which had fired Allen then advanced with a little band of doughboys and destroyed several more machine guns, which the enemy had abandoned unharmed.

Small bodies of the enemy fled from the Hindenburg line on the right and left, the Allen patrol and the tanks giving chase. Simultaneously an enemy force outnubmering Allen's, advanced on the left of the Americans, presumably with the intentions of working around behind them. German shells also commenced to break around the tanks, and the Americans considered it was time to depart. They withdrew without loss and came back to our lines.

BRITISH PUSH TOWARD ST. QUENTIN CAPTURE PRISONERS AND VILLAGES

6000 PRISONERS CAPTURED YESTERDAY

ADVANCE 2½ TO 3 MILES ON 15-MILE FRONT—HARGECOURT, VILLERET, LE VERGUIER, RONSSOY AND BERTHACOURT ARE CAPTURED AND EPEHEY SURROUNDED—CROSS HINDENBURG LINE IN SOME PLACES—TIGHTENING CORDON ON ST. QUENTIN.

Special Despatches to The Intelligencer, Canadian Press, Limited.

LONDON, Sept. 19.—British troops last night made further progress in their drive into the Hindenburg line in the St. Quentin region aimed at the encirclement of that town. In continued advance north of Pont Ruet they reached the outpost regions of the Hindenburg line. The Australians renewed their attacks and carried the Hindenburg outposts. Many prisoners and a number of machine guns were taken by them. The town of Lempier was captured, as was Gauche Wood. Lempire is four miles directly west of LeCatelet.

FORTY GUNS CAPTURED.

With the British Forces, Sept. 19.—Forty guns were captured by the British yesterday. Twenty-three German regiments in eleven divisions were represented in the fighting.

LONDON, Sept. 19.—British forces have advanced on a front of sixteen miles in the St. Quentin sector, reaching a depth at some places of three miles. The French, co-operating on their right, have smashed forward on a six-mile front to a depth of a mile and a third. The British according to Sir Douglas Haig's official report last night, have taken over 6,000 prisoners and many guns. Several hundred prisoners have also been taken by the French. Heavy rains were prevailing when the attacks commenced, but they were everywhere successful. In positions reached near Bellicourt the British are astride the main Cambrai-St. Quentin highway. At several points the Hindenburg line has been crossed. The taking of a complete German battery with its teams was an incident of the British attack. A Berlin report says that the Germans have launched counter-attacks.

STRONG COUNTER-ATTACKS REPULSED.

LONDON, Sept. 19.—The Germans late yesterday started a heavy bombardment on the northern part of the battlefront, southwest of Cambrai, between Geaucourt and the Arras-Cambrai road. The fire was of extreme intensity. The enemy followed the bombardment by a strong infantry attack on a wide front northward from the vicinity of Trescault. He was completely repulsed at all points with great loss. He was likewise driven off with heavy casualties shortly afterwards when he launched a strong attack north of Moeuvres. Some German parties that succeeded at points in entering British trenches were entirely disposed of by counter attacks.

LONDON, Sept. 18—(1.30 p.m)—In their attack to-day northwest of St. Quentin the British scored an average advance of from 2 to 3 miles on a 15 mile front, acording to reports up to this hour. The town of Hargicourt was captured by the British.

The front under attack ran from Holnon Wood, west of St. Quentin northward of Gouzeaucourt.

The British attack took them far nearer tha line from which the German offensive started on March 21 last.

The latest reports placed Field Marshal Haig's troops at an average distance of about a mile from this line. Prisoners to the number of 1,500 are reported.

The fighting was continuing this afternoon.

EPEHY SURROUNDED.. ....

The town of Epehy, toward the northern part of the front under attack, was almost surrounded by the British this afternoon.

The British have crossed the Hindenburg line at two points—at Villeret and at Gouzeaucourt. The depth of their penetration beyond, however, it not reported.

Villeret was taken by the advancing forces, as were Le Verguier, Ronssoy and Berthaucourt.

The section along which the assault is being made is a most important one. The British, prior to today, had worked forward until they had established themselves in the old support line between Epehy and Verguier.

In front of them the Germans were sitting on a dominating ridge in posotions which represented the British front line before the Germans launched their offensive last March.

In addition the Germans held the former second support line of the British. The crest of this ridge dominates the Hindenburg line which lies to the east. Hencce the value of the possession of this ridge to either side is obvious.

HUNS EXPECTING A DRIVE

For days the Germans, who undoubtedly had expected a drive here, had been feverishly fortifying themselves along the ridge, whose loss would be a serious menace to the Hindenburg line in the rear. Still fighting seemed probable.

Many Killed In Austrian Factory

Special Despatch to The Intelligence Canadian Press Limited

AMSTERDAM, Sept. 19—Many persons have been killed or injured in a fire in the Woellersdorf ammunition factory in Vienna, according to an official report received here. After the fire there was a panic among the workers in the shell making section of the factory.

Labor Conference On Peace Terms

Special Despatch to The Intelligencer,

LONDON, Sept. 19—The war aims of the International Labor Conference to-day made a report recommending that the conference subscribe to fourteen points formulated by President Wilson thus adopting the policy of moderation as opposed to a policy as disliked exclusively by changes on the war map.

Foxboro Man Sued For Breach Of Promise

Special Despatch to The Intelligence Canadian Press Special

TORONTO, Sept. 19—Jean Bunnett of Toronto, has issued a writ at Osgoode Hall against Peter W. Currie, of Foxboro, Hastings County, for damages for alleged breach of promise.

MUST BE ESSENTIAL

WASHINGTGON, Sept. 19—Railroad employes, like all other workers, must prove their services are essential, to avaid the draft. Provost Marshal General Crowder has ruled that there can be no blanket class exemption of any kind.

Fatal Hour Begun For Huns Says Official Organ of Vatican

ROME, Sept. 19—In a long article which is taken as reflecting the views of the Vatican officials, if not the Pope himself, The Corriere D'Italia, semi-official organ of the Vatican, declares that Austria should be more explicit in her declarations. The old subterfuge that the note carries shows a desperate need of peace. The article says their is no need for a secret conference when President Wilson and others already have set forth the allied conditions for peace. There is no doubt that the note was inspired by Berlin. With the cannon of Hindenburg unsuccessful we will now see a return to the subtleties of diplomacy the note is equivalent to a confession of military weakness; it is a sign that the fatal hour has begun for them when they must submit to the allies peace, says the Vatican paper which says that if in the year of 1916 the offered peace now they ask it, but in what spirit to do they ask peace.

Bulgarians in Full Flight Burning Villages And Munitions

Special Despatch to The Intelligencer, Canadian Press, Limited.

LONDON, Sept. 19.—The Bulgarians are in full flight in Macedonia and are burning stores and villages in all directions. Allied troops have advanced twelve miles and are unable to count the prisoners or mass of material taken, owing to the rapidity of the advance.

Remarkable Escapes of Airmen

One Shot Down From 13,000 Feet And Recovered to Find Himself Under His Machine in a Marsh, Uninjured

LONDON, Sept. 19.—A British airman, while flying at a height of 1,600 feet, had the tail of his machine shot off by a direct hit from a shell. The machine turned upside down and the pilot was thrown from his seat, but he managed to clamber on to the bottom of the fusilage, on which he remained astride.

Though the machine was out of control, he managed, by moving forward and backward, to balance it and glide steadily downward. Under a strong anti-aircraft fire he crossed the German lines successfully a few hundred feet from the ground. His machine came down with a crash and he received some injuries, but will recover.

Another British airman was shot down out of control from an altitude of 13,000 feet. He fell fluttering and fainted on the way down. When he revived he found himself under the machine, which was upside down in a marsh and was entirely uninjured.

Winnipeg Women Decide They Don't Want Beer Sold

WINNIPEG, Sept. 19.—Three weeks ago the Women's Labor League of Winnipeg went on record as advocating the selling of beer in hotels, in the belief that soldiers and war workers were entitled to beer if they wanted it

Last night the league met again and took a new vote, which was overwhelmingly against the sale of beer in hotels. The reason for the change of front is not given out.

Red Cross Care Of Wounded Soldiers

Mrs. Richard Stapley of this city, is in receipt of the following letter referring to her son, Pte. Ted Stapley, who was recently wounded:

Dear Madam:—I beg to inform you that Pte E. G. Stapley 2534305, 35th Canadians, is in the Chester Military Hospital, Chester, England. We shall be able to give you more details next week.

Yours truly,

Music and Drama

"HAVE A HEART"
SEASON'S MUSICAL FEAST

With the imprint of Henry W. Savage al over it, "Have a Heart," the musical comedy that registered such a sure success last season will be disclosed at Griffin's Opera House, Belleville next Tuesday, September, 24th, with a high quality cast and production. Its novelty and excellence are pronounced fresh evidence of Mr. Savage's sagacity in sensing the popular taste and his artistry in staging a musical comedy production with every endowment, that can make it beautiful and allaring—not forgetting, of course, the universal appeal of lovely femininity and dominant desire for mirth, melody and harmonious color blends. Guy Bolton and P. G. Wodehouse are said to have been inspired by Sardou's delightful "Divorcons" in contriving the story of the young newlyweds, who capriciously decide to elope for a new honeymoon upon the very eve of a divorce which the wife has sought because of ill-founded jealousy. And some of the most uproariously funny complications result from this eccentric adventure. The first act discloses the entire lingerie section of a big department store, crowded with pretty sales girls and shoppers. And the action shifts to the lounge room of the fashionable Ocean View Hotel at Blueport, R.I. The music of "Have a Heart' reveals that prolific composer Jerome Kern at his best. Many of the numbers have been victrolaed and danced to from coast to coast. There are twenty of these, the most memory haunting of which are: "You Said Something," "I'm so Busy," "Have a Heart," "Bright Lights," "The Road That Lies Before," "Samarkland," "Honeymoon Inn," "Can the Cabaret," "My Wife—My Man," "Daisy" and an irresistible topical song called "Napoleon." Assurance is given that the chorus is up to the highest standard of personal charm and vocal ability characteristic of all Mr. Savage's musical productions.

The cast of players includes:—Ruth Oswald, Grace Hoey, Helen Ukers, Rosie Green, Joseph Keno, Henry Antrim, Joseph McCallion, Sam J. Burton, Edward A. Smith, Lawrence Wood, Victor Leroy, Edward Ciannelli and Keno and Green. A pleasing feature of the program is the special orchestra carried by the company. This is the only company play- "Have a Heart" and is under the direction of Henry W. Savage.

MAE MARSH AND CHARLIE CHAPLIN

Mae Marsh is appearing at the Palace tonight to Saturday, matinee daily, in a five-part Goldwyn picture of of engrossing interest entitled, "The Glorious Adventure. Charlie Chaplin is also appearing in a highly amusing 2-part comedy. A selected program of varied photoplays will also be screened.

CHARLES RAY IN "THE HIRED MAN"

Charles Ray's latest Paramount success "The Hired Man," will be the attraction at Griffin's theatre tonight to Saturday, matinee Saturday at 2.30. This picture, which was produced by Thomas H. Ince, is from the pen of Julien Josephson, the well-known short-story writer.

The story, which has a New England atmosphere throughout and is peopled with typical "down east" characters, has to do with the struggle of Ezry Hollins, a young farm hand, to procure an education. Doris Lees, who plays his sweetheart, is one of the most attractive girls of the screen. The rest of the cast, including Charles French, Lydia Knott, Carl Ullman and Gilbert Gordon has also done some notable work. "The Self Made Man," a five part Mutual feature, "The Fight For Millions" and other photoplays will also be screened.

Lieut. C. E. Hastings, A.S.C., has been appointed to the Mechanical Transport.

Lieut. Gordon Flavelle, Lindsay, has received the Distinguished Flying Cross for conspicuous gallantry in the air service. Gordon first enlisted in the Army Service Corps and was stationed at Kingston before going overseas in 1917, when he transferred to the Royal Air Service.

Brig.-Gen. Maunsell, G. S. O., has received from the Engineer Training Depot, St. John's Que., a model of a front line trench system intended for use in training. It was made by Lieut. E. T. Adney, C.E., in 1917, the scale being one-half inch to one foot. Not only is the model of great value in teaching soldiers trench construction, but it is of very great interest to every person following the progress of the fighting. The ground work of the model is built up from paper fibre, with a clay surface. In front are the wire entanglements, behind them being the front line trenches and Belgium. Then the communication trenches from the support line in the rear are indicated, and dugouts fitted for the off company. Every detail is faithfuly carried out.

BIG PIPE LINE READY FOR NEXT MONTH

NIAGARA FALLS, Ont., Sept. 19.—Such good progress has been made on the 13½-foot pipe line in Victoria Park for the Hydro that it was announced yesterday water will be turned into the pipe on October 23. This city will also tap the big pipe with a two-foot main for additional water supply.

The personnel of the appeal tribunal has not been officially announced but it is understood that it will consist of Mr. Justice Archer of the Superior Court, Montreal; Mr. Justice Masten and Mr. Justice Middleton of the Ontario Supreme Court.

Trying To Revive Laurier's Party

OTTAWA, Sept. 19—Plans for the creation of a political organization for the opposition in the Dominion Parliament engaged Sir Wilfrid Laurier and a number of his followers, who were summoned to confer with him here Tuesday.

By the division on the Liberal party at the time of the formation of the present Union Government, Sir Wilfrid and the anti-conscription Liberals found themselves without an organization particularly in Ontario and Western Canada, at the last general election. The lack was keenly felt and therefore Sir Wilfrid and his followers have set themselves to the task of building up an organization to replace that which was lost to them. Details of the method of procedure decided upon are set forth in an official account of the meeting given out this evening. The statement speaks as if the subject of reorganization alone occupied the conference. It is said that in addition the question of contesting the by-election to be held in North Ontario, to fill the vacancy caused by the death of Col. Sam Sharpe, and in Glengarry, due to the death of Duncan Martin, was under discussion. Votes for these by-elections have not yet been issued, but there has been a suggestion that they may be before Parliament re-assembles.

GRAHAM MAY STAND

Hon. George P. Graham who failed to secure a seat at the general election last December, is being urged by his associats it is said, to be the Laurier candidate in Glengarry. In North Ontario the United Farmers of Ontario have nominated R. H. Halbart of Melanchanton Township as their candidate. It is consequently reported that the Opposition may not place a candidate in the field.

The conference yesterday was attended by Hon. George P. Graham, Hon. Sydney Fisher, Hon. Rodolphe Lemieux, Hon. MacKenzie King, Hon. Charles Murphy, formerly members of Sir Wilfrid Laurier's Cabinet; E. M. McDonald, ex-member for Pictou, N. S.; J. H. Sinclair, M.P., of Guysboro and Antigonish; Ernest Lapointe, M. P., of Kamouraska; Hon. Jacques Bureau, M.P., of Three Rivers; J. A. Robb, M.P., of Huntingdon, W. C. Kennedy, M. P. of North Essex; Duncan C. Ross, M.P., of West Middlesex; Alex. Smith, K.C., of Ottawa, and J. H. Adams, Liberal organizer for Ontario. Hon. Walter Scott, ex-Premier of Saskatchewan, was in the city as the guest of Sir Wilfrid Laurier but apparently did not attend the meeting.

Simple Service May be Prepared

TORONTO, Sept. 19—An important proposal for an alternate form of the Evening Service was introduced by Bishop Roper of Ontario at the General Synod of the Church of England in Canada, when the report of the revised Prayer Book was being considered.

It was suggested that a rubric be added at the end of the Evening Prayer to the effect that where the minister deems it advisable in special circumstances, he may, with the sanction of the Bishop, use a simpler form of service, as follows: Hymn, Scripture, General Confession, Collect, Lord's Prayer, Psalm, Canticle, Apostles' Creed.

This proposal caused something of a sensation, but it was evident that it met with general approval.

The question as to whether it infringed as principle of the Church was brought up, but was not decided. On the motion of Provost Macklem the whole matter was referred to the House of Bishops, with the suggestion that they might draw up an alternate form of service that would not violate any liturgical principle.

Able to Start Work Again

Trouble Was Easily Removed

Don't be discouraged if you find that you have Kidney or Bladder troubles, and don't imagine your case is hopeless or that you will be crippled and suffer all the rest of your life.

Here is good news: Gin Pills have restored thousands of sufferers to health and strength. What they have done for others they will do for you.

Read what Mr. J. Harrop says:

"I have been crippled up so completely that I could not stand. Work was out of the question. A few doses of Gin Pills put me right. I cannot praise Gin Pills too much, and every home should have a box."

Mr. Harrop's experience with Gin Pills has been the same as thousands of others, in all parts of this continent.

Take the case of Mr. B. Milford, Galetta, Ont. Mr. Milford had been troubled with backache and kidney trouble for so long that his wife determined to find a remedy for his affliction. Having become convinced that Gin Pills were what he needed, she persuaded him to commence treatment with this well-known remedy. He did so, and surprising results were obtained almost immediately.

This is an extract from Mrs. Milford's letter:—

"After one dose of Gin Pills my husband found them to be exactly what he needed, and after taking two boxes he was completely cured."

Cases like these prove the value of Gin Pills. Try them. 50c a box at all dealers. 171

STYLES ARE LIMITED

WASHINGTON, Sept. 18.—Elimination of 5,500 styles of rubber footwear is called for under a war-time schedule of production announced yesterday by the War Industries Board, effective September 1, for canvas rubber soled shoes, and on January 1 for water-proof footwear. Manufacture of all boots except those of an essential nature for men is to be prohibited.

Top Grade Cattle Scarce But Firm

Common Killers Draggy at 25 To 50 Cent Weaker Values

Union Stock Yards, Sept. 19.—The scarcity of good to choice butcher cattle in an offering of almost 1,3000 head yesterday gave a draggy spirit to the trade, and it was only with difficulty that commission men were able to find buyers for common killers, which predominated in the consignments. For anything good the market was active and firm. Medium quality butcher cattle were barely stead, but values for common light cattle receded 25 to 50c and even with lower values in force it was impossible to secure a clean-up. The big percentage of common cattle in Monday's offering had a big effect in practically killing the trade Tuesday, and it is doubtful whether it will pick up any before the week is out. The lack of top quality was also apparent among the cows and bulls, and while canners were moderately active and steady, in-between cows were draggy and weak.

Stockers continued a fair trade from $8.25 to $10.25. Milkers and springers were wanted, and a light offering cashed in from $85.00 to $145.00 each, and one particularly fine big Holstein at $175.00.

Lambs continued steady at 17¼c per pound for the best quality. Light sheep were firm and wanted. Choice veals were inclined to a shade stronger trade, odd veals selling at 18c, though the general top price was 17 3-4c. Medium calves were steady and in better demand.

While the hog market was firm at $19.50 to $19.75 for feed and watered consignments, there was a suggestion of a move to seek higher prices.

The receipts were 76 carloads, with 1,294 cattle, 140 calves, 606 hogs and 1,888 sheep and lambs.

Tribute To Work Of Rev. B. Greatrix

At a district meeting of the Methodist church held at Peterboro on Monday, the following resolution was unanimously adopted in reference to Rev. B. Greatrix, a former popular and beloved pastor of Holloway Street Church in this city:

"That whereas Rev. B. Greatrix preferred to be relieved of the chairmanship of the Peterboro District, at our last annual conference, we embrace this, our first opportunity of expressing to him our heartfelt appreciation of the faithful, untiring efforts and devoted service he has rendered the church in general, but this district in particular.

"As Chairman, he has, by his sane judgment, wise council, and devotion to God and His Kingdom, carefully and successfully guided the affairs of the District, so that in some respects it is the banner district in the Bay of Quinte Conference.

"As a preacher and pastor he has a very careful and prayerful oversight over all the interests of his congregation, "studying to show himself approved unto God, a workman who needeth not to be ashamed, rightly dividing the word of truth."

"As a man among brethren, both Lay and Clerical, he is recognized as a manly man, who, by his Christian integrity, sympathy and helpfulness, has endeared himself to us all."

Rev. Mr. Greatrix briefly replied, thanking the brethren of the District for this expression of appreciation for anything he had done.

Election Probe Involves Carvell

MONTREAL, Sept. 19—Evidence indicating that Hon. Frank B. Carvell had tried to secure the votes of the soldiers of the Canadian Engineers' Training Depot at St. Johns, Que., until he found that he was to be returned by acclamation, and that after that he had tried to have the vote turned over to Col. McLeod in York County, N.B., when he found he would not need them himself was introduced yesterday at royal commission sitting to investigate the charges against officers and men of the Canadian Engineers' Training Depot at St. John's, by Lt E. T. Adney in the course of a day's procedure that was electric with unexpected incidents.

Lieut. Adney's evidence came well on in the afternoon, following a series of bitter exchanges between Lieut.-Col. Melville of the Canadian Engineers' Training Depot and the Aime Geoffrion, K.C., and between E. Fabre Surveyer, K.C., and Mr. Geoffrion, which had made the morning's proceedings tense with excitement.

During the afternoon officer after officer denied that there had been any prearranged plan to secure the votes of some 517 or more soldiers at St. Johns for the Chambly-Vercheres Unionist candidate.

Lieut. Adney, who is a naturalized Canadian and prior to the war was an American, was the star witness of the afternoon, his replies time and again eliciting applause in court that was sternly repressed.

Voted for Rainville

"Why did you vote for Mr. Rainville?" asked Mr. Geoffrion.

"Because I believed him to be a loyal member of the Union government and a loyal citizen, and I was sure his opponent, Mr. Archambeault, not. I voted as I thought my duty to my country lay, and that is the reason why 17,000 other Canadian soldiers voted as they did."

"I might have voted in my own county of Carleton, N.B." added Lt. Adney, "but Hon. Mr. Carvell wrote and said that he would not need our votes, as he expected to get an acclamation, so I was told to vote for the Unionist candidate, Col. McLeod, in York County, N.B., where the votes might be needed."

"Then why did you vote in Chambly-Vercheres?" asked Mr. Geoffrion.

'Because I thought up here was nearer to the firing line," retorted Lt. Adney. 'I could not get overseas, so I thought it better to get as near as I could to the fighting line."

Col. Melville Testifies

Lieut.-Col. W. W Melfille, O. C. Engineers' Training Depot, St. Johns, was called as a witness in the morning. He proved to be a very unwilling one.

At the outset the commanding officer refused point blank to reply to a question put by Mr. Geoffrion, K. C., for the crown, as to whether or not he had voted at the election. He was guaranteed protection of the commission and compelled to answer.

Finally the officer admitted that he had voted. He said he was not sure yet what residence meant, so he believed he told the truth when he said in voting that he did not know his residence in the Dominion. He declared that he knew of no intention in St. Johns Barracks to make the soldiers vote for Mr. Rainville, Unionist candidate in Chambly-Vercheres.

PACKED BUTTER KEEPS

Seed Corn Situation Is Critical—Select Own Seed Now.

Select Ears From Field for Height, Strength, Leafiness and Earliness.

(Contributed by Ontario Department of Agriculture, Toronto.)

THE first point to observe in the packing of butter, in order to have it keep well for winter use is to have good butter. The best butter for packing is usually made in the months of June and September. It is preferably made from comparatively sweet cream which has been pasteurized. However, on the farm pasteurization is not commonly followed, hence the butter should be made when the weather is comparatively cool and the cream should be churned before it becomes very sour—in fact, the sweeter the cream the more likely it is to produce good keeping quality in the butter, so long as there is sufficient acid in the cream to give good churning results.

The cream should be churned in the usual way, except that the butter may be washed once with brine, which is made by dissolving salt in water, instead of using water at both washings. Salt at the usual rate—but not over one ounce of salt per pound of butter, because salt does not preserve butter as is commonly supposed, except in a minor degree for unpasteurized cream butter. It is a mistake, however, to add so much salt that the fine flavor of the butter is covered up.

Having worked the butter as usual, pack it firmly into crocks, tubs or boxes. If unparafined wooden packages are used, these should be soaked several days in salt water to prevent "woody" flavor in the butter. A better plan is to coat the inside of the tub or box with hot wax, then line with heavy parchment paper, before packing the butter. Glazed crocks which are clean, need no lining.

When the package is full, preferably all from one churning, smooth the top of the butter, cover with parchment paper or a clean cotton cloth, then tie heavy brown paper over the top and place in a cool cellar or in cold storage. Sometimes a salt paste is put on top of the cloth or paper and this is kept moist by sprinkling on water from time to time. This excludes the air and helps to keep the butter.

We recommend packing the butter in solid form which is to be kept for some time, rather than holding the butter in prints, even though these may be submerged in brine.—Prof. H. H. Dean, O. A. College, Guelph.

Select Seed Corn Now.

Unless every precaution is taken this autumn the supply of good seed corn of the desirable varieties will be inadequate for the requirements of 1919. The autumn of 1917 saw the corn crop harvested with an excess of moisture. Wet cold weather followed, during which time the corn did not cure, consequently, when the very cold weather of December set in the corn was frozen and germination was reduced to a very low percentage. This situation which caused the agricultural authorities of North America so much anxiety during the winter and spring of 1918, and which was described by them as "a national calamity," is not yet averted. The problem which that committee had to face was one of supplying North America with seed which would give a fair germination. To secure this seed was no easy task and recourse was made to districts in the United States hundreds of miles to the south of Ontario which produce large, late maturing varieties. In bringing this seed into the country there was little expectation that it would produce much grain, but it was hoped it would produce fodder. The situation in Ontario was so acute that an embargo was placed on the seed grown in Kent and Essex counties prohibiting the exportation from those counties to other districts in Ontario. Some seed of fair germination was available but not sufficient for all their local needs, and as those counties located in southern and western Ontario furnish the chief source of seed for the remainder of the province it was felt that such action was justified in order to conserve those varieties for seed purposes which had proven themselves adapted to Ontario conditions.

There was never a time in Ontario's history when it was more necessary to take every precaution in the selection of seed corn than at the present time. The most satisfactory method of seed selection is that of selecting in the field. The grower can go up and down his rows and select those ears which are early, well developed and possess all the varietal characteristics. When selecting in the field the grower has before him the standing plant. He can select from those plants which possess the height, strength, leafiness and earliness desired. When once the desired type is established in the grower's mind good progress can be made in selecting the ears. This method offers many advantages over that of selecting from the shock or from the crib. The crib is the least desirable, in that it offers only husked ears to select from. With the shock, when husking, the grower has the wilted or matured stalks, while the field selection has everything in its favor, the whole plant and its environment which may mean normal or abnormal conditions for development.—Dr. C. A. Zavitz, O. A. College, Guelph.

STOVE STYLES

1918-1919

Radical changes in mechanical design are not to be expected in a line of cooking and heating stoves, which have successfully met every demand of users since the inception of the stove industry.

Great progress has been made in the simplification of heating and cooking stoves, the elimination of the many unnecessary parts, and the standardization of different lines, in external design, many more improvements are exhibited.

Smooth, plain, easy-to-keep-clean castings for filigree of old; sharp angles have given way to graceful curves; there is beauty, unity and uniformity shown.

Our line of ranges today embodies everything that is newest and best in the stove construction, responding fully to the varying tastes in requirements of users.

Your patronage and approval impose obligation upon us to solve and successfully cope with your stove problem. An inspection of our stock will convince you that we have more than merely met your demands. We have succeeded in anticipating them.

We have on our floor samples of over fifty ranges and heaters, including the Gurney-Oxford, Fire-Co., Peninsular, Treasure, 3 different kinds of high-oven ranges, base burners, combination gas and coal ranges, and a large variety of Oak style and Quebec heaters to choose from.

UNCLE SAM'S SOLDIERS.

The London (Eng.) Daily News frankly pays tribute to the great assistance rendered by the United States since entering the war and in the course of an editorial on America's participation in the war says:

> In the four months that have followed the black days of March, over a million men have been transported across the Atlantic, and at the present moment it is probable that nearer a million and a half than a million and a quarter of American soldiers are in France. During last month the total brought over exceeded the enormous figure of 300,000. At the present rate there will be over two millions immediately available by the autumn, and it is fairly certain that there will be not fewer than three millions by next spring.
> And it is not numbers alone which make this mighty army formidable. Unlike the material of the nations which have been pouring out their best blood for four years, it is the cream of a great nation, the picked men between 21 and 30, physically equal to any race on earth, intellectually of a higher general standard, perhaps, than any race, and charged with that moral enthusiasm which every great soldier from Cromwell downward has reckoned to be the most important weapon in war. Against this enormous realized fact Germany can present no equivalent. The Kaiser has lost in his race with the President. His moment has gone and it can not return. He may sustain a defensive war for months, even for years, but he can never recover the offensive.

BETRAYED RUSSIA FOR HUN GOLD.

Conclusive documentary proof has been secured by the U. S. Secret Service that Lenine and Trotsky, the Bolshevik leaders, deliberately betrayed Russia—were bought and paid for by Germany, receiving thirty million dollars out of the reptile fund maintained by Germany for the corruption of modern Judases. The elimination of Russia from the war with the possibilities of securing huge food supplies was considered by Germany as well worth the price and Lenine and Trotsky proved clever and pliant tools for Germany's purpose. Russia was delivered into the hands of Germany for a price but the bargain was a disappointment. Russia as a military factor is still strong enough to prove a disturbing element to Germany and the food supplies expected have proved almost non-existent. German greed and intolerance to a helpless foe has aroused deeper hate than ever in Russia for the Hun and more determined resistance to his aggressions, resulting in another national revulsion of feeling which found expression in armed resistance, the assassination of German officials and a condition of affairs which convinced the arch-traitors, Lenine and Trotsky, that their speedy exit from the country would prolong their miserable lives. Lenine's departure, indeed, was speeded by a bullet which nearly finished his career of shame. Then America came into the war at the critical moment and before the deluded Huns took United States participation seriously Gen. Pershing's forces in France had passed the million mark. Japan also took a hand and with other allied forces started something in Siberia which promises important results and more serious trouble for Germany.

Everywhere Germany's policy of treachery and ruthlessness has been checkmated by "unforeseen events" and the proud boast of the Kaiser of his spring offensive which was to bring the war to a decision and an early peace favorable to Germany has been confounded by a series of disasters on the Western front which have paralyzed the heart of Germany with the fear of defeat and killed forever the cherished dream of the invicibility of German arms.

The Kaiser's house of cards is tumbling down and his insane attempt to dominate the world will perish in a mess of dishonor and filth which will pollute the pages of history with the record of a man-beast crazed with egotism and devoid of morals who wrecked a prosperous nation lured to its destruction by a madman's blasphemous assumption of a partnership with the Deity.

∴ CRISP COMMENT ∴

Well, if the farmers have enough rain to soften the earth for the fal ploughing let them holler "Nuff" so that the moisture can be turned off.

The Laurier line, smashed so thoroughly last December, shows symptom of returning life, but the gang who were willing to hold back reinforcements from our brave boys overseas to gain votes in Quebec can never come back in the affections of Canadians who placed patriotism above politics.

Only one county in Ontario, that of Peterborough, has not adopted a county road system under the Provincial Act. The 36 organized counties have assumed control of 9,200 miles, and 2,325 miles have been substantially improved. The owning of 23,000 motor cars by the farmers is having its influence on road improvement.

Landlords who encourage race suicide by forbidding children in their buildings should be arrested under the War Measures Act charged with giving aid and comfort to the enemy. Germany in boosting the birth rate in its own country would be very much comforted to learn that babies are banned in desirable living quarters in Canada.

Publication of the Liberal Monthly, that journal of glorification and villification—glorification of Sir Wilfrid Laurier and villification of Sir Robert Borden and all things Conservative, will not be resumed until after the war it is said; however, there's Lindsay Crawford's Laurier booster, "The Statesman," to fill the breach. Behold how the mighty have fallen! The soft pedal is now ordered upon the diffusion of Laurieritis until the people have a chance to forget. Laurier, the knightly idol of the politician, all knight for a brief day, now all night, day and night—dead and buried politically in the narrow grave of parochial politics.

The funny side of the service regularly appears in the letters of Private H. W. Chapman, Company D, 101st Engineers, who writes to his parents: "I'll admit the war is a joke and it's all on the Kaiser, but it's no joke when Fritz knocks down the wire you have put up only two hours before. Still each shell he uses would buy a good-sized Liberty Bond and we put up the wire for $1.10 a day, so I guess the laugh is on him at that."

OTHER VIEWS

It Knows Now.
Toronto News.

Even The Globe must have learned that the Kaiser is not the chief bulwark of the world's peace, as it used to contend.

Gleams of Common Sense.
Vienna Arbeiter Zeitung.

However big the victory is today, and however big it may become, it can never do what the cheap mouth-heroes of the Hinterland expect of it. It may—possibly it can—break the war-spirit of the French or make England and Italy more disposed to accept a peace by understanding, but no victory gained on land can make England and the United States defenceless or force them to lay down their arms, or bring them, like Russia, into the position of a completely conquered nation which has to accept unconditionally the terms of the victor—nor can any power do this as long as the British fleet rules the waves. And even if Hindenburg's genius and German bravery won a complete victory on land, even if the English army fell into our hands to the last man, and France was disarmed and had to submit to Germany's terms, even then England and American could not be compelled to the capitulation that the Pan-German word-heroes prophsey daily. Even then they would blockade our coasts and the war would continue at sea. And even if they could not or would not do that, even if peace was concluded and all the battles ended, they would still have a terrible weapon to use against us.

One Suggestion.

Some one will sometime probably make an amusing book out of the many absurd suggestions that have been made about the conduct of the war. One of these suggestions will be found in a novel called "Potterat and the War." One of its characters advises the shooting of shells filled with bees! When the shell strikes a German trench and the bees are liberated, he says, there will be an immediate skedaddle on the part of the Huns, for who could fight after being stung on the eyelid by an infuriated bee!

Proud of Toronto.

THE INVITATION.

Come in the house of the Greenwoods cried
Bluebird and blackbird, and robin and wren,
And lightly I stepped from the worn wayside,
For the summons was strong and the portals were wide,
And I passed from the prying world, out of its ken,
From the glare of the streets, and the gibber of men,
To the green halls of silence, and chambers of song,
Where the shades cast no stain, and the clean winds make strong,
And there was not a bird, on a flower, or a tree,
Or a green blade of grass, but was friendly to me,
In that house of the greenwoods, where I was the guest
For a day of sweet silence, song, beauty and rest.

TAKE IT FROM FATHER

Son, I haven't much to tell you.
I have learned that good advice is
A prescription which but few of us will take,
And my long and windy warnings might forsake you in a crisis—
And besides you've got your own career to make;
I have just this bit of counsel which may help you go the distance
With no useless or unnecessary stop,
As you mingle in the melee of the struggle for existence
Don't you ever try to argue with a cop!

There are plenty of adventures which a man may get away with,
Though the world proclaim them hopeless from the start;
You may find a whirring buzz saw is a pretty thing to play with,
And at times a Bengal tiger has a heart;
Youth is always doing wonders and forevermore achieving
While the sages sneer and prophesy a flop;
But there are some final limits, it's a fact that's worth believing,
So don't ever try to argue with a cop!

You might swim the Whirlpool Rapids, you might butt your head thro' granite,
You might set the Mississippi all aflame;
But debating with policemen—take a tip from dad and can it—
For the issue is infallibly the same:
You are licked before you've started with your futile protestations,
So just do the way he tells you, on the hop,
And unless you have a fancy for a jail's accommodations
Don't you ever try to argue with a cop!

—Berton Braley, in Saturday Evening Post.

LORD SHAUGHNESSY ON RECONSTRUCTION

"This is not yet the period of reconstruction," Lord Shaugnessy said to the press representative who met him at Vancouver, "and plans for the west must necessarily wait, but the time is nearer when there will be a great period of development. It is to Canada and its resources and its freedom that the steps of many will turn. Immigration to Canada will be resumed after the war ends, and this immigration will be increased because of the war. The reconstruction period after the war is in a measure still a dark page. We must face many of the problem as they arise, but preparations are being made to adjust industries to a change with her great resources will be able to adapt herself and adjust her industries very quickly after the war is over."

"In order to meet the reconsturction period in the proper way there must be a better understanding between capital and labor, and I hope all industries will follow the example of the railways, and reach agreements."

Speaking further of reconstruction His Lordship believes that it will be a huge undertaking. He hoped that long before hostilities cease, the Government of Canada would have made complete arangements for the demobilization of troops and for the rehabilitation of those now fighting. He hoped the Government had laid plans for the gradual assimilation of the troops and of the working men and women employed in war work. One of the first industrial enterprises after the war should be the production of finished products for devastated Europe.

Lord Shaugnessy does not see that the industrial disturbances caused when the munitions manufacturing plants shut down will be serious because Canada will be called upon immediately the war ends to produce great quantities of articles for war-swept Europe. There will be a particularly heavy demand for lumber, and this was of special interest to the Province of British Columbia with its great wealth of timber.

Lord Shaugnessy was of the opinion that immigration from enemy countries would be discouraged, though in time the bitter feelings against the enemy nations would be reduced, and immigration may again be resumed. But this will require a long time. Though Canada would be the aim of many immigrants from countries other than the enemy countries in Europe, he did not think that this stream would begin to flow toward Canada for some little time after the war as the ships sailing here would all be required in bringing back the Canadian troops overseas when the war ends. If there are 300,000 Canadian troops overseas when the war ends it would take ten months to bring them back at the rate of 30,000 a month. And before the boats were released for actual immigrant traffic, Canada would have found herself and would be in a position to receive and absorb them.

To win this war every ounce of the strength of each of the allied nations must be put forth to meet the organized, trained and disciplined efficiency of the Central Powers—that gigantic, ruthless force which is the result of fifty years of planning and preparation.

And every ounce of every allied nation's strength is in the hands and brains and hearts of the individuals of each nation, because they are free peoples.

Now the individuals of each nation must live as well as fight, therefore a proportion of the effort and material of each nation must be diverted from war purposes to living necessities.

So the less each individual takes for himself or herself for personal use the more effort will there be left for fighting and winning the war.

Every cent you spend represents that much effort because somebody must do something for you in order to earn that cent—somebody's effort must be given to you instead of to the war.

Therefore the less you spend—the less of somebody's effort you take for your individual use—the more will you leave in the national surplus for war effort.

The war can be won only by the surplus strength of the allied nations. The money each individual saves represents that surplus strength.

So the truly loyal Canadian will use less, spend less, and save more, to help to win the war.

Mrs. Booth was a widow, and is survived by three children—Flight Lieut. H. H. Booth, and the Misses Helen and Marjorie.

The Fifth Intermarriage

By JANE OSBORN

(Copyright, 1918, by the McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)

Mrs. Stewart's house parties were always admiringly planned, and it was because everyone was always sure of finding a congenial companion at her house that the younger members of her kindred and acquaintance always accepted her invitations. For if truth were to be told there was nothing luxurious in her hospitality, and there was little amusement or entertainment save what the guests and the hostess could provide by their own wits, for the fine old Stewart mansion contained none of those short cuts to hospitality and amusement. If one wished to dance there was no phonograph to provide music—and the dancing could not progress unless one of the guests happened to know some dance tunes to be played on the old piano. There was no nearby country club and there were no automobiles in the Stewart stables. But despite these shortcomings Mrs. Stewart never wearied of getting up little parties and thought nothing of filling her eight guest rooms at a time, and the guests always came with enthusiasm. The secret of her success was that she was at heart a matchmaker, and though she did not think of every girl at her parties as a possible wife for one of the other guests, she always did think of them as partners for a country walk. She never invited a girl unless she was sure she could provide some nice young man who would find her society delightful, and never invited even the least prepossessing of young men without making sure that there was one young woman in the number gifted enough to appreciate the fine points of his personality.

Mrs. Stewart even went so far as to make little lists of her guests on the backs of discarded envelopes—for she was instilled with the spirit of old-time thrift as well as with the lavishness of old-time hospitality. And in these lists she would pair her guests off, making sure, of course, that they would pair, and that there would be no three-handed affairs—no two men hanging at the feet of one young belle while one of the young girls went partnerless.

For the first party of the season she had planned to have all the guest rooms filled, and as four of them contained large double beds, this meant that she would have 12 guests. Most of them were young people who had already met at similar parties—some of them already engaged as the result of her careful planning. The only names on her lists that she had not been able to link up with any other names were those of Miss Nancy Marbury and Mr. Nathaniel Stobridge.

"There really isn't anything they can have in common," sighed Mrs. Stewart. "Miss Nancy is a college girl, keen about suffrage and a tennis shark, and a perfect dance fan—and poor Nathaniel can't abide college women, is an anti at heart and the most indolent old dear that ever drew breath. He could lie all day in a hammock under a shady tree with a dusty book of family records in his hands and an occasional renewal of cooling beverage at his side and think himself delightfully entertained—while to keep up with Nancy a man would have to take cross-country tramps, play tennis madly and know all the new dance steps."

Mrs. Stewart tried to revise her list so as to pair some one off with Mr. Stobridge and have some one left over that would be congenial with Nancy. But the arrangement for the other guests was perfect. The affinity between each of the other two couples was inevitable. So Mrs. Stewart took the most recent letter she had received from Nancy and the letter she had from Mr. Stobridge accepting her invitation from her desk and read them through in search of some sympathy in common.

"I shall be mighty glad of a little rest," said Nancy in her letter, "for I have been working night and day for a month or more on the Marbury Family Record. Our family association commissioned me to get the data together and put it in shape for publication. You'd be surprised how interesting it has been and of course my work in college fitted me for that sort of research. What we were most anxious to show was that the Marbury family is one of the Stobridge-Claridge connection. You have heard of them, I am sure. It is an alliance of a group of the most distinguished colonial families in the state and to prove our connection we have to show at least five intermarriages with either of the two families since they came to this country. Well, I have at last been able to find the fifth intermarriage, though it was not easy, as the Marbury records are fragmentary. Now that the Record is practically complete I shall be delighted to come to your house party and take a little relaxation before sending the copy to the printer."

Mrs. Stewart had on first reading the letter glanced but hastily over this passage, as she was not herself, particularly interested in genealogical matters. But now the mention of the Stobridge family—that to which the indolent Nathaniel belonged—caught her attention and then she recalled that Nathaniel himself had dabbled more than casually in the study of his own and allied family records.

"Well, I'll get them started on genealogy and perhaps they can find enough in common to keep them amused for the week-end." And rather reluctantly, for she still felt that the temperaments of Nancy and Nathaniel would be no more sympathetic than oil and water, she turned her attention to ordering the wherewithal to keep her large family abundantly provisioned, seeing that the old-fashioned four-poster beds in her guest rooms were newly made up with linen sheets and otherwise making ready for the house party.

Nathaniel had at first shown only a polite attention to Nancy when, on the first day of the party, Mrs. Stewart proposed that they be partners for one of her nice little woodland strolls that were so important a part of the program for the other members of the party.

She could not fail to notice that conversation between them lagged as they wound their way after the others through the freshly leaved trees in the woodland. "And you aren't interested in tennis, either," she heard Nancy say, laughing, to Mr. Stobridge—"really you are most hard to talk to."

"Oh, Nancy dear," Mrs. Stewart said suddenly coming up to them. "I forgot to tell you that Mr. Stobridge is almost as enthusiastic about genealogy as you are and he is one of the colonial Stobridges. But I know you have found much in common," she fibbed, "without discussing anything so dry as family records."

Thus having sowed the seeds of congeniality she sauntered ahead to watch over the interests of the other members of her little party.

"It is really most extraordinary," Nathaniel told his hostess that night as the party broke up to retire, "to find a young woman of Miss Marbury's type so seriously interested in genealogy. We've had a delightful time talking—perhaps I should say that I have and now I am impatiently looking forward to tomorrow."

The next day—Saturday—Mrs. Stewart was content to notice that Nathaniel and Nancy actually did continue their discussion and comparison of notes. "But don't you see how important it is to prove that fifth intermarriage?" she heard Nancy saying almost pleadingly. "Because if I don't my little volume of Marbury records will be almost useless. I was so sure that Hannah Jane did marry Nehemiah Stobridge. It was Nehemiah, I am sure, and the rest of the name was blurred in the family Bible!"

"Positively, my dear girl," she heard Nathaniel reply. "He was a confirmed bachelor. There always have been bachelors in the Stobridge family, and I am true to type. It must have been some other Nehemiah."

That night after all the guests had retired, Mrs. Stewart heard low voices in the hall below and only slightly alarmed at a vague thought of burglars, she started to descend the broad stairs of the front hall. Then she stopped short. For there by the last dying glow of the fire that had been lighted to drive off the chill earlier in the evening sat Nathaniel and Nancy. Nancy had met him there to show him her records.

"You see, there is every reason to believe that it was Nehemiah Stobridge that my Hannah Jane married."

"But my dear little girl—" Mrs. Stewart's pulses began to beat fast for words like that are dear to the heart of a born match-maker—"my dear little Nancy, Nehemiah was an old bachelor." Then Mrs. Stewart tiptoed back to her room and slept content. She forgot the discussion and disagreement about Hannah Jane and Nehemiah and thought only of those words of Nathaniel's.

It was two weeks after her little house party had come successfully to a finish and all her guests had declared it the most wonderful party they had ever attended, when she got a letter from Nancy.

"Nathaniel and I want you to know first," the letter began, "and I think perhaps you knew which way the wind blew before your house party ended. Yes, we are engaged and we are so congenial. And this is how it happened. I just had to find that fifth intermarriage, and the idea struck Nathaniel first that we could do it—I mean provide a fifth intermarriage between the Marburys and the Stobridges. Only of course we would have done it any way—we just couldn't have helped it. And you, dear, are responsible for it all."

Happy Youth.

It is so easy to say the word that checks laughter; to scowl at the exuberance that bubbles over in foolish girl and boy jests. It is difficult for us of an older generation to remember how, when we were young, we loved to laugh and sing and dance and make merry. Youth is so sensitive and it is so easy to spoil an evening with just a glance or an impatient word. When one comes in, glowing from a wonderful evening, a querulous voice or a faultfinding word is like sticking a pin into a gay balloon. Sympathy is so much better. Even if youth is headstrong the faultfinding does not do very much good, but often harm. But sympathy gains confidence, and confidence between the young and the old is a great safeguard for youth and well worth cultivating.

First United States Dollar.

In 1786 the congress of the Confederation chose as the monetary unit of the United States the dollar of 375.64 grains of pure silver. This unit had its origin in the Spanish piastre or milled dollar, which constituted the basis of the metallic circulation of the English colonies in America. It was never coined, for there was no mint in the United States.

ITALY HAS MOBILIZED.. .... EVERY FIGHTING MAN

PARIS, Sept. 19—"My country's effort in the war is worthy of being well known," said the King of Italy to the correspondent of The Matin. "Go into our country districts and you will no longer see any men of military age. Women, old men, or children do all the work in the fields; they even repair the roads.

"We have fully mobilized all our effectives without restriction of any kind. Our financial effort has been no less extensive, and I need not speak of the industrial and economic effort, which is so difficult for a country possessing none of the raw materials requisite for war manufactures.'"

Discussing the Austrian soldier, the King said that there was not the same solidarity between the front and the interior as among the united democratic nations. There was a real barrier between the soldiers at the front and the people at home. Nevertheless, he added, the Austro-Hungarian army was fighting very vigorously.

By R. RAY BAKER

(Copyright, 1918, by the McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)

If Ethel Drayton had done some real reasoning instead of leaping at conclusions and acting on impulse, it is likely that her bark of romance, with Cliff Eldridge in command, would have sailed serenely down the river of agreeableness into the sea of matrimony without encountering a storm. On the other hand, that kind of journey would not have been real romance—it would have lacked zest—so perhaps it is just as well that Herman Hartell came over to Ethel's desk that dreary, rainy afternoon in April and unfolded the secret.

"I have something to say that is very disagreeable to me," began Hartell as he brushed a hand caressingly over his miniature moustache and looked down at Ethel's curly brown hair coiled on the back of her head in a business-like knob that served as a pencil holder. "Nevertheless," he went on, "I feel in duty bound to say it."

Ethel jerked a sheet of paper from her typewriter and turned her black eyes up at the head shipping clerk. The tiny, bristling ridge of hair on Hartell's upper lip forced a smile to her face, but this was dispelled when Hartell explained:

"It's about Clifford. You see, last night—"

While this conversation was taking place, the subject of the remarks sat on a high stool at the other side of the Lewis Wholesale Paper company's shipping office and poured over a file of orders. Out of a corner of his eye he saw the head shipping clerk approach the stenographer's desk, and he frowned.

Hartell leaned over Ethel's chair as he revealed the secret, and Cliff ruffled his flaxen hair with one hand and thrummed on his desk with the other.

Half an hour later Cliff slipped from his stool and into his light overcoat. Carrying his hat, he approached Ethel, who was still busy at the typewriter. He passed and smiled pleasantly, but she continued rattling the keys.

"You needn't trouble yourself to wait for me," she informed him in icy tones without pausing in her work or looking up. "I'll be a little late, and Mr. Hartell has promised to see me home."

Cliff's smile vanished. Before he had a chance to reply, she had slipped a ring from a finger of her left hand and extended it toward him. She looked into his eyes with a stare encrusted with ice.

"I can't wear this any longer," she said, "after the way you have acted lately. I have heard that all men must sow wild oats, but I assure you that my man won't. If you must gamble and carouse, you can't expect to become my husband. I have learned all about your going to a saloon or gambling den on Beecher street almost every night, and that's enough for me. Good-night."

Cliff stumbled down the steps to the street and walked three blocks, heedless of the pouring rain, before he came to himself and found the ring clasped in his hand. Then he stopped dead still in the middle of a street crossing, undecided whether to leap in the river or go back and throw Herman Hartell from the roof of the six-story Lewis building. He decided to do neither; instead, he headed for Beecher street.

Ethel completed her work and was escorted to her rooming place by Hartell. At the door she took his hand and said earnestly:

"You don't know how I appreciate the revelation you have made to me. I know it must have been hard for you to come and tell me about seeing Clifford go into that terrible place so many times; and I am grateful."

"Don't mention it, please," protested Hartell, striving unsuccessfully to reach his mustache with his tongue. "I couldn't bear to see you throw yourself away on a worthless fellow. I save a good many blocks by cutting through Beecher street on the way home and that's how I happened to notice him there."

The next day Ethel failed to appear at the office, telephoning that she was suffering from a headache. The succeeding day was Sunday. The rain had ceased but the weather had turned chilly and the sun hid behind clouds. Ethel listened in vain for the doorbell or the telephone, hoping Cliff would appear as he had done each Sunday for more than a year. True, she had told him it was all over; nevertheless, she had expected him to come and make some kind of a protest and attempt an explanation. The morning passed very gloomily for her.

Early in the afternoon the landlady summoned her to the telephone, and Ethel tripped over a chair in her haste to answer the call.

"This is Mr. Hartell," said the voice on the wire. "Could I call on you this afternoon?"

"I'm sorry," she replied, "but I'm too ill to entertain." And she went back to her room to gaze thoughtfully at a picture of a flaxen-haired, smiling youth.

About five o'clock a delegation of three girls from her Sunday school class called on her.

"We were anxious to learn if you were ill," said one, "and if not we wanted you to go with us to visit a poor family that the class has decided to help."

Ethel took decided interest in the excursion when it was explained that the family lived on Beecher street.

They walked past the gloomy, rickety wooden dwellings, through throngs of dirty urchins who hooted and made faces at them, and finally came to a dingy opening that proved to be the entrance to a flight of stairs.

Up these steps the girls stumbled, their way lighted by only a few rays that sifted through the cracks in the flimsy outside wall. One of the party knocked at the door that confronted them at the top of the stairs.

Footsteps sounded on the floor, evidently those of a child. Some one fumbled at the knob and the door was swung open to reveal a chubby, round-faced boy of about four years.

A maimed, disreputable toy bear was suspended by its leg from one hand of the tot, who blinked curiously at his four visitors. The opening of the door permitted a warm, pungent odor to penetrate the hall and each of the girls involuntarily shuddered.

"Who is it?" called a voice from within—a weak, plaintive voice, that of a woman.

The tot, who was clothed in a nondescript suit of several materials and colors, turned and called:

"Tree dirls."

"Come right in," answered the voice. "I am ill and cannot come to the door."

The girls entered and noticed that the pungent odor increased. The room was permeated with an unhealthful warmth, caused by keeping all the windows closed and thus conserving the heat radiated from the small wood stove.

The designs on the wall paper had all but become eradicated by accumulation of smoke, grease and dust. On one wall was a framed picture of a young man and woman, evidently a bridal couple. A row of picture postcards was the only other decoration.

A table occupied the center of the room, and nearby were a three-legged stool and a dilapidated rocking chair. The floor was covered with a faded rag carpet.

"Here I am," called the woman, from the dingiest corner of the room. "Don't look around. I'm too ill to keep the place clean, and Jimmy here is too young."

The girls found her lying on a narrow bed, or rather, a bunk. She was frail and emaciated, but she carried a pleasant smile of greeting.

Jimmy hovered near, still clinging to the bear. Ethel, a lover of children, picked him up in her arms.

"My, my, what clothes!" she murmured to herself, but Jimmy overheard her.

"I'm donna have new suit," he announced. "Man's donna bring it."

"Who do you—" Ethel began, but at that moment Jimmy, hearing familiar sounds on the stairs, scrambled from her arms and dashed toward the door.

"He hears his man," explained the woman on the bed. "Nearly every night he brings us food, and sometimes candy or something to wear. He found Jimmy on the street one night and came home with him. Jimmy told me his man was going to bring him a new suit today."

The door was flung open and a young man entered, placed a bundle on the stool and gathered the little boy in his arms.

"My man," breathed Jimmy, hugging the newcomer, while Ethel started forward in amazement upon recognizing him.

"Cliff!" she cried.

Clifford Eldridge placed his human burden on the floor and stared in astonishment that equaled her own.

So it was decreed that a home of poverty should be the setting for a proud, sensitive, impulsive girl to ask forgiveness—and get it.

Let Children Pick Clothes.

Everyone remembers when he or she was a child how iritating it was to have our parents pick all our clothes without giving us any choice in the matter. In the Woman's Home Companion a writer says: "Now, what I am asking for the boys is this: Take your sons with you when you buy their clothing. Consult their tastes somewhat. Don't let them select anything ridiculous, but give them a choice of half a dozen sensible coats or hats or whatever it may be. Don't scold them too much if they come home with the straps on their bloomer trousers unhooked so the trouser legs are almost long. No doubt the captain of the baseball team and 'all the other fellows' wear theirs that way. Or if your boy comes up the street with his cap over his right ear, while you are telling him that he looks 'just like a little street tough' remember it was the style that you, yourself followed last winter, and that 'what all the fellows do' means just as much to Johnny as Paris notes do to you."

Snakes.

An explanation of this hallucination is offered by the result of French experiments a few years ago. Sixteen alcoholic patients were examined with the ophthalmoscope, and it was found that the minute blood vessels in the retina of the eyes were congested. In this condition they appear black, and are projected into the field of vision, where their movements resemble the squirming of serpents.

Professional Dignities.

"Dishere canal boat business is loomin' up right important," remarked Mr. Erastus Pinkley. "I specks dars gotta be some 'scussion 'bout my employment."

"What's the matter with your job?"

"It's all right, 'ceppin' jes' dis. I don't want to be called 'a mule driver' no mo'. Hereafter I wants to be 'luded to as 'a pilot.'"

TO STOP BREWING AFTER DECEMBER 1

WASHINGTON, Sept. 19—President Wilson has signed a proclamation prohibiting, after next October 1, the use of any foodstuffs in brewing beers except malt and hops. After December 1 brewers must cease brewing altogether. The Food Administration said there would still be enough beer in the vats to last from two to six months, and the sale of this will not be stopped.

Disposition of his case awaits instructions from Washington, it was announced by the Department of Justice office here. Fay, who styled himself as a Lieutenant in the Prussian army, was sent to Atlanta to serve a three-year sentence after his conviction in New York Federal Court on the charge of conspiring with others in a plot to blow up Entente ships leaving New York Harbor. Fay had perfected a powerful bomb, designed to blow up a ship's stern.

RETURNED MEN ELOPE WITH COMRADE'S WIVES

LONDON, Ont., Sept. 19.—Military authorities here were officially notified Tuesday of two cases in which returned soldiers eloped with the wives of men who are their comrades. Pte. E. Joseph, 649 Marshall Street, London, claims that his wife left on Friday, September 13, with Pte. H. R. Johnson. He alleges that the elopers took his child, furniture and food, and that as a result he is left homeless. He claims that he traced them to Toronto and the police of that city have been asked for assistance.

Pte. W. Q. Blain, a returned man employed as a theatre manager at Kitchener, has filed an allegation that his wife eloped with Pte. Sydney South, a Dominion policeman who was stationed for a time at Kitchener, and who was later transferred to Chatham. Mrs. Blain left three small children, her husband reports, and proceeded with South to Windsor. Captain Asa Minard, inspector of Dominion Police, claims that South is no longer in the service and that he was dismissed for incompetency.

A heavily-loaded Grand Trunk freight train early yetserday morning met with a mishap near Birdsall, Peterboro County. The train had a considerable supply of grain and a number of cars were derailed. No one was reported injured. It is thought that the rail spread though there is some doubt as to the exact cause of the derailment.

BURGLARS AT COBOURG

At an early hour on Monday morning the stores of Jackson & Clarke of King street, and Bert Clarke's store on Division street in the Town of Cobourg were burglarized. At the former store an entrance was effected by smashing a pane of glass in a door. The door between the tailor shop and store was bored with an augur, and a panel taken out, and then the lock was slipped. An overcoat, with green ground check and belt, a light grey suit of clothes, a combination suit of underclothes, all size 35, a pair of grey chamoissette gloves, and a pair of stockings are missing there. At Bert Clarke's a window on Swayne street was forced, and several shirts, sizes 14 and 15, and a small sum of money are missing.

COAL SITUATION

It was decided to procure on behalf of the city a quantity of coal for delivery in the near future. Mr. Wills informed a representative of The Intelligencer that he is in a position to secure a considerable quantity of coal for delivery in the city within a reasonable time. This may be taken advantage of by the City Council.

WOUNDED SOLDIER WRITES

The following extracts of public interest are taken from a letter written by Pte. Ted Stapley from Chester Hospital, Chester, Eng., to his mother Mrs. Richard Stapley of this city: "I have been on stretchers and in bed since the night of the 10th. I was hit at two o'clock that afternoon just as we jumped into the German trench. The only fault I have to find with this hospital is that they don't give us cigarettes, but our Red Cross people were around the other day and gave us a little bag, containing a writing pad, tooth brush, soap, tooth powder, safety razor and a towel. There are ten of us in this ward all Canadians. When we went over the top our losses wer heavy, but Fritzies were double ours. The roads were lined with dead Germans and the trenches were thick with them. I do not think I will ever see France again, as the war will be over before I get better. I wish you would send me the papers so I can read about it."

ARRIVED SAFELY

AIRMAN FALLS 300 FEET

PLOUGHING BY TRACTORS

A party consisting of Mr. W. B. Riggs, Mr. John Lloyd, Mr. Lewis and Mr. F. S. Anderson motored to Cobourg in anticipation of a pending ploughing match where Fordson tractors are demonstrating. Mr. Riggs has secured the agency for this district.

DUCK HUNTER DROWNED

On Tuesday Mr. Thomas Hutton of Lindsay, a G. T. R. employee, was drowned in the Upper Scugog River while duck hunting with his brother-in-law, James Hickey. The two men were upset from a boat when it struck a stump and Hutton became entangled with weeds and was unable to extricate himself. Mr. Hickey was rescued in an exhausted condition. The victim leaves a wife and large family.

SPLENDID FISHING

To catch one maskalonge in four days is pretty good fishing, but to catch four 'lunge in one day is a feat which backs all fish stories off the boards and introduces a new champion fisherman in the person of Mr. D. V. Sinclair, the well-known Front street merchant. Had it been possible to catch more than four 'lunge in one day legally Mr. Sinclair might even have surprised his amazing record but being a law-abiding citizen he was content to set a record which it will be hard to equal. A light steel rod was used and a spinner of unique design, which is a certain lure and a sure catch. Crow Lake was the scene of the exploit, Mr. Sinclair being one of the party of local citizens who visited that favorite resort for fishermen on Tuesday. The party had great success and brought home some beauties.

A REMARKABLE EXPERIENCE

Last night, notwithstanding the rain that poured down, a splendid number (some who said they had never been inside the S. A. citadel before) heard Miss Ethel Hatton tell her remarkable story of how her ankle bones were immediately straightened in answer to prayer. Miss Hatton said, "I was troubled with my crooked feet, and they kept getting worse all the time, until at last they were turned in and I walked on my ankles. I cannot describe what they were like or the pain I went through. I saw several doctors. One would say my feet would have to be put in splints; another, my ankle bones would have to be broken and set over again, and still another said they would have to be set in plaster for six to twelve months. I expected I should be a cripple all my life, if I went without an operation. On August 5, 1915, my feet were put in splinters, and I prayed after all had retired that night. I was in much pain and had not slept for three or four nights. I asked God to heal my feet and make them strong and I would only use them for His glory. Suddenly the bones seemed to move right back into their places and I went right off to sleep, the pain was gone. When I awoke I found my feet were straight, and I could wear leather shoes, which I could not do before. They are still straight and I never have a pain or an ache." Miss Hatton is 18 years of age, and her story had a wonderful effect on those present. She left last evening by auto for Trenton, and will return to Toronto, where she enters the Salvation Army Training College for the October session. Miss Hatton resided at Trenton until recently.

Faithful Service Appreciated By Members of Moira Lodge

Mr. John Newton, For Twenty Years Secretary of Moira Lodge, No. 11, A. F. & A. M., Honored by Lodge Members And Presented With Address of Appreciation Accompanied By Gold Watch and Chain and Gold-Headed Cane

Appreciation for long and faithful service as Secretary of Moira Lodge, No. 11, A. F. and A. M., was fittingly expressed last evening at the meeting of that Lodge when Mr. John Newton, Belleville's veteran Chief of Police, was honored by his fellow members of Moira Lodge, being the guest of honor at a pleasant after session during which he was the recipient of an illuminated address of appreciation, a gold watch and chain and a gold-headed cane.

Despite the inclemency of the weather their was a large attendance of members and visitors. The regular business of the Lodge including the conferring of the First Degree was transacted with W. M. J. W. Barlow presiding, after which an adjournment was made to the banquet room where a tasty war-time spread received full justice. Then followed a very enjoyable social session with speech, song and story, presided over in happy manner by Worshipful Master Barlow.

The chief feature of the evening was the desire of the members of Moira Lodge to suitably mark the twentieth anniversary of faithful service of Mr. John Newton as Secretary of the Lodge and to show in a tangible manner that this service is appreciated. Mr. Newton was very much surprised at being presented with the address, watch and chain and gold-headed cane and needless to say was highly gratified at the very handsome evidence of appreciation shown by the members of Moira Lodge. The address was read by Mr. H. F. Ketcheson, P.D.D.G.M., and supplemented with a brief speech in which Mr. Ketcheson voiced his personal appreciation of Mr. Newton, who had been initiated into Moria Lodge upon the same night as himself thirty -five years ago. The watch was presented by Mr. H. A. Morgan, I. P. M.; the chain by Mr. William Cooke, S.W.; and the cane by Mr. C. F. Cochrane.

Mr. Newton was so taken by surprise that he was unable to more than briefly express his gratitude out of a heart full and overflowing with this kindly token of brotherly appreciation.

A number of other speakers added their quota to the kind words already spoken, including Rev. A. W. Pickford, of Brighton, District Deputy Grand Master; Rev. Dr. Baker, Mr. F. E. O'Flynn, Mr. Alex. Walker, Rev. Dr. Scott, Rev. Mr. Swayne, Col. W. N. Ponton, County Clerk Nugent and others.

Pleasing musical selections were given by Robinson orchestra, Belleville quartette (Messrs Mouck, Austin, Burrows and Moorman) and Mr. Harry McKay.

The illuminated address was the handiwork of Rev. Mr. Pickford, D. D.G.M. and is certainly a work of art reflecting credit upon the talent of the reverend gentleman.

During the business session of the lodge a resolution of condolence to Mr. H. F. Ketcheson, P.D.D.G.M. and family was passed, expressing the sympathy of the lodge at the sad affliction occasioned by the death of Mr. Ketcheson's young son.

THE ADDRESS

Belleville, Sept. 18th, 1918.
To R. W. Bro. John Newton,
Past. D.D.G.M.,
Prince Edward Dist. No. 13, G.R.C.
R. W. Sir and Bro:—

The members of Moira Lodge No. 11 A.F.&A.M. desire to express their appreciation of your many years of service to the Lodge as Worshipful Master and Secretary, your uniform courtesy and brotherly affection extended to all its members, and the craft in general, and request that you will accept from them this gold watch, chain and walking stick as a visible token of their love and esteem. Our prayer is that the Most High may spare you for many years as an example and teacher to our younger brethren.

Committee—J. W., Barlow, W.M.; Wm. Cook, S.W.; Dr. J. W. Kinnear, J. W.; H. F. Ketcheson, H. A. Morgan, Chas. F. Cochrane, A. J. Boyes.

K. of C. Hut Fund Half Subscribed

Headquarters Open at All Hours —Voluntary Subscriptions A Feature

One of the most noticable features in the present Campaign for the K. of C. Army Hut Fund is the number of voluntary subscribers, who have walked into the Campaign Headquarters, corner of Bridge and Front Streets, with generous donations for this most worthy cause. Some subscriptions are as high as $100 and there are a great many $50 and $25 subscriptions. The canvassers are making every endeavor to call at every house in Belleville, but it is not always possible to find the householder at home, or it may not be convenient for them at the time to meet the canvassers. For this reason the committee is making a great sacrifice to keep the headquarters open all the time to give an opportunity to these people, who were overlooked, or were not in a position to meet the canvassers when they called, to drop in with their subscriptions. It is not believed that any person in Belleville would deliberately avoid giving, which is an absolute duty, to this fund. It is therefore hoped that within the next three days that those, who have not as yet subscribed will call in with their donation. A voluntary subscription is also very greatly appreciated, as it shows the proper spirit of giving.

Up until noon today the returns from Belleville District shows very nearly half of the objective has been reached. The subscriptions heard from amount in the neighborhood of $2,250, but several canvassers from the outlying districts were not heard from last night. This will swell the total over $2,250. The hardest work is ahead, as the best subscriptions are in. It is therefore up to these people, who have not subscribed to make a special effort to do so in order that Belleville may reach its objective of $5,000 on Saturday night.

The reports coming from all over Canada and indicative of nation-wide interest taken in this movement. The first day in Montreal over $20,000 had been subscribed. This subscription included some of Canadas leading men and institutions. Sir Robert Borden, Premier of Canada, and Sir Wilfrid Laurier, Leader of the Oposition, were among the first subscribers, and with their subscritions gave unqualified indorsation of the work done by the Army Hut Fund. In Belleville every class of citizen has been represented in the general subscriptions, that have been recorded. As the leaders of the nation have done, so let us follow and help to swell the Victory Fund for our Boys in France.

Blame the Nerves

When you cannot sleep and are easily irritated and worried you have reason to suspect that the nerves are below normal.

They are not getting proper nourishment from the food you eat and need a little special help. A few weeks' treatment with Dr. Chase's Nerve Food will do wonders for anyone in this condition. Note your increase in weight while using this food cure.

The public should quickly respond to the appeal of the Salvation Army for they are looking after the boys over there in a noble manned as well as looking after their families here at home. Hundreds of stories could be told of the self-sacrifice and devotion of the Army Workers,

TRY THIS IF YOU HAVE DANDRUFF

There is one sure way that has never failed to remove dandruff at once, and that is to dissolve it, then you destroy it entirely. To do this, just get about four ounces of plain, common liquid arvon from any drug store (this is all you will need), apply it at night when retiring; use enough to moisten the scalp and rub it in gently with the finger tips.

By morning, most if not all, of your dandruff will be gone, and three or four more applications will completely dissolve and entirely destroy every single sign and trace of it, no matter how much dandruff you may have.

You will find all itching and digging of the scalp will stop instantly, and your hair will be fluffy, lustrous, glossy, silky and soft, and look and feel a hundred times better.

HAIG'S MEN SWEEP FORWARD

OVER 10,000 PRISONERS AND 60 GUNS TAKEN

GERMAN COUNTER ATTACKS FAIL TO HOLD FORWARD BRITISH SWEEP—AUSTRALIANS OCCUPY VIRTUALLY ALL OUTPOSTS ON HINDENBURG LINE FROM PONTRUET TO GOUZEAUCOURT—MAIN DEFENCES SMASHED IN PLACES—MORE THAN 10,000 HUNS AND 60 GUNS TAKEN—ENEMY FIGHTS DESPERATELY TO STEM BRITISH ADVANCE, BUT HAIG'S MEN CONQUER ALL RESISTANCE—BATTLE FRONT WIDENED TO TWENTY-FIVE MILES.

Special Despatches to The Intelligencer, Canadian Press, Limited.

LONDON, Sept. 20.—(Official)—British troops last night made further progress north-west of St. Quentin, capturing the strong point of Mallaisese Farm, opposite Le Catelet. Important gains were scored by the British in the Lempire sector, pushing in to a depth of more than a mile. The town of Moeuvres, an important point on the Canal du Nord opposite Cambrai, which was taken by the Germans in a local counter thrust recently, was recaptured by the British.

PARIS, Sept. 20.—(Official)—In the enveloping of St. Quentin the French have carried Essigny-le-Grand. The Germans during the night made a strong attack against the new French positions north of Allemant, between the Ailette and the Aisne Rivers. The enemy was repulsed with heavy loss. The French have gained further ground north-east of Vailly in the direction of the Chemin des Dames. A German attempt to cross the Vesle river where American troops are in the line was repulsed.

FOUR MILES FROM ST. QUENTIN.

LONDON, Sept. 20.—Australian troops today continued to penetrate the Hindenburg defence system and are now two-thirds of a mile from Bellinglise, four miles northwest of St. Quentin.

BRITISH MAKE STEADY PROGRESS.

NEW YORK, Sept. 20.—The Associated Press today issues the following: "British and French troops are making further progress in the envelopment of St. Quentin. German resistance continues stubborn and battles are taking place along a front of more than twenty miles from south of St. Quentin to west of Cambrai. In the north the British are pushing towards Le Catelet and have advanced a mile nearer that town on the west, capturing an important farm position between Epehy and Lempire. South of this point the Australians are east of the outpost positions of the Hindenburg line and the steady progress of the British threatens the main denfenses of the line all the way from Lempire to St. Quentin.

LONDON, Sept. 20—The British advance between Cambrai and St. Quentin passed Wednesday afternoon and evening only long enough to smash a series of heavy German counter attacks then swept forward again on a wide front, capturing about eleven miles of the outposts of the Hindenburg line.

The German counter-attacks began about five a.m. on an eight mile front between Gouzaucourt and Trescault, following terrific bombardment. They were smothered by the British fire, Field Marshal Haig reported yesterday. A few elements entered the British trenches, but were annihilated.

The British drive was resumed shortly before midnight. Australian troops dashed forward and occupied virtually the whole of the outposts of the Hindenburg line from Pontruet northward of Gouzeaucourt.

8,000 HUNS IN BRITISH BAG

With the British Forces in France, Sept. 20—Field Marshal Haig's forces up to midnight Wednesday night had captured a total of more than 8,000 Germans as the result of their drive of Wednesday on the Cambrai front.

Several thousand yards of the Hindenburg outpost line were in British hand yesterday morning in the Villeret sector, southwest of Le Catelet.

Forty guns were captured by the British Wednesday. In the 8,000 prisoners taken, 23 German regiments in eleven divisions were representd.

With the British armies in France, Sept. 20—The British and German armies swayed back and forth in a titanic struggle yesterday for possession of the Hindenburg line between Cambrai and St. Quentin.

Reports of the fighting indicate the British are doggedly holding to their gains, while the Germans' desperate efforts to beat back the elements of Gen. Byng's army that are too near—some are beyond—the Hindenburg line are entirely unsuccessful.

The enemy's counter efforts centred about Havrincourt. The fighting here has been the fiercest of the whole battle. The Germans launched six divisions at one point, gaining a temporary success, only to lose ground later.

BYNG MADE BAG, TOO

The Germans threw in great masses about Havrincourt Wednesday and as far south as the Gauche Wood south east of Gouzeaucourt, in front of the Hindenburg line. As a result General Byng gathered in 32 officers and 1,438 men to add to Gen. Rawlinson's 6,500 prisoners. He also took a complete battery of eleven German 77's including crews and horses.

The first counter-attack came at Gauche Wood. Grey masses came pouring out of Villers-Guislain after an artillery tornado, gaining the wood and holding it for a brief time before they were driven back.

They again essayed to attack and again were repulsed.

In the meantime southeast of Havrincourt six enemy divisions came from behind the Hindenburg line and attempted to crush the British who had advanced there earlier in the day. Forty batteries participated in the enemy's preliminary bombardment The attack was broken up with heavy losses.

Northeast of Havrincourt beyond the canal and the main defences where the British had installed themselves a few days ago the Germans also attackd gaining the well-remembered sunken road and the long trench known as "Clergy avenue." But it was only for a brief period as the British soon ousted them and were holding safely at last reports.

HUNS CARRIED OFF FEET

While the tanks played an eminent part in Wednesday's fighting, long-trained English and Australian troops mostly overcome the wire entanglements and machine guns in their own individual manner. They carried the Germans off their feet by the very dash of their attack.

The exploit was remarkable because among five divisions opposite their lesser number was one entirely fresh—the 185th. Identified prisoners represent at least twenty-two battalions. Those seen in the cages are mud-covered and weary, but cheerful. All are husky and well fed. Thirteen lieutenants in one group when discovered were surprised at news of Austria's pace proposals. They unanimously declared it was a "good idea" and said there surely should be some way of getting together.

Reminded of the Russian treaty they said that Russia was "different" and really Germanic and anyhow, Germany was acting in Russia's best interests.

The lieutenants were the first prisoners so far taken on this front who had heard the result of the St. Mihiel attack though they knew nothing of the details. They admitted the Germans underestimated the Americans, holding the opinion that the "Yanks" are good patrol fighters, but had not yet learned how to handle a big attack.

With the British Forces in France, Sept. 20—Repeated attacks were delivered against Gauche Wood. All these weres battered by the British defence. A heavy thrust from Villers-Guislain was thrown back with severe punishment to the enemy, as was another effort near Hargicourt.

Wednesday's attack secured to the British all the important observation points looking over the Hindenburg system as well as a hold on the advanced Hindenburg line in the centre.

Hun Military Machine Is Badly Cracked

Special Despatch to The Intelligencer Canadian Press, Limited

With American Army in France, Sept. 20.—Further evidence of the debility of the German military machine is shown in a summary of information gathered by intelligence officers of the allied forces. There are now eighty-seven enemy divisions in reserve, not counting three Austrian divisions in the vicinity of Metz. Of these only thirteen are regarded as fit for an immediate offensive, having had more than a month rest. Twenty are considered fairly fit, having had three weeks' rest. The total of an American division is approximately 23,000, while the strength of an enemy division is now 10,000.

The British have taken over ten thousand prisoners and more than sixty guns since the opeartions began on Wednesday northwest of St. Quentin. The allies have now reached Benay.

Cope With Fuel Scarcity By Registering Small Users

In Toronto a movement has been started to ascertain how many families are without coal, with the idea of making arrangements to prevent suffering this winter. A prominent citizen of Belleville has suggested to The Intelligencer that a similar effort be made here at once so that the fuel situation can be resolutely faced and suffering prevented if possible. The prospects are that coal will be scarce and dear in the near future and an accurate knowledge of fuel requirements now is the first essential in dealing with the situation.

It is quite possible that a number of families in Belleville are facing the winter with little or no coal, and as the season advances their chances of getting fuel will grow smaller. The civic fuel committee and Fuel Commissioner should take this matter up at once and acting in co-operation with the local coal dealers make every effort to protect from suffering citizens whose circumstances prevent them from anticipating a possible fuel scarcity by laying in large coal supplies early in the season.

The requirements of small coal users should be registered with the amount on hand, if any. In Toronto the following advertisment has been inserted in the daily papers and is having good results:

> COAL! COAL! COAL!
> It has been drawn to my attention that a number of our citizens are absolutely without fuel, and in order to become aware of the extent of this condition, all such persons should fill in the blank below and mail same to the office of the Fuel Commissioner, Room No. 14, City Hall, not later than September 25th:
> NAME.. ........................................
> ADDRESS . ........................................
> Mark face of envelope, "Re Coal."
> R. CHISHOLM, Toronto Fuel Commissioner.

The fuel committee of the City Council could amplify this notice by adding blanks for amount on hand and estimated requirements, similar to the card now supplied the coal dealers by Fuel Commissioner Wills.

By ascertaining the requirements of the small coal users at once the situation can be dealt with intelligently and efficiently, and the coal dealers will be only too glad to co-operate with the City Council in this respect.

Impracticable Says Ottawa

Unlimited Taxable 5 1-2 p.c. Issue of Victory Bonds Would Fail

OTTAWA, Sept. 20—The suggestion which has been put forward and given wide publicity that an unlimited taxable 5 1-2 per cent issue of Victory Bonds should be put out, for the purpose of raising the funds required for the Government during the coming year, and for refunding at a premium certain outstanding war loans, amounting to many hundreds of millions of dollars, is regarded by the Financial Department are quite impracticable. It would, in the opinion of the Minister, inevitably fail to raise the immense sum of money which will be required for the prosecution of the war and the establishment of further Imperial credits for the purchase of wheat, foodstuffs and munitions in Canada. Assuming its success as possible, it would create a vast body of securities which, by reason of being out of conformity with investment conditions would speedily, upon our narrow markets go to a heavy discount, causing dissatisfaction among subscribers and necessitating the payment of a much higher interest rate upons ucceeding issues.

Tractors At Work Despite The Rain

COBOURG, Sept. 20.—Most of the farm tractors entered for the fourth annual field demonstration went into action at the old rifle ranges here Wednesday afternoon before a good crowd of spectators, gathered from all parts of the country and abroad; and although rain came within half an hour after the start was made, the plowmen did not allow it to interfere with their work, and each man finished his alloted land before pulling out, and on the whole a very considerable acreage was accounted for. Neither did the spectators allow the weather to interfere with their object of getting a line on the work turned out by the different machines, and it was well on toward evening when the crowd on the field began to disperse the members making their way first to inspect the belt driven machinery before returning to town.

When plowing started, a little after two o'clock the land was in ideal condition for working and some first-class work was turned out but as things grew damper the turning of a pretty furrow became more difficult, and tonight the plowmen are concerned with nothing else but the weather prospects for tomorow as a continua- though with soil such as exists at the tion of the rain will mean bad going, demonstration grounds, a few hours of good drying will work wonders in restoring satisfactory conditions.

Of the many workers who did their stunt yesterday afternoon none drew more attention as Mrs. Hall, of Cobourg, one of the Daughters of the Empire, who had charge of the refreshment tent at the ground. Although she had never seen a tractor working until yesterday she undertook to steer one over a piece of land such as is allotted to each of the demonstrators, and was successful in her efforts. On finishing her land Mrs. Hall was congratulatd by the superintendent of the field work, on the good showing she had made, and all present joined in applauding her work.

Among the prominent guests present at the demonstration yesterday were F. G. Behrends, of Albany, N.Y., who holds the position of special superintendent of farm machinery for the United States Government, and H. W. Riley, profesor of rural engineering at Cornell University.

Liberal Candidate In N. Huron Withdraws

WINGHAM, Sept. 20—John W. King of Bluevale who was nominated on July 25th by the Liberals of North Huron to contest the by-election for the Legistlature, tendered his resignation Wednesday to the Secresays that "owing to the inordinate uncommonness of the election, and the more than ordinary cost of a contest at this time" he feels it his duty to withdraw. A meeting of the Liberal of the riding will be held in the near future.

No Compromise Between Crime And Right, Clemenceau Declares

PARIS, Sept. 20.—Premier Clemenceau, speaking in the Senate, declared that the allies must keep on fighting until Germany understands there can be no compromise between crime and right.

"France desires the honor of expressing her gratitude to the splendid soldiers of the entente, whose efforts are about to free the populations from the subjugation of barbarism," the Premier said.

Referring to German atrocities, he said, "There will be no victory until such criminals are made to pay in full."

"A reversal of fortune has brought about a falling back of the Kaiser's armies before the peoples of free conscience," he continued. "What do they want, and what do you want? You must keep on fighting until the moment when the enemy can understand there can be no compromise between crime and right.

"I have heard it said that peace cannot be brought about by a military decision. That was not what Germany said when she let loose the war with all its horrors. Therefore, let it be as Germany has willed, and as Germany has done.

"We only seek peace so that future generations may be spared the abominations of the past.

"Forward, then, to the liberation of people from the last fury of foul force. Forward to victory. The whole of France and all of thinking humanity are with you."

Labor Congress Endorses War Loan

Special Despatch to The Intelligencer Canadian Press Special

QUEBEC, Sept. 20—After several hours acrimonious debate the Trades and Labor Congress to-day adopted a resolution urging every worker to invest in the forthcoming warloan. # Ruin Roumans Murder Poles

Widespread Conspiracy Engineered by Bolsheviki To Disorganize Allies

WASHINGTON, Sept. 20.—The betrayal of Roumania and elaborate advance plans of Germany and her Russian Bolsheviki tools for suppressing and murdering loyal Roumanians, Russians and Poles are explained in another chapter of the astounding secret Russian documents which the American Government is giving to the public.

Other instalments of the series have described how the Bolshevik leaders, Lenine and Trotsky, and their associates, were bought by the Germans for millions in gold and engineered their bloody overthrow of Russia for the benefit of their masters. Now the story is told of how, while the Brest-Litovsk peace conference farce was still in progress, the Bolsheviks were sending hired agents into Roumania to disorganize the armies of Russia's ally, dethrone the Roumanian King and turn loose the German armies occupied there for service in a great offensive on the Western front.

Campaign of Murder

The second phase of the latest disclosure shows the Bolsheviks, at German direction, undertaking not only to kill refractory Russian Generals, but to shoot individually and wholesale Polish soldiers who were refusing to be sold to the Germans and patriotically keeping the field against their enemies. One of the documents transmits orders from the German Intelligence Service to "take most decisive measures, up to shooting en masse, against Polish troops," and to institute surveillance of institutions and persons, including the Roman Catholic Polish clergy.

Explanatory notes by Edgar Sisson, who obtained the documents, add many details lacking in the papers themselves, including a story of how the Roumanian Minister barely escaped assassination after being arrested by the Bolsheviks and released through the efforts of Ambassador Francis and other diplomats.

Trotsky and Roumania

The machinations of Trotsky, inspired by the German General Hoffman, for the disruption of Roumania are disclosed in Document No. 37.

To the Commission on Combating the Counter-revolution: Commander-in-chief Krilenko has requested the Counter-espionage at the Staff to inform you that it is necessary to order the following persons to the Roumanian from immediately: From Petrograd, Commissar Kuhl, Socialist Rakovsky, Sailor Guleshin; and from the front the Chief of the Red Guard, Duxasov. These persons should be supplied with literature and with financial resources for agitating. To them is committed the task of taking all measures for the deposing of the Roumanfanian King and the removal of counter-revolutionary Roumanian officers—Director of Counter-espionage, Feirabend; Secretary, N. Drachev.

Note—This marks the beginning of large-scale work to disorganize the Roumanian army. That in its early winter phases it advances disappointingly to Germany is evidenced by vengeful steps taken later by General Hoffman and Trotsky from Brest-Litovsk, when in the middle of January Trotsky, at the request of General Hoffman, ordered the arrest in Petrograd of the Roumanian Minister Diamandi. The contents of this letter, written by Joffe, were telegraphed to Washington in February and photographic copy of letter forwarded.

Planned Assassination

At about the same time the Roumanian public gold reserves in custody within the Kremlin walls at Moscow were seized by the Russian Government. Diamandi was released from arrest at the demand of the United Diplomatic Delegations at Petrograd, but his humiliation continued, and on January 28 he was ordered from Petrograd, being given less than 10 hours to prepare for the departure of a party that contained many women and children. Ambassador Francis sought in vain of Zalkind, who was acting as Foreign Minister in the absence of Trotsky, again at Brest, for an extension of the time of departure. The Roumanian party was thrown pell mell on a train at midnight. It was delayed in Finland on one excuse and another, not immediately apparent, but in three weeks the Minister, leaving behind a large part of his people, was allowed to proceed to Torneo. By good luck he reached there the day after the Red Guard lost Torneo to the White Guard. That day saved his life for on the person of Svetlitzky, a Russian Commissar, who joined him in mid-Finland and accompanied him to Torneo, was found an order to Timofeyeff, the Commissar at Torneo, to shoot him. Svetlitzky was shot instead.

Close to Trotsky

When I passed through Torneo the control officer talked frankly about the details, expressing the opinion that the shooting might have been a mistake, as it was not shown that Svetlitzky was aware of the contents of the letter. Svetlitzky, however, was an important person in Petrograd, close to Trotsky. Our American party brought Guranesco, the First Secretary of the Roumanian Delegation, out of Finland through the lines with us. He had been in Red Finland seven weeks. Behind us at Bjorneburg were left several families of Roumanians who had departed from Petrograd with the Minister. We would have liked to have brought them through the lines of the two armies, but our venture was too desperate to permit unauthorized additions to the party.

The marginal notation on this letter is "execute," initialed "Ch." the sign manual of Chicherin, the returned exile from England, at that time Assistant Minister of Foreign Affairs, now Minister of Foreign Affairs.

Letters from Joffe at Brest-Litovsk carrying General Hoffman's order through Trotsky to incite agitation against the Roumanian army, and to arrest Diamandi, the Roumanian Minister. Photograph of this letter was sent to State Department.

13-FOOT BOMBS IN GERMAN PLANES

With the British Army in France, Sept. 20.—Wednesday night German airplanes were busy bombing the St. Quentin sector, and the enemy utilized a number of new type planes of huge size. Three of these were shot down east of Peronne. They were capable of seating eight men. The most astounding thing about them, however, was that they carried bombs thirteen feet long; which contained 2,000 pounds of explosives. This is by far the biggest bomb the Germans have yet produced.

Insane Lust For Power and Gold Dug Deep Pit For Germany

"Whom the gods intend to destroy they first make mad."

This aphorism has come to us from the ages. It was no haphazard statement made upon the spur of the moment. It was the concrete, well-considered opinion, after many ages, arrived at by observation and reflection. It means that when a nation is doomed to destruction the first stage is madness. The brain becomes disordered. The imagination fancies something which the cold knowledge of facts would show does not exist. The idea possesses the mind, and the mind affected by the will, arrives at a conclusion which is erroneous and the result is ruin.

Kaiser's Star Sinks.

Germany is doomed. Her star is sinking below the horizon. Has the first stage of her madness passed? Had she become insane before she entered into the present war? Undoubtedly she had. Apply the conduct of Germany as far as the parallel is applicable to an individual. The verdict would be insanity. The beginning was when Bismarck, with fire, blood, the mailed fist, without any regard for treaties or the rights of the states he was conquering, by craft, by the use of every kind of force, overcame these states and moulded his conquests into the vast empire of Germany, having first bound helpless Austria in fetters she could not break.

Golden Dreams.

The Kaiser counted his seventy millions of subjects. The great generals and officers and the militarists saw the golden streams flowing into their country from all the world. Prosperity everywhere. Possessed of colonies of vast extent and millions of subjects inhabiting them.

They looked at the Krupp works, the greatest in the world, capable of vast extension. Their army built up into the greatest force the world had seen by the money extorted in 1870 from bleeding France. They wondered at their generosity in regard to France. They saw their great cities filled with industries, their vast exports, their navy, lines of steamers sailing all over the world.

World Domination.

Then the Kaiser and Crown Prince determined that Germany should rule gether all the relics of Napoleonic wars, all of the histories of those wars the world. The Crown Prince got to. He told the militarists he had learned how Napoleon had won his battles and also how he had lost them, and he said he understood how to avoid the mistakes Napoleon had made.

Then the Kaiser declared that he would conquer the world and built up his vast army. They began to consider the position which Germany occupied. They saw France prosperous and happy. The wounds caused by the war had nearly heeled. Of course Alsace and Lorraine could not be forgotten; but all was peace. They would attack France, and this time they would strip the flesh and leave but the bones. What about England? England by treaty was bound in case of France being attacked, to furnish one hundred thousand men to assist France.

The Old Contemptibles.

England had only a contemptible little army which she would require for her own protection. Germany had played excellent cards with Britain. She had cultivated most friendly relations. King Edward had visited the Kaiser. Visits had been exchanged. In those visits the keen eye of the Kaiser had appraised and understood well England's military force and position.

At a great banquet the leading statesmen of England had proposed the health of the Kaiser, using most eulogistic terms, and this banquet was held in London. Then the tempest-tossed green isle of Erin; the fratricidal struggle for home rule; Sir Edward Carson and the great primate of Ireland, Cardanal Logue, and many bishops arrayed on opposite sides; Sir John French and other officers refusing to go to Ireland to suppress the trouble; India seething with sedition; the great probability of a religious war being roused in this vast country with the probability that the English Government would be driven out of India. America was the laughing-stock of the world, the President all for peace; America mercenary, gold-grabbing, hundreds of millionaires; hundreds of thousands of Germany's sons in America—manufacturers, great bankers, all ready to shed their blood or if necessary die for the fatherland. Then it would delight the United States if England took necessarily a weak hand in the affray, to see the old land of Britain a little trimmed, not hurt much, but her pride a little touched.

No fear of America. Thousands of reasons existed why America would keep aloof. She had no army or navy. Too far away to be of any assistance—nothing to be feared in that quarter.

Russia Easy.

Russia—what about that great country? The Czar, the blood relative of the Kaiser; the Czarina upon the most friendly terms; the two monarchs writing to each other using the pet names of "Willie" and "Nicky"; Russia suffering still from her humiliation by Japan; Russia full of Nihilists and Socialists who required the closest watching. No, Russia was not to be considered—she had neither money nor troops.

So that Germany would simply march over little Belgium, walk into France, and in three or four weeks hoist the German Eagle over the towers of Notre Dame. The German ambassador to England told his Government that England had so many difficulties to contend with she could not fight.

Insanity of Greed.

Then the blood flew to the Kaiser's brain. Now was the moment! The world slumbering peacefully; Germany, Austria and Italy, bound together by treaty, would proclaim war and descend upon France, with a vast army, and so suddenly that France would become a German province, an apendage of Germany.

Retribution.

The fates had determined to destroy Germany, and as a preliminary the Kaiser and the militarists were first made mad. The end is rapidly approaching. The doom is certain. There is one fact which must not be forgotten. There are millions of Germans who were opposed to the war and are now opposed. The debates in the Reichstag plainly showed this to be the case. But the moment the Kaiser said war, that moment all civil authority ended; Germany became a military camp. Civilians had no voice in affairs. They might decry the war in the Reichstag, but elsewhere the civilian who spoke a word against the war was placed against a wall and shot. As evidence that the militarists are mad, think of the acts of Germany with respect to other nations. Germany found herself allied with Austria and Turkey. Opposed to Germany were France and England. She so mismanaged Italy that Italy joined the Entente. Instead of treating neutral nations with amnesty and kindness, and seeking to ingratiate herself with them, she has used her vast efforts to make neutrals her enemies. She has destroyed the fleets of Norway, Sweden, Denmark and Holland. She is doing her utmost to turn Spain against her by sinking her ships and drowning her sailors and passengers. She forced America to fight by destroying her ships and citizens.

Hated and Despised.

By this conduct she has allied against her twenty-five nations and is hated and despised by almost every nation in the world. See what she has done to Poland, Russia, Serbia, Roumania, Montenegro! She has brought her great and prosperous country to ruin and bankruptcy. Accursed by God and man, she is fast hastening to her doom, and our fervent prayer should be that the end may soon come.

Northern Farmers Urgently Need Help

COBALT, Sept. 20—The loss of approximately one million dollars' worth of the crops of the farmers along the T. & N. O. Railway between Cobalt and Cochrane is threatened unless dry weather sets in, unless a large number of volunteer farmers can be secured to gather the harvest. About three weeks ago wet weather set in, with the result that the greater portion of what promised to be one of the bumper crops in the history of the district is threatened with ruin.

Tuesday night at a meeting of the Cobalt Board of Trade, plans were made to lend all possible assistance. This even the Mine Managers' Association deliberated concerning the problem. Preliminary plans consist of the enrolling of voluntary workers willing to leave for the affected district at twelve hours' notice, while owners of motor cars in Cobalt, Haileybury and New Liskeard are offering their cars to transport men to the points where most needed. Also, Chairman J. L. Englehart, of the T. & N. O. wil be requested to provide special trains, when or if needed, the first train to leave Cobalt perhaps Sunday morning. Mayor McKinnon of Cobalt, declares his willingness to declare a public holiday if necessary in order that as many men as possible might join in the campaign to save the crops.

WHERE POPPIES WAVE

The following verses were composed by Pte. Alex. Conley, of Belleville, recently reported to have died of wounds. The verses would seem to be a prophetic forecast of the writer's own death:

'Twas a busy day in Flanders,
The sun shone over head,
There was a soldiers' graveyard
And a gallant lad was dead.

He lies upon gun carriage,
His mates stand all in line,
The chaplain and the bearers are ready
And the traffic stops at a sign.

There is a rider with dispatches,
Some lower an ambulance car,
There are waggons of all descriptions
And officers motor far.

Now the last prayers are offered,
The wagons start again.
We leave our silent comrade,
Who heeds not sun or rain.

Sporting Notes

Tomorrow's game between the Young Irishmen (Y.I.C.B.A. Team) of Kingston, champions of the Junior City League, and the fast and strong-going G.T.R. team of this city, should be a treat for the fans if both teams live up to their reps. The Grand Trunkers have been playing good ball all season, and Manager Harry Pringle states that every man is in the best of shape, also anxious to give the Kingston team a bad beating. As Belleville and Kingston are always deadly rivals it is a safe bet that the boys from the Limestone city will try to bring back a win, and will take the field with all kinds of pep and energy in order to attain that end. The game will be played at Pine Street grounds and starts at 4.00 p.m. sharp. Messrs. M. Thomas and "Shorty" Brown have been called to handle the game.

Music and Drama

TUNEFUL MELODIES

Because of its brightness, humor, cleanliness, witching melody and all-around novelty, "Have a Heart," the musical comedy hit of the last season promises gladsome diversion when that master producer Henry W. Savage offers it at Griffin's Opera House next Tuesday night.

It will be all the more welcome at a period when aumsement seekers need something joyous and cheering. Assurance is given that one will hear music—the score is by Jerome Kern, whose melodies have become a sort of craze—that is tuneful without being blatant, that blends the American and Viennese qualities and that has already set thousands of young feet to dancing through the land. Guy Bolton and P. G. Wodehouse, who first scored with "Miss Springtime," and next with "Have a Heart," are providers of book of lyrics. There are two settings, tasteful in design, in which loud color schemes are absent, and that harmonize with every beautiful and artistic custome creations worn by a chorus of loveliness and singing quality who satisfy the eye without removing three-fourths of their wardrobe.

THE WHIM GIRL

"The Whim Girl of the Screen," Mae Marsh, is appearing at the Palace Thursday, Friday and Saturday of this week, matinee daily in a gripping story of Capital vs Labor entitled "A Glorious Adventure," the many beautiful scenes which were taken in Georgia together with a cast of unusual excellence makes a splendid starring vehicle for the talented star, "Wet and Dry," an amusing Musty Suffer comedy, "The Fable of all that Triangle stuff as sized up by the meal ticket an original 2-part George Ade picture, the sub-titles of which are very amusing completes a pleasing program.

CHARLES RAY AND GAIL KANE AT GRIFFIN'S

The feature at Griffin's theatre last night was popular Charles Ray, who has come to be known as the "Typical American Boy," and is at his best in pictures that give him roles of that sort; but in "The Hired Man" he has proved his unusual adaptibility, and has portrayed a rough, somewhat uncouth sort of youth, who, through his own efforts and untiring ambition to educate himself, rises to unexpected heights. He works for on Caleb Endicott, a rough, rather "cranky" New England farmer, who tyrannizes over his family, particularly Ruth, his pretty daughter, with whom the "Hired Man" is deeply in love. A ne'er-do-well son, who borrows all the hard-earned money from "The Hired Man" complicates matters, and a sudden fire, at which Ray plays the hero in an unexpected manner, reinstates him in the good graces of his sweetheart and her father, the play ending in a highly satisfactory manner. Gail in a highly satisfactory manner. Gail Kane also appeared on the same program in a splendid five part Mutual play "A Game of Wits, "Self-Made Lady," a highly amusing comedy, and "Fight for Millions" series completes an excellent varied program.

Try Magnesia For Stomach Trouble

It Neutralizes Stomach Acidity. Prevents Food Fermentation

Doubtless, if you are a sufferer from indigestion, you have already tried pepsin, bismuth, soda charcoal, drugs and various digestive aids and you know these things will not cure your trouble—in some cases do not even give relief.

But before giving up hope and deciding you are a chronic dyspeptic just try the effect of a little magnesia—not the ordinary carbonate, citrate, oxide or milk but the pure bisurated magnesia which you can obtain from practically any druggist in either powdered or tablet form. Take a teaspoonful of the powder or two compressed tablets with a little water after your next meal, and see what a difference this makes. It will instantly neutralize the dangerous, harmful acid in your stomach which now causes your food to ferment and sour, making gas, wind, flatulence, heartburn and the bloated or heavy lumpy feeling that seems to follow most everything you eat.

..You will find that, provided you take a little bisurated magnesia immediately after a meal, you can eat almost anything, and enjoy it without any danger of pain or discomfort to follow and moreover the continued use of the bisurated magnesia cannot injure the stomach in any way so long as there are any symptoms of acid indigestion.

CANADIAN AWARDED D. S. O. FOR GALLANTRY

LONDON, Sept. 20.—The following Canadians have been awarded the Distinguished Service Order:

Major Ernest Fleetwood Pullen of the Railways, Haileybury, on two occasions rallied numbers of stragglers when badly wanted and was instrumental in defeating the enemy. His complete disregard of personal safety had an inspiring effect on his men.

Major Reginald Symmonds Timmis of the Cavalry, Valcartier, for leading a counter-attack at a critical moment and conducting an able rear-guard action.

Major George Henry Musgrove, Infantry, Parry Sound, although with only one arm, supervised assaulting parties under heavy fire.

Captain Reginald Vernon Blackburn, Infantry, Regina, led his company in a raid and rushed a gun post single-handed, killed two and captured three and a gun.

To Relieve Catarrh, Catarrhal Deafness And Head Noises

Persons suffering from catarrhal deafness, or who are growing hard of hearing and have head noises will be glad to know that this distressing affliction can usually be successfully treated at home by an internal medicine that in many instances has effected complete relief after other treatments have failed. Sufferers who could scarcely hear have had their hearing restored to such an extent that the tick of a watch was plainly audible seven or eight inches away from either ear. Therefore, if you know of someone who is troubled with head noises or catarrhal deafness, cut out this formula and hand it to them and you may have been the means of saving some poor sufferer perhaps from total deafness. The prescription can be prepared at home and is made as follows:

Secure from your druggist 1 oz. Parmint (Double Strength. Take this home and add to it ¼ pint of hot water and a little granulated sugar; stir until dissolved. Take one tablespoonfour times a day.

Parmint is used in this way not only to reduce by tonic action the inflammation and swelling in the Eustachian Tubes, and thus to equalize the air pressure on the drum, but to correct any excess of secretions in the middle ear, and the results it gives are nearly always quick and effective.

Every person who has catarrh in any form, or distressing rumbling, hissing sounds in their ears, should give this recipe a trial.

CONCERNS VICTORY BONDS

TORONTO, Sept. 20.—While Victory Bonds not liable to Government taxation, the dividends from them are liable to municipal income tax, and two cases involving such dividends were before Court of Revision yesterday. In one case, the Assessment Department sought to assess the Canadian General Electric on the dividends from $3,155,000 Victory bonds; in the other, the assessment was $55,000 on $1,000,000 of Victory bonds held by the Massey-Harris.

The C. G. E. informed the court that it has disposed of its bonds, and promised further information or a later session. The Massey-Harris Company raised the further point that its bonds represented the dividends of an industrial concern, and the law specifically exempts dividends of a "mercantile or manufacturing business" from taxation. Judgment was reserved.

It may be noted that Toronto is trying to have the law changed so that dividends from industries will be taxable

STOVE STYLES
1918-1919

Radical changes in mechanical design are not to be expected in a line of cooking and heating stoves, which have successfully met every demand of users since the inception of the stove industry.

Great progress has been made in the simplification of heating and cooking stoves, the elimination of the many unnecessary parts, and the standardization of different lines, in external design, many more improvements are exhibited.

Smooth, plain, easy-to-keep-clean castings for filigree of old; sharp angles have given way to graceful curves; there is beauty, unity and uniformity shown.

Our line of ranges today embodies everything that is newest and best in the stove construction, responding fully to the varying tastes in requirements of users.

Your patronage and approval impose obligation upon us to solve and successfully cope with your stove problem. An inspection of our stock will convince you that we have more than merely met your demands. We have succeeded in anticipating them.

We have on our floor samples of over fifty ranges and heaters, including the Gurney-Oxford, Fire-Co., Peninsular, Treasure, 3 different kinds of high-oven ranges, base burners, combination gas and coal ranges, and a large variety of Oak style and Quebec heaters to choose from.

"LATTER DAY SAINTS" IN CANADA.

The Rev. William Shearer, acting superintendent of a mission field in Alberta containing over 75,000 square miles, says that the Mormons of Utah, "who are nothing more or less than a great commercial combine," are making an effort to secure the wonderfully fertile lands occupied by the Blood Indian reserve, and have already secured leases to at least eleven sections of the reserve.

"It would be to the everlasting shame of the Canadian Government," said Mr. Shearer, "if the lands in the reserve are permitted to fall into the hands of the Mormons. It would be especially so in these times, when Canada's heroes are returning. The land should be purchased from the Indians and turned over to the returned men. The Government should not rob the Indians—they have been robbed of too much already—but the land should be purchased from them and then handed to the soldiers. I have a right to speak on this matter as I have seen three sons leave for the front, two of whom will never return, while the third has been invalided home and discharged. The land in the Blood Indian reserve, which the Mormons are attempting by every means in their power to acquire, is ideal for the settlement of soldiers, and should be acquired for them in preference to the Peace River land."

All through Canada the Mormons are quietly spreading their doctrines and making converts, the Mormon missionaries claiming that they represent a branch of the church of the Latter Day Saints which has discarded polygamy. Toronto is notably a hot-bed for Mormon activity and there are a number of Mormon congregations there. The appeal of Rev. Mr. Shearer should be heeded and Mormon activities in Canada made the subject of a searching Government enquiry in view of the malodorous history of this sect in the United States.

THE LADY WITH THE LAMP.

There is in France a young English V.A.D. who serves King and country and the whole world by trimming between two hundred and three hundred lamps every day. If any one has ever attempted to keep one lamp in order, that person will not envy the V.A.D. Neither will the fine grade of patriotism underlying the lamp trimming be overlooked. The work is performed in a cold, dark cellar, and the worker is alone much of the time; but the thing that keeps her steadily and cheerfully at work is the fact that every lamp will be needed at night in the hospital to which the cellar belongs. It happens that this particular hospital is one established in an old French chateau, picturesque and full of charm, historically, but entailing a vast amount of extremely hard work because chateau and monasteries were not constructed, centuries ago, with an eye to perfect sanitary arrangements. Highly cultured Englishmen, over draft age or physically unfit, count this difficult work no hardship. They have become expert stretcher-bearers, have driven ambulances under fire and do countless things that are much more difficult than similar work in English hospitals in France.

OTHER VIEWS

THE "NO CHILDREN" RULE ILLUSTRATED

(From the Kingston Standard)

To some people in this city it seems to be a terrible crime to have children, at least that seems to be the experience of Mr. and Mrs. Warren, a couple who came over to Canada some time ago from Watertown and who were yesterday refused re-admittance to the United States by Immigration Officials at Cape Vincent.

Last night the parents were able to secure a room for themselves and their four children but to-day they found it impossible to secure lodgings. Mrs. Warren called at The Standard office this afternoon, after a vain search of the city, and told a pitiful tale. For ten years the couple have resided at Watertown and they came over some time ago on a visit. Early in the week they started for Watertown to get their furniture and to go to Cedar Rapids where her six brothers are located and in business. They went by way of Morrisburg, and were stopped there and sent to Ogdensburg. At Ogdensburg they were again stopped and referred to Cape Vincent. Thither they went yesterday, and were again stopped. They were not allowed to leave the Cape boat, and had to wait aboard with their four children, without any food for them until the boat reached the city about nine o'clock last night. Then came a hunt for a place to sleep and they were fortunate in securing a lodging.

To-day, however, at press time they had not found a place for themselves or their children, and The Standard staff tried hard to locate them for the night but without avail.

"Noboby seems to want us because we have the children with us," was Mrs. Warren's pitiable complaint in The Standard office, and the members of the staff pities her. The numbers of several lodging house were given her and she again bravely set out on a hunt for a place for her four children, but up till press time she had been unsuccessful in the search.

BOLSHEVIKISM DESCRIBED

(From the Outlook)

At this moment the Bolsheriki are the most dangerous enemies of Russia and of democracy and the most serviceable tools of the militaristic and capitalistic German autocracy.. Their American representatives, who range from the Germanized Socialists, the leaders of the Non-Partisan League, the professional pacifists and so-called internationalists, to the I.W.W. and Anarchist and bomb throwers and dynamiters and "direct action" men generally, lack only the power, but not the will, to play a similar part.

This seems on incongruous assembly. But every Bolshevist movement always contains crack-brained fanatics and foolish, simple people cheek by jowl with the sinister advocates of "direct action" people any consideration. Their purpose is to inspire terror by murder. Blatant Anarchists of this type are miscreants and criminals. We ought to stamp them out by exerting the full power of the law in the sternest and most vigorous fashion against them and their sympathizers before, and not merely after, murder is committed.

A TENDER CONSCIENCE

Frances and Agatha had been carefully reared. Especially had they been taught that in no circumstances must they tell a lie—not even a "white lie"—or deceive any one.

One day during a visit made by these little girls to an aunt in the country, they met a large cow in a field they were crossing. Much frightened, the youngsters stopped, not knowing what to do. Finally, Frances said:

"Let's go right on, Agatha, and pretend that we are not afraid of it."

But Agatha's conscience was not slumbering. "Wouldn't that be deceiving the cow?" she objected.—Exchange.

After the church parade the padre said: "I wish to speak to those of you who have not been confirmed. Will the men divide themselves into two parties, please? Those who have fall out on the right and those who have not on the left."

In the shuffle this remark was heard: "You been confirmed, Bill?"

"Bet yer life! Got the marks on me arm yet."

And I turn, and in my pillow bury deep the other ear,
For the loveliest time for snoozing, peacefully with shuttered eyes,
Is the time when you're expected, willy-nilly, to arise.

Morning sleep's by far the sweetest, while the birds their matins sing,
It's a perfect joy to slumber through the darn alarmed clock's ring;
So when in the east the rosy rays of dawning day appear,
I turn over, and my pillow cuddles soft my other ear!

THEY SHALL NOT PASS

"They shall not pass." The inspiring words ring out,
Speaking of fearlessness and undying trust,
"They shall not pass," in them there is the shout
Of victory over wrong and evil warring lust.

"They shall not pass," the line remains unbroken,
Though mighty hosts with shot and shell assail,
"They shall not pass" then let this be the token,
Might, fighting right, is sure at last to fail.

"They shall not pass," our hearts within are strong,
We war for Love, the conquering side is ours,
"They shall not pass" their struggle's all forlorn,
Defeat is theirs who helpless one devours.

"They shall not pass," though guns may roar and rattle,
We dare not, will not falter in the strife,
"They shall not pass," however strong they battle,
Conquerors we are, in this our holy fight.

"They shall not pass," they cannot quench our spirit,
Our souls shall live, though death our bodies claim,
"They shall not pass," our deeds will prove our merit,
No act of ours shall cause our loved ones shame.

"They shall not pass," if you at home keep praying,
And working for the victory we so much desire,
"They shall not pass," if you keep on believing,
That God still reigns, this will our hearts inspire.
"They shall not pass," thus history is repeating,
God is our help, our hope for years to come,
"They shall not pass," we think not of retreating,
We'll "carry on" until we hear the great "Well done."

My ironing used to look like a mountain

IRONING day was my worst day in the week. Bending over the hot stove and scorching my fingers on the irons wore on my nerves, and I would end the day a complete wreck, almost impossible for the family to live with.

THEN I GOT A HYDRO IRON

IRONING now is almost a pleasure. The stove is out and the kitchen is cool; my iron is always just the right heat; I do not have to run back and forth to the blazing fire. Ironing takes much less time than it did.

The Hydro Iron costs $4.50 and is guaranteed for 5 years. Do you know that is only 1½ cents per ironing for all that comfort?

(With Apologies to The Harvester World of Chicago

The tractor on the farm arose
Before the dawn at four,
It brought the cows and washed the clothes
And finished all the chores.

Then forth it went into the field
Just at the break of day,
It reaped and threshed the golden yield
And hauled it all away.

It plowed the field that afternoon,
And when the job was through
It hummed a pleasant little tune
And churned the butter, too.

It pumped the water for the stock,
And ground a crib of corn,
And hauled the baby 'round the block
To still its cries forlorn.

Thus ran the busy hours away,
By many a labor blessed,
And yet, when fell the twlight grey,
The tractor had no rest.
For while the farmer' peaceful-eyed
Read by the tungsten's glow,
The patient tractor stood outside
And ran the dynamo.

Now, if my story you may doubt,
And think it is not true,
We'll run the little tractor out
And show you what she'll do.

THE CUT WORM

"The destructiveness of the cut worm has not been so evident for years," declares Mr. F. Abraham, chairman of the Home Gardens and Vacant Lots Section of the Canada Food Board. "An early season to some extent minimized the loss from this pest. The time to attack the cut worm is in the fall, if next year's ravages are to be controlled. The eggs of this worm are laid in the autumn, and if after all eggs are laid, the ground is well broken up or plowed, the larvae will be deeply buried as to destroy ninety-five per cent. of them.

"I strongly advise," he added, "that every available foot of town land be plowed this fall. During the winter there will be plenty of time to organize for planting it in vegetables, or even cereals, but get as much fall plowing under way as possible. Cities and towns are the only available source of surplus labor, and every ounce of food will be required."

Careless Shampooing Spoils The Hair

If you want to keep your hair looking its best, be careful what you wash it with. Don't use prepared shampoos or anything else, that contains too much alkali. This dries the scalp, makes the hair brittle, and ruins it.

The best thing for steady use is just ordinary mulsified cocoanut oil (which is pure and greaseless), and is better than anything else you can use.

One or two teaspoonfuls will cleanse the hair and scalp thoroughly. Simply moisten the hair with water and rub it in. It makes an abundance of rich, creamy lather, which rinses out easily, removing every particle of dust, dirt dandruff and excessive oil. The hair dries quickly and evenly, and it leaves the scalp soft, and the hair fine and silky, bright, lustrous, fluffy and easy to manage.

You can get mulsified cocoanut oil at any pharmacy it's very cheap, and a few ounces will supply every member of the family for months.

Some of our Canadian women are borne down physically and mentally, by the weaknesses of their sex. They suffer from backache, dragging sensation, very nervous and pain in top of head. If they ask their neighbors they will be told to take a Favorite Prescription of Dr. Pierce's which has been so well and favorably known for the past half century.

Weak women should try it now. Don't wait! Begin today. This woman's tonic and nervine will bring vim, vigor and vitality. Send Dr. V. M. Pierce, Buffalo, N. Y., 10c for trial pkg., tablets.

Paris, Ont.—"About three year ago I was ill in bed and suffered severe pain. The doctor said I had gall stones, but his medicine did not help me. A neighbor had been taking 'Favorite Prescription' and it had benefited her so much that she urged me to try some of hers, and that first dose helped me so much that I sent at once for a bottle. I was very much surprised at the prompt relief this medicine gave to me after the doctor had failed, and I have never had such a spell since, but whenever I feel the least bit run-down or in need of a tonic I take the 'Favorite Prescription' again for a few days. It has never failed to restore me to perfect health."—Mrs. Elizabeth Brown, P. O. Box 752.

Picton Fair The Best Ever Despite Unfavorable Weather

Progressive Publicity Policy and Enterprise of Directors Results In Large Attendance NotWithgstanding Cold and Rainy Weather—Exhibits Many and Excellent

The annual fair of the Prince Edward County Agricultural Society was held at Picton on Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday, and it would seem hardly possible to conceive of a county fair as being more nearly a model one than that in Picton. On Wednesday the streets of Picton were filled with automobiles, while there seemed an endless procession of people toward the fair ground. W. J. Carter, one of the directors, and an active business man of the town, estimated that there must have been between 6,000 and 7,000 people and 500 automobiles on the ground.

The first day's opening exercises were most elaborate. The procession to the agricultural park was described by those who saw it as a magnificent spectacle, in which there were numerous floats and 1,600 school children, gathered from all over the county. The procession was headed by the 48th Highlanders band of Toronto, under Lieut. John Slatter. The opening address was delivered by Hon. George S. Henry, Minister of Agriculture for Ontario. Mention must be made of the baby show held in the Picton armouries on the evening of the first day, at which 1,200 people were in attendance. These are some of the premiums for the best young hopefuls: Two sets of steel cribs, with springs and mattresses, value $15 each, and three prizes of a $10 gold coin contributed by Nelson Parliament, M.P.P., with smaller prizes valued at $5 and $2.50, while every baby who did not secure a prize in the printed list was given a solid gold baby pin and badge. Among the afternoon events of the first day was a baseball match between Picton and Belleville.

On Wednesday the second day the morning events were put through on schedule time, but in the afternoon when the park had been literally packed with people, a heavy downpour of rain came on, which eliminated many of the events, including the baseball match between Kingston and Deloro and the horse races. The stock judging, however, was carried on in the several buildings in which the horses, cattle, sheep, etc., were comfortably housed. Among the stock shown were two magnificent imported Percheron stallions, owned by Grant Thompson, valued at $2,500 and $2,000, and a Holstein bull for which the owners, Messrs. Leavens and Purtell, paid $4,000 last year when the animal was but two months old. To see the splendid herds of Jerseys, Ayrshires Holsteins, etc., and the great number of draft and driving horses was to be lost almost in admiration of them. The exhibit of poultry was very fine, exhibits being present from many points outside of the country.

The exhibit of grain, vegetables and roots was splendid, while the fruit exhibit was not up to that of last year, owing to partial failure of the fruit crop.

Prince Edward county is noted for its cheese. For August and September make the prize winners were: 1, John Hall, Mountain View factory; 2, H. S. Channell. Dairy butter, 1, J. B. Holt. Whey butter, 1, H. S. Channell; 2, John Hall.

On the evening of the second day a grand concert was given in the armouries by the 48th Highlanders band.

The third day's events included a grand parade at 3.50 p.m., of all the prize-winning stock, winding up with a dance given in the armouries by the board of directors.

Toronto, London, Ottawa, Picton—by competent judges Picton's is given fourth place in importance as an agricultural fair, and the reason is not far to seek. In the first place, they have the goods; in the second place, there is a great spirit of unity between the business men of Picton and the progressive farmers of the county. The officers of the society are: President, G. E. Boulter; secretary-treasurer, Alexander P. McVannel, an unassuming but forceful agricultural specialist; board of directors, H. B. Bristol, W. J. Carter, M. Gilbert, W. H. Gough, Howard Leavens, E. M. Harrington, V.S., Edward B. Purtelle, Grant Thompson, Arthur Wright, G. B. McMillen, C. B. Beamish, A. F. Welbanks, F. W. Moody, H. H. Horsey and Fred Hubbs. It will thus be seen that the board is about equally composed of prominent business and farmers.

About $6,000 was offered in prize money this year and the directors advertised the fair in twenty-four newspapers and attributed the great success of the fair to judicious advertising.

Mention must be made of the splendid condition of the buildings, some of which had been freshly painted, and not a pane of glass was noticed broken or out.

Any unprejudiced outside observer who has been privileged to visit Prince Edward's fair will agree with Lockie Wilson, superintendent of agriculture for Ontario, who unhesitatingly said that this was a model county fair from every standpoint.

In view of the increasing interest being shown, the board of directors are considering the advisability of making Prince Edward's fair a four-day event instead of three days, as at present.

K. of C. Army Hut Fund Reaches $3,200

One Day More to Obtain Objective—Workers Will Redouble Efforts

With one day left in which to obtain the objective of $5,000 for Belleville District the workers connected with the K. of C. Army Hut Fund are redoubling their efforts to reach that mark. Canvasses are being made night and day, and at headquarters corner of Bridge and Front street, the secretary is on the job all t time. Last night the total had reached $3,200. This is most encouraging. It leaves $1,800 to be collected to-day and to-morrow. Any one who has been overlooked in the canvass should call at headquarters and leave their subscription there, in this way lightening the burden of the workers and doing their bit to help one of the most worthy causes that the City of Belleville has ever been called upon to support.

To-day and to-morrow canvassers in Trenton will cover the British Chemical Co., where it is expected that a large sum will be realized. This is the first time a direct canvass of these works has been made for any fund, and the committee of the Knights of Columbus Army Hut Fund appreciates the very great favor that is being shown them by the management. The management in turn realizes the very great work that is being done by this Army Hut Fund. The works of the Canada Cement Plant at Point Anne will also be canvassed this afternoon, through the kindness of the management. If everyone will get together for one more day, Belleville will surpass the $5,000 objective.

Woman Set Fire To Grey Nunnery

MONTREAL, Sept. 20.—The disastrous Grey Nunnery fire of February 14 last, in which sixty-five babies were burned to death, was purposely caused by a female orderly of the institution, Berthe Courtmanche, who is said to have periodical attacks of fire mania. The woman was still working at the institution at the time when she was arrested yesterday afternoon.

After keeping Courtmanche under observation at the Grey Nunnery for a week past Detective Proulx, of the Provincial Police Department, taxed the woman with the crime and extract a full and signed confession from her The woman's confession reveals the mania which must have possessed her at the time of her diabolical act. "I crept out of bed on the night of the fire," she told the detective, "and set fire to a pile of newspapers, which I had placed behind the radiator in the room where the babies were sleeping. The curtains caught fire, and then I went back to bed. God knows why I did it. After I had been in bed some minutes I heard cries of fire, and, rushing back to the nursery in my night-dress, carried two of the babies to safety."

Courtmanche admits having made two other attempts to set fire to the Grey Nunnery, once before her all too successful attempt, and the other a few weeks later.

She is a woman of 27, and is very well connected in the Eastern Townships, where she was a school-teacher.

Sun Burned Skin

You want a healthy summer tan. But sometimes you get it too quickly and then there is a few days of suffering.

The application of Dr. Chase's Ointment takes out the stinging and burning and leaves the skin delightfully soft and smooth.

Because it is equally effective in relieving stings of insects and ivy poisoning as well as chafing and skin irritations it is invaluable in the summer camp.

Pte. Frank Sweet Killed in Action

Uncle of Pte. Howard Black Who Recently Died of Wounds

Mrs. Richard Black, 24 Hillside street, has received the following notice:

(413035) Pte. Frank Sweet.

Dear madam:—I regret to have to advise you that notice has been received here that the above mentioned soldier has been reported to have been killed in action on the 8th of August, 1918.

Yours truly,
E. BAKER,
For Director of S. A. & A. P.

Frank Sweet enlisted with the 39th Battalion in this city, and went overseas with that battalion. In England he was transferred to another unit, and went to France, where he served his country faithfully for over a year as a sharp shooter, and later as military police. He was invalided to England with trench rheumatism and he remained there until April, 1918, when he again went to France and on August the 8th made his supreme sacrifice for King and country. He was the fifth and youngest son of the late Wm. Sweet of Bancroft, and brother of Mrs. R. Black of this city.

PTE. HOWARD BLACK

This family has been doubly bereaved as this is the second loss within a few days. Frank Sweet was an uncle of Pte. Howard Black, whose death from gun shot wounds was previously announced. Howard was a bright and promising student. He received his education at Queen Mary School and was a pupil of the High School when he enlisted at the age of 16 in the bugle band of the 155th Battalion. He was with this battalion while it was in camp at Barriefield, but did not go overseas with it as he was too young. On being transferred to the Special Corps he was sent to Lindsay as bugler to the Arsenal Guard and volunteered to go with the 252nd Battalion in May of 1917 which battalion went overseas at the same time as the 254th from this city. In England he attended the Signalling School at Seaford, graduating fourth in a class of fifty. In March of this year he went to France where he very cheerfully and faithfully performed all duties, and September 5th gave up his brave young life for the liberty and peace of all nations. In religion he was a Presbyterian, being identified with John Street Presbyterian church.

European Scourge Enters Ontario

"Spanish Influenza' Breaks Out In Several Places

TORONTO, Sept. 20.—Spanish influenza which raged throughout large section of Europe and made serious inroads upon the German armies in France, has made its appearance in Ontario. So far most of the cases reported in the province are in the camp of the Polish Legion at Niagara, and the authorities there have had to place part of the camp in quarantine and confine all the Polish soldiers to barracks.

The disease has already become epidemic in certain parts of the United States, particularly in one or two cantonments, and in order to prevent it getting established here Hon. W. D. McPherson, Provincial Secretary, and Col. J. W. S. McCullough, Provincial Officer of Health, had an extended conference. As a result steps will be taken to warn the public and to circularize all the physicians in the province regarding the matter.

According to Col. McCullough the disease given the name of "Spanish influenza" is a different form to that which became epidemic in 1889 and for three years took a heavy toll of victims over the civilized world. The disease resembles influenza, the most important symptoms being sudden onset with chills, severe headache with pain in the back and limbs, and a general feeling of malaise. The face is flushed and herpes appears on the lips in some cases The fever runs from 99 to 102 and ocasionally to 103 or 104. The highest point is reached on the second day when there is a sudden drop, and by the fourth day the patient is well. Many cases develop a harsh cough with thick sputum and some develop into pneumonia. Dr. McCullough stated that the disease is spread by germs carried in the noise and throat and the infection is generally passed from one person to another by direct personal contact, drinking utensils, the use of common towels, etc. The Provincial Officer urges people to avoid contact with persons with the disease or showing symptoms and those infected are advised to remain in bed and have a physician called.

"Dad" Turnbull a Great Athlete

FORTY years ago a ruddy-checked lad sat on the rails surrounding Toronto athletic fields and watched the lacrosse giants of that day perform, wondering whether some day he would get his chance to fill their shoes. To-day the youngster of '78 is completing a lacrosse career that extends over thirty-four years, a record in point of service in not only our national game but in all branches of athletics in the Dominion. It has oft been said that a man is just as old as he feels. Assuming this to be correct, Alex. Turnbull, of New Westminster, the lad of '78, must still be classed as a young man. "Dad," a sobriquet wished on him by the writer many years ago at a time when the veteran was said to be preparing to retire from the athletic field, and by which he is more familiarly known to lacrosse followers, ranks to-day as Canada's most remarkable athlete.

Beyond the sunny side of the half-century mark, by just how many summers he refuses to say, and we do not propose to hazard any guesses, Turnbull is to-day, thirty-four years after he first broke into senior company, still playing the national game, one of the most strenuous of all outdoor pastimes. Records of twenty-two years in the majors established by Lajoie and others fade when compared with the wonderful record of the New Westminster stick-handler. That he has played lacrosse for thirty-four years is perhaps not so remarkable as the fact that he is still playing the game.

Many stars with whom he played years ago have passed into the Great Beyond, others have long since retired from the game, but as the years roll by, the daddy of them all, the greatest centre fielder in Minto Cup time and probably one of the greatest home fielders the game has known, plods along, taking his place regularly in the line-up of famous New Westminster teams. This may be his last season. He has not said so himself, but he believes that with the game re-established this year and the youngsters interested in the sport that the time is opportune for him to hang up his stick. And it may be said that when he does retire he will take with him much of the credit for bringing the national game back at a time when the outlook was far from promising. Not only has the veteran no peers in the national game, but his record for length of service in senior company will probably never be equalled in lacrosse, baseball or any other sport. The name of Turnbull will have been written large and indelibly in the history of the national game.

Turnbull, in his youth, played in almost every small hamlet in Ontario. In those days it was customary for the different towns to strengthen their teams for matches from players in other places, and Turnbull was one of the players who was frequently called upon to make barnstorming tours. His first senior lacrosse was played in Toronto in 1884. From there, he went to Paris, Ont., which boasted one of the greatest teams that ever played the game. "Dad" started as a defence player, playing point in front of old Charlie Robinson, of the Paris team. In those days Indian teams were numerous throughout Ontario and Quebec, and among the tribes which the Paris team played were the Onondagas and Tuscorras. Turnbull got his fill of defence playing against the latter team, which trotted out a chieftain weighing 200 pounds. Turnbull, never very heavy and not standing much over five feet checked the big chief, but took no chances until Charley Robinson planted his foot in the seat of Alex's trousers when the latter was wearing 'em and advised the veteran to exhibit pluck or there was no lacrosse future for him.

From that time on Turnbull was ready to tackle them. In 1890 Turnbull was back in Toronto, and played with the old Athletics in the C.L.A. From then until 1894 he played in Brockville and Perth and at that time played alongside the great Joe O'Meara. "He was some home player; they never made them any better," recalled the old time star.

Turnbull has not only played lacrosse, but has taken a whirl at almost every other game, but lacrosse comes first, last and always in his affections. As a basketballer he was a star; he can break the blue rocks along with the best of them, and has taken a hand in other sport. "But give me lacrosse always. It's the greatest game," declared the old-timer. "We are not doing much this season, but we are serving a useful purpose in re-establishing a national game in the West. And in a year or two we'll have the game back, played again with B. C. talent, I hope, and setting a pace for teams in other parts of the country."

Turnbull made his debut in Western lacrosse along towards the fall of 1897, locating first in Rossland, and later going to New Westminster.

Many times leading writers have referred to Hans Wagner, Lajoie and other diamond performers as wonderful athletes because of the 23 years they spent in major league company. But what of a lacrosse record of 34 years, all of it in senior company and with and against the greatest teams playing the game, and still at it? It is a wonderful record, one that will never be surpassed in any sport.

COMMITTED FOR TRIAL

Fred and William J. Martin of Bowmanville, have been committed for trial by Police Magistrate Horsey, of that town on charges of assaulting and obstructing in the discharge of his duties License Inspector George Goodrich, of Cobourg. Both men pleaded not guilty, and elected to be tried by a judge and a jury, and were accordingly committed for trial, but admitted to bail. They will receive their trial at Quarterly General Sessions of the Peace, which will open on December 10th before Judge Ward and a jury.

SURPRISE PARTY

Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Burgess were quite taken by surprise when the operators and staff of the local telephone office gathered at their home on Moira street last evening, bringing with them their baskets of eats. During the evening they presented Mrs. Burgess with a beautiful mantle clock. A gay evening was spent in games and amusements, after which a dainty lunch was served and the party dispersed in the early hours of the morning, declaring Mr. and Mrs Burgess ideal host and hostess. Mrs. Burgess was formerly Miss Hilda Oliphant of the Bell Telephone staff, and will be greatly missed from the office by all.

RECOMMENDED FOR MEDAL.

Mrs. A. E. Baldwin, 22 Green St. has received a letter from Nursing Sister L. E. Walker, of the Third Western General Hospital, at Neath, S. Wales, of which the following is a part: "I am writing a few lines to you for your husband, who is in this hospital, and who at present is not able to write himself. He was admitted here on August 21st. He had been gassed and was suffering from some burns. He is now going on well, but his eyes are still very troublesome and he cannot stand the light, and has to have them bandaged up; but you must not worry, he is getting on quite all right, though of course it will take time to get over the effect of the wretched gas the Germans use. The burns take some time to heal, but he is progressing well and steadily, and before long will be writing to you himself. He would like you to know he got recommended for the Military Medal on the 9th of this month when he went over the top. He sends love to the children and yourself. I must tell you he is a very good patient."

S. A. CAMPAIGN

The Salvation Army local workers have received much encouragement in their appeal to the public this week, many of the small envelopes being returned without a call being made. There is every indication that the objective will be reached and the good work of the S. A. continued. If those who have the little appeal envelope will send them in to the treasurer, T. D. Ruston, or to Adjt Trickey, with a contribution large or small, this week, then a full report can be made. Brigadier Wm. Bethridge of Toronto, Young People's Secretary for Canada East, will conduct special services at the citadel on Friday, Saturday and Sunday, Sept. 27, 28 and 29, and conduct the ingathering as far as the children's part is concerned. Out of 198 Sunday School children and workers at the two S. A. schools there will be very few but will do their little bit and so help to swell the grand total. It looks as if Belleville is to lead the list of cities and towns of Ontario in the annual Harvest Thanksgiving financial effort of the Salvation Army. The men in khaki, 32 in number, who were active members or adherents of the local branch, will have the satisfaction that those at home who "stay by the stuff" are also doing their bit The Salvation Army make a specialty of helping the wives and children of these men who are away, and Adjt. Trickey wishes it to be clearly understood that a 'phone call 603 at any hour of the day or night will bring either him or his assistant, and any assistance that can be rendered or advise given is gladly furnished. The which is done so willingly and with considerable sacrifice by responding to the appeal quickly.

Newell Suffered For Twenty Years

Tanlac Restores Health And He Has Gained Ten Pounds

"It's a positive fact that Tanlac entirely relieved me of a stomach trouble from which I had suffered for twenty years, and not only that but I have gained ten pounds since starting on it," recently said James J. Newell, of 92 Alexander Street, Toronto, Ont.

"I suffered with chronic gas tritis, and a catarrhal condition of my stomach for twenty years or more," he continued, and although I took all kinds of medicines and special prescriptions nothing did me any good but Tanlac. I had no appetite and couldn't relish a thing I would eat. Almost before I would get up from the table my food would begin to sour and I could feel the gas forming and pressing up around my heart, and I would sometimes bloat up so I could hardly get by breath. I always had a dull, heavy pain in the pit of my stomach, and at times felt such a terrible burning sensation just as if my stomach was raw and inflamed. Many a time I would have spells of nausea when for days at a time I couldn't retain a thing on my stomach, and I would be in so much agony at night that I couldn't rest. I lost weight, had no life nor strength about me and just felt miserable all the time.

'As everybody seemed to be putting in a good word for Tanlac I decided to try it and it has certainly fixed me up all right. I have a splendid appetite, relish all my food, and have no trouble at all with gas or sour stomach That acid condition has been corrected, the catarrhal condition relieved and my stomach is in better shape than it has been in twenty years. I am putting on flesh and improving in every way, and although I never had much faith in medicines I am glad to endorse Tanlac and will tell anybody who wants to call and see me just how Tanlac straightened me out."

"Tanlac is sold in Belleville by Ostrom's Drug Store, in Trenton by J. H. Dickey, in Deseronto by W. J. Malley, in Stirling by J. S. Morton, in Frankford by W. J. Lettimer, in Madoc by J. Will Vince, in Marysville by T. [illegible]. McAlpine, in Ormsby by Jas. Campbell and in Thomasburg by J. H. Blakely."

HOW THIS NERVOUS WOMAN GOT WELL

Told by Herself. Her Sincerity Should Convince Others.

Christopher, Ill.—"For four years I suffered from irregularities, weakness, nervousness, and was in a run down condition. Two of our best doctors failed to do me any good. I heard so much about what Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound had done for others, I tried it and was cured. I am no longer nervous, am regular, and in excellent health. I believe the Compound will cure any female trouble."—Mrs. ALICE HELLER, Christopher, Ill.

Nervousness is often a symptom of weakness or some functional derangement, which may be overcome by this famous root and herb remedy, Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, as thousands of women have found by experience.

If complications exist, write Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co., Lynn, Mass., for suggestions in regard to your ailment. The result of its long experience is at your service.

A Severe Winter.

In a recent review of the severe winter of 1917-18 Dr. C. F. Brooks says that a temperature of 86 degrees below zero Fahrenheit was reported in December from the Upper Yukon, at the mouth of the Pelly river, and that this observation, if authentic, establishes a "record" for North America. The lowest temperature ever recorded in the world (disregarding upper air observation) was 90.4 degrees below zero Fahrenheit at Verkhoyansk, Siberia, in 1892—Scientific American.

German Language Still Being Taught in Belleville High School

Principal Says He Has No Authority to Stop Teaching of German Which is Authorized By Education Department—Question Discussed by City Board of Education

At the regular meeting of the Board of Education held last evening the first since the holiday season. considerable business was transacted. A report relative to establishing night classes at the High School building during the winter months was adopted after some discussion. The cost of mantaining same is equally shared in by the Department of Education. The report of the departmental examinations as presented showed that the pupils of the High School did remarkably well. A brief discussion took place relative to the teaching of German in the High School. Principal McLaurin of the High School stated that a few of the pupils were taking German as it was optional with them, and there was no authority to expunge it entirely from the curriculum of the school. Some other matters of minor importance were attended to.

The members present were: Messrs. F. S. Deacon, chairman; A. E. Bailey, J. B. Ives, A. McGie, J. Muir, F. Sharpe, P. J. Wims, Dr. Marshall, B. Mallory, Col. Ponton and Col. Marsh.

Minutes of the last meeting read and confirmed.

Communications

From Mr. J. Elliott regretting his inability to attend the meeting owing to his attendance at the General Synod at Toronto.—Filed.

Mr. J. L. Hughes wrote the Board in reference to a report being made by the Board so as to secure the Strathcona grant re cadet corps.—Referred.

Principal P. C. McLaurin of the High School and Mrs. L. C. Pascoe thanked the Board for their expression of sympathy in their recent bereavement.—Received and filed.

Principal McLaurin of the High School requested the Board to purchase two more Underwood type writers and tables for use of the many pupils in attendance at the commercial department of the High School.

Mr. Max Herity on behalf of the entertainment committee of the High School asked the Board for the use of the High School assembly room for the entertaining of visiting pupils of other schools at the annual field day sports to be held on September 27th.—Referred to Committee of the Whole.

On motion the Board went into Committe of the whole on requests, etc., Mr. Sharpe in the chair.

Reports

The Finance Committee recommended the payment of a number of accounts, which was adopted.

Cost of Educating

In the school management committee's report it was figured that the cost per pupil of education in the Public Schools was $24.75, the average attendance being 1,332, and the 1917 expenditure $32,926.38. The 1918 cost per pupil was estimated at $28.10. The committee decided that $25.00 for a school term of ten months should be the fee for non resident pupils attending the city schools. The term should be divided as follows, September to January $10.00; January to June, $15.00.

The report was adopted.

The Printing and Supplies Committee recommended the purchase of two Underwood typewriters and desks, also the purchasing of 39 book desks for the commercial department of the High School.

Col. Ponton thought the 39 desks referred to as being unnecessary.

Mr. Deacon in reply stated that Mr. Houston, High School Inspector, had repeatedly asked for these desks which were necessary.

The report was adopted.

Inspector's Report

Mr. H. J. Clarke, Inspector of Public School, presented a report of which the following is a synopsis.

The Public Schools opened on September 3rd and all the teachers were in their places and the several classes showed a large registration. Owing to the removal of the children from Thurlow the over crowding in Grier street and Queen Victoria Schools has been considerably relieved, but these two schools are still taxed to their utmost limit. In Queen Victoria School the assembly room is still in use as a class room.

In my judgment it would be to the advantage of your schools if the Public School teachers would form themselves into a city teachers association and meet about once a month to discuss matters of interest relating to their work. If you approve of this I will call the first meeting and lay my ideas before the teachers. The attendance of teachers would be compulsory as the meetings would be held within school hours.

Medal Winners

The Governor-General's medal was won by Miss Hazel Madden of Queen Victoria School, whilst the prizes offered by the St. Julien Chapter I. O. D. E. was won by Miss Florence Curtis of the same school.

One of the members of the Board, Col. Marsh, has generously offered two cups for competition in rifle shooting and military drilling among the Public School cadet corps.

The Inspector relommended the purchase of some cheap oil cloth to protect the tables when the children are using plasticine.

High School Attendance

Principal McLaurin of the High School, said that the attendance at the school was 110 to 120, about the same as last year, but there was undue overcrowding in the second form, but to even matters up he had promoted some pupils from the middle to the second form and would promote them to another form next ear. This would give 3 forms not overcrowding and one form would be normal in attendance. Boys and even girls are leaving the High School at a younger period than in former years.

Col. Ponton stated he was pleased to hear the explanation of Principal McLaurin. He did not, however, think it was wise for pupils to leave the High School at too early an age.

The report of the Inspector was adopted

Departmental Examinations

Principal McLaurin of the High School reported on the result of the departmental examinations for the year 1918 as follows:

Lower school entrance to Normal School, 49; candidate, 37 received standing, 5 with honors 12 unmarked. 7.55 successful.

Middle entrance to Normal School and Junior Matriculation, 40 candidates, 29 received standing, 11 with honors, 11 unranked, 7.25 per cent. successful.

Upper School entrance to faculties of education, 17 candidates, 15 received standing, 4 with honors, 2 unranked, 88.5 per cent successful.

Night Classes

The advisory committee of the High School composed of Messrs. F. S. Deacon, B. Mallory, P. J. Wims, H. W. Ackerman and W. C. Springer made a recommendation to the Board as a result of a meeting with Mr. MacKay, Assistant Director of Industrial and Technical Education, that industrial and technical night classes be established in Belleville to be held in the B. H. S. Mr. Deacon and Principal McLaurin were constituted a committee to get out the advertising material necessary for the night classes. The fee for attendance at the classes was fixed at $1.00 per term. The matter of the number of classes was not decided. There will be a large number of classes advertised and those will be organized for which there are sufficient numbers registered. The salary for teachers was fixed at $3.00 per lesson.

This report was presented to the board for consideration and acceptance or rejection.

Col. Ponton—What is the estimated cost and what is the demand for those night classes. We should count the cost in this matter. He was in favor of technical education. What is the limit of the total cost?

Mr. Mallory—The proposition was to give two lessons a week and the number of teachers would be in comparison to the pupils attending. There might be 6 teachers which would mean $36 per week for 6 months.

Mr. Wims—The Government would pay half the expenses incurred.

Col. Ponton—Who would be the teacher in mechanical drawing?

Mr. Mallory—There is a gentleman at the Rolling Mills, a Mr. Chesher, who is giving lessons in mechanical drawing. He might be secured.

Col. Ponton—Have we not teachers who are competent to teach at these proposed classes.

Mr. Deacon said that popular subjects were being taught in night schools in various parts of the country. A night school was in course at the Rolling Mills, where mechanical drawing is taught. Mr. Chesher is the teacher. Cooking, dressmaking, etc., could be taught to girls attending night classes. If 240 lessons were taught it would cost $720, and the department would pay one-half, namely $360, and also assist in paying for sewing machines and other necessaries required in the classes.

Col. Ponton—What would be the minimum of the number for a class.

Mr. Deacon—Mr. McKay stated that six would do for a class but it might be increased to 12 or 15 pupils.

Col. Ponton—Additional salary would have to be paid the caretaker of the school, also the Principal.

Mr. Deacon—This would mean an additional expense.

Mr. Bailey—Would it inconvenience the High School staff during the day?

Mr. Deacon—No.

Col. Ponton—Has the Principal of the High School been consulted in the matter?

Mr. Deacon—Yes, and he was in hearty accord with it, and will be the Principal.

On motion the report was unanimously adopted.

Cadet Inspection

The report of Col. Gillespie, who inspected the Cadet Corps was on motion ordered to be filed.

Motions

Mr. McGie moved, seconded by Dr. Marshall, that the request of Mr. M. Herity for the use of the assembly room of the High School to entertain ther guests who attend the field day sports in connection with the High School be granted.

Col Ponton objected to any admission fees being charged for when the assembly room of the High School is used. On principle he moved an amendment that no fees be charged, but any funds necessary be raised by contribution and not by a charge.

Col. Marsh—A small admission fee will fall upon all who attend and the expenses not fall upon a few.

The motion of Mr. McGie prevailed and Friday Sept. 27th was granted for the holding of the field day.

The committe rose and reported. The report was received and adopted.

Medal For Pupils

Col. Ponton asked if the medal which had been won by pupils would be procured.

A motion prevailed that the chairman of the Board procure same.

Spanish Language

Col. Ponton asked if there was any teacher in the High School who was qualified to teach the Spanish language.

Principal McLaurin of the High School stated that here was no such teacher, and he doubted if there was one in Ontario. It was however, the intention of the Department at the holiday season next year, to have a class for the teaching of Spanish and one of the teachers of our High School would attend same.

Mr. Deacon—Are any pupils studying the German language in the High School?

Principal McLaurin—Yes, some are taking German, and it cannot be dropped. We could, however, get along without it, but there was no authority to run it out of the school. In some quarters there had been criticism because some of the schools had dropped it. It was optional with the pupil whether they take German or not.

Col. Ponton—There should be no criticism as to the expunging of the German language.

This ended the discussion.

Flag Staff For School

Mr. McGie stated that it had been found necessary to take down the flag staff from off Queen Victoria School as it was injuring the roof. If the staff was placed in the ground outside it would have to be spliced.

Several of the members spoke in favor of the staff being placed in position and the matter was referred to the Sites, Building and Repairs Committee to attend to.

Board adjourned.

KNIGHTS OF COLUMBUS ASK FOR GOV'T. GRANT

TORONTO, Sept. 21.—A request for a Government grant toward the fund being raised by the Knights of Columbus for the support of the work being done at the front for the comfort of the troops, was made by a deputation that waited upon Sir William Hearst. The deputation, which was headed by His Grace, Archbishop McNeil, was given a sympathetic hearing, and assured that the request would receive the fullest possible consideration.

Special Despatches to The Intelligencer, Canadian Press, Limited.

LONDON, Sept. 21.—(Official)—Further steps forward have been taken by the British on the Flanders front. Field Marshal Haig's statement today announces the improvement of British positions west of Messines ,to the south of Ypres, where a strong point was captured. Northwest of St. Quentin the British continued their progress through the main Hindenburg line, making their front northwest of Bellenglies.

FRENCH CAPTURE BENAY.

PARIS, Sept. 21.—In their drive for the outflanking of St. Quentin on the south the French last night captured the town of Benay and made progress north of that place, says today's war office announcement.

REFUSED TO SURRENDER.

LONDON, Sept. 21.—(Official)—North of Gauche Wood, west of Villers Guyslain, the British have been pressed back slightly. A British detachment were surrounded and were believed to have been captured when the Germans took Moeuvres. Their post was in the northern part of the village and they held it for two days during the German occupation, inflicting heavy losses on the enemy. When the village was retaken the entire party rejoined its unit without loss.

British Headquarters, Sept. 21—Reuter's correspondent cables: Heavy German counter-attacks Wednesday and Thursday prove the enemy's uncertainty regarding our intentions, which is a tribute to our staff work. Prisoners state that the blow was expected north of Gouzeaucourt instead of south of that town, hence the German thrust at Moeuvres. When the unexpected happened, the Germans changed their plans and took the offensive east of Havrincourt Wood.

In the evening the Germans directed a tremendous bombardment against High Wood and Havrincourt Wood in the rear of our line followed by strong infantry attacks but so magnificent was the defence that the dense waves of the enemy only succeeded in reaching our position in certain places, from which very few returned. When the effort had spent itself, the assaulting ranks were mown down and the ground presented a terrible shambles. Enemy casualties were quite 40 per cent. of the troops engaged.

Morale of German Army Sapped by Succession of Defeats

On Defensive Everywhere— Losses Cannot be Made up While With United States Assistance Allies Now Stronger Daily—Bewildering Changes in Six Month's Fighting

Special Despatch to The Intelligencer
Canadian Press Special

NEW YORK, Sept. 21—The war review of the past six months issued today by the Associated Press says "Six months ago to-day the Great German offensive began. For weeks victory seemed about to pearch on German banners. To-day the Allied star is in the ascendancy and anxiety and discouragement, decision and joy, have succeeded each other since at dawn of March 21, the greatest battle of history began. It has been a period of almost incessant and of bewildering changes in situations that developed from day to day and from week to week. The Allies know it faced Germany's mightiest efforts last March but it stood unafraid. Germany has now lost her change to force peace on the Allies before the American enter the fight with all their strength. This was her hope in March Losses of a serious nature were suffered by the Allies during the long battle, but they have been more than offset by the inflowing of American legions. Germany's losses on the other hand cannot be made good. Hopes blasted, crack divisions broken up and seeming victory turned into defeats have sapped the morale of the German armies which to-day are on the defensive everywhere.

Up to Noon Yesterday—Bulgarian Defence Line Shattered and Army in Full Retreat—Chased by Allied Cavalry—Great Victory on Macedonia Front

Special Despatch to The Intelligencer, Canadian Press, Limited.

LONDON, Sept. 21.—Serbian troops east of Monastir have advanced more than nine miles in one day and are now less than eight miles from the main highway connecting Prilep with the Vardar River. A great number of prisoners have been captured and the Allies have taken Godyak, west of the Cerna River and 15 miles southeast of Prilep.

In Macedonia the Serbians have extended their front westward to the Cerna River, and it is now 25 miles wide. The total depth of the advance is 15 to 17 miles.

Five thousand prisoners and eighty guns have been captured.

All the Bulgarian trench systems on the Serbian front have been penetrated. Allied cavalry has taken up the pursuit and one cavalry unit has crossed the Cerna 20 miles north of the Sokol positions. Another force of horsemen has moved the same distance northeast

British and Greek troops in an attack on a ten-mile front south of Lake Doiran have made some progress.

QUEBEC, Sept. 21.—After a vigorous fight the Trades and Labor Congress of Canada declared for stronger beer than now is allowed to be sold in the Dominion. ## Coal Enough If It is Husbanded

Unless Winter is Exceptionally Severe, Says Fuel Controller

OTTAWA, Sept. 21.—Unless the coming winter is one of exceptional severity the supply of coal available for use in Canada, in the opinion of Fuel Controller C. A. Magrath, should be sufficient if properly husbanded. Of anthracite coal Canada's allotment is somewhat smaller this year than last, but of bituminous coal some 1,200,000 tons more are being brought into the country. Mr. Magrath maintains that the Dominion Fuel Control organization has done all in its power to secure supplies of coal for Canada, and by regulation, to secure an equitable division thereof.

Municipal authorities, he holds, must do their part by appointing fuel controllers to ensure proper distribution of coal available for consumption in their own localities.

Those municipalities which fail to appoint fuel controllers and to take action, he predicts, will be the ones most in danger of feeling the pinch of coal shortage should the approaching winter be an unusually long and severe one.

Representatives of firms engaged in the manufacture of musical instruments, automobiles, liquors and clay products were here to-day conferring together and with the Fuel Controller respecting the manner in which the proposed limitation of coal consumption by those industries is to be carried out. It is understood that a plan has not yet been finally prepared. The manufacturere will, it is said, continue their conferences with a view to arranging for a fair division among them of a supply of coal allotted to their group of industries.

Land Behind German Lines

With the British Army in France, Sept. 21—Two British airmen had an unusual experience Wednesday night in the battle zone. Their planes crashed in German territory ten miles behind the St. Quentin Canal. The men were not injured and tramped back to their own lines, making their way successfully through great numbers of German troops and across the Hindenburg line.

Enemy Looting Is Organized

With the French Army in France, Sept. 21—Efforts to organize pillaging by the German army and the transportation of loot appear from official documents and verified incidents to have been more effective than the work of carrying out the removal of the legitimate war booty during this summer's operations.

The sacking of private houses and public buildings throughout the regions from which the Germans have been driven has been done with Advancing French armies, however, characteristic German thoroughness have found intact on the plateau in the region of Soissons, and elsewhere important dumps of munitions which the French had been obliged to abandon in their retreat of last spring.

OFFICIALLY AUTHORIZED

An order, signed by Gen. Von Marwitz, and dated May 28th was found in the pocket of prisoner. It throws peculiar light on the subject of pillaging. After condemning in severe terms disorganized looting operations by soldiers for their personal account, this document calls attention to the rules established for organized pillage and says that the men of the "loot detachments," bearing white arm badges and special indentification cards, have the same powers as military police. It adds: "The chief of these detachments will confiscate eatables and drinkables as well as objects of current use that are collected and keep guard over them until the arrival of the exploiting group."

Quartermasters are authorized by this document to apply to the use of their units a proportionate quantity of booty suitable for immediate consumption and to send the rest to the rear.

HOSPITAL ROBBED

Private letters written by prisoners give additional evidence of the extreme limits to which the looting is practised. A striking example of this work is found at the Vaubin Hospital, near Soissons, which was established and managed by Madamoiselle Canton-Baccarat. Before the building was demolished by German shells it was completely sacked by German officers, the principal offender being an army surgeon, whose name is known and placed on file for future reference.

Although supposedly under the protection of the Red Cross, this hospital was robbed of everything it contained, including 50,000 francs in money and securities from Madamoiselle Baccarat's safe, framed pictures and photographs for which caricatures were substituted. Linen bedclothes, labaratory instruments and supplies values at 1,500,000 francs and donated by Americans were taken. All the finer objects were shipped to Germany and most of the hospital beds went to the dugouts of German artillery officers around Soissons. A thousand of these have been recovered since the region has been reoccupied.

Big Shells Now Fall Into Heart of Metz

With the Americans on the Metz Front, Sept. 20.—American aviators yesterday reported shells from our heavy artillery dropping into the centre of Metz. A big factory has been struck and direct hits have been scored on the fortifications.

An even week since the start of the American drive in this region finds our army thoroughly at home fifteen miles within the line which the Germans held for four years. The new lines have been thoroughly consolidated, roads repaired and the country generally cleaned up.

Refugees are returning to villages betwen the Meuse and the Moselle, which had been under shell fire since 1914.

The Americans are steadily pushing their line forward, following up the patrols, and their advanced positions are now directly in front of the new Hindenburg line which the Germans established in this region last February.

Our patrols have reconnoitred this secton of the Hindenburg line several times and returned with reports concerning conditions. The American main line now runs through Ronvaux, Manheulles, Pintheville, St. Hilaire, Doncourt, Woel, Haumont, between Jaulny and Rembercourt, north of Vandieres, and south of Champey, to the old line.

Patrol encounters are frequent and bombardment o fthe front lines and rear areas is heavy. The enemy is reported to be mining Haumont, apparently preparing to evacuate the terrain in that vicinity in a great retrograde movement to Mars-La-Tour and Chambley.

(Chambley is three and a half miles north of Rembercourt. Mars-Le-Tour is the same distance north of Chambley, on the railway running southward from Canflans, and is one of the chief pillars of the Hindenburg line.)

Letters To The Editor

FAMILIES WITHOUT COAL

To The Editor of The Intelligencer:
Dear Sir:—

It is reasonably certain that there are many families in the City of Belleville without fuel at the present time.

Would it not be a good suggestion for the editors of both papers to select five representative citizens in each ward and ask them to make a canvas of the poorer class of people in their ward with a view of ascertaining what supply of coal they have on hand, what their requirements for the year would be, why they have made no purchases? etc. After this information has been been ascertained a report to the Local Fuel Controller could be made with a view to supplying the needs of these citizens.

In order to get immediate action in this matter I would not advise any particular citizen to act but would simply ascertain the names of five men or women in each ward and request them through the press to get together and make a canvass of their ward as quickly as possible and report to Commissioner Wills. In collecting this information special attention should be given to the needs of soldiers' wives.

Yours truly,
W. E. SHUSTER

EX-CZARINA BURNED WITH THREE DAUGHTERS

LONDON, Sept. 21—The former Russian Empress and three Princesses and two Grand Duchesses whose names are yet unknown were burned to death about a month after the Russian Emperor was shot, according to a story reaching London. The source of the story is given consideration in some quarters and an investigation has been started.

After the former Emperor was killed the women were taken to an isolated village, according to the present report, and made prisoners in a residence. They were there only a few days when a crowd of Bolsheviki attacked the house. The women barricaded the doors and the house was set on fire. All the persons in the house perished.

Spanish Influenza Now Under Control

Doctors Throughout The Province Circularized by The Provincial Secretary

TORONTO, Sept. 21—"The department is doing everything possible to check the outbreak of Spanish influenza which was reported to us from the Polish camp at Niagara, and we feel that we have this new but aggravating complaint well under control," was the statement made by Col. J. W. S. McCullough, Chief officer of the Provincial Board of Health.

Col. McCullough informed the Star that he had a conference with Hon. W. D. McPherson and that as a result he had issued a circular regarding the complaint to all the physicians in practice throughout the Province.

"The complaint is not unlike la grippe, although it is more annoying, if that could be possible," said Col. McCullough. "It is an acute febrile infections condition of three or four days' duration and the symptoms are chills acompanied by severe headaches with pain in the back and a general feeling of malaise or loss of energy. The face is flushed and herpes appear on the lips in some cases. The fever runs from 99 to 102 degrees and the highest point is reached on the second day, when there is a sudden drop, and by the fourth day the patient has practically recovered."

"It Looks Very Bad For Our Germany"

With the American Army on the Lorraine Front, Sept. 21—Fear lest the allies advance and overwhelm them bitter complaint at bad food and general despondency at the prospects of the war are the keynotes of letters written home by Grman soldiers and found on their person when they were captured.

A certain American divisions, which took a large number of prisoners, has made an exhaustive examination of these letters and found that the morale, even of the men of the Tenth German Regiment—conceded to be the best opposing the Americans—is decidedly low, if it can be judged from private letters never intended for allied consumption.

"It looks very bad for our dear Germany," writes one soldier to his wife. "Who knows whether the Americans will break through? This morning we again were on the alert and thought the Americans were going to attack, but nothing has happened as yet."

"We few fellows cannot hold up this superior might and must all go helplessly into captivity," says another, "and of course most of the prisoners are murdered but then we have to be satisfied with our fate whatever happens."

Another German, however, evidently did not fear murder, which obviously had been proclaimed as the lot of German soldiers falling into American hands, for he had written:

"According to all appearances we are approaching turbulent days. We constantly are on the alert and are afraid the Americans are going to attack. They are said to have assembled an enormous number of tanks and troops. In that case, we are lost, for everything in our front line is mixed up. I am firmly convinced that I could not be worse off over there."

Another soldier wrote that he felt worse than a dog. He declares that even dogs have kennels to sleep in while we must lie in the open in the rain and mud.

"What," he asks, "have we done that the whole world has designs on our lives? If the Americans attack we wil be in Metz (by retreating) in two days.

"The men are so embittered that they have no interest in anything, and they only want the war to end, no matter how. We are only slaves of the Government."

American Delegates State Peace Terms

LONDON, Sept. 20.—The fundamental principles which must underly the peace treaty are declared by the American delegates at the Inter-allied Labor and Socialist Congress to be as follows:

"A league of free peeples of the world in common covenant for genuine and practical co-operation to secure justice and therefore peace in the relations between the nations.

"No political or economic restrictions meant to benefit some nations and cripple or embarass others.

'No indemnities or reprisals based upon vindictive purposes or a deliberate desire to injure, but to right manifest wrongs.

"The recognition of the rights of small nations and the principle that No people must be forced under a Sovereignty under which it does not wish to live!

"No territorial changes or adjustment of power except in the furtherance of the welfare of the people affected and in the furtherance of world peace."

The proposals assert that the following basic principles should also be incorporated in the treaty of peace:

"In law and in practice of the principle shall be recognized that the labor of a human being is not a commodity or an article of commerce.

"Involuntary servitude shall not exist except as punishment for crime for which the party shall have been duty convinced.

"The right of free association, free assemblage, free speech and free press shall not be abridged.

"Seamen of the merchant marine shall be guaranteed the right to leave their vessels when they are in a safe harbor.

'No article or commodity shall be shipped or delivered in international commerce in the producton of which children under sixteen years of age have been employed or permitted to work.

"The basic work da in industry and commerce shall not exceed eight hours.

Peace Leafelts In French Lines

With the French Army in France, Sept. 21—Aviators flying over the region of Epernay on the night of September 16 dropped leaflets reproducing the Austro-Hungarian peace conference proposal in French.

There are no Austrian aviators on the western front, so far as is known. It is supposed, therefore, that the leaflets were dropped by German airmen. with the object of starting a movement in favor of the proposal.

The only result of this propaganda has been to raise the presumption that while the proposal is referred to in Germany as an "isolated action" on the part of Austria, the German army at least approves it.

BELLEVILLE

Mrs. A. Lott, 49 Grier street, Belleville, Ont., writes: "About nine years ago I was a nervous wreck—so bad that my arms and shoulders had to be bandaged, and sometimes my friends had difficulty keeping me in bed. One time I went to the hospital to see my sister, and while there became so nervous that my arms and feet had to be bandaged and I had to be brought home. Through reading of it in the Receipt Book, I was induced to use Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, and after taking several boxes I began to recover and get stronger, and now feel perfectly well. I am very pleased to recommend Dr. Chase's Nerve Food to all my friends."

BRANTFORD

Mrs. A. North, Grand street north, Brantford, Ont., writes: "Both my husband and I can speak very highly of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, having used it with splendid results. My husband suffered from weakness and a rundown system, and became so bad he finally had to give up work. He also had spells of melancholia. He commenced using Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, and after a treatment of this medicine I never saw such a change in anybody. He is now able to attend to his work, and is enjoying splendid health.

"Before I started taking Dr. Chase's Nerve Food I was troubled with nervousness, sleeplessness and a pain around the heart. The Nerve Food built up my system, made me feel stronger in every way, and relieved me of the annoying symptoms from which I had suffered. We always keep Dr. Chase's Nerve Food in the house ready for use in case they are needed."

PETERBORO'

Mrs. C. French, 104 Lansdowne street, Peterboro', Ont., writes: "I was troubled with nervousness, sleeplessness, frequent headaches and indigestion. For many years I was troubled with a twitching or fidgety feeling about my limbs after retiring, causing me much loss of sleep. If wakened up out of my first sleep, even had I been asleep for only five minutes, I would lie awake for hours and could not get to sleep again. Any sudden noise or a door slamming would set my nerves going, and I would fear that something dreadful was going to happen. I had tried different remedies for this trouble, but without success. A friend asked me one day why I didn't try Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, so I thought I could at least give it a trial. I secured some and commenced using them, and found they benefited me so much that I have taken fully a dozen boxes. My nervousness or fidgety feeling in the limbs is entirely cured. I can now eat and sleep well. I can recommend Dr. Chase's Nerve Food strongly, and would advise anyone suffering from nervous trouble of any kind to use them according to directions."

How the Good Word
is Passed Along

IT is over the teacup that women exchange confidences. Not infrequently "Health" is the subject, and this often leads to the discussion of the merits of Dr. Chase's medicines, and more particularly his Nerve Food.

The doctor had a fine appreciation of the needs of the feminine system, and had this in mind when developing this great restorative treatment for the nerves.

More blood—and always more blood—is required in order to make up the periodic loss and to supply the nourishment required to sustain the delicate and complicated nervous system.

Because no treatment ever seemed to meet this need so nicely as Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, this food cure has attained wide popularity and enormous sales.

There is sure to come times in every woman's life when such restorative, blood-building treatment is required. It is a blessing to know just where to turn for help. Ask your friends about Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, and then give it a chance to build you up with new energy and vitality.

LONDON

Mrs. S. Meathrel, 22 Hyla street, London, Ont., writes: "About a year ago I had a complete collapse from my nerves. I was taken to the hospital for a treatment, but it did not give me much relief. Then I went to the country for a change of air, but after my return home I did not feel much better. I used to have nervous spells, when my limbs would begin to shake, then grow cold, and I would be completely exhausted. I was also troubled with an accumulation of gas on my stomach, which caused palpitation of the heart. At last I decided to try Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, and after I had used them for a while I could see that they were helping me, so I continued using them until I got well again. I became real strong and healthy, could sleep well at night, and was able to do my own housework. As I got stronger, the nervous spells disappeared, and I have not had one since."

WOODSTOCK

Mrs. Lydia MacKay, 285 Hunter street, Woodstock, Ont., writes: "I suffered from a weak and rundown condition of the system. I also had severe headaches. I got some of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, took a good treatment of this medicine, and the results were most satisfactory. I feel much stronger now, have got rid of the headaches, and am able to do my own work without any difficulty. I have recommended the Nerve Food to many of my friends, and would recommend it to anyone suffering from nervousness of any kind."

GALT, ONT.

Miss Alice Howes, 21 Haddington street, Galt, Ont., writes: "I was very ill with anaemia, could not sleep at night, and my appetite seemed entirely gone. I suffered in this way for nearly three years, and had treatment from two doctors in Toronto, where I was living at the time, but did not get any relief. I became completely run down, and as I did not see any immediate hopes of getting better, I went back to live with my mother in Galt. I thought perhaps the change of air might do me good. My mother saw that I was in a bad state, because my nerves were affected, and everywhere I went I used to take dizzy and fainting spells. My hands and limbs would become numb, I would see black specks before my eyes, and cold perspiration would come out on me. My mother had been taking Dr. Chase's Nerve Food with excellent results, and she advised me to do the same. But it is hard for me to take pills, so I went to a doctor in Galt instead. However, his treatment did me no good, so I at last decided to follow mother's advice. I began taking Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, and gradually found myself getting better. I soon was able to sleep at night without any difficulty, my appetite came back, and I began to gain back my natural color. After taking about twelve boxes of this medicine I was able to return to my work in Toronto. My friends there all noticed the improvement in my condition, and I am now stronger and healthier than I have been for a long, long time."

LAST CALL—IS YOUR NAME WRITTEN THERE?

The campaign to raise funds for the Knights of Columbus Army Comfort Huts for the soldiers on the firing line has swept forward with enthusiasm and success. The members of the local Council Knights of Columbus, are working hard to attain the objective of $5,000 set for Belleville and vicinity and their efforts are meeting with deserved success. The publicity part of the local campaign is in charge of Mr. W. L. Doyle, who has been so successful in previous campaigns for various patriotic purposes, and as a result of Mr. Doyle's ability and novel advertising methods no one who can read will be able to say that the aims and objects of the campaign were not strikingly brought forth. The soldiers who are fighting for our freedom and prosperity are cheerfully enduring every variety of discomfort and heroically facing injury and death—not for $1.10 a day—but to save the world from the ruthless savagery of the insane Butcher of Berlin, saving Canada from the horrors of Belgium, Serbia, Rumania and invaded France. What we owe the brave soldier boys can never be measured in money and the slogan of "Give, Give, Give 'Till it Hurts" is but a reminder of one more opportunity to pay a small installment on our great debt to our soldier protectors.

With all the efforts put forth by the devoted men and women who are enduring discomfort and sacrifice in the war zones to lighten the burdens of the soldiers the vast field of service can never be crowded and too many opportunities to provide comforts for the soldiers can not be created. There are no creed barriers on the battlefield and only one God to bless the religion of service in the great cause of humanity. The K. of C. workers are welcomed beside the Y.M.C.A. and Salvation Army and all will work in perfect harmony and co-operation ministering to the needs of the soldiers and by their unselfish services inspiring the soldier to even greater efforts in the cause of world freedom.

Those who cannot fight or serve on the battlefield can at least give and keep giving out of their abundance, and smile, smile, smile at the glorious opportunity of doing even a little bit for the great cause.

This is the last day of the Drive and those who have not as yet given in their subscriptions can do so this evening at Campaign Headquarters, corner of Bridge and Front Streets.

THEATRE PESTS.

The great mystery of why people persist in being late at theatrical entertainments has never been solved. People, ordinarily courteous and thoughtful of the comfort of others will stamp into a theatre after the performance has started and with their seats generally in the centre of a row disturb all the patrons in that row and those behind while they are reaching their seats and removing their wraps. The first act of theatrical productions is often spoiled by these thoughtless ones, for themselves and everyone else in the immediate vicinity of their seats, while the actors themselves are disturbed and rendered incapable of doing their best. Patrons who make a practise of being in their seats early are entitled to consideration and if some method could be devised to discourage late comers it would be a public benefit. Everywhere the same complaint is made and the Lindsay Warder refers to the subject caustically as follows:

> When will theatre-goers learn to be punctual? Last night the pleasure of the first scene in the first act of the big show in the Academy was spoiled for many who were in their seats on time, by the late arrivals. Let it be known that it is not fashionable to be late. That idea may prevail at house parties, but not at concerts and theatre attractions. Late comers also seem to have no regard or respect for those who made an effort to get to the show on time, but hurry in on their heels, rustle wraps and bang seats as if the rest of the audience were of no consequence whatever. It should be remembered that the Academy curtain goes up at 8.15 sharp ,so get the habit to be there on time.
> If the bank closes on time you are there to get your money; if you are hungry you are on time for your meals; if police court starts at 9 o'clock sharp you are there. You wouldn't be late for your own wedding, so why not be obliging to others and be on time at the theatre?

.·. CRISP COMMENT .·.

CANADA EXPECTS EVERY MOTORIST TO DO HIS DUTY TOMORROW!

Urgent business alone will excuse the using of motor cars tomorrow. The gasoline is needed for the boys "over there." Patriotic Canadians are in honor bound to sacrifice pleasure to promote war-winning efforts.

It's all very well to sing "God save our splendid men, bring them safe home again," but it is better to mean it and help bring them safe home again by saving gasoline on Sunday.

"Organized labor is behind you, carry on!" was the cable message sent by the Trades and Labor Congress of Canada to the Canadian soldiers overseas. Labor has no desire to be regulated by the Berlin Butcher.

Toronto policemen have shown that they can club together or club individually, and the investigation into their clubbing proclivities now going on has revealed many an aching head which has lost all the love it ever had for a Toronto Bobby.

The granting of the application of the Aluminum Company for power rights at the Long Sault by the International Joint Commission is against the Dominion Government's wishes, and against Canadian rights under the Ashburton Treaty. If Canada wished, electric power now exported from Ontario, could be kept at home. That would not be a violation of treaty rights.—Mail and Empire.

While the splendid news of repeated victories on the battlefields of Europe fill all hearts with joy and lightens the tension of four years of hoping and praying for victory, there can not help but be a note of sadness caused by the frequent messages telling of brave soldier boys killed or wounded "over there." The gladness of many homes has been saddened of late by the shadow of sacrifice exacted by war, but those who sorrow may be comforted in a measure by the thought that their great sacrifice is appreciated in the warm and loving sympathy of friends and neighbors. The memory of the soldier boy who sleeps beneath the waving poppies on Flanders' fields will evermore be called blessed, for greater love hath no man than this, that a man should lay down his life for a friend.

Germans and Czecho-Slovaks.

London Free Press.

Waxing solicitous over the possible effect upon Russia of the Allied recognition of a Czecho-Slovak nation, the German semi-official Wolff Bureau calls the Czecho-Slovaks by the contemptuous name of "robber bands."

The term "robbers" as addressed by Germany to any people on earth, no matter how rapacious, would be a laughable example of the pot calling the kettle black As applied to the Czecho-Slovaks such an appellation is almost profane.

Their Own Medicine.

London Times.

During July no fewer than one hundred raids were carried out by the British, of the Independent and Royal Air Forces, of which ninety-six were into Germany. In all 81 tons of bombs were dropped on important military objectives. In spite of periods of bad weather the month's work constitutes a record in the number of raids and the weight of bombs dropped. The previous best month was June last, when 74 raids were made into German territory and 61 tons of bombs dropped.

DANGEROUS ANTISEPTICS AND GERMINICIDES ARE UNNECESSARY

A dependable antiseptic has come to be considered a necessity in most homes. Especially is this true since Absorbine, Jr., has had such a wide introduction, because this liniment is not only a powerful antiseptic and germicide but it is absolutely safe to use and to have around the house. It is not poisonous and it cannot do harm even if the children do get hold of it. That is a big point to consider.

Absorbine, Jr. is concentrated and is therefore economical. It retains its germicidal properties even diluted one part Absorbine, Jr. to 100 parts water—and its antiseptic properties, one part Absorbine, Jr., to 200 parts of water.

The antiseptic and germicidal properties have been repeatedly tested and proven in many prominent chemical laboratories. Detailed laboratory reports mailed upon request.

Absorbine, Jr. combines safety with efficiency. $1.25 a bottle at most druggists or postpaid.

LITERARY CAREER OF

Albert Richardson Carman, Graduate of Albert College

When Lord Atholstan was in Vancouver he mentioned that he had a grievance against Cyrus H. Curtis, publisher of the Saturday Evening Post, Ladies' Home Journal, the Public Ledger and other periodicals, for that the said Curtis had lured away the chief editorial writer of the Montreal Star, writes Lucien in the Vancouver Province. For more than twenty-five years, less two or three years spent in Europe on two sojourns, Albert Richardson Carman had written editorials for the Star, and during the last fifteen or so he was chief leader writer. Throughout the last decade of the last century Carman was also the Star's parliamentary correspondent.

Albert College Graduate.

These were the days when I knew him best. He came to the press gallery first from the Toronto Globe, fresh from graduation at Albert College, whereof his father, the late chief on earth of the Methodist Church in Canada, had been the founder and Chancellor, before the days of his superintendency. There were two brothers of this family. Both became newspaper writers and members of the press gallery. The younger worked for the Montreal Witness, while the elder served the Star.

Theologically, A. R. Carman of the Star was not in exact harmony with the general superintendent, whose doctrinal standards were somewhat reactionary. But the younger man inherited a taste for the great science, and his first novel published just before his residence in Germany and France, is a discussion of a human soul in quest of light and leading on the affairs of the spirit and of this world and the next. It was followed three years later by "The Pensionaires," which, as the name implies, grew out of European experiences. There is a clever dialogue and much suggestion in this book. Two years later Mr. Carman took up the discussion of national problems in a searching enquiry called "The Ethics of Imperialism."

His First Book.

Carman's first book, called "The Preparation of Ryerson Embury," may be a kind of spiritual biography, like "The Apprenticeship of Wilhelm Meister." It begins with a Methodist revival, depicting scenes with which the minister's son was familiar. The hero went frequently to the penitent bench, but never was able to obtain the assurance of sins forgiven. By and by he gave it up and set about other processes of development. He became somewhat vague in his acceptance of the Scripture narratives and eventually attended free thought meetings. Relations with the church were further strained by his sympathy with the employees of the local industry, who had been grossly wronged by their employer, and went on strike. The employer had large influence with the church, so that the heterodoxy of the young law student was aggravated by his social attitude.

He made fierce speeches at the meetings of strikers, and so was banished from the capitalistic law office where he was a student. Finally he wound up his part in the labor controversy by counselling the strikers to go back to work, since they were sure to fail, but to give themselves straightway to Henry George, single tax and the abolition of private ownership in the land. Having struck for more bread and obtained the single tax doctrine, the workers gave their fervent young apostle many cheers as he departed for Montreal to connect himself with a law firm which had a large labor clientele. It seems that the apprentice who balked at the contradictions of the Bible found "Progress and Poverty" full of evidence of deep and infallible inspiration.

There is a lady in the case, two ladies in fact, but they are both rather shadowy figures, who seem to have been introduced because a heroine or two may be necessary for a novel. For the love of one of them Ryerson competed with a self-satisfied young opportunist young divine, who is a sort of burlesque of the conventional theologue. The other girl appears as necessary material for a misunderstanding with the leading lady, who in the martyr in Montreal. There is no sign end seems to be preparing to join the that the single tax prescription, which was the farewell message of Ryerson to the strikers, wrought a cure in Ryerson's town of Ithaca. For that matter, it does appear that the operatives attempted to apply the remedy. There is a suggestion by one of the Ithaca unionists that the wanderings of their Ulysses might bring him back to be their representative in parliament. Meantime they seem to have gone back to work.

Gently Sarcastic.

The later novel of Mr. Carman was distinctly more literary and artistic. It was published as a serial if I recollect right, and gives a gently sarcastic account of the tourist colonies found in some continental pensions.

"The Ethics of Imperialism" is a remarkably incisive and searching analysis of the basis of national and imperial patriotism. Beginning with a survey which alone might lead one to a conclusion that internationalism is the only just and Christian system of world morals, the author proceeds in detail to show that there is no such animal. He maintains with shrewd practical reasoning that the nation must be the unit of action for the welfare of the world. Nations may work ethically together for the protection of the spoiler, but they must first and always be able to protect themselves. There is a smart chapter of criticism of Spencer's "Data of Ethics," in which Mr. Carman finds the altruism and egoism of Spencer hopelessly commixed and commingled, like the whirlpool of Schiller. But in the end Carman comes out on square ethical grounds on the side of the moderate imperialist.

The first duty of a nation is to protect itself. All else is suicide, and the doctrine that he who loses his life shall save it does not apply to nations. Longfellow declared that the dead nations never rise again. A nation which has a mission to perform must do it in the present life.

But it was only incidentally that Mr. Carman wrote books and contributed to magazines and reviews. His chief work was on the Star. That is why Lord Atholstan laments the acquisitiveness of Mr. Curtis. He offered a salary beyond anything that could be paid in Canada, and when Carman asked what he had better do Lord Atholstan told him to accept, since he could always come back to the Star if he did not like Philadelphia,

The Power of The Dollar

Never were extravagance and useless buying regarded as so serious an evil as today. A greater evil still is the spending of one's money on silly pleasures. Canadians carry too serious a determination to ride through to Victory and to vindicate the stalwartness and endurance of the men at the front to tolerate any such laxity in heir expenditures.

Our people generally are sizing up the power of the dollar as never before, and are investing their surpluses against a possible landslide after the war. This is real patriotism. It is carrying common-sense into national business. It is proving that the strength of a nation lies is her saving citizens.

Constipated Childre

Childhood constipation can be quickly banished through the use of Baby's Own Tablets. These Tablets are a mild but thorough laxative which never fail to regulate the bowels, sweeten the stomach and in this way relieve all the minor ills of little ones. Concerning them Mrs. Eugene Couture, Knox Bridge, Que., writes:—"Baby's Own Tablets have been marvellous in the case of my baby. She was constipated and feverish but the Tablets soon regulated her bowels and made her well." The Tablets are sold by medicine dealers or by mail at 25 cents a box from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

The Patriot or The Shirker

To save and serve or to spend and shirk—that is the question. If we decide—as we will—on saving and serving, then we must cut down on all luxuries to the limit.

Motoring for pleasure is a luxury. Most of the Sunday motoring is for pleasure, and as long as the Fuel Controller asks us to desist from Sunday motoring, it is our patriotic duty to respond.

By refraining from pleasure-motoring to-morrow we discharge a double duty. We save the gasoline needed overseas. We save the money which Canada must have to finish the war. The car in the garage tomorrow is the Patriot's car. The car on the highway, if there for pleasure, is the car of the Shirker. Which is YOURS?

MESSAGE TO HOLLAND

Cryptic Cable hich is Said to Have Led to Death of Lord Kitchener

"Kitchener's murder,' said Mr. Arnold White, speaking at a British Empire Union meeting in Hyde Park, "is one of the great proofs of the existence of a vast, ably organized and wonderful machine in our midst for the purpose of downing England. Twenty-four hours before the voyage it was decided to alter the course of the Hampshire to enable a visit to be made to the Grand Fleet. On that day a cablegram was sent to Holland expressed in clear English. It stated: 'Shall Herbet enter the legal academy next December?' The first censor, a young man, passed it; but the second censor, not quite so oyung, wondered why the sender had gone to the expense of cabling the word 'the.'

"The answer to his query is this: the initials of the words in the cable spell 'Shetland', and it was off the Orkneys that Kitchener met his death." That was what he meant by the "hidden hand." It would be a cheap investment for Germany to spend £30,000 in this country at the next election in order to produce a victory for Germany at the polls, and ensure that at the peace table there should be some German representatives who would have their cloven feet under the table."

Chaput Found Guilty Of Manslaughter

Harr yBowman's Slayer Treated Leniently By Montreal Judge And Jury

The Montreal Gazette has the following with reference to the connection of the man who killed Harry Bowman, a returned soldier, of Kingston, in Montreal last January.

The judge, in his charge, said that on the night in question Bowman visited the disorderly house of Miss Jeanette. Bowman was drunk and asked for a room. He was making a good deal of noise, and she told Delsol, who was a cabman, to go for Chaput in order to throw Bowman out. His Lordship maintained that Miss Jeanette was within her rights, as the law permits proprietors to eject disturbers. When Chaput came Bowman was lying in a bed in a room. Chaput struck him several times, according to the evidence of Miss Jeanette and Dr. Derome, who performed the autopsy, Delsol, however, declared that Chaput struck Bowman only once. After the blows had been inflicted Bowman fell out of bed.

Judge Cross then said that Miss Jeanette had told the court that Chaput had taken Bowman by the head and Delsol had taken him by the feet and carried him outside. On the folowing day the body of Bowman was found frozen in a nearby lane. Nothing was said of the incident by Miss Jeanette for four or five months when she finally reported the matter to the police and the arrest of Delsol and Chaput followed.

In the opinion of Judge Cross there was no justification for Chaput having used force to eject Bowman as it was stated that Bowman did not resist. Judge Cross, however, asked the jury to decide whether Chaput, in inflicting the blows, was indifferent whether he killed Bowman or not, or whether he merely wished to eject him without causing mortal harm. The judge thought that a verdict of manslaughter would be in accordance with the evidence, and the jury, after five minutes' deliberation, returned a verdict of manslaughter against Chaput.

MEN IN FRONT LINE LEFT TO THEIR FATE

Germans Conceal Withdrawal of Troops Behind

With the French Army in France, Sept. 21.—Prisoners are now complaining that they are frequently left in the front line to shift for themselves. Rarely do their officers stand by them when they are attacked, they say. It often happens that machine gun crews are ordered to hold positions and discover some time afterward that the troops behind them have abandoned the field. They attribute the concealment from them of the retreat of the infantry to the fear entertained by their officers that they might be tempted to abandon their posts if they ynew that they were to be sacrificed.

Hertling Will Remain Huns All of One Mind

AMSTERDAM, Sept. 21.—Konstantine Fehrenbach, president of the German Reichstag, sees no reason to expect a Ministerial crisis in Germany, according to an interview with him printed in the Lokal Anzeiger of Berlin.

Differences of opinion regarding peace aims no longer exist between authoriative political and military circles, he is quoted as saying, and hence there is no ground for objection to Von Hindenburg retaining the Chancellorship.

"No one need doubt that the Chancellor is determined to bring about a peace by understanding," he says. "It will, however, be necessary for the Government to make a determined stand against the pan-Germans."

BRITISH EVACUATE BAKU

LONDON, Sept. 21—Baku, in trans-Caucasia, has been evacuated by the British who has withdrawn their forces in north Persia.

The evacuation was made necessary it is stated because of the lack of steadiness on the part of the Armenian troops when they were attacked by the Turks during August.

By the end of that month it was realied that the co-operation of the local government and its forces would not be sufficiently effective to justify the retention of the small British detachments in the face of the numbers which the enemy could collect.

On September 1 the evacuation was definitely decided upon but on the same day the Turks again attacked and the allies of the British, the reports state, again failed to co-operate with the result that the Royal Warwickshire regiment had to cover the treat of a Russo-Armenian regiments, and it is feared that this force lost heavily.

A small force of Russians arrived at Baku on Sept. 9 to reinforce the British. This, with the inactivity of the enemy, tended to improve the morale of the forces allied with the British, strengthening their wish to hold the town. They induced the fleet in the Caspain, which was still in Russian hands, to refuse permission for the British evacuation, according to the advice. Meanwhile, it is added, the Armenians were negotiating to hand the town over to the enemy.

On Sept. 14 the enemy made a determined attack and after fighting that sixteen hours, the brunt of which was borne by the British, the latter evacuated the town.

The Turks recently have undertaken an advance from Tabriz, Persia, as far as Jemalabad, and the British detachments which have been watching this road, have retired.

Nervous Trouble

The nerve system is the governing system of the whole body, controlling the heart, lungs, digestion and brain: so it is not surprising that nervous disturbances should cause acute distress. The first stage of nervous debility are noted by irritbaility and restlessness, in which the victims seem to be oppressed by their nerves. The matter requires immediate attention, for nothing but suitable treatment will prevent a complete breakdown. The victim, however, need not dispair for even severe nervous disorders may be cured by improving the condition of the blood. It is because Dr. Williams Pink Pills actually make new, rich blood that this medicine has cured extreme nervous disorders after all other treatment had failed. The nerves thrive on the new blood made by these pills; the appetite improves, digestion is better, sleeplessness no longer troubles the former nerve shattered victim, and life generally takes on a cheerful aspect. Every sufferer from nerve trouble, no matter how slight, should lose no time in giving Dr. Williams' Pink Pills a fair trial, thus regaining their old-time health and comfort.

You can get Dr. Williams Pink Pills through any dealer in medicine, or by mail at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50 from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

EMPOWER LAYMEN TO BAPTISE CHILD

The rubric added reads as follows: "That is no lawful minister may be had and the child be in danger of death, then let one of those present pour water upon him and say "I baptize thee in the name of the Father The Son and The Holy Ghost, Amen.""

STOVE STYLES

1918-1919

Radical changes in mechanical design are not to be expected in a line of cooking and heating stoves, which have successfully met every demand of users since the inception of the stove industry.

Great progress has been made in the simplification of heating and cooking stoves, the elimination of the many unnecessary parts, and the standardization of different lines, in external design, many more improvements are exhibited.

Smooth, plain, easy-to-keep-clean castings for filigree of old; sharp angles have given way to graceful curves; there is beauty, unity and uniformity shown.

Our line of ranges today embodies everything that is newest and best in the stove construction, responding fully to the varying tastes in requirements of users.

Your patronage and approval impose obligation upon us to solve and successfully cope with your stove problem. An inspection of our stock will convince you that we have more than merely met your demands. We have succeeded in anticipating them.

We have on our floor samples of over fifty ranges and heaters, including the Gurney-Oxford, Fire-Co., Peninsular, Treasure, 3 different kinds of high-oven ranges, base burners, combination gas and coal ranges, and a large variety of Oak style and Quebec heaters to choose from.

AMIENS CATHEDRAL UNHURT

Only Three Shells Hit Edifice—Residents Return to City and Rebuild Homes

PARIS, Sept. 21.—French Government officials are supervising the return of residents to Amiens, which was almost completely evacuated after the German offensive last March. The first to be admitted to the city were artisans, who were organized to repair damaged houses and buildings shattered by shellfire.

One house in every twenty-five has been found damaged. The cathedral was hardly affected by the bombardment, having been hit by only three shells. The works of art and sculptures in the edifices were not harmed.

SYNOD CHEERS NEW VICTORY

TORONTO, Sept. 21—A remarkable scene of enthusiasm was created at the Wednesday evening session of the General Synod of the Church of England in Canada when the Primate announced the receipt of a summary of an official despatch, furnished by The Globe that the British had broken through the Hindenburg line between Cambrai and St. Quentin and taken six thousand prisoners.

The whole synod broke into a storm of applause and wild hurrahs, and spontaneously burst into singing "God Save The King," followed by the fervent singing of "Praise God From Whom all Blessings Flow."

The Globe's message was pasted in the minute book of the Synod as a record for all time of a thrilling incident in the midst of the second wartime General Synod of the Church of England in Canada.

HEAVY FINES IMPOSED ON WHISKEY SMUGGLERS

U.S. ACE OF ACES KILLED'

With the American Army on the Lorraine Front, Sept. 21—First-Lt. David E. Putman of Newton, Mass., American ace of aces, was killed late Wednesday afternoon, while on patrol along the American lines. He was flying with Lieut. Wendell A. Robertson of Fort Smith, Ark., when they were attacked by seven German machines. Four of these made for Putman's airplane and three attacked Robertson's. The attack was sudden and unexepected and the enemy was able to fire from above.

Putman was twice shot through the heart. His machine glided to the earth and within the American lines, where he was found by his comardes. Robertson returned safely.

Lieut. David E. Putman, a decendent of Gen. Israel Putman, was credited with tewlve aerial victories. In one day, June 10, he brought down five German airplanes.

GERMAN RECRUITS REVOLT

AMSTERDAM, Sept. 21—A large number of German recruits, mostly boys eighteen years of age, refused to entrain for the front at Aix-la-Chalpeele, according to Les Nouvelles, which says that the soldiers were ordered to fire upon the mutineers, of whom eight were kiled and many wounded.

It is stated by the newspaper that the remainder of the revolting recruits were then driven into their train like cattle, but they were firing from the windows of the cars as the train moved out of the station.

Wedding Bells

STRIKER—SMITH.

A very pretty wedding took place at Lakebourne Farm, Wellington Road, the home of Mr. and Mrs. J .S. Striker, on Wednesday, September 4th, when their eldest daughter Florence Luella, was united in marriage to Mr. William Vernon Smith, only son of Mr. and Mrs. R. L. Smith, of Hillier. The bride, who was given away by her father, looked charming in a gown of ivory silk crepe-de-chine with a bridal veil of white net and flowers, and carried white roses. The bridesmaid, Miss McLocklin, of Brighton, wore peach-colored silk crepe-de-chine, and carried pink roses. The bridegroom was attended by Mr. Frank Haight of Bloomfield, cousin of the bride. The Rev. A. Terrill, of Wellington officiated. The groom's gift to the bride was a beautiful gold wrist watch, to the bridesmaid a gold brooch, and to the groomsman a tie pin.

Many beautiful and useful presents were received by the bride. After the wedding breakfast was served the happy couple motored to Belleville where they took the train for Ottawa and points east.

McGORMAN—REYNOLDS

A very pretty choral wedding took place at St. George's Church, Trenton, Sept. 18th, by the Rev. ## WAR VETERANS INDORSE K. OF C. ARMY HUT FUND

Toronto, Sept. 20, 1918

E. D. O'Flynn, Esq.,
Standard Bank Chambers,
Belleville, Ont.

Dear Comrade:

The following letter was given to the representative of the Knights of Columbus in the City of Toronto, after consultation with the President and Vice-President:

"We who have shared in the mud, misery and blood of trench warfare know the need of such aid to courage and endurance as the Knights of Columbus Huts afford to the soldiers over there. We have no hesitation in urging Canadians to support the work.

Our comrades are on the eve of the fifth winter Canadians have passed in Flanders. They need al thes ustaining comforts we can give the mto main tain Victory making morale during the coming months.

The folks who give the last cent of their last dollar for the welfare of the boys over there have given less than the man who gives his life.

The Great War Veterans Association in Ontario will support and encourage the money raising campaign of the Knights of Columbus."

I regret the matter was so urgent I was unable to consult all the members of the Executive before making a departure from our policy to withhold endorsation of the work of other organizations, but Itrust the worthy nature of this endeavor will lead to your approval of my action in this matter.

Yours fraternally,
W. E. TURLEY,
Sec. G.W.V.A. (Ont. Prov. Branch)

No More Gray Hair

THE FREE TRIAL BOTTLE of MARY T. GOLDMAN'S HAIR COLOR RESTORER proves how quickly gray hair disappears when this scientific restorer is used. Simply applied with special comb; leaves hair clean, fluffy and natural; does not interfere with washing. Come in and let me make this test on a lock of hair and you will never accept a cheap imitation. Then buy a full sized bottle direct from me.

NOT AT ANY AGE

This wonderful discovery makes it unnecessary to have gray hair at any age. Begin with the first gray streaks—just comb them away. Remember—not a dye but a restorer—clear and colorless, clean as water. If you've found a thread of gray hair call today.

Music and Drama

"HAVE A HEART"

The season's musical comedy success of a big department store, crowded with pretty shop girls and fashionable patrons. There, a separated young couple, strangers now, but lovers still, meet again, there the advent of the husband's old flame, a shopgirl, who has become a queen of the film, threatens reconciliation, but the funny complications are finally untangled in a wholly inoffensive hotel scene at the seaside resort, Blueport, R.I. And when the final curtain falls the audience wil take home haunting memories of such song hits and foxtrotting airs as—"You Said Something," "I'm so Busy," "Low in his Eyes," "Napaleon," "Honeymoon Inn," "Can The Cabaret," "Daisy," "Samarkland," "My Wife—My Man," "I'm Here Little Girls, I'm Here," and "The Road That Lies Before." A particularly satisfying feature will be the special orchestra provided by the company. This is the only company playing "Have a Heart," and is under the personal direction of Henry W. Savage.

"WILD YOUTH"

Owing to the road show "Have A Heart" being here on Tuesday evening the Griffin Photoplay programe will be presented on Monday and Wednesday nights only. The first special picture will be Marguerite Fisher, in a new photoplay called 'A Square Deal.' This picture has plenty of heart interest, a good sensible story of every day life in the home of the average wage earner, is not a sermon, but a lesson to all. "The Eagle's Eye" chapter contains the usual revelations of Germany's hired assassins endeavors to prevent American Participation in the war.

A good comedy with plenty of laughs and the special picture "Wild Youth" produced by that master of stage craft J. Stuart Blacton. Many will remember Mr. Blacton's last picture "Missing" and the impression that it made and the story of "Wild Youth" will make a still more lasting impression as the title implies the story has to do with the trials and troubles of a youth that has ambition to be some one, but has not the will and staying powers, how the will power does come eventually makes a very strong story and one that must be seen to be appreciated.

At the Palace from Monday to Wednesday there will be the usual fine programme of photoplays consisting of comedy, drama and Educational films.

A Successful Experiment

By GORTON CARRUTH

(Copyright, [illegible], by the McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)

He put his paper aside abruptly, rose and walked down the leaf-strewn path to the other bench, where the girl was sitting.

"Would you like to try an experiment?" he asked quietly, standing with hat in hand before her.

She looked at him for a moment unsmiling, her expression neither inviting nor repelling.

"Perhaps," she said at length.

He sank into the seat beside her. "It is something I have often wanted to try," he said slowly. "Here are we two, perfect strangers in a city of five millions, and never likely to see each other again after we leave this chance meeting place. We have sat here for half an hour, each pretending to read, or to watch the squirrels, or the falling leaves, or the misty golden sunshine out there on the field, but each examining and appraising the other when the other wasn't looking.

"Now, this is the experiment: We have each gained a strong first impression of the other. Let us, with absolutely frankness, tell each other what those impressions are. Let us do what friends cannot do—speak without reservations, made for fear of hurting each other's feelings."

She sat without speaking for a moment after he had finished, gazing thoughtfully out at the warm expanse of autumn-tinted park.

"But why?" she asked at last. "I am not sure that Burns was right. Perhaps it is just as well that we can't see ourselves as others see us."

"That," he said, "makes it an experiment. It will be a new experience. I want to know exactly how I look in the eyes of a stranger, however much the knowledge may hurt. Have you ever felt that way?"

"Yes," she said, "I have. Everyone does, I think."

"Well, I'll tell you, if you will do as much for me."

Again she hesitated and sat silently watching a gray squirrel that untroubled by self-consciousness, was busy burying a nut.

"Well," she said finally, "you first."

"The fact that I came over here and proposed this experiment to you at all shows that I thought you a sensible girl," he began slowly. "You impressed me as being neither a prude nor a flirt. You are pretty—I don't need to tell you that—but it has not spoiled you. You are rather thoughtful and studious, and you have a genuine feeling for the beauties of nature—something which too many girls just pretend to have. You are not above, I believe, taking an interest in babies and embroidery, although you know what is going on about you in the world and read something besides the woman's page in the newspapers. You don't work for your living, and your home is one of the comfortable houses in the Seventies. You see a good deal of the society side of life, but you keep healthfully busy at serious things. You are probably a suffragist in a quiet way, and you are also interested in some form of social or philanthropic work, which you do not treat as an heroically assumed duty. And—"

He was interrupted by the girl's low laughter. "Why not say that I have all the good qualities, and be done with it?" she asked. "Your impression is certainly not very accurate. Let's see if I can do better.

"You, it seems to me, have many of the excellent qualities that you are attributing to me. You are nothing of a 'sport,' but are a rather serious-minded young man, somewhat too much given to introspection. You are not bad looking, and you impress me as having a good deal of common sense. You are about twenty-five, and you are one of our rising young professional men—an architect, perhaps, or an engineer of some sort. You read a good deal, and, when it comes to newspapers, something besides the sporting pages. You are rather domestic by nature, and you have a sense of humor. You also live in one of the better homes in the Seventies or the Eighties, and you are a confirmed New Yorker. There, how is that for a snapshot portrait?"

He did not answer at once, and they both sat silently for a few minutes. Presently he said gloomily:

"My experiment has failed, I'm afraid."

"Of course," she assented gently. "It was bound to. It shows of how little worth a first impression is, anyway. You wondered if the defects that you see in yourself were apparent to others, and you are half disappointed that they are not, for you do not like the idea of wearing a mask. Isn't that it?"

"Yes."

"And yet you must have known, except in moments of self-depreciation, that you make a favorable first impression; and I know that I do, conceited as that may sound."

"All right." He straightened up abruptly. "Then we come to the second part of this experiment. We will now tell just how badly each of us is mistaken."

"Well—" she hesitated. "We can try it, but that also is a pretty hard thing to do."

"Listen to me first," he answered, "while I tell you what a poor judge of character at first glance you are. I may have a sense of humor, but it doesn't work very well. I am gloomy, pessimistic and am rapidly developing into a cronic grouch. I am not one of our rising young professional men; I am a clerk in a large mercantile house, and there hasn't been anything startling in my rise yet. I may have common sense, but it doesn't keep me from making a fool of myself about half the time. I may be domestic by nature, but that's all the good it does me. So far from living in a brownstone house in the Eighties am I that I live in a single room down in the Twenties. I come from Michigan and am a comparative stranger in New York. I read a good deal, it is true, and you are right about the sporting page, but I don't believe that I ever had an original idea in my life. And—well, I might go on at considerable length, but how do you like the retouched portrait, so far?"

The girl was laughing at him again. "I think the portrait none the worse," said she; "especially since you are clearly in a mood for self-disparagement. Let me alter your portrait of me a little. I hope that I am sensible. I'm not a flirt, but I'm not so sure that I am not conceited. I like babies and embroidery, but I'm not interested in charitable work and I do read the woman's pages in the newspapers. I don't live in a brown-stone house in the Eighties, either, but have a room up in the One Hundred and Eighties. I earn my living by teaching a class of little Greek, Italian and Russian children down in an East Side school, and I don't move in any other society. I have a bad temper; I'm afraid my pupils suffer a good deal at times. No doubt, I am more studious than most girls but I like the movies and candy and all sorts of frivolous things very much. Now how do you like the retouching?"

"Well," he admitted gravely, "I rather think it improves the portrait; it makes it so much more human."

They fell silent again, watching the sunshine on the colored trees.

"You are quite right about one thing," said the girl presently. "I love the trees and the fields and the sky. I was brought up in the country, and I don't believe I could stand it here in these endless miles of brick and stone, if it were not for the park."

"I come here often myself," the man said. "Do you?"

"Every Sunday afternoon. I like this spot best of all; the view is so beautiful."

"So do I."

The sun had left the trees and they could see the lights of the city twinkling like brilliant stars.

"Do you know," said the man, rising, "I think my experiment is not going to be a failure, after all, though it has not resulted as I expected."

"Perhaps it won't be," answered the girl quietly.

There was a moment's pause. Then: "I will say only—good-night," he said.

"Good-night," she answered.

He turned and walked along the darkening path. As he reached the bend he broke into a cheerful whistle. The girl, smiling, walked briskly away. She was wondering what she would wear next Sunday afternoon, and he was trying to decide if it would be wise to take a box of candy with him.

HOW PIONEERS MADE CHANGE

Silver Dollars Were Quartered and "Sharp Shins" Were Result—Pelts Once Currency.

We of today, with half-dollars, quarter-dollars, dimes, nickels and pennies, often find it difficult to "make change." Still more difficult was it for the early settlers to do so, Martha G. Purcell writes in "Stories of Old Kentucky."

As the Indians used wampum, so the pioneers of Kentucky used the skins of wild animals as their first currency. While immigrants continued to come to this region, Spanish silver dollars came gradually into circulation. Still there was no small change.

As "necessity is the mother of invention," our forefathers actually made change by cutting the dollar into four equal parts, each worth 25 cents. These were again divided, each part worth 12½ cents, called bits. People sometimes became careless in the work of making change, and often cut the dollar into five "quarters" or into ten "eighths." On account of the wedge shape of these pieces of cut money, they were called "sharp shins."

If change was needed for a smaller sum than 12½ cents, merchants gave pins, needles, writing paper and such things.

This cut silver gradually found its way back to the mint for recoinage, usually to the loss of the last owner. As late as 1806, a business house in Philadelphia received 100 pounds of cut silver, brought on by a Kentucky merchant, which was sent on a dray to the United States mint for recoinage.

The Christening.

"And what is the name of this child?" asked the minister ready for the ceremony.

"Well, you see, parson," said the plain-speaking father, "we haven't just decided yet. Wife wants him named after her uncle and I want him named after mine. Just flip up a cent, parson, and see which it is to be—heads I win."

Seats Not Comfortable.

"I am afraid I will lose my business," remarked A. J. Merrill, manager of the Princess theater at Evansville, the other day.

"And why?" wondered an innocent listener, who was noting the full house.

"Well, you see the seats don't seem to be comfortable since the government put the tax on them."—Indianapolis News.

WAS ON BYNG'S STAFF.

Prince Arthur of Connaught Saw Service With Canadians.

Well-known throughout the Canadian Army Corps in France is Prince Arthur of Connaught, who recently visited Canada. The prince came to the corps as one of Gen. Byng's staff officers and stayed on after Gen. Currie's appointment, bidding good-bye to the Canadians when he was deputed by the King to go on the special mission to Japan.

Unostentatious, friendly and democratic, Major Prince Arthur was very popular with the Canadians, where he was a familiar figure in all parts of the corps area. So unconventional and devoid of circumstance is life at Corps Headquarters that visitors dining at Gen. Currie's hospitable mess have been frequently surprised to suddenly discover that a certain major chap, who might pass for a young English soldier attached to the corps, or even for a native-born Canadian, with whom they had been in converse, was none other than the son and heir of Canada's late Governor-General. For when the prince is introduced to visitors it is not customary to mention his name. Hence the hand-shakers often at first don't know who he is.

Prince Arthur is an interesting conversationalist. All who sit next him at mess can testify to this. His fund of anecdote about well-known personages would make an absorbing book. Eager to learn the opinions of his neighbor on various matters, he is always willing in return to express his own views—views of uncommon interest, based as they are upon an extensive knowledge of the great world and the men who do things. A warm admirer of Theodore Roosevelt, and of the Americans generally, is the prince. Japan, which country and whose people he has learned to know intimately from former visits, has always appealed most strongly to him.

At the staff college in France, where the prince took a course, along with a number of Canadian officers, he was known among his fellow-students as "Pip Ack"—though, of course, etiquette forbade that even his intimates should use this battlefield familiarity in his presence. The name was evolved in much the same way as that which the Prince of Wales had some five years ago at Oxford, where King's son and cook's son alike have their nicknames.

When signing official documents in the course of his duties, the prince affixes the two initials "P.A." Now the army signallers have occasion to use the letters of the alphabet singly and sometimes spelled out in words, when sending messages over the field telephones. To avoid the possibility of mistakes certain letters somewhat akin to others are represented by a special word. For instance, over the phone, "b" sounds not unlike "c" or "d" or "e." To prevent confusion "b" is represented by the word "beer," "d" is "don," "m" is "Emma," "p" is "pip," and "a" is "ack." Hence the play upon the prince's name.

Prince Arthur, who bade good-bye to the Canadian corps after a stay of some eighteen months, went to the front in September, 1914—a few weeks after the outbreak of war—and, with the exception of short leaves in England, had been there continuously until his late journey to Japan. Though his rank, like that of other royalties whose position in the state precludes them from being masters of their own movements, has limited the prince to the staff job assigned him by imperial general headquarters in France, he has been frequently in the trenches, and times innumerable under brisk shell fire. His knowledge of languages and wide exerience make him most useful in liason work and he is often on the move between the Canadians and the various British and French armies. And yet to friends the prince speaks almost contemptuously of his work and regrets most keenly that fortune has not permitted him a more active part.

History Is Contradictory.

With obvious desire to intensify the interest of its story, a Saskatchewan newspaper asserts that the largest hailstones known to history fell in a recent visitation of that province. If so they must have been some hailstones. Hailstones weighing from six to eight pounds fell in Namur in 1719; and the missionary priest, Fr. Hue, records the fall in Tartary in 1843 of a block of ice as large as a millstone which took three days to melt. In 1802 also an Hungarian village reported the fall of a hailstone weighing half a ton and a hundredweight over, which required eight men to move it.

Scholarship for Soldiers.

J. B. Carruthers, of Kingston, has presented $5,000 to Queen's University to found a science scholarship for the special benefit of returned soldiers and in memory of his second hero son, Major Kenneth Burpee Carruthers, O.C., 20th Battalion, 5th Brigade, C.E.F., killed in action at Passchendaele. Mr. J. B. Carruthers' father, the late John Carruthers, gave Queen's its Science Building, known as Carruthers Hall.

Fellow Canadians!

"HOW much thought do you give to the War—I mean honest, sincere thought on how we should live in order to win the war?

"I mean you who live from day to day in all the comfort that you enjoyed before the war, some of you in even greater comfort—

"You who spend as much or more on your enjoyment—who indulge in as many of the good things of life as you ever did—

"You who buy what you want to, eat what you fancy, go where you please—who deny yourselves nothing.

"You have no idea what it means to stand knee-deep in mud—in a dirty trench—with a cold drizzle chilling you to the bone.

"You have never heard the shells shrieking overhead—or seen bombs drop from the sky.

"But you know these things are.

"And yet you go on spending—as if this war were in a story-book—as if the menace of the Hun could never touch you.

"But it could—and it would—but for your armies.

"And we—the soldiers who make those armies.

"Do you think we could "carry-on" if we thought for a moment you were not backing us to the limit?

"Do you think we could stand it all—the terrible fighting and the tiresome toiling—if we dreamed, "over there," that you were trifling with this war?

"If we knew that you were spending money on frivolous things?

"Don't you see that when you spend a dollar on a thing you don't absolutely need, you are using the labor of a man who should be either fighting or making something that will help us—your soldiers—to fight?

"Oh, you chaps with money in your pockets—and comfort in your homes—and love of ease cankering your souls!

"If you could know—as I know—all that war means—you'd stint yourselves down to the barest necessities—so that Canada's money and Canada's material and Canada's labor could all go into guns and shells and boots and uniforms and food—for our boys over in France to fight with."

Out of the Shadow

By SUSAN CLAGETT

(Copyright, 1918, by the McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)

"deer miss kin yo help we uns me an liz Crawford is havin a Hard time guvment tuk our mens an we alls tryin to git vittles an cloths to Give the chilrun to eat we caint an miss Honey we alls mos purish me an liz an her Gal babys is livin with mol wade an arfter we als dun git thru the wuk thars nufin to do but set fore the Fire an tat an knit an woner ef our mensll kum hum an how we unsll git thru the Winter it is Awful cold an me an mol go up the mountin an cut down pine saplins an drag em hum i aint plainin miss honey an i aint begin but i jest wants to know ef yore friensll buy we alls Tatin.

"With great Respec yore
"Frien liza rankin."

Lavinia read the letter over and over again. She could make nothing of it but a jumble of words all but illegibly written. Not a comma, not a period. She glanced at the name: liza rankin, and light came to her. The meaning of the letter became clear. Her throat contracted with an uncomfortable ache and tears hid the package in her lap at which she fumbled with unseeing eyes.

It was roughly and insecurely tied and she wondered how it had come intact through the mails. As the thought flashed through her mind a smaller package dropped upon the floor. With an exclamation she picked up yards of beautifully fine and intricate tatting. Examining the contents of the larger bundle, she found it contained several sets of table mats with crocheted borders and coarse, homespun linen centers.

Her mind went back to the summer just past and the several summers before when she had helped spin the cloth from flax raised in the little clearing about the cabin. If she had been asked she could not have told how she had heard of the little house in the Tennessee mountains across the border from Virginia, but each summer thereafter had found her a visitor, and she and Eliza Rankin had become fast friends.

She had helped Eliza make her wedding dress; had returned to the mountain for the wedding, taking with her from her own store of furniture enough to make comfortable the tiny two-room log house that was to be Eliza's future home. She had been with her when the child was born; had been with her when, dry-eyed, the grief-stricken mother had laid the still little form in its crib for the last time, and it was in the rough little cabin that Lavinia came under the influence that altered the course of her own life when she raised her head from her spinning and met the keen, questioning gray eyes of the mountain doctor who had stopped for a moment to ask for a drink of milk.

She met him often in her wanderings about the mountain, but aside from the pleasure of an occasional meeting she had given him no thought until she raised her head that day and her eyes were held by the dominant gray ones of the man standing in the doorway.

She felt as if he was reading her very soul. Filled with resentment, the angry color flooded her face under his merciless gaze. Indignantly she straightened in her chair. Then, to her everlasting shame, she left the spinning wheel and walked directly into his arms.

She left the mountain the next day. There was a long wait at Bristol before the arrival of the north-bound train, but almost as it came into sight Doctor Cochran crossed the platform to her side.

"Eliza told me you had gone. Why?" he had asked abruptly.

She had looked at him coolly, critically. A big, awkward but powerfully built man, coarsely clothed with his blue homespun shirt open at the throat and sleeves pushed carelessly back from his muscular arms. Her very silence brought to him a realization of her thought.

"Oh! That's it! A mountain man is not good enough! You want the fine clothes, the suavity and convention to which you are accustomed. You can have them if you want. I do not doubt it. But whoever he be he will never have what you have given to the mountaineer."

She had risen and faced him. "How dare you—"

He had laughed roughly in interruption. "Dare? I dare anything, my dear young lady, and I tell you plainly that in that half hour in Eliza Rankin's cabin you gave me what you will never give another man, and that was your soul," and turning on his heel he left her as the train pulled into the station.

She heard from him once, months later. He wrote that he had volunteered and must see her before he left for France. The note was unanswered. He did not come, and as the days passed she knew her day of reckoning was upon her: that she had let him go to his work thinking her heartless.

It all came back as she looked at the work in her lap and as she let the beautiful tatting slip over her fingers her resolution was taken.

Naturally she met opposition when she told her family she was going to the mountain for a brief stay but she went on about the [illegible] of her plan and blessed the aunt who left her a small legacy to do with as she would Knowing that the railroads were congested by the movement of troops, she hired a motortruck to carry food and told the chauffeur she was going with him across the width of Virginia. His expression spoke volumes and when out of hearing uttered words not intended for a woman's ears.

She persuaded a married friend to accompany her. This she regretted later on, for the cold was intense and there was tire trouble. To her it meant delay, but her friend could see nothing in the trip but her own folly in yielding to Lavinia's wishes.

"I will leave you at Hot Springs and go alone," Lavinia told her at last. "It was really too much to ask of you."

"I will keep on until we reach a railroad," Mrs. Howard answered shortly. "When we come to that bond with civilization I will leave you to your own devices. What on earth put such an idea into your head. Couldn't you have sent the things by freight?"

"Eliza and the others need food, and this is the quickest way to get it to them," Lavinia answered.

Fortunately her chauffeur was a Virginian and had come from the section of the state to which she was going. He had known the Rankins and Wades. "We played together when we was kids," he told her. "I'll go hard with the women in the mountains with their men gone." For a moment he looked troubled. "I s'pose you wonder why a husky feller like me is a stay-at-home. I ain't no slacker. I has a wife an' five kids an' the orfercer tol' me to stay at home an' take kyar of 'em."

Never in her life before had Lavinia been so conscious of the comforts of fire as when she entered the log cabin an hour later, stiff and shivering. But it wasn't much of a fire, just a handful of sticks upon which Eliza threw a few pine cones that blazed up at once. Standing before it, Lavinia looked about. There was but the one room. Side by side in one corner stood two beds covered with gay patchwork quilts. Four bright eyes peered at her from the farthest one. From the nearer came a slight moan.

"I did not know anyone was sick, Eliza."

"Liz wore jes' po'ly when I writ, miss, honey. She give up las' night. I put the chilrun in bed to keep warm. Moll is out tryin' to git wood. Miss, honey, I shorely think the Lord dun sent you."

"There must be someone who can get wood for you," Lavinia said. "Where is Jake Fox? He is too old to be called."

For a moment Eliza did not answer. "He's a-haulin' fer money an' we alls didn' have none."

Lavinia opened her purse. "Give him this and tell him to hurry with a load."

The mountain woman drew back. "I ain't beggin', honey."

"Of course not I expect you to pay it back. But now I am cold and hungry and we will talk about it after a while," and throwing aside her wraps, she went over to speak to Lizzie Crawford.

For a week she watched beside that bed in the corner, resting between times in a big chair before the fire. At the end of that time as she was bending over the bed the door was thrown open and a hearty voice said:

"I came back to take a look around before I left for France, Eliza; heard Lizzie was sick and came over to see what was the matter." The voice stopped short. "You!"

For a second of time Lavinia thought she would suffocate with the beating of her heart, then she said quietly: "I heard they were in trouble, so I came."

The man's hand was not quite steady as he reached over and laid his fingers upon Lizzie's wrist. "There is no fever. I think—" He caught sight of Lavinia's eyes and turned abruptly away.

Her gaze followed him, then rested upon the compass quilt, the figure of which she began to trace absently with her finger. She had thought him in France, now that he was here there were things she must say to him and they would take courage.

He interrupted her thought. "Come here," he said peremptorily. "I must see your eyes again. They gave me your soul once. Convention and training hid them from sight. I am wondering if it was forever."

There was just an instant of pause, her eyes held by his as she went toward him and again, as that first time, she walked directly into his arms.

Our Partners in Joys and Sorrows.

A writer says in the American Magazine:

"It is a good phrase we have for describing women, 'partners of our joys and sorrows.' I know not how it may be with other men, but it is thus with me: In the regular routine of life, when nothing much is happening, when the days go by one after the other filled with their monotonous rounds of duties, I can, if necessary, exist for long periods without the company of women. In such days and weeks they are sometimes, to be sure, a pleasing distraction; but they are not food and drink and shelter. I can, if need be, survive. But let success break through the monotony of the daily grind, and I must have a woman to share it; half its sweetness is lost otherwise. And failure without their God-given chatter and unquenchable optimism is utterly intolerable. I say I know not how it may be with other men, but it is thus with me."

The Reason.

"These mountain-climbing records are not trustworthy."

"Why not?"

"Because mountain climbing is a thing which by its nature is never on the level."

How to Recognize and Avoid Kidney or Bladder Troubles

Medical Research has Proven that Diseases Arising from Congested Kidneys Can be Cured if Detected in Time

The Symptoms of These Afflictions Should be Understood and Recognized

Kidney and Bladder complaints are among the most common afflictions that the human body is heir to. Thousands of people suffer for years with pains in the back, swollen joints or difficult urination, and never once try to rid themselves of their agonies—because they don't understand the cause, nor seat of their trouble.

Perhaps the best-known diseases resulting from Kidney derangements are Rheumatism, Sciatica, Lumbago, Inflammation of the Bladder, Stone and Gravel. These diseases are all the result of deranged kidney action, and can be cured only if the kidneys are restored to perform their proper function of cleansing the blood—before the trouble becomes chronic.

THE KIDNEYS AND THEIR FUNCTION.

The Kidneys are classified among the most vital organs of the body; and the importance of taking the greatest care of them—cannot be accentuated too strongly.

If the health of the body is to be maintained, every effort must be made to keep these delicate organs in such perfect condition that they will perform their proper function with regularity and ease.

The duty of the Kidneys is to filter the blood and keep it freed from the poisonous wastage that is being constantly thrown off by the body and collected up by the blood stream. The Kidneys—two in number—are situated just over the hips in the small of the back. Each Kidney is composed of a mass of fine spongy tissues that are fed by a multitude of minute blood vessels.

These blood vessels are so small that they separate the blood into thin thread-like streams, and make it easy for it to filter through the tissues. This filtering process removes the impurities and waste matter.

You can readily understand, then, that when for any reason at all, the Kidneys become congested and due to this congestion fail to filter the uric acid and other impurities from the blood, trouble starts. All the poisons that otherwise would have been expelled from the body now remain in the blood stream and circulate through the system again. In a short time these impurities lodge in joints and muscles, setting up infection and fostering disease. Poisoning of the blood stream is the direct cause of most suffering to-day. We have studied the cause of these afflictions, let us go further and learn how to detect them before they get a fatal grip on the system.

THE SYMPTOMS.

The first evidences of poison in the blood are headaches, followed by dizziness, and a general feeling of lassitude. The affected person feels drowsy, dopy and listless. This state is followed by the chief danger signal,—that pain in the back—when it comes—be warned, for your health is in danger. If this pain in the back is allowed to continue, Painful Urination and Brick Dust Deposits will likely follow. With some people the joints and ankles begin to swell, and evidences of Rheumatism are noticeable.

Kidney troubles soon tell upon the appearance,—a gradual wasting away is noticed, the skin becomes sallow and drawn, dark circles begin to appear under the eyes, while deep wrinkles mar the features, and the whole aspect of the person is one of depression and lifelessness.

The symptoms stated above are the ones most generally noticed; there are others. Nature gives plenty of warning that she is in trouble. It is for you to heed her signals of distress and assist her in remedying the defect. If you don't—you suffer—for kidney derangements soon change to chronic complaints, and chronic complaints bring suffering untold.

THE REMEDY.

On reading the foregoing you will readily understand that in order to relieve any kidney disease the cause must first be removed,—that is exactly what Gin Pills are made for—and do.

Gin Pills act directly upon the kidneys to relieve the congestion and restore them to their previous state of health. Once the kidneys are performing their function properly, the blood is purified and the infection removed by Nature itself—that is, providing you deal with the cause as soon as the symptoms appear. Don't wait and trust that time or good luck will restore your kidneys to their former healthy condition. A few Gin Pills as prevention are worth many dollars of cure.

There is the point. Don't hesitate and put off till to-morrow. Once your kidneys are out of order, you must get them into proper shape again—or fatal results will surely follow. Stick to the tried and proven remedy, Gin Pills. They have relieved thousands of others. They will do the same for you.

You can buy them anywhere for 50c a box, or if you prefer, write to us and we will send you a sample box of Gin Pills free. A trial will soon convince you that Gin Pills remedy Kidney and Bladder troubles.

Coalless Monday

By MARCIA MEREDITH

(Copyright, 1918, by the McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)

"Will you please get off the wire?" The voice, though young and feminine, was not entirely pleasant.

"I believe I took my receiver off first," came back good-naturedly. "I am trying to get the janitor. Are you the janitor's wife?"

"How ridiculous! Where is the elevator boy to answer the 'phone? I want the janitor."

A laugh came back through the telephone. "Everybody wants the janitor. The last I heard he had gone out to try and buy soft coal. I dare say you're in the same boat that I am—frozen to death in your apartment. You know it won't do any good to kick, but, like me, nothing else will keep you warm."

There was no answer. Freda Tilson's receiver slammed back on the hook that held it, and if she had been inclined to talk to herself in her little apartment she might have muttered something about an impertinent creature who dared to talk to a girl when he did not know her, and that she hadn't the most remote idea who it was. That would have been a fib, however, for she really did know that it was the young man who dwelt in bachelor state in the somewhat more spacious and luxurious apartment in front of her own, the greater luxury and higher rent of his apartment being due to the fact that, while he managed to draw to himself a weekly check for $75 for writing "thrillers" for a popular weekly, she pounded a typewriter somewhere in the "downtown" district to the tune of sixty a month.

To her, having an apartment of her own, with a little place she could call home, was a luxury that she had earned by much economy in the way of amusement and pretty clothes. His living there was put down to his New England origin, for Victor Paige was more of a miser than a spendthrift, and he would rather dine alone on the simple fare that his visiting colored housekeeper made for him than to spend many ducats in alluring restaurants. Now it happened that the typewriter that Freda Tilson pounded was located in the very office whither Victor Paige occasionally strolled to deliver his manuscript, and mayhap chin with the editor. Perhaps she felt a secret grievance, because, though she had noticed the coincidence that he frequented her office and also abode under the same roof, he had sought no excuse to speak to her as they passed in the halls going home or venturing forth. It does seem strange that Victor never sought the excuse, for Freda would have been good to speak to. And there was nothing repelling in her round blue eyes. But then, Victor came from New England.

As Freda performed the task of dusting and straightening up her little apartment, clad to the chin in a sweater and wearing gloves on her hands as she worked, she listened intently for a ring at her doorbell that would mean that the letter she was waiting for had come. When all chance of the delivery was over she descended to the entrance to make sure that the boy in attendance there had not failed to deliver it to her.

Strange that Victor Paige should have gone forth at the same time. He waited while she made her complaint.

"In the first place," she said, "it is perfectly ridiculous that on the one day in the week when we have to be home, and when it would really seem that apartments and houses ought to have enough coal to make them comfortable, we should be made to suffer in this way. How I am ever going to write on my typewriter, with hands stiff from cold, is more than I can tell. It seems most extraordinary that my manuscripts did not come by the mail this morning. My office is closed, and it is absolutely necessary for me to typewrite some revised manuscript that the editor was sending by special delivery. Are you quite sure nothing has come for me?"

The dusky skinned attendant nodded in the negative.

"And is there no hope of any heat?"

Again a negative nod.

"Well, then, the only thing for me to do is to go and get some oil. Thank goodness, I bought a stove."

Now it was Victor's inning. Having heard Freda's plaint and the unsatisfactory replies, he did not mention the frigid atmosphere that prevailed in his apartment as well as in hers.

"I say, Obadiah—beg pardon, I forgot your name was Hannibal—you haven't seen anything of a stray messenger boy with a typewriter, have you? Of course you haven't. But, you see, the place I usually dictate my copy is closed, and I was going to pound it out for myself today, so I sent for a typewriter. But I guess they had too many orders before mine. Well if there's no hope for heat I'll have to burn oil."

And he returned to his rooms, calling the name of Dinah, who came every day at noon to keep house for him, blessed, because she had suggested to him that when steam heat failed the temperature could be improved by burning oil stoves.

The fact that fate had some deep design in choosing to have Victor Paige and Freda Tilson take apartments in the same house really might have been suspected when, a quarter of an hour later, another accidental meeting occurred. It was at the corner grocery. Freda came hurrying in with the base of an old stove, her self-consciousness at having to carry this awkward burden only making her cheeks pinker and her eyes rounder.

"Please fill this with oil," she told the grocer's boy, and then blushed a little rosier as she realized that Victor Paige was standing at her elbow. He took his hat off, and then, when Freda averted her look he awkwardly waved his hat in the air and stroked the cat with the brim of it to try to convince himself that he had meant to take it off anyway, and that he was not a bit embarrassed by Freda's hauteur.

"We ain't got no oil—all sold out," came from the grocer's boy, just as Victor Paige was inquiring of the grocer himself whether it happened that oil stoves were a part of his equipment. In the grocery store back in his New England home town he recalled that such trifling articles were always sold. And as the grocer assured him that the only places to get such things were the household furnishing stores, and they were all closed because it was coalless Monday, he confided to him. He knew the grocer didn't care, and he didn't care whether he did care, but he spoke in a loud, clear voice. Could it have been that it was for Freda's benefit?

"You see, the woman that keeps house for me suggested that if I bought some oil I could manage to keep warm, even when the steam was not up in the apartment, and I was such an ass as to forget that one really needed something to burn it in. I have a gallon of oil, but what good does that do?"

Freda did listen, and for just one moment she was tempted to tell her neighbor that between the two they might manage to get some sort of result. But she didn't tell him. She hurried home, walking faster and faster as she heard his footsteps behind her. He overtook her just as she reached the landing off which both their apartments opened, and would have spoken to her only that she closed the door rather unceremoniously in his face. She knew she had been rude, but for some unaccountable reasons she took satisfaction in her heartlessness.

A half hour later, when Victor Paige answered a slight ring at his doorbell, he wore a skating cap, a bathrobe, an overcoat, hockey stockings and galoshes. He found Freda Tilson on the landing. She was very sorry to disturb him, she told him, but she had received word from the editor in the office where she worked that, because he had been unable to dispatch some copy for her to do at home, he would like her to put in the day taking dictation on the typewriter from Mr. Paige. Wasn't it funny that Mr. Paige happened to be connected with the same office? Did he wish to come into her apartment, or should she come into his? There was small choice; both were arctic.

Ten minutes later Victor Paige, carrying an odoriferous gallon of kerosene, some ill-kempt notes on stray bits of paper, and a dish of apples—Victor could not write without apples for refreshment—went into Freda's small apartment. When lunch time came Freda had forgotten her resentment, and Victor, truth to tell, was as much in love with her as he had ever been with any girl.

"If I had some eggs I'd make an omelet and ask you to lunch," she said, just a little timidly.

And although Victor knew that his Dinah was coming to make lunch in his apartment that day, he hurried to get some eggs that he was right in guessing she had left in his ice box. And so they lunched, and so they worked on through the afternoon.

"What's the use of resisting the inevitable," he said as she handed him the last page of his manuscript from her typewriter. "We can't either of us get along without the other. We would both have been miserable today alone—"

"It does seem strange. Do you believe in fate?"

And apparently Victor did, for he was always sure it was fate that threw him and his wife together that coalless Monday.

High Cost of Patches.

There is no economy in patches. You may have a frugal wife who persists in patching your trousers, but you always feel miserable and degraded in such garments. They make you feel like a thief, or like 30 cents in counterfeit money. You are forever trying to hide them from view. . . . I have worn them myself and I know how uneasy a man feels in good society when he expects each gust of wind to fan his coat tails aside, exposing his wife's needlework, Zim writes in Cartoons. A patch in the seat of your trousers, if it be accidentally exposed in public, will reduce your market value 99½ per cent. If you cannot afford so sudden and enormous a decline in your stocks, and are not prepared to cover margins, you'd better accept a fool's advice and unload your holey belongings upon the ragman before your wife gets out her darning needle and patch bag.

Strenuous Reform.

"Tommy, you musn't play with that little Gruppins boy. His manners need mending."

"That's all right, ma. I'm working on his manners. If they don't improve in a day or two I lose my standing as the hardest hittin' kid in my block."

Feminine Finance.

He—You must remember, dear, we are just starting out in life and we must economize.

She—But don't you think getting into debt is the best way? Then we'll have to economize.

A Lovely Lake on the Pacific Slope

Okanagan Lake and Kettle Valley Railway. Inserted is a C. P. R. steamer at Penticton, on the Okanagan Lake.

Okanagan Lake!

What an alluring, suggestive place name it is.

First locate it on the map. Down in Southern British Columbia; due south from Sicamous, on the main line of the Canadian Pacific Railway; due south too from picturesque Vernon; due north from Penticton, in the boundary county of British Columbia. Between Vernon and Penticton lies the lake known as Okanagan.

Okanagan is a lake of rarest beauty, even in a land of lakes of rarest beauty. Each mile of its length a mile of scenic loveliness, each league of its bank a league of varied charm.

The journey over the long and winding lake is a day's journey of unique interest, from the moment the steamer is boarded at Okanagan Landing till it ties up for the night at Penticton. A comfortable boat it is, and a comfortable day of travel follows as the panorama of ports passes by.

The nature picture is complete. The shimmering waters that reflect every passing sun ray or carressing, fleecy cloud, are bordered by green-garbed mountains. At their base rest tier on tier of bench lands that spell rich fertility, for they bear the fruits that have spread the fame and name of Okanagan for afield. How the eye feasts on smiling orchards and vineyards, as the mouth feasts on their luscious crops. Down the steep slopes come the leashed waters that irrigate when and where irrigation is needed, the life-giving streams being trained on tree and vine and garden with wonderful results.

Fields of grain and patches of grass make a checker-board of color, while the water-side towns add their note of human communism. Their very place names are musical and attractive: such as Kelowna, Peachland, Summerland, with many a charming in-between settlement.

Then there fits in to the landscape frame the cosy, picturesque bungalow of the rancher farmer or fruit grower, set in a garden and facing an incomparable view.

Down at the wharves, the steamer receives its freightage of crated fruit that will feed many mouths in many a distant home, for the great west is an eager customer for the peaches and pears, the apples and the grapes of this favored fruitland country.

So one drinks in the beauty of the Okanagan from the deck of the steamer during a journey that takes most of the lighted hours of a day. And so one may travel above the lake over a wonderful stretch of railway, for the Kettle Valley Line, defying nature's obstacles, makes its sinuous way near the crests of the mountains. A thrilling scene greets the eye in a bird's eye view of the entire lake hundreds of feet below, nestling like a crystal gem in its granite basin, and taking on a silver hue as the setting sun lays its carpet of sheen on the waters. Each cluster of homes stands out clearly against its background of foliage or forest, motor craft speed along, looking very small in the wide space of waters, and glimpses of shore roadways show that the traveller could circle the lake by land if he so desired.

Finally, the train di[illegible] from the heights to the lower levels, from the hill crests to Penticton town. The sun has done its day's work, the shades are swallowing up the beautiful world of water and town and mountain, and the [illegible] of the Okanagan sleeps, like [illegible] and some humans.

25,000 PRISONERS AND 260 GUNS CAPTURED BY ALLENBY'S FORCES

40,000 TURKS IN A TRAP

GREAT VICTORY OF BRITISH TROOPS IN PALESTINE—25,000 PRISONERS AND 260 GUNS COUNTED UP TO SUNDAY EVENING—CROSSINGS OF THE RIVER JORDAN BLOCKED BY BRITISH AND 40,000 TURKISH TROOPS TRAPPED WITH GUNS AND EQUIPMENT — ENTIRE TRANSPORT OF TWO TURKISH ARMIES CAPTURED BY BRITISH.

Special Despatch to The Intelligencer, Canadian Press, Limited.

LONDON, Sept. 23.—(By Associated Press, 4 p.m.)—Twenty-five thousand Turkish prisoners and 260 guns had been counted up to yesterday evening by General Allenby's forces pushing northward through Palestine, according to an official statement issued today. The war office announcement says that the Seventh and Eighth Turkish armies have virtually ceased to exist.

British forces in Palestine on Sunday seized all the rrossings of the Jordan River at Jisrad Bemser, and shut off the Turks' last avenue of escape. At least forty thousand Turkish troops with guns and equipment are thereby trapped.

Past Village of Nazareth Turks Driven Toward the Sea

NEW YORK, Sept. 23—The Associated Pres this morning issued the following:

Moving northward with surprising speed and power the Allied troops in Palestine seem to have dealt the Turks a blow that may shatter their power in that theatre of war. So far as reports reflect the situation the Turks are completely defeated and the march of British, French and Arabs toward the Sea of Tiberius is virutally unopposed. The advance has carried the Allies past the village of Nazareth and they are approaching the line east of the ancient city of Tyre. To the north Beyrout, while off to the northwest, 70 miles away, is Damascus. These two cities are important centres in this region of the world and their capture would mean the complete disorganization of the Turkish machinery of war over a wide area.

SMASHING THE BULGARS

The Allied armies are still moving rapidly over hills of South Siberia where for the past week they have smashed Bulgarian resistance and swept along a rate which seems to indicate that the Bulgarians have been unable to stabilize their line at any point where defensive warfare might be expected. The Serbians are now east of Prilep and are moving along Cerna Valley steadily.

LONDON, Sept. 25.—Gen. Allenby's forces in Palestine have taken 18,000 Turkish prisoners and have captured 120 guns. This means the virtual annihilation of the Ottoman forces in this region. The British losses were surprisingly slight considering the importance of the advance.

In less than four days the British have swept forward in the centre between the River Jordan and the sea and taken the famous city of Nazareth, while their wings closed round in a swift enveloping movement and nipped within the maw of the great pincer all the Ottoman forces in the coastal sector, the Plain of Sharon, the hill region in the centre and along the western Jordan valley. Meanwhile the friendly Arab forces of the King of the Hadjaz have cut all railway communication in front of the fleeing Turks, and are standing a barrier to ther escape by way of the eastern plains.

Several Deaths From Spanish Influenza

Special Despatch to The Intelligencer, Canadian Press, Limited.

TORONTO, Sept. 23—Spanish influenza has claimed five victims, who died in the Polish infantry camp at Niagara and there are 168 soldiers suffering from this disease there at present. The Canadian camp has not yet been attacked, although there are many cases of severe colds there. Quebec despatch today tel of the closing and uqarantining of the college at Victoriaville, Que., on acount of the in fluene there. Two of the teaching staff and one student having succumbed. Nine sailors on ships in port at Quebec have died during the last few days of this disease.

Dropped Tons Bombs On Hun Airdromes

LONDON, Sept. 23—(Official)—Machines of the British independent air force dropped nearly sixteen tons of bombs on German airdromes and on blast furnaces at Metz region on Saturday night. Four enemy airdromes were bombed by the raiders.

Serbians Cut Railway Lines Advance 25 Miles in One Day

Special Despatch to The Intelligencer, Canadian Press, Limited.

LONDON, Sept. 23.—Serbian troops have cut the main railway between Uskub and Saloniki and are on the western bank of the Vardar River, according to the Serbian official statement of Sunday. West of the Vardar the Serbians have cut the railway line to Prilep, which is the main line of German communication in this region. They also have crossed the Cerna River. Serbian infantry units are now in the mountainous regions and advanced 25 miles in one day. The number of pris-

Canadians In U.S. Ask For Exemption

Special Despatch to The Intelligencer Canadian Press Limited

OTTAWA, Sept. 23—Five hundred applications for exemption from military service under the "Slackers" treaty have been received from Canadian residents in the United States. From claims so far examined it is expected that perhaps fifty per cent will be granted.

Sir Sam Denies He Was A Meddler

Never Attempted to "Bulldoze" The Government He Declares

OTTAWA, Sept. 21—Political events of the period between the outbreak of the war and his own resignation of the office of Minister of Militia and Defence are recalled by an interview with Sir Sam Hughes gave. To Sir Sam it has been reported that a fortnight or so ago while Toronto Exhibition was in progress, "one of the most prominent members of the Federal Cabinet" had made the statement that "Hughes, while in the Cabinet had rendered himself offensive to his colleagues by seeking to become master of the Administration and to control, not only the Militia, but all other departments." Hence the ex-Minister of Militia made public the statement in which he denies the allegation and seeks to carry the war into Africa by asserting that instead of being himself a meddler he was the victim of the interference of other Ministers in the transaction of the business of the Militia Department.

In this connection he again brought his guns to bear upon Sir Thomas White, Minister of Finance. Gen. Hughes also took the opportunity of denying that he had been guilty of "bulldozing the Government" to prevent a general election in 1914.

The allegation that he had sought to control departments other than his own, Sir Sam said was "devoid of one particle of truth." He had recognized it to be the right and duty of each and every Minister, he said, to discuss fully in the Cabinet important in matters of petty detail.

"My policy, and I claim it is the constitutional one," said Sir Sam, "was and is, that the full Cabinet should be consulted on all matters of policy and on all important questions, but on minor matters, each Minister should consult the Prime Minister alone and not bother the Cabinet. While I never either directly or indirectly interferred in another department, some of the Ministers of other departments, day in and day out, 'butted' into mine, even in matters of petty detail"

Naval Department Nakes an Announcement Regarding its Organization

OTTAWA, Sept. 23—The following announcement with regard to the new Royal Canadian Air Service was issued by the Naval Department:

"The establishment of the Royal Canadian Air Service has now been completed by the Naval Department. The discipline for the new force is the same as for the Canadian Navy. Bases have been chosen at suitable places, and a number of air cadets have already joined and are now under training as flight officers. A large number of applications are filed with the Air section, Naval Department, Ottawa and the applicants will shortly join instructional classes.

"Flight cadets are paid $1.10 per day from joining up to the time of training. They receive $2 per day during ground training and $1 flying allowance in addition upon commencement of flying. Flying officers are paid $150, uniform allowance: $75 on joining and $75 on completion of training.

"The department requires skilled and unskilled mechanics for service at the air bases. The recruits will be chosen as far as possible from those not called up under the Military Service Act. Should qualified mechanics of military age apply, arrangements will be made for their transfer. These men, while training, will receive the same pay and allowances as privates in the army. Technical officers will be chosen from the best qualified trained men.

"The officers uniform is of blue serge, cut on military lines. The distinguishing rank badges are similar to those in use in the Royal Air Force. The cap is of naval pattern with badge indicative of Canadian service. A brown leather 'Sam Browne' belt will also be worn.

Chinaman Assaulted By Two Soldiers

NAPANEE Sept. 23—What appeared to be a daring attempt to commit a serious crime was purpatrated in Napanee Thursday evening, when Jung Hing, proprietor of a Chinese restaurant, was brutally attacked by two soldiers in uniform about 6.45 o'colck.

It appears that these men, who gave the names of Jay Paterson, and Albert Malcolm, went into the restaurant on John Street, and ordered an elaborate meal which was served them after which they sarted to walk out without paying, when asked for payment it is alleged, Paterson pulled out a policeman's baton, and struck the Chinaman several severe blows across the head, knocking him senseless. The noise of the scuffle attracted the attention of some passers by, and the soldiers hurried away. The police were immediately notified. Chief Barrett responded, and was made aware of what occurred and set out to look for the two men. He located them on the premises of the Grand Trunk Railway, heading for Kingston, and with the assistance of Charles Walters, local manager of the Hydro Power Commission, the chief placed them under arrest and locked them up to await a hearing. They claimed to be military policeman from Toronto, and had a pair of handcuffs as well as the club when arrested.

ANGLO-FRENCH DRIVE ON ST. QUENTIN PROGRESSING SLOW BUT SURE

HAIG'S NEW THRUST STARTED SATURDAY

QUENTIN—HAIG AIMS AT STRIP OF HILLY COUNTRY—STRIKES AT HINDENBURG DEFENCES COVERING THE SCHELDT CANAL NORTH OF AUSTRALIANS—FRENCH TROOPS MAKE NOTABLE PROGRESS IN MOVE TO ENCIRCLE ST. QUENTIN, CAPTURING SEVERAL IMPORTANT POSITIONS.

Special Despatch to The Intelligencer Canadian Press, Limited.

LONDON, Sept. 23 —(Official)—German troops late yesterday counter-attacked in the vicinity of Guillemont Farm on the front between Cambrai and St. Quentin to the west of Lecatelet. Field aMrshal Haig's statement to-day announces the repulse of the enemy with heavy loss.

ADVANCING ON ST. QUENTIN

PARIS, Sept. 23—(Official)—French troops Sunday and last night made noteable progress in the drive for encirclement of St. Quentin. They pushed farther on and captured the village and fort of Vendeuil close to the Oise River nine miles southeast of St. Quentin. From Vendeuill the French pushed on to the river. North of Le Fontaine they penetrated the Wood in the direction of Hinacourt.

ANOTHER HAIG THRUST

With the British Forces in France, Sept. 21 English troops attacked the German lines midway between Havrincourt wood and St. Quentin at half past five o'clock this morning on a front of from two and one-half to three miles.

Field Marshal Haig's thrust was made towards the strip of high ground in front of the Hindenburg defences which cover the Scheldt Canal.

The area under attack is immediately north of that part of the line held by the Australians, who have already gained the Hindenburg outpost system and are closer to the canal than the infantry on either side of them.

The Australians have advanced to the north of St. Helens and are now within half a mile of the St. Quentin Canal. This is the nearest point to the main defences of the Hindenburg line, which has been reached any where between Havrincourt and St. Quntin.

The villages of Holnon and Lempire have been entirely cleared of the enemy.

LONDON, Sept. 23.—British forces last night attack the German line between St. Quentin and Cambrai, opposite Le Catelet, making progress in the vicinity of Tombois farm, and captured and occupied trenches and strong enemy positions on a ridge northwest of Vendhuile. Another enemy strong point carried was the Ronssoy road, just to the south, which was also taken by the British. A successful local attack was carried out south of Villers-Guislan, northwest of St. Quentin. The Germans penetrated the British line at one point at Berthacourt during an attack. The position was re-established by a counter attack.

LONDON, Sept. 23.—On the front between Arras and Lens there was a continuing of the advance movement in the neighborhood of Gavrelle. Southwest of that village English troops made progress on a front of three-quarters of a mile.

With British Forces in France, Sept. 23—In a small attack east of Gavrelle in the Arras sector British troops last night advanced their lines for an average depth of six hundred yards a front of one thousand one hundred yards. Haig's men gained several strong positions.

Ruman Crown Prince Flees From Country

COPENHAGEN, Sept. 2?—The Roumanian Crown Prince has fled from Roumanian territory, and arrived in Odessa, according to the Ukrainian newspaper Krewskaia Mysl.

News of the flight of Crown Prince Charles, of Roumania, follows closely reports that came from German sources of an anti-German outbreak in Roumania, in which Queen Marie, who is an uncompromising sympathizer with the entente, was the prime mover, King Ferdinand was reported to be holding aloof from the movement Field Marshal Von Mackensen, it was stated, was to return to Roumania at once, together with Dr. Solf the German Colonial Secretary presumably to deal with the reported outbreak.

Crown Prince Charles is known to have been in sympathy with the attitude of his mother in her bitter hatred for all things German, and quite possibly would have been associated with her in any anti-German agitation.

Sultan's Forces In Holy Land Face A Serious Smash-Up

NEW YORK, Sept. 21.—The Associated Press today issues the following: Turkish forces along the line from the Mediterranean Sea to the Jordan, north of Jerusalemn, appear to have suffered a serious defeat at the hands of the British and French armies and their allies, the Arabs. If the situation develops as favorably to the allies as it is indicated by the reports of the opening phases of the fighting, the Sultan's forces may suffer disaster.

Attacking over a front sixteen miles in length, the allies have virtually system along the Mediterranean coast. Railroad junctions have been taken and cavalry is operating in the rear of the Turkish forces which are holding the line to the eastward of the front where the attack was launched. These enemy units are prevented from retreating eastward by the hostility of Hejas tribes beyond the Jordan, and they face a serious problem in making their way back to safety along the western bank of that historic stream.

More than 3,000 prisoners have been captured by the allies who have also taken great quantities of war mater-

Military News

Lieut.-Col. W. E. Phillips, Warwicks son of W. C. Phillips, Kingston, is posted as wounded.

Gunner Maurice Sheffler has been spending a short leave in Montreal, with his brother, G. W. Sheffler, before going overseas with the R. C. H. A., Kingston.

The attendance of the Department of Militia has been drawn to a rumor that the term of enlistment in the Canadian Expeditionary Force, Siberia is longer that that required for service in other theatres of war. This is entirely incorrect. The engagement of men now enlisting in the Canadian Expeditionary Force in any theatre of war be it in Canada, England, France or Siberia, is for the period of the war and demobilization thereafter.

Lieut. Hunter, O. C. of the Trenton Guard, was at headquarters, Kingston, Saturday.

The list of officers appointed to the Siberian Expeditionary Force is made up largely of Toronto and Ottawa officers. M. D. No. 3, is not represented on the headquarters staff, and while there were a number of volunteers no action appears to have been taken. Capts. Box and Connell of the C. A. M. C., have been mentioned, also Lieut. Ellis of the infantry.

NEW PRAYER BOOK IN USE THIS YEAR

Revised Edition Will Be in Hands of People as Soon as Printed

The revised Prayer Book of the Anglican Chursch will be available and permissible for general use in all Canadian churches just as soon as it is off the Cambridge Press, according to the message given to the Synod by the House of Bishops Saturday morning. The message was as follows:

"That in order to enable both clergy and people to become familiar with and to judge by practical experience the value of the Revised Prayer Book as approved by this General Synod, the Book of Common Prayer as revised and approved by this synod be, with the sanction of the bishop of each diocese, permitted for provisional use until the next meting of this synod, and that the House of Bishops recommends the general use of this Revised Prayer Book."

The Bishops reported to the Synod that, while they were in complete sympathy with the proposal of Bishop Bidwell of Ontario for the authorization of a simple form of service to be used in special circumstances instead of the present order of Evening Prayer they did not recommend that such a service be authorized; but that they will take the matter up with careful consideration with a view of meeting such a service.

WEDDING BELLS

GOODMAN—PARKS

A very pretty, but quiet event took place on Wednesday, Sept. 18th inst, at 10 a.m. at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Theodore Parks of Mount Pleasant, when their only daughter, Edna Blanche, became the bride of Clarence L. Goodman of the same place, Rev. S. A. Kemp, of Foxboro, officiating. The bride looked charming in a dress of taupe silk poplin, and carrying a boquet of white asters, entered the drawing room on the arm of her father and took her place beneath an arch of evergreens and asters. After congratulations the guests repaired to the dining room which was decorated for the occasion, where a dainty wedding breakfast was served. The groom's gift to the bride was a gold watch and chain. Miss Fern Reid of Trenton, played the wedding March. The happy couple left by motor car for Belleville where they took the train for Picton, the bride travelling in a suit of navy blue serge and black picture hat. The many friends of the bride and groom wish them bon voyage through life.

Letters To The Editor

SING THE JUBILEE.

To the Editor of The Intelligencer,

Dear Sir,—The past few days have brought us news of tremendous victories for our allied troops. The latest —following the puncturing of the Hindenburg line—is the British victory in Palestine, where practically the whole Turkish army has been captured. We have read of some of our Canadian cities taking an hour or two from their daily vocations to get together and celebrate. A proclamation from the city's chief executive would soon bring the people together, and, Mr. Editor, nothing would encourage our boys over there—as well as their families at home—like a little appreciation of their splendid triumphs. Those who read a recent address given by Dr. Beland, who was shut up in a German prison, were delighted to hear his account of the old Scotchman who said he would spring a surprise on the Germans in the dawning of the new year. His surprise was his hearty singing, while shut up in prison in the heart of Germany, "Rule, Britannia, Britannia rule the waves; Britons never, never shall be slaves." Someone start it up and let us all sing.

FORESTRY FORCES.

Canadians Help the Allies With Axes and Saws.

Timber for war purposes became urgently needed as the war went on, and in February, 1916, Bonar Law, then Secretary of States for the Colonies, cabled for help from Canada. Canada's loyal reaction was instantaneous. Battalion after battalion of foresters was recruited until the Canadian forestry corps was in being and the Canadian axes and saws were musical over large areas of woodland in Great Britain and France.

Within three months from the receipt of Mr. Law's cablegram, No. 1 detachment of the first forestry battalion recruited had established itself in Windsor Great Park, England, and was delivering timber to the Imperial authorities. One month later Gen. (then colonel) Alexander Macdougall reported favorably on certain forests offered by the French Government for exploitation, and in November, 1916, drafts of Canadians were leaving England to cut trees and saw logs across the channel.

Canada equipped its forestry forces with its own machinery. Battalions, split up into companies of about 170 men, were sent into the bush in widely scattered parts of Great Britain and France. Among them were some workers of the highest skill, and others—though every Canadian is "born with an axe in his hand"—who had almost everything to learn about intensive forestry on a considerable scale. Each company had its tree fellers and loaders, its sawmill, its varied mill employes, and its light railway builders. Hutments sprang up magically, the Y.M.C.A. came with its bright and practical service, vegetable gardens, pigs and poultry were added, and the camps took settled form as hard-working forestry communities.

At present forty of these Canadian companies are operating in Great Britain and sixty in France. The total number of men engaged in the two countries is near 30,000. Of these some 800 are officers. Besides the Canadians working in Great Britain there are 819 Portuguese, 480 Finns and 589 prisoners of war. In France the prisoners of war attached to the Canadian forestry corps number nearly 5,000. While there have been no war casualties in the corps—though many of the mills in the fighting zone have been under bombardment from the land and from the air —by far the greater number of the present employes are men who have been wounded or who fell ill in battle service.

In the Old Days.

In the good old days in Toronto when the bars were open many of the hotelkeepers decided to prohibit the war chatter of the whisky warriors at their bars, as differences of opinion sometimes arose, and disputes and fights commonly occurred. One day a little old gent (who couldn't tell you who put the war in Warsaw) went into the Bloody Trenches Hotel and started to shoot a lot of learned stuff across the bar as follows:—

"Warsaw saw war,
Lots of war in Warsaw,
All the people were sore
To see the war in Warsaw.
Warsaw saw more
Bloody war in Warsaw
Than ever you or I saw,
Or any of us foresaw."

This attack rather staggered the bartender, but he pulled himself together and came back with a punch:

"We've had enough of Warsaw,
And don't want any more, sor,
"So kindly hold your jaw, sor,
Or get outside the door, sor."

Jesse James Was His Hero.

Floyd Walker, a 14-year-old Hamilton lad, has been sent to the Reformatory at St. Catharines for two months as a result of his adventuring on a recent Sunday, when he first appropriated an automobile, which he ditched; then stole the suitcase of Rev. Mr. Hibberton, of Toronto, with its valuable documentary contents; appropriated a rifle, ammunition, a mouth organ, two jack-knives and a silver watch; held up two men at the muzzle of the rifle; and was captured while attempting to steal a horse.

Congratulations Dropped from Air.

While Mr. and Mrs. W. J. Drope, of Grimsby, were celebrating their silver wedding with an out-of-doors party recently, their son, Captain Drope, R. A. F., circled over the homestead and dropped his written congratulations from the sky, the loving missive falling close to his mother's chair. He had flown from Leaside with the object of dropping in on the family.

Thirteen Unlucky Number for Sheep.

During a thunderstorm thirteen sheep huddled under a tree were killed by lightning on the farm of Ephraim Corbett, of Hope Township. Another freak of lightning is reported from Golden Grove, St. John County, N.B., where a chicken hawk sitting on a fence was struck just as a farmer was aiming his gun to shoot it.

The Changes Time Brings.

Illustrating the extent of the changes brought in the past century, a convention of Mic-Mac Indians of the Maritime Provinces was held recently for the purpose of electing a Grand Chief of the Tribe. Credential committees were in evidence, the principle of proportional representation was adhered to, and parliamentary procedure governed the election.

Long Journey to Answer Call.

Arthur Jan, a fur trader from Pelican Narrows, had to travel 200 miles by canoe and a further 200 by train to answer his summons to report for military service. A medical board discovered that he was wholly unfit for the army by reason of a broken knee.

In And About The City

MANY HEROES FELL

No casualty list issued since the Canadians made their great drive into the German lines below Amiens has so emphasized the price of victory as that sent over the wires Sunday night. The lists for days past have been long, but most of the names have been those of men wounded. Last night's roll of honor was remarkable for the number of men reported killed in action. The men whose names appeared there came from every part of the Dominion, from the Maritime Provinces to the Pacific coast, not a few of them being Quebecers. Among fallen were a number whose names are in Hastings and Prince Edward County.

PTE. D. J. McGLASHON KILLED

A few days ago Sergt. and Mrs. McGlashon of this city received a message that their son, Pte. David James McGlashon, was wounded and missing. Today they were in receipt of another message which conveyed the sad intelligence that he was killed in action on August 11th. Pte. McGlashon enlisted and went overseas with the 155th Battalion from Belleville. Subsequently he was transferred to another unit and had been in France for some time. The brave young soldier was well known in Belleville, where he had many friends. To the bereaved parents will be extended the heartfelt sympathy of all citizens. An elder brother is at present home suffering from severe wounds received in action.

HELPING THE WOUNDED

Our Canadian nurses are needed "over there" now as never before. This is the time to learn how to take care of the wounded, the sick—or any emergency. You can learn a great deal by obtaining the "Medical Adviser" from your nearest druggist, a book of 1,000 pages, bound in cloth, containing chapters on First Aid, Bandaging, Anatomy, Hygiene, Marriage, Mother and Babe; or send 50c to Dr. Pierce, Courtwright St., Bridgeburg, Ont.

Thousands of women in Canada have overcome their sufferings, and have been cured of woman's ills by Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription. Fainting spells, chills or great pain at regular or irregular intervals should be corrected, and every woman who suffers from backache, headache, nervousness, should take this "Prescription" of Dr. Pierce's. Send ten cents for trial package to Dr. Pierce's Invalids' Hotel, Buffalo, N. Y., or branch, Bridgeburg, Ont., or write for free confidential medical advice.

Toronto, Ont.—"As a tonic and builder I can highly recommend Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription to tired and run-down women. I am the mother of eight children and have frequently had need of such a tonic but did not know what to take until my sister gave me some of the 'Favorite Prescription' which she herself had found to be good. It was exactly the tonic my system required and one bottle did wonders for me, so I take pleasure in telling others, hoping that they will give the 'Prescription' a trial and be benefited just as I have been."—Mrs. Elizabeth Taylor. 254 Ontario St.

Sporting Notes

G.TR. 4—YOUNG IRISHMEN 3

About two hundred loyal fans who turned out to Pine Street School Ground on Saturday afternoon expecting to see a good game of ball, had a little bigger treat handed them than had been counted on and they witnessed one of the most thrilling matches that has been played in Belleville this year, when the G.T.R. team of this city defeated Kingston's best junior team by the close score of 4 to 3. The Young Irishmen (Y.I.C.B.A team) came here with some rep having lost only one game during all their playing season and they certainly did live up to what had been said of them previously. Geltheir, their pitcher, being especially fine.

Manager Harry Pringle had his team in the best of shape and when four bells had rung, Ed. Thomas, Umpire-in-chief- called the game, Kingston going to bat first. In the first two innings neither team scored. The G.T.R. had two men on bases, one in the first when Young singled with two down and one in the second when Shane got on with two down. Kingston had one man on in the second but he was nipped of second base. In the third innings the Kingston team scored two runs which they did not deserve as the Centerfielder missed two fly balls, one a liner and the other which should have been an easy out. There was no more scoring until the seventh, although Kingston had two men on in the fifty, the necessary hit was not forthcoming. The G. T. R. had one man on in the fourth and one in the sixth. Young being the man in each case but the hit was not there to put him across either time. In the seventh Morden, the first man up, was walked and Brown, who, by the way, played a great game all day, capturing everything that tried to drop in left field, also got on. They finally got on 2nd and 3rd. Morden scored from third on a wild pitch by Gelthier, the Kingston pitcher, and Brown went to third, scoring on a hit by Rainbird which the second baseman let go through his legs. This tied the crowd uneasy again—but up comes roar. In the Eighth Kingston got a man around to third with two men down but the third man struck out. The G.T.R. in their half went out in order. Then came the heart-breaking ninth, the first man up for Kingston, Goudier hit an infield fly which two infielders tried to catch losing an easy out on the mix-up. The next batter was out and the second struck out, Goudier reached third on a wild throw to second. Goudier scored when Morden had a passed ball on a very difficult strike which was close to the batter who swung missing it. The game appeared to be over, but——Oh those ninth innings rallies—Morden the first man up slammed out a great hit between left and Centerfields which should of gone for two bases but on account of the heavy running and quick handling of the ball he was held at first. Ed. Brown got a life on a slow roller down third base line which the third baseman tried to play to second, but Morden had him beat. The crowd was simply wild at this stage and things looked bright when the two runners advanced a base. With no men down could they not get a little tap at least to tie the score. Schrieder was sent in as pinch hitted to bat for McKinnon, but struck out and set thee rowd uneasy again—but up comes the left fielder "JIMMY SHANE" and makes himself the hero of the day when he gives the horsehide a lovely wallop which sizzled on a line out between left and centre fields and Morden goes across the pan with the tying run and Ed Brown beats it home with the winner. A fitting climax to a great game. After that one cannot picture some of the antics both the G.T.R. supporters and players went through. They were tickled to death and are out to back their team any time to the last minute. "Shorty" Brown umpired the bases and both Ed. Thomas and "Shorty" handled the job to the satisfaction of both teams.

The Line up:—

Y.I.C.B.A.—Kingston —Fitzgerald ,s.s.; Arneil, c.f.; Teeple, 3rd.; Goudier, 1st.; B. Fannon, c.; Davidson, l.f.; Devlin, 2nd.; Hammond, r.f.; Gelthier,p.

G.T.R.—Belleville— Meagher, p.; Andrews, 2nd.; Young, 1st.; Morden. c.; Brown, c.f.; McKinnon, s.s.; Shane r.f.; Rainbird. 3rd; Ford, c.f.; Follwell, c.f.; Smith, c.f.; Miles, s.s; Schrieder, pinch hitter.

Score by innings:
Y.I.C.B.A.—0 0 2 0 0 0 0 0 1—3
G. T. R. — 0 0 0 0 0 0 2 0 2—4

Scorer for Belleville—E. Taylor.

NOTES

After the game the Kingston boys were entertained to supper by the G.T.R. players. Mgr. Hammond and the whole Kingston team showed themselves to be both sports and gentlemen on and off the field. In the fifth innings when they were leading 2 to 0 they came back and played the game out without the least hesitation on a slippery, rain-soaked field, saying they were game to finish it out if the G. T. wished it. They expressed themselves as having a great time and feel confident that they will win the return game in Kingston.

Mgr. Harry Pringle of the G. T. R. did everything possible for a win having H. Smith the good junior pitcher of the city ready to take the mound in case of necessity, however, he was not needed, but was used in the outfield the latter part of the game.

Music & Drama

SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA WITH "HAVE A HEART"

Henry W. Savage's alluring musical comedy "Have a Heart," comes to Griffin's tomorrow evening with promise of a fine cast and beautiful equipment. Everybody who keeps posted about musical plays—and everybody does that now-a-days—knows that the New York hit of "Have a Heart" at the Liberty Theatre is stage history. The plot centers around the amusing mishap of a young couple, separated through unfounded jealousy, who elope on a fresh honeymoon upon the very eve of their divorce. The piquant lingerie section of a department store is pictured in the first act, with salesgirls, shoppers, and a very funny elevator. And then the characters are whirled away to a seaside hotel at Blueport, R.I., where all ends as musical comedy should. Among the fetching musical number are "You Said Something," "Honeymoon Inn," "Can the Cabaret," "My Wife—My Man," "Daisy," "Bright Lights," "The Road That Lies Before," "I'm so Busy," "Look in His Eyes," "I'm All Alone", "I'm Here Little Girls, I'm Here," "Have a Heart," "Smarkland," and "Napoleon." The cast includes Ruth Oswald, Grace Hoey, Lucille Saunders, Helen Ukers, Rosie Green, Joseph Keno, Henry Antrim, Joseph McCallion, Sam J. Burton Edward A. Smith, Lawrence Wood, Victor Leroy, Edward Ciannelli and Keno and Green. A typical Savage chorus of really pretty girls who have voices of singing quality and a special orchestra carried by the company round out what promises to be another Savage success.

Heavy Penalty For Failure To Register

A last-minute warning has been issued to Americans living in Canada in connection with the near approach of the time limit which registration in connection with the Canadian-American Convention must be made. Under the terms of the convention Americans in Canada must either return to their own country before the dates specified to serve in the American army or else join the forces of Canada. All must register whether single or married. Americans enlisting under the Canadian army regulations will not lose their nationality.

The dates fixed for the registration of Americans under the convention are as follows: Between the ages of 21 and 30, within ten days of Sept.28; betwen the ages of 19 and 20, and 31 and 44, registration must be within 10 days of Sept. 30; between the ages of 18 and 45 years, within ten days of Sept. 30.

All the men in the above classes must on or before the dates indicated as covering their class either move to the United States or claim diplomatic exemption. If they are liable for service and do not wish to move to the United States they may enlist through an American Consul. Otherwise they must register with the Canadian Registrar. Even those who have previously registered under the United States laws or who have enrolled in the American farces through an American Consul must register.

Fresh, rich milk that "keeps" for months

CARNATION Milk is milk, rich, "whole" milk—nothing more. It may be used in every way that ordinary milk is used.

But it is richer than ordinary milk, for Carnation Milk is evaporated to the consistency of cream.

Its quality may be judged by the fact that it whips beautifully when thoroughly chilled.

MADE IN CANADA

In coffee, tea, cocoa, with cereals or fruit it is used undiluted, as it comes from the can. Add an equal quantity of water to Carnation Milk and it is a wholesome, rich milk—pure and safe for the children to drink.

Remember, Carnation Milk is not artificially sweetened.

It "keeps" perfectly, because it is sterilized. No sugar or preservatives are added. And nothing but water is taken away.

So when you add water to Carnation Milk you "bring back" the original, fresh milk.

Used in preparing foods, cooking, creaming vegetables, soups, gravies, Carnation Milk imparts a creamy richness—without the need of adding butter.

Carnation Milk takes the place in your home of cream and milk. Saves the waste of those perishable foods. Improves every dish you prepare with milk. Enables you to have always at your command a perfectly safe, rich milk, in just the quantity you may need. Order from your grocer—the Carnation Milkman. Try three or four cans—the new tall can (16 oz.) is the most economical.

With Our Navy on The Watch, Hun Fleet Can't Worry Us

WASHINGTON, Sept. 21.—While still an annoyance and hindrance, the submarine is no longer a serious menace, the Senate was told by Senator Thompson of Kansas, recently returned from a trip abroad. There, then Senator said, is positive knowledge that one-half of Germany's submarine fleet, which has never been more than 320 boats, has been destroyed or captpured by the allies.

'It is to the navy that the credit for the destruction of these outlaw seagoing craft is due," he declared. "The navy is and has been the backbone of this war, the same as it has been of almost every great war in history. The destroyer is the ship which has brought Germany to her knees in submarine warfare and will keep her there."

Ships now are operating across the English Channel with about the same ease and security as before the war, Senator Thompson said. He suggested that the menace on the Atlantic would be lessened by placing German prisoners on returning transports.

Senator Thompson told of visiting the British grant fleet.

"Sailing in silence," he said, "without counting the numerous destroyers, submarines, submarine-chasers, and other smaller craft, it is said to be about eighty miles in length and requires hours going at ordinary speed to pass in review. With such a fleet no one ever need worry about the German navy doing any great damage."

COL. DALY—GINGRAS

DISMISSED FROM ARMY

MONTREAL, Sept. 21—Lt.-Col. Daly-Gingras, D.S.O., was formally dismised from the military service and stripped of all his honors and decorations as a result of the sentence recommended by the recent general court-martial, to enquire into seven charges against him. After the carrying out of the sentence Gingras was released from the close custody in which he had been held, and was permitted to proceed to his home.

The establishment of the Royal Canadian Air Service has been completed by the Naval Department.

Have You Tried an Adjusted Gillette Shave?

This is an exclusive extra-comfort feature of the Gillette Safety Razor. Have you taken advantage of it? Some Gillette users never do, because even without it they get so good a shave they never think of looking for a better one. Others, though, get still greater comfort, by adjusting the blade to suit the skin and the closeness of the shave they want. So can you.

If the beard is soft or the skin tender, screw the handle up tight, drawing the edge of the blade close to the guard, so that it slips lightly over the face.

For closer work on a heavy beard loosen the handle an eighth of a turn. The blade gets more hold and shaves extra clean, leaving the face as smooth as can be.

You'll quickly find the adjustment that just suits you—and then you'll enjoy your Gillette more than ever.

Whatever adjustment you like best, be sure to use the Angle Stroke, drawing the edge of the blade across the beard. This is a very simple feature, and one that makes the adjustable Gillette shave really perfect.

FIND OUT THE FACTS.

The suggestion voiced in this column recently that the civic officials find out at once the real facts of the local fuel situation has been favorably commented upon by many prominent citizens who realize the necessity of approaching the fuel problem in a systematic way by ascertaining the requirements of the citizens and endeavoring to provide a fuel supply to meet any possible emergency. Co-operation between the civic officials and the coal dealers will accomplish the desired object, but the first essential is a census or registration of coal users having a limited supply of fuel.

Mr. W. E. Schuster, a local coal dealer, in a letter to The Intelligencer, endorses the suggestion of a registration of citizens who are facing the winter with little or no fuel, and urges special attention being given to the families of soldiers. Mr. Schuster suggests that the editors of the local newspapers name five citizens in each ward to make a census of families having limited coal supplies. We believe that a better way would be for the civic officials themselves to undertake a canvass of the city or to ascertain by advertising in the local papers the needs of the citizens, as has been done in Toronto with good success. Newspaper publicity, we believe, would achieve the quickest and best results, for there is little doubt but that citizens with limited fuel supplies would quickly notify the civic fuel department. If the suggestion of a personal census of each ward appeals to the civic authorities a call for volunteers might be made through the press, but it seems to us that the civic machinery should be elastic and efficient enough to make a census quickly and thoroughly without calling in outside assistance.

However, the matter is one for the Mayor and Council to decide upon, quickly, and adopt some system which will give the best possible results. Whatever is decided upon the Mayor and Council can depend upon the hearty co-operation of the coal dealers and the citizens generally, but the time to act is now while there is still a possibility of augmenting the local fuel supply.

PROFIT ON A WAR TAX.

In writing to a Toronto morning paper a Belleville business man explains the high cost of matches. He shows that before the tax of 5 cents a box was imposed the manufacturers' sale price was probably 3 cents. The wholesalers' price was a third higher, and the retailer added the usual 50 per cent., thus the consumer paid 6 cents a box. The same ratio of profit by wholesaler and retailer was applied when the manufacturer's price was 3 cents plus 5 cents. That is to say, a one-third advance on 8 cents is well over 10 cents, and the 50 per cent. retail profit brings the sale price over the counter to 15 cents.

It is all normally delightful, says the Toronto News, until the consumer realizes that the wholesaler and the retailer appear to have the curious habit of getting a rake-off on a specific war-tax. What right has any business man to take profit on a stamp? The cost price of matches is 3 cents, not 8 cents. The affixing of a stamp in the factory is not a legitimate basis for profit and no power but that of Parliament can compel a consumer to pay a tax of 9 cents when the schedule fixes the impost at 5 cents. If the figures of the Belleville man are correct, the country has an immediate and serious quarrel with the jobbers and retail dealers.

We believe that the stamp should be affixed to the box as it is bought over the retail counter. That is the practice with respect to proprietary medicines in all the drug stores, and it avoids such profit-juggling as the Belleville man has been good enough to explain.

.·. CRISP COMMENT .·.

The Knights had a big day Saturday.

The Frankfurter Zeitung says Germany wants a lasting peace. Well that's what she's going to get.

The Austrian peace dove had a croak like the Kaiser's pet crow, comments the observant St. Thomas Times-Journal.

The methods of law enforcement used by some Toronto policemen were not very different from the methods of law-breakers, in the opinion of the Toronto Globe.

On Saturday the advertisement of church services in Toronto newspaper included one stating that Elder Thos. W. Williams would preach in the Latter Day Saints Church, Soho Street, morning and evening; subject: "The Restoration of the Gospel." Sounds like an echo from Utah.

"She smacked my face, saying 'That is an instalment'; I then smacked hers, saying 'That is the receipt'," and that's how the scrap started, according to the evidence of one of the parties to a feminine assault case in an English court recently. Evidently the first instalment was quickly followed by others, supplemented by receipts, as both women showed visible signs of offensive and defensive warfare when they appeared in court.

Have a Heart—just for once let's all enjoy the show undisturbed from curtain rise to curtain fall, with everybody in their seats and settled quietly before the first curtain rises, considerate of the feelings of actors and the audience while the play is in progress—if absolutely necessary to go out between acts returning in ample time not to disturb the succeeding act—and remaining quietly seated until the final curtain descends. That is the way to enjoy an entertainment and allow others to enjoy it.

"A Welcome that will warm your heart—a Message that will stir your soul," was the outstanding feature of an invitation to attend divine services in a well known Toronto church published in Saturday's evening papers. Such an invitation suggests a friendly heart-warming welcome which few readers without definite church affiliations could resist. The Biblical injunction to go out into the highways and byways and compel them to come in is made easier of compliance now by the power of newspaper advertising.

Very few motor car parties were out for pleasure yesterday, which shows the power of newspaper publicity. The campaign for conservation of gasoline by discontinuing Sunday pleasure motoring has been made exclusively through the newspapers and the results speak for themselves. If people fully realized the power of newspaper advertising there wouldn't be enough available space to fill the demand without increasing the size of the papers beyond the capacity of paper mills and printing presses.

The Sword for Workers.

London Daily Mail

"British working men want us to prostrate ourselves before our enemies as the guilty criminals in this war. So be it. The German sword will have to bring enlightenment to the British working classes." Thus ends a review of the British Labor situation in The Hamburger Nachrichten. The "German sword" is brandished particularly in the face of Mr. Arthur Henderson and his followers, who are warned that they cannot hope to escape its blows even though they advocate a peace which is not to "destroy" Germany.

Military Critics.

Amherst News.

If we happen to be around when the next war is on we think we will qualify as a military critic. We don't know exactly what the qualifications are, but judging from our reading of the past two years, a big map, a smattering of history, and a handy facility at guessing, as well as forgetting, would seem to be the most essential items of the professional critic's stock in trade.

A Rotten-Hearted Nation.

Manufacturers' Record (New York)

Let us never forget that the whole German nation is rotten-hearted, and that we are fighting not the military part alone, but the entire German race, and even a Lichnowsky and a Muehlon do not redeem this Sodom and Gomorrah from the broad statement that the whole nation has sold its soul to the devil for the "lust of power and gain" individually and nationally.

The Advantage of Habit.

Hamilton Spectator.

By-and-by we'll become so accustomed to the duty of giving, that we'll back into the traces at the first tap, just like a fire hose.

A Mean Suggestion.

Detroit News

The Marine corps has begun to enlist young women. It IS a pretty uniform.

A Laugh or Two

Any Lawyer Would Do.

Young Lawyer—Now, you must be perfectly frank with me. Are you guilty or innocent?

Prisoner—Why, kid, if I was guilty I'd have hired a crackerjack lawyer.

Getting Even.

"You'll regret some day that you refused to marry me."

"Leave that to time."

"No, I won't either. I'm going out right now and start to make $1,000,000.

What Marriage Did.

Opulent Father-in-Law—What ails you, George? Since you have married you seem to have lost all your ambition.

George—Well, you see, sir, I reached the height of my ambition when I became your son-in-law.

Thrift.

She was comely and a widow, and, moreover, she was Scotch. She mourned MacIntosh, her late husband, for eighteen months, and then from a crowd of suitors chose honest, homely MacIntyre for her second.

"I'm no guid enough for ye, dear!" he whispered. "What for did ye choose me oot o' sae mony?"

Ah, weel, ye see, your name's MacIntyre."

"Yes, but—" began the bewildered suitor.

"An' ye ken," finished the widow, "all my linen's marked 'MacI.'—that's why, Donald.

He Wanted it Decided.

"Ma! Ma! bawled Freddie, as the usual morning wash was going on, "do my ears belong to my face or my neck?"

Ma temporized.

"Why, what is the matter?" she asked.

"I want it decided now. Every time you tell Mary to wash my face or my neck she washes my ears too."

Necessities.

Former Speaker Cannon tells this story of his early impecunious days:

"One of my friends was a struggling physician. Neither fame nor fortune had come to either of us, but we were always hopeful. The years had weighed heavily upon my friend, however, for he soon lost his hair, being quite bald.

"One day I greeted him with a beaming countenance and exclaimed:

"'What do you think, Henry? I have just bought an office safe.'

"'Then Joe,' he said with the utmost gravity, 'I shall buy a hair-brush'."

The Poet's Corner

THE PHANTOM ESCADRILLE

When dusk is glooming over France
the phantom airmen fly,
A ghostly squadron of the clouds that sweep the Flanders sky.
They haunt the fields of Picardy; they know the Marne's red flood—
The crimson poppies of the plains are dyed with their hearts' blood.

Like grim grey shades, their soundless 'planes in battle's angle lined,
Above their comrades' trenches cross;
and ere they leave behind
The friends they love, they dip down low, then swiftly upward shoot
To pass the staff that held the flag—a silent proud salute.

Then on they fly beyond the lines that hold the hated Huns;
Immune from searchlights' deadly
stare and eagle-hungry guns;
And each one fights his fights again,
the conflicts that he won,
Until the last, when from the sky his shattered pinions spun.

They are the men who died for France
—who from the heaven's blue
Crashed thunderbolts that even Jove's red anger never knew.
They killed their foe, in turn were killed, and died with smiling breath:
Brave youth, who drained the cup of Life to pledge a toast to Death.

And every Allied fighting man who sees their ghostly 'planes
Feels some new strength and courage
surging, thrilling through his veins;
But every German heart is chilled;
the phantom fliers drear
Plunge in his heart a blade of steel—
a vague and nameless fear.

These noble souls, these vagrant spirits, nevermore can rest,
But nightly through the fatal skies
must ever wing their quest;
They may not know the endless peace of Death's sweet dreamless trance
Until the Hun is driven from the sacred soil of France.

SCORN TO WEAR CHEVRONS.

They Say "Safety First" Have a Similar Privilege.

The Canadian Associated Press understands that an effort will be made while Gen. Mewburn is in England to enlist his co-operation with Sir Edward Kemp in attempting to secure from the British War Office a better regulation regarding the wearing of chevrons. Briefly, the present regulation is that members of any branch of the forces, Imperial or Dominion, are entitled to chevrons for service overseas. In the Dominion troops a special provision was made that service overseas should count from the date of their leaving their own country. This means that Canadians who have only done service in England are entitled to the same mark of distinction as those who spent whole winters in the trenches.

There are many Canadians in England, of course, who have got no further to the actual fighting through no fault of their own, but the following is a glaring example of the present anomalous position: At Argyll House, in London, at this moment there is a certain major wearing one red and three blue chevrons, also the order of the British Empire and a Russian decoration, and yet he has spent his whole time at clerical work in England.

There is also a young captain who came over as a private, was wounded three times, earned his Military Cross in France, and yet, following the example of Gen. Turner and others, declines in sheer disgust to put any chevrons on his sleeve.

A recent letter from the War Office admitted that "some men of ours, no less than yours, earn chevrons very cheaply. For instance, all those officers in overseas garrisons at the beginning of the war are entitled to chevrons, although they may never have been moved since, and officers of the Indian army on duty in London are similarly [illegible]."

Located by Press Photograph.

As soldiers are forbidden to acquaint their relatives with their exact positions "somewhere in France," Pte. MacClark, of Woodstock, hit upon a novel ruse to beat censorship. He had just received a copy of a local paper from home. So he wrote in reply "if you will look up the Sentinel-Review of the 2nd July you will see a picture of the ruined cathedral in this place."

Winnipeg Statue Has Close Call.

The fine bronze statue of a winged Mercury carrying a sheaf of grain, which is to be the crowning jewel surmounting Manitoba's new Parliamentary pile, narrowly escaped destruction by a German shell in Paris last month. The building in which it had just been cast was partly destroyed.

Elephant Eats Too Much.

The Food Control Board in Winnipeg has been advised by a Saskatchewan clergyman that a baby elephant visiting his town with a travelling menagerie should be sacrificed as it consumes 250 pounds of wheat, milk and eggs per week. Ottawa will be asked to pronounce judgment.

Newfoundland's Contribution.

The ancient colony of Newfoundland raised $2,000,000 toward the Victory Loan in three short weeks.

Kiddie's Clothes

How to Make Them Wear Longer

There is stringent need of it, as every mother can testify, in these days of mounting prices. Well—did it ever occur to you that harsh, common soaps, and the ordinary rub and scrub of the wash board, break down more clothes than are ever actually worn out in use? Its so. We've studied the question. That's why purest and best of soaps, was first evolved, years ago—to wash clothes gently but thoroughly, without rubbing—the special "Sunlight" way. Doubly—trebly useful—now, in war time, when the clothes must last longer.

Sunlight Soap

It's easy to do the washing yourself with Sunlight.

Mrs. W. Clarke, who resides in Thurlow Township, north of Albert College, reported to the police that at an early hour this morning a brown horse with a halter attached was found wandering about her place, and was taken care of by her.

CAUGHT A BIG ONE

There must have been a fish convention at Mosquito Bay Saturday for in addition to the big 'lunge landed by Sam Bongard as described elsewhere, another monster was secured by Mr. William Keleher. This 'lunge weighed thirty-two pounds and put up a game fight. Mr. Keleher was accompanied by Mr. Jack McCoy.

CALLED TO OHIO CHURCH

Rev. A. K. Scott spent two Sundays recently with the First Baptist Church of Perry, Ohio. He was given a hearty and unanimous call to the pastorate which he has accepted. The town is located 20 miles east of Cleveland and in the midst of the great fruit growing belt of that state. For some months Mr. and Mrs. Scott have made their home in Belleville. Rev. Scott is ex-pastor of the First Baptist Church of Picton. They leave to-morrow for Prince Edward, where they will spend a few days before going to their new home.

PASTOR RESIGNS

Rev. A M. Hubly, pastor of Emmanuel church announced his resignation to his congregation yesterday to take effect Sunday October 7. Rev. Mr. Hubly has not been in the best of health for some months, and purposes to spend a vacation in the Maritime Provinces, afterwards taking up his residence with his daughter in Toronto. During his residence in Belleville of several years, Rev. Mr. Hubly has made many warm friends, who will regret his departure, and his resignation will be a hard blow to the congregation, which he has ministered to so faithfully and well.

FIFTY POUND 'LUNGE

The fishermen's paradise is situated within a whoop and a holler of Belleville with all kinds of finny treasures including the largest and gamiest of black bass and the monarchs of all fresh water game fish the lordly maskinonge, more familiarly known as maskalunge. 'Lunge are so common in the waters adjacent to Belleville, that the sport is given little attention in local prints—indeed one Belleville man caught four 'lunge in one day. Every year some very big 'lunge are caught, especially on the Bay of Quinte, and this is the season of the year when the big fellows come out and match their strength and wits against the angler, sometimes winning, sometimes losing, but making great sport for both fish and fisherman. Saturday was a big day for local fishermen and some good strikes were made but the daddy of them all was landed by Sam Bongard in a monster maskinonge, which tipped the beam at fifty and one-half pounds. Sam had a light rod and line and for upwards of one hour there was as pretty a fight as any one would wish to see, with the monster fish determined a little piece of string would not deprive him of his liberty. Little by little, however, his mad rushes slowed up, and the steady relentless pressure of the line, told in increasing weariness with no opportunity to rest and finally drawn within reach of the boat the gaff hook settled the question of the superiority of man over fish and a hatchet stopped the fight renewed in the boat. It was a beautiful fish and a beautiful catch, reflecting great credit upon the ability of Mr. Bongard as a fisherman. He was accompanied by Basil Doolittle. The big fish was caught at Mosquito Bay.

ALLOWED HIS LIBERTY

Ernest Fox, a young man who was arrested a week ago on a charge of vagrancy, having been caught on the G. T. R. track near Trenton, where it was alleged that he had used a hand car. This was denied by the accused. The magistrate found him guilty, but allowed him his liberty as he had been a week in jail.

Brown, who has charge of the Sunday School work sang and expressed the sympathy of the members of the school to which the children attended. Adjt. Trickey spoke of the words of david, "There is a step between me and death." A very impressive service was held, and a number of persons held up their hands for prayers on their behalf. There are 32 men, soldiers and adherents who have left from the S. A. in Belleville. Five have been killed, eight or ten wounded and one is now a prisoner in Germany. ### FINE CATCH OF FISH

Messrs George Case, Thomas Olsen and J. McPherson, all of whom are connected with the Harris Abattior, Toronto, in company with Frank Sharpe, Charles Lloyd, Ted Clarke and Charles Jeffrey of this city, had an excellent day's fishing at Sucker Creek on the Bay of Quinte. They were successful in landing 36 pickerel, bass and pike, and in addition a peck of rock bass, sun fish and perch. The visitors were delighted with the day's outing and catch.

PTE. McCASKIE WOUNDED.

Pte. A. A. McCaskie, M.M., of Calgary, formerly of Belleville, is reported as wounded in the arm. Pte. McCaskie is 21 years of age, was born in Belleville, and some years ago accompanied his parents, Mr. and Mrs. A. McCaskie, to Calgary. He enlisted with the well-known Calgary battalion called "Bell's Bullets," and has been in France for seventeen months, being awarded the Military Medal for exceptional bravery in the fighting around Passchendaele nine months ago. A brother, Ernest, is also on active service overseas and has just recovered from an attack of trench fever. Pte. McCaskie is a grandson of Mr. James Alexander, 31 Station Street, city.

K. OF C. OVER THE TOP

The Knights of Columbus drive to obtain funds for Comfort Huts for the soldiers overseas was energetically waged all last week in Belleville vicinity with gratifying success. The campaign ended Saturday with a Tag Day which netted in the vicinity of $700. The returns are not all in yet but indications are that the objective of $5,000 for Belleville District will be far exceeded.

THURLOW SHOOTING CASE

Before Judge Deroche today John Fitzgerald was placed on trial on a charge that "he did in the township of Thurlow on July 5th, 1918, unlawfully assault Ross Reid, occasioning him bodily harm." This case is the outcome of a shooting affray which took place on the night of July 5th, when a number assembled at Fitzgerald's place to commemorate the wedding of a son of the defendant. During the proceedings Reid was shot and severely wounded by a gun in the hands of Fitzgerald, it is alleged. The case was still in progress this afternoon. Mr. Carnew for Crown; W. C. Mikel, K.C., for the injured man, and Col. E. D. O'Flynn and E. J. Butler for the accused.

Results were a Great Surprise

Heard So Much Talk About Tanlac, Took it Himself And Troubles End.

"Well, there is no doubt in my mind now about Tanlac being a fine medicine, for I have tried it," said Mrs. Fred Boulter, who resides at 1024 Dufferin Street, Toronto, recently. Mrs. Boulter has lived in Toronto for nearly twenty years and has many friends. She is engaged in the flour and feed business on Dufferin Street.

"My friends tell me I am looking fine now," she continued, "but before I took Tanlac I certainly was feeling terrible. I had been suffering with my stomach for two years and in spite of all my efforts to find relief I kept getting worse. My appetite was so poor that I never relished anything and what little I did eat made me feel miserable for hours. My stomach was sour and upset all the time and I would fill up with gas which would press on my heart and make it hard for me to breathe. No matter what I ate I suffered from indigestion and would have such awful pains in the pit of my stomach at times that I could hardly stand it. I felt tired and worn-out all the time and suffered constantly with fearful headache. I couldn't rest well at night and would get up in the mornings feeling as badly as if I hadn't slept at all.

"I heard so many people in the store talking about the good results they had gotten from Tanlac that I made up my mind to try it and my improvement has really been surprising. I have just started on my fourth bottle and I never feel a sign of indigestion at all. My appetite is splendid and I feel stronger and have more energy than I have in a long time. I got one of my friends to take it some time ago and she is simply delighted over the results. I gladly recommend it to every one, because I know from experience how fine it is."

"Tanlac is sold in Belleville by Ostrom's Drug Store, in Trenton by J. H. Dickey, in Deseronto by W. J. Malley, in Stirling by J. S. Morton, in Frankford by W. J. Lettimer, in Madoc by J. Will Vince, in Marysville by T. [illegible] McAlpine, in Ormsby by Jas. Campbell and in Thomasburg by J. H. Blakely."

Marvelous Story of Woman's Change from Weakness to Strength by Taking Druggist's Advice.

Peru, Ind.—"I suffered from a displacement with backache and dragging down pains so badly that at times I could not be on my feet and it did not seem as though I could stand it. I tried different medicines without any benefit and several doctors told me nothing but an operation would do me any good. My druggist told me of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. I took it with the result that I am now well and strong. I get up in the morning at four o'clock, do my housework, then go to a factory and work all day, come home and get supper and feel good. I don't know how many of my friends I have told what Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has done for me."—Mrs. ANNA METEHANO, 36 West 10th St., Peru, Ind.

Women who suffer from any such ailments should not fail to try this famous root and herb remedy, Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Farmer Punished Fore Patriotism

MONTREAL, Sept. 23—The Gazette publishes an item from the Huntingdon (Quebec) Gleaner, detailing the case of a farmer living at St. Chrysostome who has lost the savings of a lifetime through the alleged deliberate firing of his barns by a number of persons who resented his having placed one of his fields at the disposal of the military. The Gazette calls upon the Department of Justice to institute a thorough investigation of the occurrence. The article from The Huntingdon Gleaner follows:

"We are afraid the loyal people of the district do not realize to the full extent of its meaning what happened at St. Chrysostome on the night of the 6th instant. A farmer had his barns set on fire. In one brief hour he witnessed not only the fruit of his season's labor in saving his crops, but of the savings of his lifetime as represented in the buildings and stock, wiped out. David Wilson is an old settler, a quiet, respectable man, who gives offence to nobody, who knows of no personal enmity, so that the motive of the fellow who set the match that has wrought him such grievious loss can have been none other than what his neighbors believe, namely, resentment at his having allowed a company of the King's soldiers to pitch their tents on his farms. He has suffered for permitting what no farmer would refuse, for a brief period, of a field on the river side to men in Khaki. Shall he be penalized for that It is the duty of the Federal Government to indemify him for the loss he suffered in doing it a favor. If it does not do so, then it is for the loyal people of the district to do what belongs to the military authorities. Our loyal population has put up with much. They have spared their choicest sons to fight Britain's battle's there is mourning among them over the wounded and the dead, and they are mocked and jeered at for their sacrifices. Are they going to stand and see a decent farmer robbed of his property by a gang of slackers—of fellows who will not fight, but sneak in the woods and seek revenge on those who would have them do their duty?"

CAUSE AND CURE OF CRAMPS

Too High Blood Pressure Frequently Brings Them On—Removed by Vigorous Rubbing.

In this article we shall discuss only the local muscular spasms that affect most commonly the calves of the legs, but that sometimes occur in the thighs, the arms or the wall of the abdomen. Internal cramps, or colic, swimmer's cramp and writer's cramp are affections of an entirely different nature.

A cramp, in this restricted sense, is a sudden, painful and very strong contraction of a small part of a muscle; it does not usually cause any movement in the affected limb, for to do that a contraction of nearly the entire muscle is necessary, and then we have what is called a spasm, or a convulsion.

The contraction is involuntary, although persons who are subject to cramps sometimes bring them on by a voluntary movement, such as stretching. The early-morning cramp is often brought on by the stretching to which one is prone on awaking. Very commonly the cramp comes on during sleep, and the intense pain awakens the sufferer with a start. The affected part of the muscle forms a hard knot, and if a large part of the muscle is involved the limb may be drawn up.

Children and the aged suffer more often with cramps than do persons in middle life. In children the cause is usually violent exercise, such as running and jumping, but in the elderly a tendency to cramps is often caused by incipient hardening of the arteries. When the blood pressure is high, cramps often occur, but they cease to trouble if the pressure is reduced. Persons who are rheumatic and gouty are especially liable to be attacked by cramps—very likely because hardening of the arteries accompanies their constitutional disposition.

The treatment of a single cramp of the calf is very simple: stand on tiptoe in such a way as to stretch the calf muscle and at the same time rub the place where the contraction has occurred. That will put an end to the attack promptly. If the attacks recur frequently, there is probably some constitutional fault that needs correction, and the sufferer should consult his physician.

FISH-SKIN SHOES COMING?

Quite Possible, Though It Must Be Admitted They Are Not Altogether Desirable Footwear.

When things come to the worst every day is going to be like Friday—the atmosphere will be crowded with the aroma of fish. There is a scarcity of leather, as everybody knows, and, that being so, tanners are making a diligent search for other substitutes, and new sources of supply. Experts declare that the skins of aquatic creatures offer a practically undeveloped resource, and it is not unlikely that before long we shall be covering our extremities with the skins of the man-eating shark and the sacred codfish. The reason such skins have not heretofore been utilized for leather is not because they are not perfectly well adapted for such use, but only because the skins of land animals have been so plentiful. Disciples of Izaak Walton dispute the experts about the curing of fishskins. They say once a fish always a fish. If it comes to pass that we adopt fish-skin shoes these fishermen offer some advice to the callow youth who goes courting. "Leave your fish-skin shoes on the front porch, like the Hollanders and Japs, and court in your stocking feet. Otherwise there will be a chilly reception awaiting you." Being married, they are talking by the book.

Jungle Can Furnish Food.

While the new food campaign was being talked about at Seattle, Randolph L. Summerfield of Singapore, who has lived forty years in the Malay States, arrived on a government mission. He is a civil engineer. "The world's live-stock market has been decimated," said Mr. Summerfield, "but if worst comes to worst and there's a real meat famine, the jungles of the Malay States can supply vast quantities of meats and fats. Our forests are full of monkeys of all kinds. Our streams teem with crocodiles. The huge anaconda snake is numerous and prolific. Monkey meat, cooked French or Spanish style, billed on the menu as veal, would make an epicure yearn for more. There's no disagreeable sentiment about killing a crocodile or the boa constrictor. Portions of the 'croco's' tail are extraordinarily good, and the boa constrictor is a culinary favorite in India. Fried in butter, or certain oils, the boa constrictor is considered a delicacy."

Proof Positive.

"Are you sure this chicken is tender?" asked the customer in the market.

"Yes, I think it is, sir," replied the marketman.

"And do you know that it is fresh killed?"

"Oh, yes, sir."

"Are you sure?"

"Positive."

"Why are you so positive?"

"Because I caught it in my war garden only yesterday."

Too Much to Ask.

"Would you advise a boy to study the classics?"

"Yes, if he has the time. But it seems hard to expect him to take his mind off what's going on right now and go away back to the fall of Troy."

Embarkation of American soldiers for all fronts overseas has now passed the 1,750,000 mark, according to announcement of Gen. March

BRITISH PRESSING IN ON ST. QUENTIN FIGHTING THROUGH STIFF RESISTANCE

ALLIES AGGRESSIVE EVERYWHERE

HEAVY ARTILLERY FIGHTING ON FRENCH FRONT—BRITISH POSITIONS IMPROVE WEST OF CAMBRAI—GERMANS LAUNCH ATTACK IN ARRAS-LENS SECTOR IN EFFORT TO DRIVE BRITISH FROM NEW POSITIONS, BUT ARE COMPLETELY REPULSED—BRITISH PUSH FORWARD BELOW YPRES.

Special Despatches to The Intelligencer, Canadian Press, Limited.

LONDON, Sept. 24,—(Official)—British forces are pressing in on St. Quentin directly from the west today, reports from Field Marshal Haig state. He reports fighting taking place to our advantage and announces progress made by the attacking forces in the region east of Vermand.

ARTILLERY ACTIVE.

PARIS Sept. 24.—(Official)—Artillery was active last night on the French front below St. Quentin and between the Ailette and Aisne rivers, but no infantry action is reported in today's war office statement.

GERMAN ATTACK REPULSED.

LONDON, Sept. 24.—On the front to the west of Cambrai in the region north of Moeuvres British positions have been improved. In the Arras-Lens sector the Germans tried to drive the British from new positions they had won east of Gavrelle. The enemy was completely repulsed and the British held their line intact. In Flanders British troops succeeded in pushing forward and occupying a portion of the old British line southeast of Voormezeele, below Ypres.

Allenby's Smash May Stop The Turkey Trot

LONDON, Sept. 24—The victory of General Allenby is hailed as a model in conception and execution. It is the most complete of any hitherto attained by the allies in any theatre. General Allenby's consummate use of cavalry is especially praised by military critics here. The immediate effect of the victory is the liberation of the Holy Land, for it is antincipated that General Allenby will have little difficulty in entirely clearing northern Palestine and be able to relieve his communications by establishing a base at Haifa, whence the railway runs to Beisan and Damascus. Thus the whole Turkish railway system in southern Syria is controlled by the Anglo-French forces in Palestine.

The Turkish disaster is bound to have the most profound reaction in Constantinople and Sofia and compromise the situation of the Turks in Mesopotamia. It will likely terminate the Turkish adventures in Persia and Caucasia.

The Daily Telegraph, which declares the existence of the Ottoman Empire is imperilled by one of the master strokes of the war, points out that General Allenby struck unexpectedly early, and has all the campaigning season still before him.

The Morning Post urges that a diplomatic effort be made to detach Turkey from the Central Powers.

Serious Fire in Washington Hotel

Special Despatch to The Intelligencer
Canadian Press Limited

WASHINGTON, Sept. 24—Police and fire officials today were investigating the origin of a fire early this morning in the New Willard Hotel, which caused damage estimated at $100,000 and sent hundreds of guests many of them of national prominence, including Vice-Pres. Marshal, scurrying through smoke filled corridors to the lobby and safety.

BULGARIAN PRESS IN FAVOR OF PEACE

Zurich, Sept. 24.—The Bulgarian press is unanimously in favor of peace, according to information obtained here yesterday.

"It is high time to listen to reason," declares the Prepore.

"The success of the entente in France cannot be denied," the Vir says.

"For the accomplishment of peace," says the Narod, "it is necessary that the period of negotiations, which are on the verge of beginning, shall be terminated as quickly as possible."

Constantinople was bombarded by Allied aviators Friday and Saturday doing great damage.

Dr. Hastings' Tips To Avoid Influenza

Twelve Safeguards Which the American Army Is Also Told to Observe

TORONTO, Sept. 24.—Now that Spanish influenza has crossed the ocean to America and is spreading so rapidly over this continent, Dr. C. J. O. Hastings, M. O. H., counsels the public to observe the following dozen safeguards against contracting the disease.

1. Avoid needless crowding; influenza is a crowd disease.

2. Smother your coughs and sneezes, others do not want the germs which you would throw away.

3. Your nose, not your mouth, was made to breath through. Get the habit.

4. Remember the three C's—A clean mouth, a clean skin and clean clothes.

5. Try to keep cool when you walk and warm when you ride and sleep.

6. Open the windows always at home at night; at the office when practicable.

7. [illegible] will win the war if you give [illegible] help by choosing and chew[illegible] food well.

8. You[illegible] in your own hands; was[illegible] hands [illegible]fore eating.

9. Don't let the waste [illegible] digestion accumulate; drink [illegible] or two of water when getting up.

10. Don't use a napkin, towel, spoon, fork, glass or cup which has been used by another person and not washed.

11. Avoid tight clothes, tight shoes, tight gloves; seek to make nature your ally and not your prisoner.

12. When the air is pure breathe all of it you can; breathe freely.

These same rules are approved by General Gorgas, Surgeon-Beneral of the American army, for the practice of the U. S. forces.

Dr. Hastings points out that the sneezes, is the most dangerous means of communicating the disease. "If you doubt that, when you feel like sneezing again stand about two feet away from your bathroom mirror and then observe how many droplets will cover that mirror," he says. "Then imagine the danger from a sneze in a crowded car."

No Gasless Sunday Held in Montreal

Patriotic Citizens are Being Penalized by Their Own Sense of Loyalty

MONTREAL, Sept. 24—After reporting last Sunday that out of 13,000 cars only 1,000 were out, gaseless Sunday was apparently a complete failure in Montreal Sunday.

"Quite disgusted,' was the verdict of the Automobile Association officials Sunday night in connection with what they term the failure of the voluntary "gaseless" Sunday. That the Government would be quite justified in issuing a mandatory order for the conservation of gasoline was another opinion expressed.

"I didn't stir out of my house Sunday afternoon, and in twenty minutes I counted no less than forty-six cars pass my window,' said Mr. T. C. Kirby, secretary of the Montreal Automobile Association, Sunday. The license numbers of the cars were noted.

The failure of the campaign consists in the fact that people of good will, who, for patriotic reasons, have abstained from using their cars, are being penalized by their own sense of loyalty, while in certain sections of the city there has been no observation of the voluntary conservation campaign whatever. West of St. Lawrence boulevard there was an appreciative lessening of the traffic; east of St. Lawrence boulevard apparently as many cars as ever were running. In Outermont the number of cars out was very noticeable, as also in St. Henry and some other suburbs, while in Westmount they were very scarce.

Of the hundreds of cars out Sunday probably the vast majority were the poorer class of cars, whose owners probably have little time for motoring other than on Sunday. For these, it is claimed, a regulation forbidding the use of cars on Sunday [illegible]ld be a hardship, which has given [illegible] demand for gasoline ration[illegible]bers of the automobile assoc[illegible] already sent in a petition to this effect to the Government.

They request that gasoline cards be issued, entitling owners to purchase so much gasoline per week, according to the business for which the cars are required. The failure of the voluntary campaign is giving great impetus to this agitation, and as much pressure as possible will be brought to bear on the Government to enforce a rationing system.

Massed Tanks Make Hun Blood Run Cold

ith the American Army on the Lorraine Front., Sept. 23—A German document found in the recovered territory north of St. Miheil, referring apparently to the defeat by the British of the Germans when they advanced on the Hindenburg line before Cambrai says:

"The defeat of the second army, according to the report of officers sent by general headquarters to the combat zone, may be imputed to the following reasons: 'First, that the troops allowed themselves to be surprised by an attack of tanks en masse, and in particular, they lost all cohesion when they were suddenly confronted by tanks coming from behind them; second, that in the advance combat zone, as well as in the villages in sectors in the rear, there existed an indefinite position or organization.'"

The 11th German Division was reported to have been cut from the main Bulgarian army and to be retreating in disorder.

The news despatches say the first Bulgarian army in the region of Monastir and Prilepp has been cut off from communication with the second army in the Doiran sector.

The Franco-Serbian troops are pursuing the Bulgarian army, which is in full retreat.

The entente allies now command the mountain zone, from which they will be able to debouch in the plains.

PALESTINE BEING SWEPT CLEAN OF TURKS BY BRITISH FORCES

TURKISH ARMY COMPLETELY SMASHED

BRITISH CAVALRY OCCUPY HAIFA—TURKS WITHDRAWING EAST OF THE JORDAN, CLOSELY PURSUED BY ALLIED FORCES—NONE OF 40,000 TURKS TRAPPED BY CLOSING OF JORDAN PASSAGES CAN POSSIBLY GET AWAY, IT IS SAID—TURK ARMY SCATTERED AND TRANSPORT CAPTURED.

Special Despatches to The Intelligencer, Canadian Press, Limited.

LONDON, Sept. 24.—British cavalry pushing up the Mediterranean coast of Palestine, have occupied Haifa and Acre, it is officially announced today.

East of the Jordan the Turks are withdrawing toward Amman, on the Hedjaz railway. Australians, New Zealanders, Jewish and other troops are pursuing the enemy and have reached Essalt, 15 miles northwest of Amman.

40,000 TRAPPED.

Reports from the Palestine front indicate that none of the Turkish force of at least 40,000 men trapped by the British through the seizure of the last of the passages of the Jordan can possibly get away.

Virtually the entire Turkish force is or will be, accounted for in killed, wounded and prisoners. Hundreds of stragglers are being found wandering about in the mountainous country aimlessly, without a leader or a purpose.

The Turks had seven divisions south of Nazareth and west of the Jordan, but the exact total cannot be determined owing to the weakness of some of the Turkish divisions, the totals of the different units varying. The total of 25,000 prisoners reported, however, is believed to be far less than the final count will show, as at last reports prisoners were still being brought in.

MANY MORE PRISONERS.

LONDON, Sept. 24.—This afternoon's advices indicate that the British are continuing the advance in Palestine. Cavalry have occupied Malan. Official advices say that Turk prisoners will greatly exceed the twenty-five thousand already counted.

Bulgarians Burning Villages And Stores of War Material

BULGAR RETREAT IS A ROUT AND ALLIED OFFENSIVE IN MACEDONIA HAS DEVELOPED INTO A GREAT VICTORY. ENEMY RETREATING IN DISORDER.

Special Despatch to The Intelligencer, Canadian Press, Limited.

LONDON, Sept. 24.—(Official)—Serbian troops continue to cross the River Vardar, northeast of Monastir, and are in touch with the retreating Bulgarians. The Bulgarians are burning villages and stores of material. The Serbians, however, have captured great quantities of war material.

Around Prilep the Serbians are on the Gradsko-Prilep road to the northwest, while to the southwest they have reached the steep massif of the Drenska mountain range.

BULGAR RETREAT IS A ROUT.

PARIS, Sept. 23.—"The success achieved by the Allies in Macedonia is taking the character of a great victory," declares tonight's War Office report on operations in Macedonia. "The French and Serbian armies are making rapid progress in the centre toward the middle Vardar Valley, and are advancing on the whole front of 150 kilometres between Monastir and Lake Doiran. The enemy is in precipitate retreat, and is being pursued vigorously by all the Allied contingents.

"Northeast of Monastir the line of Mogila, Kanatlarts and Kalyani has been reached. Further north Serbian troops are marching toward Prilep, and have reached the Vardar from Gradsko to Demirkapu. They have thrown some elements across the river to the left bank.

"In the lower Vardar Valley Allied forces have passed the line of Koynsko and Zurinchel, on the right bank of the river. They have also taken Guevueli, and all of the first enemy positions as far as Lake Doiran.

"Enemy rearguards are being relentlessly pursued. Upon the roads in the region of Monastir, Kichevo, and Prilep enemy columns are retreating in indescribable disorder, and are bombarded without respite by allied aviators. A number of villages and depots are in flames. Prisoners, cannon and enormous quantities of material, which it is impossible to estimate, has fallen into our hands. We have, in particular, captured on the Vardar Valley railroad, locomotives, three complete trains and two pieces of long-range artillery mounted on trucks. In many places demoralized Bulgarian units have thrown away their arms. Our progress continues over the whole front of attack."

"In Proud and Loving Memory"

By Edward John Stobo, Jun., in Toronto Mail and Empire.

In these days, when long lists of casualties appear in the papers and so many hearts are broken, it is a great uplift to the soul just to read the words which appear at the head of this article. There are some "In memor[illegible] notice that are morbid and silly, but it always braces my spirit to find amidst the [illegible] sentimentality and trashy poetry [illegible] the "In memoriam" co[illegible] a bright and cheerful thought conce[illegible] a great sorrow.

Many of the readers of these Meditations have had to face the terrible anxiety and griefs that war entails. They feel that they have borne all they can bear. They are at the breaking point. They take no pride in the fact that the laddie died for the Empire and humanity. The whole affair is an awful tragedy to them—a tragedy that cannot be explained away. In spite of all we can say the awful fact remains that he is gone—done to death by a hellish system of militarism. And there are times when they almost lose faith in God because He allows such a state of affairs to exist in the world. It is just because I know that I have readers who feel like that, that I am going to try to say something which may let a ray of sunshine into the gloom which has settled down upon the soul since the boy "went West."

One Drop of Sweetness.

I have known parents who had no proud and happy memories concerning their lad. He had been a disappointment and a grief to them. When he died there was not a single drop of comfort in the bitter cup which they were compelled to drink. But here is a father and mother who have a noble son, a bright, happy, manly fellow, whose soul responds to the appeal of patriotism, whose spirit leaps when it learns that sacrifice for the sake of others is the note to which the call of his country is keyed—a lad who made the decision to serve, not carelessly, but deliberately, knowing that he might never come back, and he has fallen, he has given his life in defence of the weak, in the vindication of principles for which our fathers did not hesitate to die—what shall be the attitude of the parents bereft of such a son? Amidst their sorrow is it not a proud, yes, a joyous memory that the lad was no slacker, that he made the choice knowing what it involved? The boy was a hero. Should they not be proud of him? I saw a statement a while ago to the effect that a certain young man had declared that he would rather be a living coward than a dead [illegible]. I wonder if in these days any parents would care to herald their choice [illegible] for their son in quite such [illegible] language. No stricken reader of this page, if he had the choice between the living coward and the dead hero but would choose the dead hero. You cannot be proud of a coward. You cannot love a coward, but you can have proud and loving memories of a dead hero. That is one drop of sweetness in the bottom of your bitter cup.

Service For Others.

Then is it not a comfort to know that the lad was engaged in service for others when he went home? We are learning in these days to rectify our measurements of value. There was a time when money and social position meant far too much to the average man. The question today is not "What have you got?" but "How did you get it? What are you doing with it?" Selfish accumulation of wealth has received a great setback. The rights of others have to be considered. My sorrowing reader, your burden is very heavy, but would you rather have your boy's name among those which shall be covered with shame in the years to come because they made merchandise of their country's need, than in the glorious list of the defenders of Canada and the benefactors of humanity? Your lad gave up for the time being the opportunity of making even a competency for himself. He threw himself into the struggle to keep others from being crushed. He put his life ahead of dollars, service ahead of comfort. Are you not proud of him?

"Ah!" you say, "God knows I am proud of the boy, but I have only a memory now. I cannot hope to see him when the boys come back, and my heart cries out for him all the time." Yes, I hope that I realize something of the sorrow you will have in the day when so many hearts will be rejoicing over the return of their loved ones. Do I need to remind you that there are cases that are worse than yours? There are parents who will receive only the wrecks of their laddies. Just walk up to Shrapnel Corner and see a little of what I mean. It tears my heart just to look upon the boys who have been mangled so terribly that you feel that death would be preferable. You have the memory of your lad as he went away. His body was not a burden to him, it had not become a clog to his eager young spirit. You remember him as a bright, manly youth. Not a single cloud darkens your recollection of your boy. Are you not blessed above many others?

Heaven Nearer Than Europe.

"But," you insist, "I have only a memory." I insist that you have the boy just as much, if not more, than when you knew that he was fighting "somewhere in France." The spirit world is not far away as you appear to think. On the contrary it is very near. You thought that the lad had gone far away when he crossed the seas. Now you think that he has gone farther away since he has passed into the world of spirits. You think of immeasurable distance. But heaven is nearer than Europe. The boy has not gone farther away, but has come nearer since his brave young spirit made the "great adventure." I wonder if I can make you see that. If I can this corner will have achieved something to stricken hearts.

Do you remember the words of Jesus "Joy shall be in heaven over one sinner that repenteth"? Then heaven and earth cannot be far apart, if there is rejoicing in one place over incidents that occur in the other. The worst feature of bereavement is the feeling that the dear one has gone so far beyond our horizon line that communication is not to be thought of. It is that feeling that breaks the heart and prompts us to wear the deepest mourning. There is little or no appreciation of the fact that heaven is a great deal nearer than Europe. The thought of immeasurable distance is almost equivalent to annihilation. But your dear one is not far away. He is near.

The words of Jesus also imply that there is angelic co-operation in human affairs. We are not alone in our work, our joys or our sufferings, for the upper and the lower worlds overlap each other and though we go not there the angels do come and can come here. And if the angels, why not the spirits of just men made perfect?

Laddie Very Near.

Do you remember that wonderful picture drawn by the writer of the Epistle to the Hebrews of the saints, who had passed on to their rest, looking down upon the Christians who were yet enduring the trials of this life? The exhortation is most timely in these days: "Wherefore, seeing that we also are compassed about with so great a cloud of witnesses, let us lay aside every weight and the sin that doth so easily beset us, and let us run with patience the race that is set before us, looking unto Jesus the author and finisher of our faith; who for the joy that was set before Him endured the cross despising the shame, and is set down on the right hand of the throne of God." Heavenly interest shines in every word of that remarkable piece of descriptive writing. The cloud of witnesses are not far off. The laddie is not far away. He is nearer than he has been for many months. And those who "sleep in Jesus" are safe and happy. One day by God's grace we shall see them. Is it fair to them to be so sorrowful because we cannot see them now? I wonder if they do not know our attitude towards the sacrifice which they made so joyously? I wonder if we wound their hearts, and the heart of the Saviour, when we rebel against the consequences of an unselfish choice? Let us lift up our eyes even if the tears fall fast, and let us say: "O God, I thank Thee for a proud and loving memory."

Military Prepare To House Troops

To Influx of Canadians From The United States is Expected

In anticipation of an influx of Canadians of military age from the United States during the next month, as a result of the Draft Treaty between the two countries, steps are being taken by the military authorities to enlarge the accommodation for troops in this district. The number of Canadians now resident of the United States who will take advantage of the treaty to return to Canada for service in the local forces should be known within a month, as October 10 is the last date on which any Canadian can elect to serve with the Canadian forces rather than with the American. It is believed that, with the exception of unusual cases where men will choose to remain in the United States and take their chances of being called to the American ranks owing to business reasons, the great bulk of Canadians across the line will prefer to serve with their own army. The military authorities, speculating on this, estimate that fully 10,000 Canadians will return to their own country within the next month and will accordingly be available for service at home. Following out the natural proportion which the Toronto military district bears to the whole of the Dominion this would mean that local authorities will have to find accommodation for an additional 2,000 men shortly. As there are now only slightly over 8,000 men in the various services in the district, the task of accommodating an additional 2,000 will not be a heavy one, as, until it was remembered that the inflowing Canadians would have to be provided for, it was not intended to make use of the Exhibition Park this winter. In addition to the Canadians who return home, there will be the Americans who prefer to serve with the local forces rather than with the United States army.

HOW ABOUT MARRIED MEN?

So far it has been impossible to form any accurate estimate of the number of Americans in this military district, but in connection with the service of Americans one interesting point has developed. The regulations state that if United States citizens do not elect to return home, or if they do not register for that purpose, they will immediately become available for the Canadian forces, but so far as can be learned, no definite provision has been made for the handling of the married Americans who decide to remain in Canada. Any maried American up to the age of 37 who returns to the States or elects to serve with the American army will be immediately available for service, but regarding Americans, married or single, who remain in Canada the regulations merely state that they will be subject to service in Canada when called. As Canada has not yet called upon the married men, this would indicate that by remaining in Canada the married Americans will escape service for some time yet. This point has been puzzling the local officials for some time, and in the absence of any instructions to call the married Americans the officials incline to the opinion that they cannot be called until Class Two is needed in Canada.

FIRE WIPES OUT SASKATCHEWAN TOWN

MOOSE JAW, Sept. 23.—The whole business portion of Mawer, Sask., was wiped out by fire. The fire was originated in a Chinese restaurant, the cause of which is not yet known. In less than two hours the postoffice, Dillon Brothers' general store, the Queen's Hotel, the store adjoining, the pool room and a dwelling house belonging to Joe Nash, adjoining the restaurant, were completely destroyed. Although valiant efforts were made by citizens with water from the G. T. P. well, the flames had too much of a start. The loss is estimated at $95,000. Only one store remains that of the Mawer Supply Company.

Music & Drama

Beautiful Marguerita Fisher appeared to advantage last evening at Griffin's in her newest picture "A Square Deal." The story is a very novel one showing the present day trend of the times as regards marriage, the woman claiming that the present day prospective bride should have the right to dissolve the marriage contract if not suited without resources to the divorce courts, how this very novel idea was cast out of the young bride's head by a very clever trick of her very talented husband.

A good news film showing the advanced preparations Uncle Sam is making towards winning the war, and the twentieth and last chapter of the serial "The Eagle's Eye" discloses the departure of the two conspirators Dr. Albert and Von Bernstorff from America, after having had their passports handed to them by the American Government are shown. In "Wild Youth" Stuart Blackton offers a very interesting story by Sir Gilbert Parker, formerly of Belleville, with a cast that could not be excelled. Theodore Roberts in the character part of an old man and Louise Huff and Jack Mulhall playing opposite one another. The outdoor scenes were excellent and a bright vein of comedy runs all the way through the picture causing many laughs especially at the antics of the Chinaman which is played by James Crune. The story, cast and settings could not be improved on and no doubt if the weather had been finer a bumper house would have turned out to see Sir Gilbert Parker's latest work. This fine program will be repeated on Wednesday night.

At the Palace Gladys Leslie is appearing in a good picture called "The Nymph of the Foothills;" along with a good comedy called "Don't Lose Your Coat," and a good Educational Film; a Ford Monthly, showing the furances and steel mills in Canada biggest blast furances and steel mills in Canada in full operation makes up a programme of variety that should please all.

"HAVE A HEART" TONIGHT

That sagacious producer of half a hundred famous stage successes, Henry W. Savage, will offer "Have A Heart" at Griffin's tonight. "Have A Heart" is a new type of musical comedy that gained great vogue last winter in New York. First of all there is a logical, amusing libretto by Guy Bolton and P. G. Wodehouse, made the more enjoyable by artistic enactment ,and sprinkled with nineteen melodious gems by the prolific composer, Jerome Kern. There seems to be the very soul of the fox-trot in his music and he is the recognized adept in providing one-steps. Among the numbers already widely popular are: "You Said Something," "Have A Heart," "Daisy," "Honeymoon Inn" "The Road That Lies Before," "My Wife—My Man," "Samarkland" and "Look In His Eyes.' As to the story; that would be poiled by a bare synopsis. But it involves the comic complications of a young couple who elope for a second honeymoon on the eve of their divorce. One big, glittering, beauty-laden scene is the lingerie section of a big department store. And then the action shifts to a fashionable ocean-side hotel at Blueport, R. I. There are nearly four score singers, dancers and comedians of high quality. Of course, Mr. Savage has provided a liberal chorus and critics have acclaimed this contingent to be decidedly worth seeing. There is a complete orchestra carried by the company and it is worthy of note that the company to be seen here is the only one presenting "Have A Heart" and is under the personal direction of Henry W. Savage.

FIND HUN TOWN DESERTED

With the American Army in Alsace, Sept. 23—There are indications that the enemy has placed new troops in the line in Alsace opposite the Americans. Some portions of the front, however, apparently are not held by these new men. An American patrol penetrated the enemy wire Thursday and walked through the town of Ammerzweiler, which was found to be deserted.

Canadian newspapers.

The Canadian press is well to the fore in the campaign to promote the saving both of materials and money. Mr. John M. Irmie, manager of the Canadian Press Association, mentions it as an interesting coincidence that on the very day that the Thrift Campaign was launched in the newspapers of Canada the news print paper committee of the Canadian Press Association sent out to all papers a long list of suggestion by which paper may be saved and a resulting saving effected in labor, materials and transportation.

Canada uses a large quantity of news print, but much less per capita than does the United States. In this country the consumption is 12,000 tons per year per million of the population; Whereas in the United States the consumption is 18,000 tons per million people. In the United States the War Industries Board recently issued an order reducing the consumption of news print in that country. No such action has been taken in Canada as yet; but the news print paper committee felt that every economy possible in the use of paper should be effected, notwithstanding the fact that even after the new regulations have gone into effect in the United States, the per capita consumption of paper in that country will be much higher than it is in Canada.

Eliminate Unnecessary Copies

The ideas for economy suggested to publishers are of two kinds. First, the discontinuance of wasteful practices in building up circulation that have manifested themselves through the keen competition of certain dailies to get circulation at any cost. Along this line many suggestions have been made with a view to eliminating wasteful circulation, without crippling the newspaper.

Another line of policy relates to the size of newspapers. Recommendations have been made for reductions in size ranging from five per cent in the case of small papers, to 60 per cent in the case of large Sunday editions using over 350 columns of reading matter, comic features, etc. This would mean the eliminating, or reducing, of many comic and other features and the condensing of news reports into shorter form. In other words, the competition between papers would then be one of quality rather than of quantity of matter printed.

The Canadian Press in adopting these suggestions is following up its campaign to promote saving by practising it.

Won't Let Foe Pass Assurance to Kaiser

He Visits the Loraine Front to Inspire Troops to Meet Coming Onslaught

ASTERDAM, Sept. 23—"We will never let Frenchmen or Americans through here," was the promise given Emperor William by his troops given he visited the Alsace-Lorraine front on September 19 and 20 according to Karl Rosner's Sunday despatch to the Lokal Aneiger.

The Emperor first visited the section between Mulhausen and Colmar, where "in sight of the Vosges from on whose heights and slopes the German positions run and within hearing of the dull roaring cannon fire, Emperor William, conducted by Field Marshal Duke Albrecht of Wurtemberg, the commander-in-chief of the army group, went from division to division, camp to camp, and hospital to hospital."

"He remained all day," says Rosner, "was again told by his generals, just as by simple musketeers, that they will never let the enemy pass. The Lorrain front, but instead of visiting staffs, he called on small units, brigades, regiments and battalions. It is true that the 'hurrah' feeling of the commencement of the war has vanished, but everywhere one meets with the same unshakeable and sure calmness which never for a moment doubts of a victorious resistance.'

The correspondent reveals the fact that the brigade commanded by Prince Oscar, the Emperor's son, is stationed at this front. He says that Prince Oscar has returned to the field, notwithstanding the after-effects of his wounds.

No Men For Industry Not War Essential

WASHINGTON, Sept. 24—Machinery designed to force men out of non-essential employment and muster women of the nation to take their places was put in motion yesterday by 1,000 Community Labor Boards reaching into every section of the country.

The boards are acting under detailed instructions from the Government working through the United States employment service.

Each board soon will publish lists of industries in its locality in which men should be replaced by women. The lists will be based on surveys of all industrial plants in each board's district. The surveys will be minute. Each job will be studied to determine whether a woman should fill it.

Publication of the lists is expected to cause employers to comply and substitute women as a result of the moral pressure thus exerted.

This move is a rest of the enlarged army program under which four million men will be sent to France by next June.

It is expected to weed out of non-essential employments every man in the nation.

Le Nationaliste Asks Peace by Agreement

MONTREAL, Sept. 23.—In an editorial published by La Patrie (Montreal) this paper, under the heading of "The Other Offensive," takes strong objection to an article that appeared in the last issue of Le Nationaliste (Le Devoir's Sunday issue), arguing in favor of a peace offensive.

Quoting Le Nationaliste's article, La Patrie writes as follows: "The entente is now on top, but the war is not ended," says Le Nationaliste, the weekly edition of le Devoir. 'Drawing-room strategists says that it will end on the banks of the Rhine, while others, whose ideas are more exacting, declare it will end when the allies reach Berlin.

"One may well believe however, even at the risk of displeasing these penny-a-liners, that the whole world would be delighted to see the end of this universal struggle. How can this result be secured? Can it be reached by pursuing the military offensive led by Foch and his lieutenants, or by a peace offensive moulded by the actions of the leaders of the several Governments?

"Let us consider the enormous cost in precious human lives that the military offensive entails and we will be satisfied with a peace offensive obtains the end in view quicker military offensive. Evident war-mongers of Germany's junk and the jingoes of the British E are anxious to come to an understanding—somewhere else than behind the scenes. But above them the people, and it is the people who must be heard in this matter."

"Now," continues La Patrie, "is not all this dentical with the Austrian note? Is it not, with a refinement of perfidy, the best sophistry that could be invoked from Vienna?"

Legs Amputated Young Man Dies

LINDSAY, Sept. 23—Patrick Miller, a young man of Coboconk, 18 years of age, met with a serious accident Saturday afternoon that he died Sunday afternoon in the Ross Hospital.

It appears that the young fellow was running a small dinghy engine at the Coboconk quarry, when he was warned of the blast taking place. He speeded up the engine and apparently got it moving so fast that it ran away. In some manner he was thrown under the wheels, one leg being amputated at the thigh, and the other so nearly severed and so badly crushed that it had to be amputated on the arrival of the unfortunate man in Lindsay. He was unable to stand the shock and smash, passing away in the afternoon.

DR'S CONVICTION QUASHED

Dr. J. P. Rankin, ex-M.P., of Stratford, convicted of a breach of Section 51 of the Ontario Temperance Act and fined $50 and costs, appealed to Mr. Justice Rose at Osgoode Hall, and the conviction was quashed.

"A physician is authorized by Section 51 to give a prescription for intoxicating liquor if he deems it necessary for the health of his patient; 'but no such prescription shall be given except in cases of actual need, and when in the judgment of such phpysician the use of liquor is necessary.'

"What is alleged is that, whether or not the physician believed that the use of the prescribed liquor was necessary, as he swears he did there was in fact, no actual need of it, and, therefore, an offence was committed.

"I can find no evidence that it was not a case of actual need, and I think, therefore, that the conviction must be quashed. There will be an order for the protection of the magistrate."

GOOD HEALTH is as necessary to the winning of the war as good guns, good shells and good airplanes.

And it is not alone the health of the soldier that is important, for this is watched and guarded as never before. But there is the health of the people at home, who are manufacturing and sending forward the supplies which make it possible to continue the fight.

Men and women have never in the world's history carried such mental and physical burdens as they do to-day.

From Ministers of State, Commissioners, Manufacturers, all the way through the enormous staffs of men and women workers, there are problems to be solved and schedules to be lived up to that mean enormous anxiety and strain on the nervous system.

It is under these conditions that many resort to the use of narcotics to produce sleep or stimulants to whip up the tired nerves. In either case the temporary help is obtained at an enormous expense to the nervous system.

The only rational treatment is that which goes to build up new nerve cells and new nerve force, and supreme in this class is Dr. Chase's Nerve Food.

Most people know about this food cure, but all do not realize that it has revolutionized the treatment of diseases of the nerves by the new idea of supplying to the blood the elements which go to the creation of nervous energy and vigor.

The most common indications of nervous exhaustion are inability to sleep and rest, failure of digestion and loss of appetite, nervousness and irritability. You arise tired in the mornings, and are easily annoyed over little things. You put off the duties of the day because you lack the energy to take hold and clean them up.

It is evident that you must have help to overcome this condition, and there is nothing so sure to befriend you as Dr. Chase's Nerve Food.

For your protection the portrait and signature of A. W. Chase, M.D., the famous Receipt Book author, are on every box of the genuine Dr. Chase's Nerve Food. 50c a box, 6 for $2.75, all dealers, or Edmanson, Bates & Co., Ltd., Toronto.

HANG ON TO YOUR VICTORY BONDS.

Victory Bonds cannot depreciate in value unless the bottom falls out of the universe, and faith, hope and charity become the laughing stock of Hun Kultur Triumphant. Rather will they appreciate in value. Stand by the Empire and protect your own best interests by hanging on to your Victory Bonds and buying more when the opportunity affords. It seems that efforts are being made in some quarters to induce holders of Victory Bonds to part with their securities for cash or in exchange for other securities said to be "better." No securities are better than Victory Bonds, backed by the Government and secured by the great and growing prosperity of all Canada. The Perth Expositor comments upon the attempted raid on Victory Bonds as follows:

> Some time ago, this paper took occasion to point out that some "smart" people and military slackers were going through the country inducing holders of the last victory bonds to dispose of their bonds at a sacrifice, playing on the imagination and ignorance of those who bought bonds for the first time when the victory loan was floated last fall. In the larger centres there is evidence that a class of men are making a very fat living in this way. It is not expected that every man who bought a bond last fall will be able to retain it until the term of expiry, because some now, no doubt, require ready cash, through unforeseen circumstances. For the protection of such people the Minister of Finance, several months ago, appointed a stabilizing committee who fixed a market price for a victory war bond. That price is 99 and interest. Any reputable Canadian bond dealer, or any bank, will pay the holder of a victory bond 99 and interest, so that there is no occasion for those who must turn their bonds into money to sacrifice them at less than 99 and interest.

WHO GETS THE FISH ?

For some weeks there have been very few government fish coming to Belleville and it is quite possible other places have been similarly [illegible]. Citizens have become accustomed to fresh fish menus each [illegible] and the present difficulty of securing supplies is not relished. [illegible] visits to the authorized fish stores meet the same reception. [illegible] fish today." It is said that the catch in Lake Ontario is particularly heavy and at Consecon and other ports near Belleville fish are boxed up in great quantities every day for shipment, but none for Belleville. We are informed that large quantities of Lake Ontario fish arrive in [illegible] every day from Prince Edward county fishermen—all billed to Buffalo. This matter should be taken up by the Board of Trade at once, getting in touch with the Government at Toronto. The Canadian market should have first call on Canadian fish and if there is any underhand work going on to secure fish supplies for the American market the government should be made aware of it. The Canadian price is fixed but the American is not, and fish dealers across the line can make very attractive bids for Canada's share of the fish catch.

Poor people who have benefitted the most from the government's fixing the price of fresh fish at fifteen cents per pound are considerably inconvenienced through being deprived of their fish supplies.

Let the Belleville Board of Trade get busy and uncover the Ethiopian in the woodpile.

A BOGEY MAN.

In answer to those who prophesy a sort of mob rule by returned soldiers after the war, the Toronto News recently published the following editorial under the heading,—"No Cause for Apprehension":

> "There is no danger. The men who represent Canada overseas are not the sort that degenerate into 'a brutal and rapacious soldiery,' so often mentioned by the old historians. They are for the most part young men of intelligence and good breeding, the products of Canadian homes and Canadian schools. Soldiers who have learned discipline without unlearning their natural initiative are of too high a mental type to take pattern from the Russian moujik and tear civilization to rags.
> "Consider the soldiers who have already returned. The proportion among them of 'strong-arm men' who demonstrate with stones and staves is almost negligible. There are thousands in civil life. Their bearing is as courteous, their manner as quiet as that of any man who never saw a battlefield. They wear the service badge with pride. Of right they count it as a distinction. They are impatient at the few noisy comrades who think a whoop is an argument and a crutch-head the end of discussion. They are the backbone of the Veterans' Association, the strength of the army, and the cream of Canadian manhood. Of them the country has great expectations which will not disappointed. Canada will owe its future pre-eminence to these men who have seen great things and learned the meaning of duty."

OTHER VIEWS

Au Revoir, Bertha.
London Daily Mail

Beneath her camouflage Fat Bertha lay,
Well hid within a distant wood and shady,
And spat at Paris, eighty miles away—
A proper pastime for a German lady.
Surely, she thought, such frightfulness must turn
The blood of these Parisians to water,
And in a week at most their chief concern
Must be at any cost to stop the slaughter.

But Paris, though she mourned her children slain,
Paid no attention to the hate appalling,
Just as a high-born lady would disdain
To listen to a fishwife's raucous bawling.
She knew that France had brave and dauntless sons
And staunch Allies who labored to defend her
And who one day would rout the hordes of Huns
And would restore in full her ancient splendor.

And when, at length, these struck a lusty blow,
Fat Bertha, anxious for her own salvation,
Decided it was time to up and go,
And waddled, breathless, to the nearest station.
Yet it is writ that she shall come again
When Armageddon's din no longer rages,
A lumbering captive in the victor's train,
An object-lesson to all future ages.
—Touchstone.

A Bigger Day Than Pay Day.
Chicago Daily News.

The following excerpt from a soldier's letter substantiates the contention that letters are better than food:

Our head sergeant gets up on a box with his arms loaded with letters and calls out "Mail!" It goes along the line like wildfire. Where it usually takes the men about five minutes to assemble for drill call or police duty and about two or three minutes for mess call, I'll bet that within thirty seconds the whole company is assembled when they hear "The mail's in." Then they all stand silently as if they were at a funeral so as not to miss a single name as the sergeant calls them out. Some go leaping and yelling with joy with two or three letters, or perhaps with one. The more unfortunate ones often leave with tears in their eyes. The day the mail comes in is a bigger day than pay day.

"Not that one, anyhow. She spent the day fishing for compliments."

Especially Among the Farmerettes.

"The summer boarders say they don't get enough to eat," remarked Mrs. Corntossel.

"That doesn't bother me," rejoined her husband. "But if you see any signs of discontent among the farm hands let me know right off."

Couldn't Say.

The children of the neighborhood had been greatly interested by the news of the arrival of a baby at the Newcome's.

One of them, meeting little Jonathan Newcome, carrying some milk very carefully, asked:

"What is your new brother's name?"

"They haven't found out yet," replied Jonathan. "He can't talk."

Security.

"Did you lend that forgetful friend of ours the book he asked for?"

"Yes, but I took care to borrow his umbrella the same day."

The Poet's Corner

THE APPLE BARREL.

It stood in the cellar, low and dim,
Where the cobwebs swept and swayed,
Holding the store from bough and limb
At the feet of Autumn laid.
And oft, when the days were short and drear,
And the north wind shrieked and roared,
We children sought in the corner here
And drew on the toothsome hoard.

For thus through the long, long winter time,
It answered our every call,
With wine of the summer's golden prime
Sealed by the hand of Fall.
The best there was of the earth and air,
Of rain, and sun and breeze,
Changed to a pippin, sweet and rare
By the art of the faithful trees.

A wonderful barrel was this, had we
His message but rightly heard—
Filled with tales of wind and bee,
Of cricket, and moth and bird.
Rife with the bliss of the fragrant June,
When skies were soft and blue,
Thronged with the dreams of a harvest moon,
O'er fields drenched deep with dew.

A homely barrel! I'd fain essay
Your marvellous skill again.
Take me back to the past, I pray,
As willing now as then—
Back to the tender morns and eves,
The noontides warm and still,
The fleecy clouds and the spangled leaves
Of the orchard over the hill.

WHY SO MANY WOMEN MARRY NAT GOODWIN

NEW YORK, Sept. 23.—Nat Goodwin's manumission from his fifth help, in a manner of speaking, meet calls to mind his delightful descriptions in little of the quintet of women who have borne his name. "My first wife, Eliza Wethersby," he says, "was an angel; she was a wife who mothered me.' She died. "My second wife was Nellie Baker Pease, a silly woman." Divorced. 'My third wife, Maxine Elliott, a Roman senator, called my friends vulgar. Divorced. "My fourth was a pretty little thing, Edna Goodrich.' Divorced. "My fifth, Margaret Moreland, all woman." Divorced. At that Nathaniel exaggerates when he declares that all women have married him; there are several he has over looked. It was DeWolf Hopper, himself our times a brodegroom at least, who asked Goodwin, "Why don't you ever invite me to any of your weddings?" And another pundit of the Lambs once inquired querulously, "Why do so many women marry Nat?" Nobody has ever found the answer to that question.

DELIVERED SHELLS TO MACHINE GUNS

LONDON, Sept. 23.—The following official statement dealing with aviation was issued:

"Clouds and a strong wind interfered with air work yesterday and observation was carried on with difficulty. Squadrons working on the Third and Fourth army fronts kept in close touch with the troops, reported positions of enemy batteries and delivered ammunition to machine-gunners in the forward areas.

"Five and a half tons of explosives were dropped and two hostile machines were downed and two sent down out of control. None of our machines are missing. Night flying was impossible."

A SENSATION IN GERMANY

GENEVA, Sept. 23.—"The bombardment of Metz by American heavy artillery caused surprise but no panic," says the Metzer Zetung, "the enemy merely copying the method of the German bombardment of Paris." The paper adds that few persons were killed and that damage was insignificant.

It is learned from Basle, however, that the American bombardment of Metz caused an enormous sensation in Germany. Many of the inhabitants have left the fortress, but neutrals are prohibited from departing. It is the first time since 1870 that Metz has been under artillery fire.

THE LATEST METHOD

of grafting skin over a severe burn or scald is by the Zam-Buk process. Zam-Buk contains herbal ingredients that literally grow new skin. How much safer, simpler and cheaper than the old method, which was by surgery!

Mrs. George Currie, of 194 Waterloo Ave., Guelph, Ont., writes: "My baby sustained a very severe burn, and although he received medical attention for eight weeks, he got very little better. Finally the doctor told me that skin would have to be grafted.

"Meantime I had heard of Zam-Buk and decided to try it first. This soothing balm soon drew out the inflammation, and in a short time I could notice a great improvement. New skin began to form, and in three weeks' time the burn was quite healed over, without having to resort to surgery."

Zam-Buk is equally good for cuts and bruises, as well as for eczema, old sores, blood-poisoning and piles. All dealers or Zam-Buk Co., Toronto, 50c. box, 3 for $1.25.

REAL ECONOMY BUY FURS

Remember last WINTER'S CHILLY BLASTS, and the fuel shortage, and supply your needs of protection NOW. Do not be misled by the elusive hope that the prices of FURS will decrease after the War. Prices are steadily on the increase and the demand for FURS never so great as it is today. Why pay HIGH PRICES for INFERIOR cloth goods, the increase on which exceeds that of Furs? Our present stock of Skins and manufactured Furs have been bought for Eight months, come early and secure YOURS. Did you ever consider the decidedly INFERIOR cloth goods, with the high prices they demand, in comparison with the Superior wearing qualities of FURS and their comparatively low prices?

Shortage of Wool is the cause of the former and INCREASED EFFICIENCY OF TREATMENT of FURS the cause of the other. Consult us further.

Considerable evidence was submitted for the crown and defense. After argument by Col. Judge Deroche also instructed that all bills incurred by Reid should be presented to Mr. Fitzgerald for payment. Col. O'Flynn intimated that his client had already paid $195 for a doctor's bill. The accused in the meantime is out on bail

ADDRESS AND PRESENTATION.

The regular meeting of the B. Y. P. U. in Victoria Avenue Baptist Church last evening was of an especial nature. Advantage was taken of the opportunity afforded by the meeting to say good-bye to two esteemed members of the church who are leaving for distant parts. A program of unusual interest was provided, including a piano solo by Mrs. R. Lewis; addresses by the chairman, Mr. W. B. Riggs, and Rev. W. H. Wallace; vocal duets by Mrs. Doolittle and Mrs. Farrow, and Mrs. Blackburn and Miss Murphy; vocal solo by Mr. Lorne Deeton, readings by Miss Mildred Lloyd, and an instrumental number by Mr. J. D. Cookson. Mrs. W. R. Deeton presided at the piano with her usual ability. At the conclusion of the program Mr. Wm. Kelly read an address to Mrs. B. Doolittle, expressing the appreciation of the various departments of the church for her valuable services, willingly given, extending over a number of years, especially in the choir. Accompanying the address was a hand some purse, containing a cash gift, as a slight token of regard. Mrs. Doolittle leaves with her family for Listowel, where Mr. Doolittle has a position on the staff of the Listowel Banner. Another brief address was made to the Rev. A. K. Scott by Mr. Percy Fisher, which was also accompanied by a remembrance. In his address, which was made on behalf of the Yokefellows' Bible Class, Mr. Fisher expressed the appreciation of the class for Mr. Scott's services as teacher of the class during a stay in Belleville of about nine months. Mr. Scott leaves today, with Mrs. Scott, for Perry, Ohio, where he has accepted the pastorate of the Baptist church there. Refreshments were served, which were thoroughly enjoyed by all, and the gathering broke up after the singing of "Blest be the tie that binds."

The Filipino Quintette gave a unique program of music and singing in the gymnasium room of the Y. M. C. A. last evening. In spite of the unfavorable weather the spacious room was filled. The Filipinos proved themselves to be first class musicians, and the programme which they put on was a rare treat for the people of Belleville and was appreciated by all present, which was proven by the one song that delighted everyone, entitled "Hello Belleville, How are you?" By the remarks heard as the audience was going out every one was well satisfied and truly thought that they got more than their money's worth. Mr. D. V. Keeping up with the Joneses

One great bar to the practice of thrift to-day is the tendency to let others set for us our standards of living.

MRS. Jones appears on the street in a new gown and at once her neighbour vows she'll have one like it. Or if a new motor car is delivered to a certain home, a nearby family, not to be handicapped in the social race, plan to discard their old car for a new one. And so it goes from one thing to another—a ceaseless, senseless competition which often ends in debts, distress and disaster.

Such silly rivalry is bad enough indeed in normal periods. It is positively unpatriotic in times like these when the country needs all available labor and material and every available dollar with which to carry on the war.

It is perhaps difficult for us to appreciate that the purchase of things we do not really need may be the direct cause of loss of life on the firing lines.

But you can't escape the fact, no matter how unpleasant the thought, that millions of individual selfish demands at home may prolong the war by causing a shortage of the very things essential to our success at the front. For the money we spend in satisfying these desires represents equipment, clothing, shot and shell that are so urgently needed for our boys in France.

Remember that when you are tempted to spend foolishly in an effort to "keep up with the Joneses."

TIGHT-WAD BILL

Some people who cannot see the wisdom of having their shoes repaired should think about this tale of Tight-Wad Bill:

Said Tight-Wad Bill to Doctor Jones,
"I've got an aching in my bones."
Said Doctor Jones to Tight-Wad Bill,
"You got wet feet and took a chill'
And ten dollars is my little Bill."

Then Tight-Wad with a heart of lead,
Thought of just what Henley said:
"Our very finest soles of leather
"Will defy the strongest weather,
And Will save you from being ill,
Two dollars only is my bill."

Have your shoes repaired at John Henley's, Shoe Repairer, Foot Bridge-gangway, Phone 609. 23

Comfort in London For Canadian Soldier

A bed, including bath, towel, soap and kit storage in London costs the Canadian Tommy 18 cetns—that is if he goes to the new Canadian Y.M.C.A. "Beaver Hut" in the Strand. A meal costs him the same with the strains of an orchestra thrown in.

Needless to relate our boys overseas are "tickled to death" with their new metropolitan centre. Costing $100,000 and situated in the most famous thoroughfare in the Empire, the Beaver Hut is run primarily by the Canadians for Canadians, although its hospitality is free to all the men of the allied forces on leave visiting London. A voluntary staff of 200 ladies, superintended by Miss Helen Fitzgerald of Fredericton, N.B., attend to the preparation and service of meals. Dormitories, with nearly 200 beds are under the same efficient care, and the ladies work in four-hour shifts, maintaing a twenty-four hour service. No matter at what hour a tired and hungry Canadian soldier arrives in London he finds an open door, a smiling welcome ,and a hot meal at the "Beaver Hut."

After a warm bath, refreshing sleep, breakfast, haircut, shave, and shoeshine—all indulged in on the premises—Tommy feels like a new man. He has packed all his troubles in his old kit bag and placed the lot in safe keeping with the clerk at the Kit Storage. It only remains for him to look in at the Information Bureau on the second floor and select one of the many suggestions to be found there for the spending of his leave. He can then set off to enjoy the beauties an hospitality of the Old Country until his time is up and he must return, reinvigorated, to the trenches.

Such an institution as the "Beaver Hut" cannot fail to render a great service to our Canadian boys over there. It provides a shelter from, and a counter-attraction to, the many undesirable elements that seek to their lonliness.

Washing Won't Rid Head Of Dandruff

The only sure way to get rid of dandruff is to dissolve it, then you destroy it entirely. To do this, get about four ounces of ordinary liquid arvon; apply it at night when retiring; use enough to moisten the scalp and rub it in gently with the finger tips.

Do this tonight, and by morning, most if not all, of your dandruff will be gone, and three or four more applications will completely dissolve and entirely destroy every single sign and trace of it, no matter how much dandruff you may have.

You will find, too, that all itching and digging of the scalp will stop at once, and your hair will be fluffy, lustrous, glossy, silky and soft, and look and feel a hundred times better.

You can get liquid arvon at any drug store. It is inexpensive and never fails to do the work.

MAJOR 'FOGHORN' McDONALD
DONS CIVILIAN CLOTHES

OTTAWA, Sept. 24.—The Militia Department wishes to correct a statement appearing in the morning papers with regard to the withdrawal of the prosecution of Major "Foghorn" McDonald for wearing a uniform when not actively employed in active service. The department points out that he was prosecuted for this offense under the provisions of an order in Council which provided only for civil proceedings. This order in Council was cancelled by a later one, under which he was made liable to military law. The civil prosecution was withdrawn for the purpose of proceeding against Major McDonald for the military offense. As he, after consultation with his lawyer, decided to comply with the law and to wear civilian clothes, the assembly of a court-martial for his trial was rendered unnecessary. Maj. McDonald was congratulated by the court upon the good judgment he had shown.

Windsor Pastor Held as Defaulter

WINDSOR, Ont., Sept. 24—Declaring him to be a draft defaulter, officers of the Dominion Police, acting under instructions, took into custody and sent to London Rev. George Kersey, pastor of Howard Avenue Methodist Church, one of the smaller congregations of the city. While no statement concerning the cleric's arrest was to be had from either military authorities or Dominion Police, it was understood that Rev. Mr. Kersey had made himself liable to detention because he had failed to make certain returns to the divisional registrar.

Rev. M. A. Graham, of Walkerville, who is chairman of the Windsor district Methodist Conference, is at loss to understand the affair and he believes there has been what he says is a "mix-up.'

Under ordinary circumstances ordained ministers are exempt from the military services, so that his friends conclude the minister may have unwittingly violated some technical requirement in connection with the registration. Before coming to Windsor Rev. Mr. Kersey was a well-known worker in Toronto Y.M.C.A. circles.

Barbers' Prices Join The Uplift

TORONTO, Sept. 24.—"Hair cut, 40 cents; shave, 20 cents."

Barber shop patrons who ambled into their favorite downtown tonsorial parlors were confronted with the foregoing depressing announcement. A five-cent advance in hair cuts and shaves became effective in most of the city's barber shops yesterday morning, and while in the outlying sections a number of shops were trimimng customers at former prices the increase is expected to be adopted everywhere within a few days.

Barber shop patrons could hardly plead surprise, however, since talk of an increase in prices has been in the air for some weeks. It was at first proposed to charge 50 cents for hair cuts and 25 cents for shaves, but the barbers figured that such a jump would give too much encouragement to the cultivation of artistic locks and safety-razor habit. So far advances have not been made in the rates for shampoos, head rubs, etc.

Newsprint Price Likely To Rise

OTTAWA, Sept. 25—Strong indication of an advance in the price of continued to be shown at the session of the Canadian newsprint enquiry this afternoon, when the examination of Mr. Thomas McLaren, comptroller of the Fort Frances Pulp and Paper Company, was undertaken.

At one point it could have been unofficially reckoned that this company could receive $90 per ton, if all its costs and claims were proved. If such a figure was set, the Paper Controller said, it would likely result in driving some Western newspapers out of business.

Information relating to a threatened tie-up of Ottawa newspapers on account of shortaeg of newsprint at the Booth Mills three weeks ago, was told of by Mr. Pringle.

Chancellor's Speech Failed to Satisfy

Special Despatch to The Intelligencer, Canadian Press, Limited.

LONDON, Sept. 25.—The speech of Count von Hertling, German Imperial Chancellor, delivered yesterday in the Reichstag main committee, made an unfavorable impression upon Reichstag members, cables the Exchange Telegraph correspondent at the meeting. In Reichstag circles the address is considered to have been unequal to the gravity of the situation in that parliamentary body, whose members were to meet this morning to decide upon their attitude towards the Chancellor. The Berlin Lokal Anzeiger says it hears authoritatively that if Count von Hertling resigns, Vice-Chancellor von Payer and Herr Friedberg, Vice-President of the Prussian Ministry of State, will also resign.

Ottawa Government Will Lodge Protest

OTTAWA, Sept. 25—As soon as the official decision of the International Waterways Commission is received granting the St. Lawrence Power Co the right to build a submerged weir in the Long Sault channel, the Government will formally protest and refuse to recognize the validity of the decision. This however, is as far as the Government can or will go at the present time, as it does not wish to get into a controversy with the American authorities.

Secretary Lansing of the United States Government took the same position in regard to a decision several years ago affecting the St. Mary's River, Alberta. He notified the Commission in advance that he would refuse to recognize the validity of its decision. As a result the judgment was never enforced.

However, in this case the St. Lawrence Power Co. is losing no time in taking action. Word has been received at the Capital that it has already commenced work on the weir, which it is expected will be completed before the winter sets in.

Police Sergt's Leg Broken While Arresting Alleged Thief

Car of Sugar Broken Into Early This Morning—Man Arrested Near The Car Gives Police Much Trouble—Escape And Recapture

As a result of a scuffle with an alleged sugar thief at an early hour this morning, Sergt. A. Harman, a member of the Belleville Police Force, will be incapacitated from duty for some time with a broken leg, and Police Officer George Ellis bears marks upon his face of the affray.

At 3.30 this morning Police Officer Ellis was patrolling Dundas Street, near Pinnacle Street, when he heard a noise apparently emanting from a G. T. R. freight car, which was standing on the Pinnacle Street track just north of Dundas street. He hurried into the car and he detected a man standing near by. The officer also saw six bags of sugar lying on the ground beside the car. Constable Ellis caught the man, who proved to be John Wilson, familiarly known about the city as "Salty" Wilson. The latter upon being caught told the officer that he had detected two men robbing the car and he went beneath the car to watch them. This, however, proved to be a subterfuge as a thorough search of the car failed to reveal any person. Wilson was escorted to the police station and left in charge of Constable Smith, while Constable Ellis went to Sergt. Harman's residence on Bridge St. as he had just been released from duty, to acquaint him with the facts of the case. The two officers returned to the Police Station only to find that the bird had flown, having succeeded in making his escape. Sergt. Harman and officer Ellis then went in search of Wilson. His home was first visited but he was not there and had not been there during the night. The home of his sister, situated on Pinnacle Street just south of the C.N.R. crossing was visited and there Wilson was found by Officer Ellis. Sergt Harman, in the meantime, was on duty outside of the house. While Constable Ellis was endeavoring to get Wilson down stairs the prisoner fought desperately and in the struggle both fell downstairs. It was then that the officer received injuries about the face. Sergt. Harman hearing the noise entered the house and assisted in handling Wilson. When near Dundas Street, Wilson made a desperate effort to escape from the officers and in the melee Sergt. Harman fell on the railway track in such a manner as to fracture his left leg just above the ankle. Ellis then handled Wilson alone and took him to the Police Station where he was safely placed behind the bars. Sergt. Harman was conveyed to his home and medical assistance rendered him. The fracture was found to be a severe one and this morning the officer was taken to the hospital where X-rays were used to determine the nature of the fracture for the purpose of having it reduced. The unfortunate officer suffered much pain from the injured member. It is alleged that the police were obstructed in the performance of their duty at the residence of Wilson's sister, thus causing the trouble there.

The car of sugar was consigned to Walmsley and Co., of this city, and contained 260 bags. A portion was unloaded last night and the car was fastened up. A hammer was found this morning in the car and it is alleged that it was used by Wilson in opening the car door. The six bags of sugar found on the ground were taken to the Police Station.

Wilson, the accused, is about 29 years of age and is well known in the city, where he was born. Of late he had been employed as a chauffer in a local auto livery. This is not his first experience with the police as he has been compelled of late to report to police hedaquarters every month owing to being out on parole. This morning Mr. H. F. Ketcheson, J. P., in the absence of Magistrate Masson remanded the accused to jail for a few days, the Crown was not prepared to proceed in the case.

Mr. A. Abbott has been retained to defend Wilson.

At the hospital this morning by the aid of X-rays it was ascertained that Sergt. Harman, in addition to sustaining a compound fracture, had his ankle dislocated.

In Palestine, Macedonia and France the allied offensives progress successfully. Gen. Allenby's forces in Palestine have followed up their rout of the Turkish forces with additional gains. In ceneral Macedonia the allies are pressing vigorously the advantages won, and the difficulties of the German and Bulgarians are increasing.

Field Marshal Haig has taken a new step in his investment of St. Quentin. and is fighting toward the northern outskirits of that German stronghold from east of Vermand.

On the Mediterranean coast of Palestine, British cavalry has occupied the ports of Haifa and Acre, making an advance from just north of Jaffa of more than sixty miles since the present operations began.

The rout of the Turks in the area west of the Jordan has compelled the Turks east of the river to retreat. They are being pursued closely by allied forces.

German and Bulgarian troops in Macedonia, their communication lines almost entirely gone through by the Franco-Serbian advance to the Vardar, are retiring on a 100-miles front. The allies have reached the Vardar northeast of Monastir on a front of more than 100 miles, and Serbian forces have crossed to east of the river in pursuit of the Bulgarians. On the left of the allied line Italian and Serbian forces are closing in on Prilep. Along the entire front the enemy is burning villages and war material.

By crossing the Vardar on a wide front south of Gradsko, 40 miles southeast of the important town of Uskub, the Serbians threaten the rear of the Bulgarians facing the British and Greeks around Lake Doiran. The Bulgarians there are reported to be retiring northeast toward Strumnitza, in Bulgarian Macedonia, evidently with the hope of escaping before the Serbians can cut off their retreat northward. Around Prilep the forces of the central powers also are in a serious position and they may be cut off completely if the allies can press north-westward along the Vardar to Veles and Usbuk.

Influenza Outbreak Is Not Alarming

TORONTO, Sept. 25.—"There is altogether too much made of the seriousness of this Spanish influenza," declared Dr. McCullough, Provincial Officer of Health. "The epidemic is not so serious as measlees, and while a few deaths have occurred among the Poles at Camp Niagara, everything possible has been done to prevent its spread."

"As far as I can learn, there is no pathological difference between plain influenza and the so-called Spanish variety," said Dr. Hastings today. "The symptoms are practically the same."

Mr. Shutt, who is in charge of the division of contagious diseases, reported that so far the department had received no indication from private physicians or its own inspectors that there were any cases of Spanish influenza in the city.

Boston Trawler Sunk While Going to Fish

An Atlantic Port, Sept. 25.—Captain J. B. O'Reilly and crew of the Boston steam trawler Kingfisher, which was captured by a German submarine 90 miles off here on Friday morning last, arrived here yesterday morning, and after seeing the American Consul left for Boston.

He says that about 9.30 o'clock on Friday morning, when the trawler was five miles from her fishing berth, a shell passed over her stern and was followed in about five minutes by a second shell, which passed between the funnel and the main mast. The submarine was then about half a mile from the trawler and immediately came alongside. The captain of the U-boat asked Captain O'Reilly where he was from, and if he had seen any other steamers in the vicinity. On receiving a negative answer to the last question he ordered the skipper of the Kingfisher to abandon his ship.

Two Million Dollar Military Hospital

TORONTO, Sept. 25.—The Dominion Government has started work on the new million dollar district demobilization depot on the property acquired north of St. Andrew's College, property where the $2,000,000 military hospital will be erected. Contractors have started excavation work on the new depot and it is understood that work will be rushed to have the depot huts built before the severe weather sets in.

Just when work will be started on the new military hospital is something nobody knows in Toronto. The authorities at Ottawa are still working on the scheme. The St. Andrew's College building itself will be ready by October 12.

The need for hospital accommodation is not acute just now. No hospital cases or further treatment cases have arrived from overseas since July 12, but it is known that in the near future thousands of men will be brought back. It is said that 5,000 men will be coming into the Toronto district.

Bandit Holds Up Passenger Train

SEATTLE, Wash., Sept. 24.—Several thousand dollars in registered mail was obtained, postal officials said today, by the bandit who last night single-handed held up a passenger train on the Great Northern Railroad near Mukilteo.

An all-night search of the woods in the vicinity, and a patrol of the water front between Seattle and Everett failed to reveal any clew to the robber. Bloodhounds from the State Reformatory were put on the scent and a track leading into the woods was taken up.

The robber appeared with drawn gun before the engine crew and forced them to stop the train. He then compelled the uncoupling of the mail and baggage car, during which he took two shots at the fireman, who had thrown a hammer at him. After going through the mail sacks he fled to the woods.

Trench Maze, And 70-Foot Canal Face British At St. Quentin

With the British Armies in France, Sept. 25—The British front seems about to become the scene of trench warfare again.

If the British succeed in their general advance it will reflect greater credit than any of their remarkable ksuccesses in the past several weeks They are now fairly up against the Hindenburg line from St. Quentin to beyond Cambrai, and while the line itself is placed on the front before Cambrai, there is yet such a wilderness of defences barring their path as only the methodically patient, machine like Hun are capable of constructing.

These mazes are from a mile to two miles deep. Part of the way there is a canal 70 feet wide, and probably 50 feet deep in some places, with deep spread trenches before and behind it. If this machine-like barricade cuold save him Von Hindenburg should feel safe, but the Germans unquestionably regard the first line from Havricourt to Moeuvres cracked and with the Australians perched on a ridge where the German outpost system lies where the licourt and Bellenglise. In the latter strip the Germans still retain an enormous advantage, however, as the dry bed of the canal stretches for three miles there.

But recent demonstrations of what tanks and instantaneous fuse shells are able to do to ordinary defences argue against impregnability of any lines.

The Germans in this section have the opportunity to resume their favorite trench warfare, and may hope to revitalize, or rather rediscipline their demoralized forces into making a stand.

HUNS FAIL TO RETAKE POSTS

The Germans, attempting to retake two posts east of Epehy yesterday lost 200 prisoners and 21 machine guns, besides leaving a hundred dead within the British lines.

Further north, five fresh German divisions, including one of Alpine troops, have arrived since Saturday. Two of the divisions are entirely fresh.

Captured enemy documents how that the ground taken by the British was intended as an essential part of the Hindenburg defence system, which their troops were ordered to hold, regardless of the cost.

Zutoo Tablets
At Any Cost

Such is the statement of Mr. A. O. Norton, of Boston, the largest Jack Manufacturer in the world. His voluntary testimonial regarding ZUTOO follows:

286 Congress St., Boston, Mass.

"I have been a sufferer from Headache since childhood and have used all, or nearly all the so-called 'cures' on the market. Some months since my attention was called to Zutoo Tablets and I have been using them ever since with the most gratifying results. I find they cure a 'sick' or 'nervous' headache in a few minutes and leave no bad effects. My family use them whenever needed with equally good results. I have frequently given them to friends who were suffering from Headache and they never failed to give quick relief. I always carry Zutoo Tablets in my grip on the road and WOULD NOT BE WITHOUT THEM AT ANY COST."

Industries Submit Their Coal Need

OTTAWA, Sept. 25.—A conference and investigation extending over some days has just been concluded between C. A. Magrath, Fuel Controller for Canada, and representatives of clay working, cement, phonograph, musical instruments, automobile, enamelware, florists, window glass and brewing industries. The conference was also attended by J. E. Walsh, transportation manager, Canadian Manufacturers' Association, Toronto.

This meeting was called at the instance of the Fuel Controller for the purpose of discussing the question of restricting the coal supply of the above industries. Steps in a similar direction have been taken or are being taken by the United States Fuel Administrator.

It was represented by most of the industries affected that the climatic conditions in Canada were such that the measures of restricition under contemplation in the United States would result in very great hardship and in certain cases in destruction of property. It was also alleged that severe restrictions had already been imposed as a result of several years of war conditions in Canada and further to restrict some of these industries at this time would be tantamount to destroying them.

Ruling Coming Later

At the close of the conference representatives of the various industries submitted written statements dealing with the whole question of fuel consumption and the special conditions surrounding each industry. These representations are now receiving the careful consuderation of the Fuel Controller and after certain further information on the subject has been compiled he will make his ruling as to the measure of restriction that will be imposed in each case.

Shortly before the conference the Fuel Controller met representatives of Canadian railways with a view to discussing fuel economies in the operation of Canada's transportation system. The whole subject was carefully canvassed and Mr. Magrath was gratified to find that economies have already been brought into force which it is anticipated will result in saving approximately 50 per cent. of the amount by which Canada's bituminous coal supply for the current coal year has been reduced. It is said that the restriction of industries of a less essential character will result in a further saving which will render a sufficient tonnage of industrial coal available for necessary war industrial work.

Only Best Cattle Met Firm Prices

Union Stock Yards, Sept. 25—There were over six thousand head of cattle in the pens when the market opened Monday morning. Unfortunately for the drovers themselves no improvement was manifested in the general quality of the butcher cattle, among which common killers predominated in numbers, though medium cattle were slightly more plentiful than on the previous Monday when consignments also numbered over six thousand head. Anything good was disposed of on a firm market before noon up to which hour the buyers held aloof from the common cattle, preferring to hang on until later in the day until the cut in values for the inferior grades went into force. With anything from 25 to 40 cents off last week's prices for common cattle, later in the day the trade continued slow and draggy and a lot of unfinished killers were unsold at the close. Outside one load of extra choice heavy export steers, which sold at 16 cents per pound, the best loads on the market and their number w limited, cashed in from $14.00 to $14.75. There was a larger turnover in cattle which brought values from $12.00 to $13.25, but the weigh scales were occupied for the most part with fair quality butcher cattle, which cost from $11.00 to $11.75. Top quality cows, which also were very scarce along with canners met a firm active trade, but in between cows were draggy and weaker. Few good bulls were on the market and these met firm prices, but the light bulls were slow and up to 25 cents weaker.

There was only a moderate demand for stockers and feeders at last week's prices. Only good milkers and Springers were wanted, and the pick among offering sold from $100 to $160.

Lambs, a meavy consignment, were barely firm, very few cashing in over $17.25. Sheep were steady, but calves though a light offering for a Monday were 25 to 50 cents cheaper.

Hogs were reported firm at $19.50 fed and watered, with selects fetching $19.75.

The receipts were 308 cars, with 6,016 cattle, 281 calves, 979 hogs and 3,651 sheep and lambs.

"HAVE A HEART" PLEASED

Every seat in Griffin's Opera House was taken last evening, so great was the desire of local theatre-goers to witness the popular musical comedy, "Have a Heart." It proved to be one of the finest of its kind, and was thoroughly enjoyed. Time and again, the audience called back the artists, and time and again they generously responded. "Have a Heart" is a tuneful hit, full of lilting lyrics and fascinating melodies. Among the musical numbers are some prime favorites that have caught the popular fancy. The story is built upon the practured romance of a pair of newly-weds, who elope for a second honeymoon on the eve of their divorce. Such a setting gives opportunity to introduce many a funny situation. Joseph Keno, as Henry, the elevator boy, is a comedian of rare ability, a whole show in himself. He was ably supported by Henry Antrim, as Rutherford Shoonmaker, department store proprietor; by Ruth Oswald as Peggy Shoonmaker, and by Jean Mason, as Francis, the French valet. The whirlwind dance by Henry and Rosie Green, as Daddiene, the pretty hotel maid, proved popular with the audience, which demanded repeated encores. Charm, vivacity and grace were abundantly displayed in every scent, rendering the comedy a delightful and pleasing one.

AT GRIFFIN'S TONIGHT

Beautiful Marguerite Fisher will appear to-night for the last time, in the excellent picture called "A Square Deal," the story concerns a young woman with a talent for writing stories, and who conceives the idea that all women and men would get along well in this world if they would give one another a square deal; for example this young woman thought that in the event of a marriage becoming distasteful to either man or woman either one should have the privilege of breaking the matrimonial bonds without recourse to the divorce courts. How this young woman nearly lost her husband through a scheme of his own makes up a very pretty and also a novel story.

There is also the usual good Screen News showing the extensive preparations that Uncle Sam is making to bring the war to an end. The last chapter of the serial "The Eagle's Eye," was also a good one and completes the wonderful story of the crimes and sins of the Kaiser's hired assasins in America.

"Wild Youth" is a fine picture with Louise Huff in the leading part, and a fine cast of players including Theodore Roberts in the character of an old man, and James Cruze as the Chinaman. The story, cast and settings of this picture could hardly be improved on. This program will be shown for the last time tonight.

SPANISH INFLUENZA

ATTACKS COLLEGE

QUEBEC, Sept. 25—An epidemic of what is supposed to be Spanish influenza is raging at Victoriaville, Que., where the three hundred students at the college are reported to be sick. The fact is that the college has been quarantined for the last week, all the scholars being gradually sent home after disinfection. So far two of the teaching brothers have died, Brother Donat and Brother Pierre. A scholar has also succumbed.

Presented With Life Membership

The W.M.S. of Wallbridge, met at the home of Mrs. C. F. Chisholm on September 12th, the feature of the meeting was social. After the usual devotional session conducted by the President, Mrs. W. J. Sharpe, Miss Hattie Bird read an address as follows:

Mrs. C. F. Chisholm:

Dear Sister in Christ—While, we the members of the Woman's Missionary Society of Sidney Auxiliary, are pleased to look upon you as our Superintendent of Christian Stewardship we are also most grateful for your practical help in this department of our work. Evidently you have not been slow to see that the cry of oppression from our sisters in heathen lands had reached the ear of the Eternal One, and that deliverance was being provided through the sisterhood of the Christian church. We say our sisters, for we all have one common Father, who has made of one blood all nations, and the same loving Saviour, who has opened the way to a glorious home beyond this life, for all our race. Then too, you have learned from the word of God that "All things belong to Him" and that we are standards of the gifts of His Providence, also that we owe Him one-tenth of our income, hence the observance of this Divine law, has made it possible for you to set apart twenty-five dollars each year for seven consecutive years to make some one of your household a life member of our Auxiliary. In addition to this you have opened your hospitable home for our meetings, and in various other ways have shown that you and yours, were in full sympathy with this Christ-like work entrusted to the women of the chruch. Doubtless you have already experienced a measure of the two-fold blesings of the giver, for the Saviour assures us "It is more blessed to give than to receive," and that in return we shall receive an hundred fold in this life and in the world to come, life everlasting. Yuo have also the joy of knowing that you have a share in the hospitals, schools, homes and kindergartens built and maintained by our Society, where, hitherto, neglected children are educated and prepared for lives of usefulness and happinees here, as well as for homes in Heaven and where many of our down-trodden sisters are tenderly cared for, and brought into the clear light of Gospel day. You with us have the exalted honor of being a partner with God in this blessed work for the uplifting of humanity. Seven years ago our Auxiliary had only three life members while now we have fourteen and still the tide is rising higher year by year, which is even now gathering force for glorious campaign of "The World for Christ" which is co-operation with our brethren is destined to flow on until all lands are christianized.

You, dear sister, although we have already assured you of our appreciation of your faithful service in the cause we all so much love, as a tangible evidence of our gratitude we ask you to accept this life membership pin, praying that you may long be spared to wear it as a reminder of the love and esteem in which you are held

Signed on behalf of Sidney Auxiliary. Yours in the bonds of Christian love.

Mrs. L. Massey, Honary President
Mrs. W. J. Sharpe, President.

Stomach Troubles Are Due to Acidity

Tells Safe, Certain, Speedy Relief for Acid Indigestion.

So-called stomach troubles, such as indigestion, gas, sourness, stomach-ache and inability to retain food are in probably nine cases out of ten, simply evidence that excessive secretion of acid is taking place in the stomach, causing the formation of gas and acid indigestion.

Gas distends the stomach and causes that full, oppressive, burning feeling sometimes known as heartburn, while the acid irritates and inflames the delicate lining of the stomach. The trouble lies entirely in the excess development or secretion of acid.

To stop or prevent this souring of the food contents of the stomach and to neutralize the acid, and make it bland and harmless, a teaspoonful of bisurated magnesia, a good and effective corrector of acid stomach, should be taken in a quarter of a glass of hot or cold water after eating or whenever gas, sourness or acidity is felt. This sweetens the stomach and neutralizes the acidity in a few moments and is a perfectly harmless and inexpensive remedy to use.

An anti acid, such as bisurated magnesia which can be obtained from any druggist in either powder or tablet form enables the stomach to do its work properly without the aid of artificial digestents. Magnesia comes in several forms, so be certain to ask for and take only Bisurated Magnesia, which is especially prepared for the above purpose.

Cocoanut Oil Fine For Washing Hair

If you want to keep your hair in good condition, be careful what you wash it with.

Don't use prepared shampoos or anything else that contains too much alkali. This dries the scalp, makes the hair brittle, and is very harmful. Just plain mulsified cocoanut oil (which is pure and entirely greaseless), is much better than anything else you can use for shampooing, as this can't possibly injure the hair.

Simply moisten your hair with water and rub it in. One or two teaspoonfuls will make an abundance of rich, creamy lather, and cleanses the hair and scalp thoroughly. The lather rinses out easily and removes every particle of dust, dirt, dandruff and excessive oil. The hair dries quickly and evenly, and it leaves it fine and silky, bright, fluffy and easy to manage.

You can get mulsified cocoanut oil at most any drug store. It is very cheap and a few ounces is enough to last everyone in the family for months.

Bloodly Despot Of Russian Red Terror

STOCKHOLM, Sept. 25.—The most awful figure of the Russian Red Terror, the man with the most murder on his soul, is the present extraordinary commissioner against the counter-revolution and sabotage, a dapper little blonde Lett named Peters, who has lived in England so long that he speaks Russian with an English accent.

He was known and liked by most of the American correspondents and writers who have been in Russia under the Bolsheviki because he seemed more cultured than the rest. Few had occasion to arouse in him his fierce class-hatred. They did not know the mean, crouched little man with the pale eyes filled with venom who now sits in the Kremlin and signs away daily the lives of scores of men he never saw.

Let anyone be declared a counter revolutionary by a member of the Soviet, however, and Peters orders him shot, often without sending him before that other fanatic, Krylenko, president of the revolutionary tribunal

I have known Peters more than a year, and found him kindly and considerate until I asked him to help get a foreign passport for a Russian girl in my employ who wished to visit her parents in England. He, then a minor commissary, agreed to help until he learned that her father was an officer when he refused.

I protested at the narrowness of this view, and said the girl was working for a living. He replied: "No matter; she belongs to a class we must destroy. We are fighting for our lives."

"But you are not afraid of the girl?" I asked.

'No matter," he replied; "they are all enemies of the working classes."

By the fixed fanatical look in his face, I saw that further protest was only labelling me a counter-revolutionary. A few minutes later, when the fit had passed, he turned to a young American woman correspondent who was present. 'Come and dine with me to-night," he said "I feel the need of a little western civilization. I want to talk about books and art. I am sick of the sight of these untidy revolutionary men."

Peters now has absolute power of life or death for anybody in Russia. A neutral who had lately on a number of occasions visited him to plead for the innocent people told me Peters had become a mere furious little animal; signing death warrants all day often not looking to see what he was signing. During one visit the neutral noticed he signed an order to shoot seventy-two officers without even glancing down at the paper.

Farmers' Paper Still in Future

TORONTO, Sept. 24.—The big new daily newspaper which, according to announcements made at the farmers' anti-conscription mass meeting last spring, is to give the views of the agricultural community the fair expression the existing journals have withheld, is till non-existent, but the project has not yet been dropped. The Farmers' Publishing Company, with an authorized capital of $500,000, has been incorporated under the Ontario Companies' Act for the avowed purpose of publishing a farmers' daily paper and a meeting will shortly be held to make definite plans for a start. It is stated that several proposals for taking over and remodeling existing publications have been considered, but the men back of the project are not ready to reveal their plans, though it is announced that the publication will be a daily newspaper. One of the main difficulties, it is said, is the shortage of money. While a considerable sum has been secured in $25 stock subscriptions, it falls short of being sufficient to finance a daily, and a further stock-selling effort must be made.

The provisional directors are farmers: John Zimmerman, John Zimmerman Fraser, J. N. Kernighan, A. A. Powers, George A. Brodie and J. J. Morrison, the latter being secretary-treasurer of the United Farmers of Ontario.

THREE YEARS MORE OF WAR.

"My object here is to endeavor to warn my countrymen that there is NO PROSPECT OF THE EARLY COLLAPSE OF GERMANY, and that there is much to justify those who believe that THE WAR WILL LAST AT LEAST THREE YEARS MORE." Such is the text of an article written by Lord Rothermere and published in the Montreal Standard. Lord Rothermere does not believe that any revolution will occur in Germany, and says that the German army will be fed even if the people starve.

There are no peace prospects in sight for the Hohenzollerns which would make the Kaiser willing to stop fighting—he must continue fighting for his life and his throne, for the Allies have sworn to destroy every last vestige of his dearest fetish, German Kultur and German Militarism and strip him of every possible chance of ever again becoming a menace to the peace and liberty of the world.

Lord Rothermere urges that war effort be speeded up to the highest notch, taking it for granted that the war will last at least three years more under present conditions. He suggests that the British should draft one million colored men for the army, that drastic steps be taken to restrict aliens and render them harmless, that civilian control of the army must be completely restored and the war office given a complete shaking up with reorganization upon business lines with the elimination of red tape. The army should be combed out, at the back of the front, as it has never before been combed, says Lord Rothermere, who claims that while British General Headquarters clamors for reinforcements there are still numbers of Grade 1 men far from the fighting line. No such state of affairs exists behind the French lines, says the writer.

Lord Rothermere may be regarded as an alarmist, but is it not a fact that most people are building their hopes upon an early cessation of hostilities upon the possibility of revolutions in enemy countries? Is not that a week reed to lean upon? Better far adopt Lord Rothermere's formula and dig into the war on the principle that it is going to last at least three years more—then if complete victory comes earlier it will be largely on account of the extraordinary exertions put forth by the Allies. The example of the United States can very well be emulated by Great Britain and every ounce of energy exerted and every last man utilized to obtain a speedy decision, or to fight a long-drawn out war.

There should be no slackening of war effort anywhere, from the firing line to the firesides—even the knitting should be speeded up—for there is danger that the glorious victories of the past few weeks will create a feeling that the wár is so nearly over that a general easing up can take place. No warrant exists for any such feeling. The enemy is still in France and Belgium and the war has yet to be carried to the heart of Germany. While we know that final victory is sure to be ours we do not know from any certain knowledge of present conditions that the war will not last another year or another three years. When the winter closes down the enemy will have another ally to aid them in defensive fighting and give them breathing space to repair their shattered forces and the period favorable for offensive fighting is rapidly drawing to a close for this year. In the meantime it is well to speed up all war effort and patriotic undertakings and support loyally and without question every request of the Government of the day for conservation and thrift—save money, save gasoline, save anything and everything which will contribute ever so little to the great efforts of our soldier boys to save our souls alive and protect mankind from the slavery of the Butcher of Berlin.

A CASE FOR FEDERAL INQUIRY.

A sinister story is published by the Huntingdon Gleaner. Early this month fire destroyed the barns of David Wilson, an old settler of Chrysostone, Que., wiping out not only the fruit of his season's labor in saving his crops, but the savings of his lifetime, as represented in his buildings and stock. Regarding this affair, the Huntingdon Gleaner makes the following comment:

"David Wilson is a quiet, respectable man who gives offence to nobody, who knows of no personal enemy, so that the motive of the fellow who set the match that has wrought him such grievous loss can have been none other than that, his neighbors believe, namely, resentment at his having allowed a company of the King's soldiers to pitch their tents on his farm. He has suffered for permitting what no farmer could refuse, that is, giving the use, for a brief period, of a field on the riverside to men in khaki. Shall he be penalized for that? It is the duty of the Federal Government to indemnify him for the loss suffered in doing it a favor. If it does not do so, then it is for the loyal people of the district to do what belongs to the military authorities. Our loyal population has put up with much. They have spared their choicest sons to fight Britain's battles. There is mourning among them over the wounded and the dead and they are mocked and jeered at for their sacrifices. Are they going to stand and see a decent farmer robbed of his property by a gang of slackers—of fellows who will not fight, but sneak in the woods and seek revenge on those who would have them do their duty?"

Now this is a most serious charge to make. We presume the Huntingdon Gleaner would not make such a charge without good grounds. It certainly is a case for investigation by the Federal authorities, and if it is found there are good grounds for the suspicion, then no effort or expense should be spared in finding the criminals and bringing them to their just punishment for what, if proved, is nothing less than treason.

.·. CRISP COMMENT .·.

Big Business demands the taxation of Victory Bonds. For the love of Mike leave us something that the tax collector cannot get his hooks on!

Large consumers of coal have no doubt secured all the fuel they need for the winter, but what about the citizens whose fuel requirements are comparatively small and who generally buy their coal in small quantities? It is up to the civic authorities to care for these citizens and it is possible now to provide for their wants in the coal line. Later on coal will be scarce and more expensive. The first essential is to find out how much coal will actually be needed to prevent suffering.

OTHER VIEWS

London Free Press.

There will be some differences of opinion concerning the compliment that is paid to London in the decision of the Laurier Liberals to hold in this city what is termed an organization meeting. The fact that London is selected for this meeting may relate to our central position, and as such be regarded upon all hands as a subject for congratulation. Or it may be that London was chosen because this city gained a prominence in the general election as the centre of the Laurier campaign in English-speaking Canada, in which latter event we believe the great majority of our citizens will not esteem highly the fixing of the choice upon London. The heart of the people of this city is as sound as that of any other community in its loyalty to the men at the front. If we were divided in the balloting, it was because of the mischievous of partizanship introduced to save the situation for the anti-conscriptionists. Probably thousands of Liberals who voted for the Laurier candidate did so in the confident belief that notwithstanding their votes the country would send back to Parliament a sufficient number of men to insure the immediate reinforcement of the Canadian forces in France by the only means by which this might be accomplished, namely, by conscription. And it would be a grave mistake upon the part of the Laurierites to place any further tax upon the loyalty of these London Liberals.

Sphagnum Moss.

Port Arthur News-Chronicle.

Word is received that a car load of sphagnum moss has been collected at Prince Rupert and is being sent east for use as an aseptic dressing in army medical work.

It would be worth while to investigate the possibility of securing supplies of sphagnum moss from this district. Moss of this variety is to be found in abundance all through the woods of the north country of Ontario, and samples ought to be collected and sent to the officials of the Red Cross, so that, if the moss has the virtues required, the long haul from Prince Rupert might be avoided.

Unless there is some special property in the Prince Rupert moss not possessed by the Ontario variety, there need be no necessity for going so far afield for the Red Cross supply.

Red Michael's Bereavement.

Toronto Telegram.

Pieces of silver played no part in Michael Clark's denial of a leadership which for long years he had followed with a devotion not always deserved. Before a union, based on barter and trade, upon juggling and jockeying, upon fifty-fifty and C.O.D., was formed to prove that "the two great parties" could present an unbroken front to the foe, before patriotism was purchased from politicians on a "cost plus" basis, the Liberal member for Red Deer had made his choice. When the conscription issue arose he gave his support to the Government without asking a quotation of terms from its leader; he quit Laurier for the simple and straightforward reason that he had a bigger obligation to the Canadian soldiers overseas. He faced the issue like a man, he became historic because he was human.

Three of his sons heard a sterner call of duty; they answered as behooved sons of Red Michael. Corpl. Clark, his eldest born, has laid down his life.

In these days when sympathy is a worn thing and condolence a commonplace there is yet experienced far beyond his own immediate circle a feeling akin to personal bereavement over the loss that has come upon Red Michael of Red Deer.

A Laugh or Two

He Answered by the Card.

The magistrate started a vigorous questioning, which the prisoner took very calmly.

"What is your occupation, my man?" asked the judge.

"I'm a bus driver," was the reply.

"Ha, you mean you are a driver of horses, attached thereto?"

"Yes, sir."

"You are charged with hitting this man on the face," his honor went on. "Did you do it?"

"Certainly not, sir," replied the prisoner.

"What did you do, then?"

"I hit him on the nasal organ attached thereto."

The Needy.

She—I can't get a new hat because the children need new shoes.

He—In the same boat.

She—Why, you have no children.

He—No, but I can't get a new suit because my auto needs new tires.

Ahem!

"Singular, isn't it?"

"What is singular, Brother Bones?"

"How few men boast of the size of their incomes these days!"

A Real Possession.

He was showing his friends through his new home.

They had looked at his pictures and his books.

His golf cups were on display and he had also flashed a few medals he had won on the athletic fields.

"Now," said he, "I want you to see my choicest possession," and he led them into the cellar, where he permitted them for a few minutes to gaze with envy upon his pile of hard coal.

His Compromise.

"I tried to make John give up playing poker during the war."

"Did he do it?"

"No, but we compromised. He agreed that he would give up losing at poker."

Old-Fashioned.

"Guess I'll never get so I can do it gracefully."

"What?"

"Offer a cigarette to a young woman when I take out the case to get one for myself."

A Lost Dinner.

"How unfortunate. My dinner is spoiled."

"What's the matter?"

"The Riches can't come."

"That's all right. The other guests will be here, won't they?"

"Yes, but I just invited the other guests to let them know that we were people whom the Riches would visit."

Solid Ivory.

The "retreat specialist" had better watch out or someone will be calling him a Boehn-head.

Turkey Pressing Hard For Peace

LONDON, Sept. 25—A despatch to the Daily News from Zurich says:

"The conference at Berlin of the German and Austrian Ambassadors to Turkey, the Grand Vizier and other Turkish statesmen, is of great importance. The official suggestion that the conference was summoned to discuss frontier ratifications between Turkey and Bulgaria cannot be taken seriously.

"Turkey is pressing hard for peace, although it is possible such pressure is merely a form of bluff mean to exact concessions from Germany and likely to subdue if the concessions are granted."

The Poet's Corner

"THAT'S MY BOY."

When the news came home of his first fine fight,
Where the boys "lit into 'em" left and right,
And scored in the battle's blazing track,
Where the hardest work was to "hold 'em back."
When the news came home, of all words we said
(Prouder than any written or read)
Hers told the story of still, deep joy—
"That's my boy!"

We knew how it was when she let him go—
(For all that the mothers hide it so)—
Knew when he answered, quick to the call,
That the one woman was giving all!
Dreams of battle were in her eyes,
But he didn't go under rainy skies,
No time for tears—where they cheered for joy:
"That's my boy!"

Lord, send the good news over the foam
To the waiting woman whose love makes "home."
And send them safe to the hearts again
That are fighting the battles among men,
In the glory-light of the Victory Day,
While the heart of the nation thrills with joy:
"That's my boy!"

Lenine Baiting Russian Masses

Forty to Fifty Executions Daily —Carrying Class War To Villages

STOCKHOLM, Sept. 25.—The Red Terror is reaching a vast scale. In the provinces of Russia hundreds of obscure murders are daily instigated from Moscow, where Lenine is trying to 'carry class war into the villages." The Moscow official organs are printing from 40 to 50 provincial executions daily.

It is difficult to believe this, so I will only show the state of terror by extracts from the few Bolshevik papers that happen to reach Stockholm. They are mostly confiscated on the Russian frontier. The Petrograd Pravda of September 10, under the title "The Red Terror in this city. All counter-Extraordinary Commission is taking the necessary measures to institute Red Terror in this city. All counter-revolutionists are being shot, among them many wealthy peasants."

Five Grand Dukes Marked

The Petrograd Communa of the same date, prints this: "At Briansk on September 5, nine were shot. At Murom 12 were shot for circulating rumors about Lenine's death."

The Petrograd papers all print in their editions of September 7 to 10, a column each day of lists of hostages, all officers, under the title, "The Answer to the White Terror—Continuation of the Second List of the Extraordinary Commission. The second list alone contains thousands of names, among them those of five Grand Dukes. It is announced that all will be executed if another attempt is made against the Commissary. As other attempts are bound to be made, these are as good as dead now.

BUY FURS

Remember last WINTER'S CHILLY BLASTS, and the fuel shortage, and supply your needs of protection NOW. Do not be misled by the elusive hope that the prices of FURS will decrease after the War. Prices are steadily on the increase and the demand for FURS never so great as it is today. Why pay HIGH PRICES for INFERIOR cloth goods, the increase on which exceeds that of Furs? Our present stock of skins and manufactured Furs have been bought for Eight months, come early and secure YOURS. Did you ever consider the decidedly INFERIOR cloth goods, with the high prices they demand, in comparison with the Superior wearing qualities of FURS and their comparatively low prices?

Shortage of Wool is the cause of the former and INCREASED EFFICIENCY OF TREATMENT of FURS the cause of the other. Consult us further.

"Best Investment I Have Ever Made"

Contractor Wouldn't Take Five Hundred Dollars For Good Tanlac Did Him

"I just want to say right here that I wouldn't take five hundred dollars for the good that first bottle of Tanlac did me, for I feel like it has given me a new lease on life," said C. E. Nelson, a contracting carpenter living at 7728 63rd Ave., Southeast, Portland, Ore., recently.

'About four months ago," he continued, 'I lost my appetite, and my stomach got all out of order. What little I did manage to eat would sour and form gas, which would cramp and pain me until I could hardly stand it. Then my kidneys went back on me, and my back hurt so bad I couldn't find a comfortable position. They said I had rheumatism or 'lumbago,' then my right leg, below the knee, got to hurting me, and at timesI couldn't stand on my feet or get up when down. I was constipated all the time and suffered a great deal with headache. Nobody knows how I really did suffer because I just can't describe it, and as nothing seemed to do me any good I had become discouraged about my condition.

'I finally sent down and got a bottle of Tanlac, as I had read so much about it, and it was about the best investment I ever made. My appetite came bounding back after my first few doses and by the time my second bottle was gone, my stomach trouble was almost gone,too. I am now eating any and everything I want and it don't hurt me the least bit, and m kidneys and back are greatly improved. At the time I started on Tanlac I had to use crutches in order to get about, but I don't need them now at all, and have thrown them aside. I have gained several pounds in weight, and can just feel myself getting stronger every day. I have gone back to work already and I never lose an opportunity to speak a good word for Tanlac."

"Tanlac is sold in Belleville by Ostrom's Drug Store, in Trenton by J. H. Dickey, in Deseronto by W. J. Malley, in Stirling by J. S. Morton, in Frankford by W. J. Lattimer, in Madoc by J. Will Vince, in Marysville by T. . McAlpine, in Ormsby by Jas. Campbell and in Thomasburg by J. H. Blakely."

In And About The City

THE SOLDIERS' CHRISTMAS

An extra added attraction during the presentation of "Have a Heart" at Griffin's last evening was the taking up of a collection from the audience between the acts for Christmas gifts for the boys "over there." The collection was under the auspices of the Quinte Chapter, Daughters of the Empire, and the collectors were the girls of the company, while Joseph Keno, ("Henry") the chief laughprovoker of the play, appeared before the curtain and in a humorous way speeded up the shower of small change which will help to add brightness to many a soldiers Christmas in the war zone. The collection was a distinct success.

ARMY AND NAVY VETERANS

A branch of the Army and Navy Veterans Association of Canada is being organized in Belleville by Capt. Mouck of Kingston, chief organizer for Eastern Canada. Capt. Mouck is meeting success in his canvass for members who will include veterans of the present war, South Africa, Riel Rebellion and Fenian Raid. It is proposed to secure club rooms for the organization to be open at all times to members. The object of the association of Army and Navy Veterans is to care for the soldier and his dependents. One of the first charter members to sign the roll in Belleville was Mr. Alexander Foxton, 49 Herkimer street, over eighty years of age, who is a Fenian Raid veteran. The society is incorporated by Act of Parliament and the patrons include the King and Queen, H. R. H. the Duke of Connaught, His Excellency the Right Honorable the Duke of Devonshire, K. C., C. C. M. G., C. C. U. O., P. C., and Lord Aberdeen.

TOLLS INCREASED.

The new schedule of tolls on the Bay bridge is in force, fifteen cents being charged for each automobile crossing one way and ten cents for each passenger. If passage both ways is paid a reduction is accorded to ten cents for the car and five cents for each passenger for the return trip.

$84.02 THEATRE COLLECTION

Through the courtesy of Mr. Forhan Manager of Griffin's Opera House, and the "Have a Heart Company," and the liberality of the audience a collection taken up during last night's performance realized the sum of $84.02 for the Quinte Chapter I. O. D. E., which will be used for the comforts of our boys overseas.

PATRIOTIC EXHIBITION.

Miss Anna Ponton of this city is singing both afternoon and evening on both days in the armouries. Napanee certainly sets a public-spirited example of enterprise.

CAUGHT FOUR 'LUNGE

A party of fishermen inspired by the fifty-one pound 'lunge recently landed by Sam Bongard and the thirty-two pounder of William Kelleher, went forth to fish yesterday piloted by Champion Fisherman Bongard, who knows the haunts of the finny tribes. The neighborhood of Mosquito Bay was visited and a splendid catch made including four nice specimens of maskinonge, the largest weighing nineteen pounds, besides other varieties of fish. The party comprised Messrs. Harry Ackerman, C. M. Reid, Spence Clarke, Jim Mouck and Sam Bongard.

The Montague light opera singers is another high class attraction booked for the Y.M.C.A. Star Course. The exceptionally attractive list of entertainment arranged for should make the advance sale of course tickets very easy for the ladies.

SCRAPER ARRESTED

An English bull dog and a fox terrier became involved in an argument on Front street to-day which was interrupted by the police, Chief Newton succeeding in separating the dogs before much damage was done to either. The bull dog was adjudged the agressor by the bystanders and not having a tag nor visible owner was taken to the police station to be called for.

FRENCH TAKE OFFENSIVE ON THE ASIAGO PLATEAU

ROME, Sept. 24.—On the Asiago plateau, on the Italian mountain front, French troops in a local attack have destroyed and damaged the Austrian defensive systems east of Mont Sisemol, says the War Office official announcement. The French captured 150 prisoners and five machine guns.

Canadian women are right behind the Canadian troops in the trenches. Women nurses are now installed in hospitals 8 miles in the rear of the actual fighting line.

Many of our Canadian women are unable to take up the duties of nursing at the front, but they should know how to take care of their own at home and for this purpose no better book was ever printed than the Medical Adviser—a book containing 1,008 pages, and bound in cloth, with chapters on First Aid, Bandaging and care of Fractures, Taking care of the Sick, Physiology, Hygiene, Mother and Babe, which can be had at most drug stores, or send 50 cents to Dr. Pierce, Courtwright St., Bridgeburg, Ont.

The women at home, who are worn out, should take that reliable temperance, herbal tonic, Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription.

Woodstock, Ont.—"For womanly ailments I have found Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription to be excellent. It strengthened and built me up several years ago when I was suffering with a chronic trouble and it also proved to be a splendid tonic during expectancy. I take great pleasure in recommending Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription to all sufferers from woman's weakness."

—Mrs. Annie Strickler, 21 Arthur St.

COATS—WILMOT

St. Thomas Church, picturesque and beautiful, in its rugged vineclad masonry and handsome interior was the scene of an interesting event this afternoon at 2.30 when the nuptials of a popular officer of the Royal Air Force and one of Belleville's fairest daughters took place; one of the most interesting social events which has ever taken place in this city, being solemnized with every token of future happiness for the principals, under a sunny sky and in surroundings fragrant with beautiful flowers and blessed with the kindly thoughts of a host of well-wishers that the popular young aviation officer and his charming bride may enjoy many happy years together.

"Happy the bride that the sun shines on" is a saying upon which much reliance is placed by the young people, and thrice happy must Miss Audrey Gretchen Wilmot have been as she approached the altar under every favorable auspice of fine weather and good wishes.

The groom, Capt. John Alexander Coats, of the R.A.F., is a son of William A. Coats, Esq. of Skelmorlie Castle, Scotland, and the bride the eldest daughter of the late Mr. Charles Wilmot and Mrs. Wilmot, Avondale, Belleville. She is also a granddaughter o the late Mr. S. S. Wilmot of Newcastle Ontario, who was for some time the Commissioner of Fisheries for Ontario.

The Church of St. Thomas was very tastefully decorated with beautiful flowers, autumn leaves and palms, with pink and white roses on the altar and many friends of the bridal couple witnessed the ceremony.

As the bride, leaning on the arm of her mother, by whom she was given away, entered the church, the wedding march was played by Prof. Wheatley, organist of the chruch. At the chancel they were met by the groom and the officiating clergyman, Rev. Archdeacon Beamish. The bride looked handsome in a travelling suit of Pekin blue, trimmed with seal, with seal furs to match. She wore a black hat trimmed with uncurled ostrich feathers. She also wore a corsage bouquet of white roses.

The bridesmaid was Miss Gwendolyn Wilmot, sister of the bride, who was attired in a becoming gown of black satin trimmed with plush and wearing a French hat of taupe plush appropriately trimmed. She wore a corsage bouquet of American Beauty roses. Mrs. Wilmot carried a bouquet of orchids.

Lieut. Basil Durant, of the R.A.F., New York, was groomsman.

The ushers were Major Meredith of Newcastle; Capt. Parsons, of Camp Mohawk; and Lieut. Clairmont Carroll, of this city, recently returned from France on leave.

While the register was being signed an appropriate selection was rendered on the organ by Prof. Wheatley.

At the conclusion of the ceremony the bridal party and immediate relatives, with a few invited friends, repaired to the residence of the bride's mother where a dainty wedding repast was partaken of. Later in the day Capt. and Mrs. Coats left by auto for Toronto, New York and other points of interest. For the duration of the war they will make their home in Toronto, after which they anticipate residing in Scotland.

The interior of the home and especially the dining hall was tastefully decorated with cut flowers and potted plants.

The groom's gift to the bride was a handsome gold mesh bag, to the bridesmaid a pin set in diamonds and pearls. The groomsman was also remembered by a suitable gift.

The invited guests were Mr. and Mrs. Duncan Galbraith, and the Misses Galbraith, of Newcastle; Mr. and Mrs. Deburke Simpson, of Bowmanvile; Mrs. John Black of Winnipeg; Capt Parsons, R.A.F., Rathbun camp; Major Meredith, R.A.F., Rathbun camp; Capt. Mathers, R.A.F, Beamsville camp; Col. and Mrs. E. D. O'Flynn; Mr. and Mrs. S. R. Burrows, and Miss Aileen Jenkins, of Belleville.

The bride was the recipient of a large number of beautiful and costly gifts.

The Intelligencer unites with the numerous friends of Capt. and Mrs. Coats in wishing them every happiness and prosperity in their journey through life.

PETTEM—COLE.

A pretty autumn wedding was quietly solemnized at the Church of St. John the Baptist, Norway, on the morning of Tuesday, 24th September, when Ada Elizabeth, daughter of the late Thomas Cole, was united in marriage with the Rev. Harry R. Pettem, of Bancroft, Ont., youngest son of Mr. and Mrs. Thos. Pettem, of Lyn, Ont. The officiating clergymen were the Right Rev. E. J. Bidwell, Lord Bishop of Ontario, and the Rev. A. S. Madill, rector of St. John's Church, Norway, Ont. Music suitable to the occasion was rendered by Mr. R. G. Stapells, uncle of the bride. The bride was given away by her brother, A. W. Cole, of Woodstock. Miss Alma Crate, acted as bridesmaid, while the Rev. Robert Axon supported the groom. During the signing of the register Mrs. E. Sargent gave a charming rendition of "Oh, Promise Me." After the ceremony the guests were received in the private suite of the Walker House, where the wedding breakfast was served, followed by the customary toasts and speeches. Later the Rev. and Mrs. Pettem left for their home in Bancroft. The bride wore a sand-colored broadcloth suit, with hat to match, and carried pink and white roses. The bridesmaid wore a silk costume, with black velvet and tulle hat, and carried red roses. The guest included the Lord Bishop of Ontario the Rev. A. S. Madill, Miss Madill Mr. A. H. Young, of Trinity College Mr. Harold Heath of Trinity; Mr. and Mrs. R. G. Stapells, Mr. and Mrs. R D. Elsey, Miss Pearl Elsey, Mr. S. J Cole, and Mr. A. F. Cole, of South River, and Miss Grace Smith.

Growing Deaf With Head Noises Try This

If you are growing hard of hearing and fear Catarrhal Deafness or if you have roaring, rumbling, hissing noises in your ears go to your druggist and get 1 ounce of Parmint (double strength), and add to it ¼ pint of hot water and a little granulated sugar. Take 1 tablespoonful four times a day.

This will often bring relief from the distressing head noises. Clogged nostrils should open, breathing become easy and the mucus stop dropping into the throat. It is easy to prepare, costs little and is pleasant to take. Anyone who is threatened with Catarrhal Deafness or who has head noises should give this prescription a trial.

Toronto Cadet Drowned in Lake

Tragic Airplane Accident at Beamsville R. A. F. Training Camp

TORONTO, Sept. 25.—With but another week of training to undergo before securing his commission as a flying officer, Cadet S. Nightingale, of the R. A. F., met his death in an airplane accident at Beamsville last evening. According to the message received by his father at 717 Carlaw Avenue, the cadet came down in the lake and was drowned, his body not being recovered.

Cadet Nightingale joined the R. A. F. last November, and trained at Borden, Texas and Camp Mohawk grounds. A crash at the latter camp, in which he sustained severe, though not serious injuries, interrupted his training for a time, but in another week he would have been ready to go overseas.

FARMER CONFESSES FORGERY FINED $200 AND COSTS

St. Thomas, Ont., Sept. 25.—Peter Johnson, a well-known farmer of West Lorne, appeared before Judge Colter, and changing his former plea of "not guilty," to one of "guilty" on the charge of forging the name of Dr. Webster, the village weigh clerk, to weight certificates, was fined $200 and all the costs involved in the case, which has been pending since last December, when the offence occurred. His Honor granted leniency to the prisoner on the application of barrister C. St. Clair Leitch, counsel for the accused, who drew attention to the fact that his client had suffered a severe accident some years ago when struck by a train, which was believed to have affected him mentally.

PARLIAMENT MEETS AFTER NEW YEAR.

Meantime Ministers Will Devote Some Time to Public Discussions.

Ottawa, Sept. 25.—With no likelihood of a session of Parliament till after New Year's—perhaps not till considerably later—members of the Cabinet, it is understood, will meantime devote some time to a public discussion of what the Union Government has accomplished. The Union Ministry was returned to power by a great majority last December, but since then, outside of Parliament, public speaking by Ministers has been rare. Mr. Rowell is an exception.

It is represented that the same bond cannot be maintained in the country in support of a Union Government as in the case of a party Ministry unless there is a close touch between leaders and followers.

45,000 PRISONERS AND 265 GUNS WHEN ALLENBY SMASHED THE TURKS

THOUSANDS MORE MAY BE CUT OFF

TURKS FLEEING TO THE NORTH MAY BE CUT OFF BY ALLENBY'S MEN—TURK RETREAT A DEMORALIZED ROUT—DESTRUCTION OF TURKISH UNITS COMPLETE—NOT A VESTIGE LEFT OF SEVENTH AND EIGHTH OTTOMAN ARMIES—BRITISH APPROACHING AMMAN—ARAB CAVALRY CHASING RETREATING TURKS.

Special Despatches to The Intelligencer, Canadian Press, Limited.

PARIS, Sept. 26.—(Noon)—The number of Turkish prisoners taken in Palestine now aggregate 42,000, according to the latest advices reaching Paris.

FOURTH TURKISH ARMY SURROUNDED.

LONDON, Sept. 26.—The Fourth Turkish Army on the Palestine front is virtually surrounded in the region east of the Jordan River and faces annihilation by General Allenby's forces, today's advices show. The total of prisoners already taken was increased today to forty-five thousand. The annihilation of the Fourth Army, now hoped for, would complete the cleaning up of Turkish forces in Palestine, accounting for about eighty thousand.

LONDON, Sept. 26—More than 40,000 prisoners and 265 guns have been taken by the British in their successful offensive in Palestine, it was officially announced yesterday afternoon.

The British forces operating east of the Jordan apparently are in a favorable position to cut off the Turks retreating north along the Hedjas Railway. The British are now approaching Amman on that railway.

Aerial forces are pressing the retreating enemy northward from Ma'An. (Ma'An is on the Hedjas Railway southeast of the Dead Sea. Amman is 120 miles to the north.)

LONDON, Sept. 25—Detailed reports of operations in Palestine lag considerably behind events there. The lattest reports from the accredited British correspondent, sent from Nabulus on Monday, emphasize the astonishing thoroughness of the destruction of the 7th and 8th Turkish armies.

Remnant of these forces which succeeded in crossing the Jordon River are isloated and are almost entirely without war material.

"There has been no more complete victory in history," the correspondent says. "Groups of men have been found sitting under white flags awaiting the acceptance of their surrender."

Aside from more than 260 guns captured, vast quantities of ammunition are lying evreywhere, some munition depot covering acres of ground. It is reported that if the Turks try to raise new armies to replace those destroyed they must call on Germany to supply every gun and every instrument of war, as the Turks manufacture only small arm ammunition.

The correspondent describes a remarkable spectacle around Balata, This aera was strewn with wreckage of the retreat. Here alone the British capturd 87 cannon, thousands of motor lorrir and field kitchens, water carts and a mass of other impedimenta. This material mingled with thousands of bodies of Turks, Germans and horses, blocks the roads. Much of the destruction was wrought by airplanes which swooped down upon the retreating columns and dropped bombs from a low altitude until whole columns became vast, broken masses of men. Those who escaped wounds or death fled to the hills, abandoning verything Many of these were captured by cavalry, while others ought refuge in the British lines.

High Prices Paid For Raw Furs

Red Fox Brought $47.50 And Fisher Pelt About $80 Each

NEW YORK, Sept. 26.—Close to $700,000 worth of raw furs were sold here at the opening of the annual Fall auction. German-owned furs, totalling in value about $30,000, were also sold for the account of Allen Property Custodian A. Mitchell Palmer.

The collections offered during the day were smaller than set at the Spring sales, but, inspite of this, most of the varieties sold brought higher totals than at that time. Cross fox and fisher were most actively bid for, with red fox also wanted. The fisher pelts brought $80, while the best cross fox sold for $127 and the best red fox at $47.50.

The top price paid for Russian sable was $150, and for bue fox $133. Compared with the average prices at the April sale, wolverines and red foxes showed no change, but these percentage advances were recorded by the other furs sold: Fisher, $20; blue fox, $15; cross fox, $25, and Australian fox $10.

Kingston Child Burned To Death

KINGSTON, Sept. 26—Annie Pearl McCoy, aged three years and ten months, died Tuesday evening as a result of burns received while playing with matches, while her mother was in the yard of their home, 243 Lower Patrick Street.

Tuesday morning Mrs. McCoy was doing some work in the yard at her home, and her little daughter in some manner lighted some of them, and while playing with the matches got fire to her clothes. Her cries brought her mother to the house, and she once extinguished the burning clothes but not before the child had been very badly burned. The child was immediately rushed to the Hotel Dieu and Dr. MacCallum was called. He did everything in his power to relieve the suffering of the unfortunate little tot, but the burns were so severe that the child died Tuesday evening at seven o'clock.

The father, Mr. Daniel McCoy, recently returned from the front.

Useful Gains By Canadians In Inchy Area

British Headquarters, Sept. 25—(Canadian Press Despatch from Reuter's Limited)—The Canadians have scored a useful success by pushing forward southeast of Inchy to a depth of one hundred and fifty yards on a front of two-thirds of a mile.

This fighting has only local significance and is designed to take over the deep fringe of outposts protecting the Hindenburg line.

As a result of yesterday's fighting in the neighborhood of St. Quentin we advanced our line to well east of the hamlet of St. Helene, which lies between Bilenglise and Pontruet, so that here we are within rifle range of the St. Quentin canal, which the enemy has utilized as part of the Hindenburg system.

During the night much desultory fighting has taken place, in which we captured a trench of some importance near the right flank and 100 prisoners. Everywhere evidence was found that the Germans had suffered heavy losses.

The French had a most successful day, securing all their objectives with one exception and here the fighting is still progressing. Over five hundred prisoners were taken. The weather is improving.

Owing to the long range bombardment of Metz preparations are being made for the evacuation of that city and others.

The whole of the Monastir-Prilep Gradsko Road is now in the hands of the Allies and the Bulgar army is cut into groups retreating through the mountains.

Allied Wins Proof Of Unity on Great Scale

Foch's Strategy Not Confined Merely to The West Front Observes German Paper

LONDON, Sept. 25—The allied successes in France, Macedonia and Palestine have led the Cologne Gazette to anxious consideration regarding future military developments.

"We must do Foch the justice to say he is apparently beginning to obtain on a big scale that strategical unity he has already obtained on French soil," says this leading German newspaper, and after reviewing the situation in the various threatres of war, it concedes that the prosecution from all sides of an offensive against the alliance and the superiority of the allies in men and material as conditions favoring them, it continues:

"We have already pointed out the enviable secrecy observed in the manufacture of armored tanks, and the training of their crews, which now number not thousands, but tens of thousands. To these must be added the increase in the number of guns, mine throwers, flame projectors, machine guns, gas and fog ammunition and airplanes of all kinds. No proof is necessary that German industry is unable to accomplish this in similar quantities.

"Especially as regard the armored tanks, there is no doubt that the numerical superiority is on the side of the enemy, and that he is bound to utilize it to the utmost.

Americans Have "Flying Circus"

Has 137 Clean-Cut Victories to Its Credit at the Present Time

With the American Army on the Lorraine Front, Sept. 27—"The American Flying Circus" is the nickname by which the most notable American aviaton pursuit group will be known in future, after having enhanced its record, notably during the St. Mihiel offensive.

This group, consisting of several pursuit squadrons, is the oldest in the service. It did inestimable work in the Marne fighting, and it may be added that it has fully established its claim to the title by thirty-four clean-cut victories, with minimum losses, during the past ten days.

One hundred and thirty-seven officialy confirmed victories had been credited to the group last night, with seventeen more confirmations under way, and perhaps twice as many victories achieved but not countable officially because of the strict American and French method of reckoning as victories only those planes and balloons seen to have been destroyed by witnesses other than the aviators taking part in their destruction.

Daylight Murder On Toronto Street

TORONTO, Sept. 26—Jealousy over a woman is said by the police to have led to the shooting of Givanmi Della Salantro, an Italian living at 111 Elm Street, on the street almsto opposite the above address at six o'clock yesterday morning. The man wanted by the police on suspicion of having committed the deed is Leonard Demeo. Salantro died in the General Hospital a few hours later.

The alleged cause of the shooting is one, Bertha Bellamore. It is understood that this woman lived with Demeo at Montreal for three years before coming to Toronto with him a year ago. Recently Demeo slod the house on Elm street to Salantro, but instead of going elsewhere with Demeo the Bellamore woman is said to have stayed with Salantro. This is said to have aroused the Latin fury of Demeo, and the two are said to have met at the corner of Edward and Elizabeth streets, adjacent to the Elm street house.

Here Demeo is alleged by the police to have waited for his prey to come out of the house and to have shot him three times with a revolver. There were many pople on the street at the time, but they were so horror-stricken at the scene that they were powerless to interfere.

Salantro's assailant escaped .

DRIVE ON CHAMPAGNE FRONT

OVER THE TOP WENT THE POILUS AND YANKS THIS MORNING IN NEW DRIVE ON CHAMPAGNE FRONT—NO REST FOR THE HUNS, SHATTERED BY FOCH'S CONTINUOUS SLEDGE HAMMER BLOWS ON ALL FRONTS—BRITISH TROOPS CAPTURE STRONG ENEMY POSITIONS NORTHWEST OF ST. QUENTIN—GERMAN COUNTER-ATTACKS REPULSED—BRITISH LINE ON FLANDERS FRONT AGAIN ADVANCED—PRISONERS CAPTURED BY BRITISH.

Special Despatches to The Intelligencer, Canadian Press, Limited.

PARIS, Sept. 26.—(Official)—French and American troops attacked this morning on the Champagne front at 5 o'clock. A French attack was launched in Champagne in co-operation with the American army, which is attacking further to the east.

CAPTURED ENEMY STRONG POINTS.

LONDON, Sept. 26.—(Official)—Northwest of St. Quentin British troops continued pressure against the German defences and have captured enemy strong points in the neighborhood of Seleney and Gricourt Field Marshal Haig reports today.

Renewed German attacks north of the Aisne have been repulsed. At one point where the Germans gained a footing on French positions they were ejected by counter attacks.

The Flanders British line has likewise been advanced, progress having been made in the sector north of LaBassee.

COUNTER-ATTACKS REPULSED.

The text of the statement says that local operations were continued successfully yesterday afternoon and during the night. Northwest of St. Quentin English troops progressed and captured a strongly defended enemy position in the neighborhood of Selency and Gricourt, together with a number of prisoners.

In addition to the counter-attacks already reported which were lost by the enemy yesterday northwest of Fayet, his troops twice attacked positions north of Gricourt, but these attacks were unsuccessful.

A successful minor operation was carried out yesterday by English troops northwest of LaBassee, as a result of which the line was advanced and over 100 prisoners were taken. A counter attack was launched by the enemy in this locality during the night and was repulsed and several prisoners were left in our hands.

Bulgaria Invaded By Allied Troops Fifth Bulgarian Army Cut Off

Special Despatch to The Intelligencer, Canadian Press, Limited.

SALONIKI, Sept. 26.—Bulgaria has been invaded by allied troops. British troops entered Bulgarian territory opposite Kosturine, about six miles south of Strumnitza, the chief enemy base in this region.

Cummunications Cut.

LONDON, Sept. 26.—Reports in official quarters here indicate that the Prilep-Veles road has been cut at Izvo, isolating the Fifth Bulgarian Army from its main line of communication and placing it in a precarious position. The first army is on the allied left.

Bulgar Hospital Burned.

At Troyatsi, the Bulgarians burned their depots and the fires spread to a hospital with the result that more than one hundred Bulgarian wounded perished. A horse hospital was also destroyed in the fire.

Says He Helped To Kill Russian Monk

AN ATLANTIC PORT, Sept. 26.—Claiming to be one of five men who shot and killed Gregory Rasputin, the Russian monk and "power behind the Russian throne," Dr. Stanislaus de Lazevert, formerly a colonel in the Russian army arrived here on a British liner. Lazevert said the other four assailants, all of whom are now dead, were Grand Duke Dimitri Pavlowski; another Grand Duke whom he declined to name; M. Touchotone, Captain of the Guard and M. Pourischkcoatch.

Dr. de Lazevert, who said he came to America to see President Wilson in connection with the Siberian situation, declared he had not been permitted to tell his story in the past, but added that he would tell it fully after his visit to Washington.

According to his statement, the monk, concerning whose slaying many stories have been told, was killed by the five men from Dr. de Lazevert's automobile. The shooting took place just outside the palace of Grand Duke Pavlowski, he said.

After the assassination, Dr. de Lazevert added, a price was put on his head and he and his wife fled to Russia leaving behind with relatives their three-months-old boy.

The assassination of Rasputin, who was declared to have exercised a great influence upon the late Emperor Nicholas through the Empress Alexandra Alix, was first reported in July, 1914. At that time it was said that a woman had stabbed him. A number of stories were circulated later as to the manner of the monk's death, in which the names of a number of aristocrats were involved.

"We Have Passed The Crest" Says Generalissimo Foch

LONDON, Sept. 26—Marshal Foch, commander-in-chief of the allied armies on the western front, who dislikes interviews, and rarely grants one, received a few newspapermen at his headquarters on Tuesday. Among those received was the correspondent of The Telegraph, who thus records the Marshal's brief utterances, made in an ejaculatory manner with the use of hardly any verbs.

"The British army is better than ever. It fights better than ever. All of its losses have been made good and it is a more splendid army than it has been before.

"The Americans are splendid and are wonderfully gallant in the field. Ten thousand fresh Americans arrive in France every day.

"The French army is the same good old army that it was in 1914. No more is to be said:

"The enemy is shaken up and shaken down, but it is still holding out. You must not think we shall get to the Rhine immediately. We have passed the crest and are now going down hill. If we gather impetus as we go, like a rolling ball, so much the better."

With a few cordial words the Marshal then dismissed his interviewers and resumed his work on his maps.

Heavy Fine And Jail For Sheviki

TORONTO, Sept. 26—Evidence establishing beyond doubt the prevalence amongst Toronto foreign element of Bolsheviki doctrines, was given by Detective Mohrer when the case against Contantin Gohink, charged under an order-in-council, was concluded in Police Court. The accused for five years a resident in Canada was the secretary of one of the city's Bolsheviki organizations, and it was upon certain allegedly seditious literature found in his possession that the charge was based.

Magistrate Kingsford imposed a sentence of three years in the Kingston Penitentiary, and in addition, a fine of $1,000.

In the event of the fine not being paid, six months will be added to the accused's sentence.

Carring The War Into Germany

Appeal in Sister Mary Basil Cas

Special Despatch to The Intelligencer, Canadian Press, Limited.

TORONTO, Sept. 26.—On behalf of Archbishop Spratt, of Kingston, Dr. Phelan, Police Constable Naylor, and Mother Superior Mary Francis Regis, an appeal argument was commenced at Osgoode Hall today before the first divisional court, against a verdict for twenty-four thousand dollars damages granted by a jury last fall in Kingston to Sister Mary Basil in connection with an attempt to place the plaintiff in an insane asylum.

HUNS EASTERN DREAM BECOMES NIGHTMARE

NEW YORK, Sept. 26—The British victory in Palestine is the leading feature in the morning newspapers. It is generally characterised as a brilliant feat or arms. The Sun editorially says the victory marks the end of the elaborately planned Bagdad route to India and the east.

The Tribune again urges a declaration of war by the United States against Turkey and Bulgaria.

The World says the British success is one of the decisive victories of the war.

The Times concludes that with the allied fleets controlling the sea, a surprise landing near Aleppo would complete the ruin of the Turkish forces in Syria.

Fifty-three hostile airplanes were accounted for on Tuesday, thirty-three of these were destroyed and twenty-two driven down out of control.

A Really "Model Fair" Was That Held At Picton

A really model district fair was that which was held at Picton last week. It was entertaining without being vulgar; it was educational without being a bore, and it performed to the full one of the most important functions of a fall fair in serving as a place of meeting for people from the whole country for miles around. How well this latter function was filled is shown by the fact that in the forenoon of the second day $1,400 was taken in at the main gate in admission fees. Last year the attendance reached 17,000, and this record would have ben surpassed in 1918 had rain not largely spoiled the second day.

Opened With a Parade

Picton Fair is a three-day affair, and there is something worth while for every hour of the three days. This year the opening event was a parade, led by the band of the 48th Highlanders, and including Boy Scouts, Cadets and school children from every township and urban centre in Prince Edward county, 1,500 in all.

The parade was followed by drill by Cadets, a chorus by the children, and sports. The closing event of the fair was a parade, led by the Highlanders' Band, of all the prize animals.

Special features there were in abundance, among the rest being a baby show; prize for single turnout driven by a lady; for quickest hitched horse and once around the track; bankers' special for general purpose farmers' team; special for single drivers, with quality and action counting for 60 per cent. and speed 40 per cent.

"Community Farming" a Reality

But the point of chief interest in Picton Fair was the large number of entries in the usual farm competitions and the evidence given by these entries of the extent to which "community farming" has been developed in the locality. Prince Edward county agriculture has been developed mainly along three lines: dairying, truck crops, fruit growing. Naturally, therefore, dairy cattle predominated in the live stock entries, but the extent of the lead in this respect was surprising—70 Holsteins, 20 Jerseys and only one herd of Shorthorns. In junior yearling Holstein heifers alone there was a line-up of eleven, and in senior caves of 14. Ad quality was not sacrificed to numbers. There was not a mean-looking animal in the dairy barn, and there were a number of animals of really outstanding quality.

Where dairying is largely developed hogs are usually found as an important side line, and it was so here, there being 50 hogs on exhibition—Yorks, Tams and Berks—four of the last being entered in the bacon competition.

Percheon Alone in Heavies

The Bay of Quinte district has always been rather strong on light horses, and even the auto has not destroyed the popularity of these. This fact was demonstrated by the number of entries in standard bred and carriage roadster classes.

The local fancy for quick action in horses was shown even in the heavy classes. While there were six entries in aged Percheron stallions, there was not a single entry in Clydes or Shires.

Magnificent School Exhibits

The principal feature in the main building was the exhibit by school children of the county. This exhibit is an annual affair, and is in charge of Mr. J. E. Benson, School Inspector for the county. The form of competition is changed every year and is made to fit in with the year's work in school. The list of competitions covered seven pages on the prize list of this year's fair, and the entries themseves occupied about a third of the space in the large building in which they were shown.

The floral display, while not as large as that at the Canadian National, was quite as good.

The importance of the dairy interest in the county was emphasized again in the display of over thirty cheese at the end of the main building and of home dairy butter at the opposite end, the latter being shown in a refrigerator along with dressed poultry. As an encouragement for exhibitors in cheese a silver cup is offered for the maker who attains the highest score for two years. The cup was won by Elmbrook factory in 1916, by Bloomfield factory last year, and by Mountain View factory this year.

The field crop exhibits were shown in a tent. These included sheaves from the standing field crop competition; some corn 14 feet in height, and realy excellent tomatoes, roots, onions etc

A Really Educational Exhibit

One of the most useful exhibits, from an educational standpoint, was that made by the Dominion Experimental Farms This included models of movable hog cabins, fed rack for sheep, dipping vats and self feeders for hogs. This feature is a particularly valuable one, and should be found at one fair at least in each county in the province.

What is the cause of the marked success attained by Picton Fair? There are several causes in this case. In the first place, there is probably no other district in the Province where there is a closer connection between town and country than that which exists between Picton and Prince Edward county. The manufacturing industries of the town are mainly those which serve the surrounding country in canning the perishable products of the field; the trading interests of the town depend wholly on the neighboring farm trade; there is no line, social or other, dividing the two. Hence, there is real union of effort behind such ennterprise as the fall fair.

Good Board—Extra Good Secretary

The board of managers for the fair is also well chosen—a third business men of the town, including a couple of bankers, and two-thirds farmers. This board sees that the fair is kept clean. Not only are no fakirs allowed, but even venders of ice cream, etc., are required to keep their voices down to the level maintained in an ordinary place of business. But, after all this, there is still something more to be said—some other reason to be given for the phenomenal success attained by Picton Fair. Secretary MacVannel says this "something" is the 48th Highlanders' Band, which was engaged this year for the fifth successive season. My own opinion is that the "something" is in MacVannel himself. After all the mainspring in any fair is the Secretary or Manager, and in Alex. P. MacVannel Picton Fair has one Manager among hundreds, and one who is as modest as he is capable.—Ahmik, in Toronto Globe.

ENID BENNETT AND WILLIAM RUSSELL AT GRIFFIN'S TONIGHT

Two well known stars appear at Griffin's to-night; the first William Russell, in what might be termed a serious comedy photoplay. In this picture Russell has the part of Jimmie Page, a good-hearted youth, but a wild one. He is always in trouble, and his father considers him a dead loss. Now it so happens that Jimmie is in love with Marah, the pretty daughter of Franklin P. Manning, a millionaire, who also considers Jimmie a drawback. Marah insists that Jimmie is the finest young fellow in the world. In due time the wedding day arrived and Jimmie starts for the church, only to be stalled by a flat tire, and while he is waiting repairs he sees two thugs attacking a man in an alley He goes to the rescue and is involved in a fierce fight, is locked up for resisting the police, and of course arrives late at the church. From now on the story gets real interesting and no one can forcast the finish ;suffice it is to say that there has not been a more funny-serious comic picture screened at Griffin's todate.

Another fine picture is "The Keys of the Righteous," with that ever popular photoplay star, Enid Bennett; this time is a some what different story which takes place in the north woods of Wisconsin, Miss Bennett playing the part of Mary Manning, living with her grandfather, an invalid mother and and an uncle. She well knows the story of how she came to the cabin of her grandfather just before she was born, and if it had not been for the goodness of heart of her uncle her mother would have been driven out into the woods. Into this life of sorrow and pain she was born and from that time on she lived the life of a "Babe of the woods," until she reaches her eighteenth birthday, when suddenly into her life fate sends one Tom Gale, a man known to the wodsman as a timber cruiser and from this point in the story the author has built a very interesting tale concerning the lives of Mary and Tom Gale, which will hold the spectator much as a good book holds the reader. The story is of the great outdoors with the Wisconsin woods used as a background, and for the lover of the woods and country the scenes in the picture "The Keys of the Righteous" cannot be excelled. There will be other good pictures that will complete this already excellent program of pictures.

Kindly Sympathy Of Army Chaplain

Mrs. McGlashon, wife of Sergt. McGlashon, caretaker of the Armories, is in receipt of the following sympathetic letter from the Chaplain of the the Battalion in which their son, Pte. David James McGlashon, was a member when he fell in action on August 11th:

France, Sept. 6, 1918

Dear Mrs. McGlashon:—

I am writing to assure you of the sincere sympathy of our Battalion with you in the death of your son, who was killed in action on August 11th. I should have written to you sooner, but I, myself, was wounded a few days later and have only now rejoined the battalion. He was with his machine gun section during the attack of a strong enemy post and was seen to fall by the platoon sergeant. This was near the village of Fouquescourt and I believe his body was subsequently buried there when the line of battle had advanced. Our men did splendid work in the fighting in front of Amiens and won back miles of France for the Allied cause, and in all the battle none fought better than the platoon to which your son belonged. battalion and I miss many familiar It was my favorite platoon in our faces in it to-day, but I cannot feel that those who have fallen are lost to us. Surely in God's more immediate presence where they now are they still can see how we "carry on," their love for us is still the same and in the Communion of Saints we all are one before God's throne of grace. May the knowledge of your son's self-sacrifice be a source of comfort to you.

In all sympathy, believe me dear Mrs. McGlashion, I am

Very faithfully yours,
A. H. PRIEST,
Chaplain.

ORIENTALS WERE HERE BEFORE COLUMBUS.

The Name Given to British Columbia By Them Was "Great Han," and Their Records Preserve Queer Tales of the Races That They Found on This Continent.

CHINA, which has claimed the invention of gunpowder and printing and roast pig and the compass, is said to have discovered America long before the time of Columbus. According to documents of another era, Chinese voyagers discovered Mexico and landed there, some time in 499 A.D.

The Chinese annals record that the Kingdom of Fu-Sang (which is thought to be Mexico) was situated to the east of the Middle Kingdom, twenty thousand Chinese miles to the southward of the Great Han (British Columbia). It took its name from the tree, fu-sang, from which its inhabitants obtained food, cloth, fibre and wood. In the same annals is described the Kingdom of the Woman, situated about one thousand Chinese miles south of Fu-Sang. And some seven thousand Chinese miles northeast of Japan was the land of the Marked Bodies, inhabited by men who were tatooed, and the Men with Dogs' Heads.

That the ancient Chinese had some knowledge of the American continent has been believed for a long time. In 1753 Philippe Bauche, a French writer, published a treatise in which he stated that the Chinese had established a colony on the Gulf of California in 458, calling the land Fu-Sang. In 1761 an eminent French scholar, M. de Guignes, published another treatise, in which he also referred to the Chinese discovery of America. Since that time scholars and investigators have argued the question pro and con. In 1885 a further word was said by Edward P. Vining in his "An Inglorious Columbus," in which he seems to have proved that the Land of Marked Bodies is the Aleutian Islands; the country of the Great Han, British Columbia; Fu-Sang, Mexico, and the Kingdom of Women, Central America.

Huei-Sen, a Chinese traveller, has left behind him the story of his fellow countryman's voyage to America. In the annals it is written:

"In the first year of the reign of the Tsi dynasty a shamahi (travelling priest) named Huei-Sen came to King-Chen from the land of Fu-Sang, relating the following narrative:

"Fu-Sang is situated twenty thousand li (Chinese miles) or more to the east of the country of the great Han (which also is situated east of the country of the middle Kingdom). It produced many fu-sang trees, whence comes its name. The leaves of the fu-sang are like those of the tree that the Chinese call tong. Its first shoots look like those of the bamboo. The inhabitants of the country eat them, as also the fruit, which is in the form of a pear, although of red color. From its bark thread is made, which they weave to make their clothing. They also make from it fine clothes and brocades. The houses in which they live are made of grass. They have neither fortress nor walled cities. They had a kind of writing, and they make paper from the bark of the fu-sang. They have no weapons, nor do they make war.

"The laws of the country ordain that there shall be two prisons, one of them in the north, and the other in the south. Those who commit offenses of little importance are confined in the prison of the south, but those who commit grave crimes are confined in the prison of the north. Those who are confined in the prison of the south may be pardoned while those in the prison of the north may not. The men and women in the prison of the north may marry, but their children become slaves, the boys at the age of eight and the girls at the age of nine.

"When a person of high rank commits a crime, the inhabitants of the country gather in a great assembly and judge him while seated at the bottom of an excavation. They hold a feast and a banquet in his presence, and may take leave of him as a dying man. If he is sentenced to death, they cover him with ashes. If his crime is of the first degree, only the criminal is punished. If of the second degree, his children and grandchildren are punished. If it is of the third degree, six generations are punished.

"The King of the country boasts the title of chief of the multitude. The nobles of the first category are the tuilu; those of the second category, the little tui-lu; those of the third category, the na-to-oba. When the king leaves his palace he moves preceded and followed by drums and trumpets. The color of his vestments changes according to the course of the years. The first and second year (of a cycle of ten), they are blue; the third and fourth, they are red; the fifth and sixth, they are yellow; the seventh and eighth, they are white; and the ninth and tenth, they are black.

"The oxen of Fu-Sang have enormous horns and can endure great burdens. The inhabitants keep their wealth in empty horns, some of which are twenty times as large as the common ones. Oxen, horses and deer are employed to draw the vehicles. The inhabitants of the country have herds of deer, just as the Chinese have herds of cattle. They make cheese from milk. They have a kind of red pear that keeps a year without rotting, and they also have tomatoes. In the country iron is not found, but copper is. Gold and silver have no value. In their markets there are neither taxes nor fixed prices.

"As to marriage, he who desires to marry a young woman constructs a house in front of the house in he cleans and waters the front of the house. If the maiden does not accept him then, he goes somewhere else, but if they please each other mutually the wedding is celebrated. The ceremonies are almost the same as those in the Middle Kingdom. When the father, the mother, the wife or the son dies, the relatives fast seven days; when the older brother dies, the younger brother, the older brother of the father, the younger brother of the father, an older sister or a younger sister, three days. They place on a pedestal an image that represents the person who has died, and they reverence and offer it libations morning and evening. They do not wear mourning.

"The prince who inherits the throne does not occupy himself with affairs of government until three years after his accession. In ancient times they were ignorant and they did not know the religion of Buddha, but in the reign of the dynasty of Sung, in the second year of the period called Taming, five men of the country of Ki-Pin, who were pi-q'iu, paid a visit to the people already mentioned and made known to them the laws of Buddha, his sacred books and his images. They taught the people the rules of the monastic life, and at last caused the redness of their customs to disappear."

The Kingdom of the Women was inhabited by a strange race, mostly of the gentler sex. They were very straight, pure white in color and covered with long hair. The women ruled the land. In the year 507 Chinese mariners were swept to the shore of the Land of the Women and were received hospitably. The women resembled those of the Middle Kingdom, but their language was unintelligible. Their clothes were of cotton and the houses of baked clay and circular in form, with very small doors.

The land of the Marked Bodies was inhabited by the tattooed beings, who lived in walled cities. They were hospitable. The king's residence was surrounded by "silver water" (quicksilver), over which water flowed when it rained.

The country of the Great Han was peopled by a gentle race, which carried no weapons and made no war. They enforced their laws by giving criminals over to the wild beasts.

That there is truth in the assertion of the Chinese chronicler is indicated by his description of the inhabitants and by the fact that the descendants of the peoples of whom he wrote bear strong evidence of having Chinese blood in their veins. Eskimos are of Mongolian origin. Mexican Indians, too, bear the stamp of the Chinese race.

Canada's Great Record.

Canada's contribution to the Red Cross is the greatest per capita in the world. The total contribution is $12,000,000 in cash and $15,000,000 in supplies. Of the cash contributions $7,000,000 was spent by the British Red Cross and $5,000,000 by the Canadian Red Cross. The total cash contribution of the British Red Cross is £11,250,000 from all sources. Of this amount Great Britain contributed £5,000,000, while the overseas Dominions, India, United States, and neutral countries contributed £6,250,000. Great Britain's contribution to the Red Cross is £5,000,000, compared with Canada's £2,500,000. Canada's contribution in supplies shows an even more favorable comparative record.

Company Farming Succeeds.

"Is it possible for groups of people in many of our cities, towns, and even villages to undertake some form of company-farming?" This question is being asked in a circular letter just issued by the Organization of Resources Committee of Ontario. The idea is to enlarge the activities from community gardening schemes to grain production on farm lands. Groups of business men and others in urban centres are urged to organize now in order to take over good vacant land in the neighborhood and get it ready for cultivation so that it may produce a 1919 crop. Company-farming operations are now being carried out with a great deal of success at St. Catharines, Sarnia, Windsor, Owen Sound, Weston and Oshawa. Citizens of every town are asked to get together and talk it over.

New Theory as to Oat Leaf "B."

After scores of editors and correspondents throughout Ontario have by majority opinion decided that this season's marking of the oat leaves with the letter "B" presages British victory, "A Sidney Farmer," in the Belleville Intelligencer," assumes to settle all speculation finally by stating that "many people never knew that the 'B' stands for blood, as our Saviour was crucified in an oatfield. It has nothing to do with Britain or the war."

V.C. for ex-Torontonian.

Lieut. George A. Trorey, a son of George E. Trorey, manager of Birks, Ltd., at Vancouver, who with his brother, J. J. Trorey, formerly lived in Toronto, has been recommended for the Victoria Cross, for valiantly refusing to abandon his men while severely wounded. He is now rated "missing" and supposed to be a wounded prisoner in the enemy's hands.

Nugget Starts Rush to Old Ground.

The finding of a $27 nugget recently on Leech river, 25 miles out of Victoria, B.C., has started a new rush to the placer diggings there, where $500,000 was washed up within three months in the early sixties. Platinum is also being found in the abandoned camp, once the scene of government in the colony of Vancouver Island, and now sells at $105 an ounce.

Board of Control Rule Unpopular.

A mass meeting of Halifax citizens has expressed its opinion in favor of the abolition of the Board of Control now governing that city and the restoration of the aldermanic board discarded some years ago.

Platinum Now Treated in B.C

To Vancouver City belongs the honor of installing the first plant in all Canada for the treatment of platinum, according to an announcement by G. A. Middleton, of the Dominion of Canada Assay Office, in Vancouver. Henceforth the rich Tulameen claims near Princeton which have been obliged to send the metal outside the province for treament will find a market close at home for the government officials are prepared to pay cash for the product of platinum claims.

Of such importance is platinum for war purposes that the United States government offices have recently made an apeal for jewelry set in platinum. The local office has announced that it will pay $105 per ounce for metal contained in ingots, scrap, sponge, etc., and a flat rate of $103 per troy ounce for metals of the platinum group contained in platinum in the unrefined state such as nuggets, placer platinum, etc. As an inducement to secure much of the business which has been going across the line, the office has offered to make no charge for determining the value of depposits.

With the arrival of a specially constructed furnace which has been delayed in transit, the plant which is now complete, is said to be the most up-to-date outfit on the continent. Included in the equipment are four fume cupboards, a large laboratory equipped with every known piece of apparatus used in the refining of platinum, as combined gas and electrical furnace and a set of scales which will record the smalest fraction of an ounce.

Fearless And Faithful Was This Soldier

Mrs. F. A. Carter has received the following letter from Major R. Vanderwater, officer commanding the battalion to which her husband was attached. Pte. Carter went overseas with the 155th Battalion from Belleville and was killed in action August 30, 1918:

Field, Sept. 5th, 1918

Mrs. F. A. Carter,
5 Boswell Street,
Belleville, Ont.

Dear Madam:—

It is with the deepest regret that I have to confirm the official notification of the death of your husband, No. 636069, Pte. H. E. Carter.

During the period of his connection with the Battalion he has always willingly and fearlessly performed any duty for which he was selected, and had in any other respect an excellent record.

His sacrifice of his life for the great cause for which we fight was a matter of great sorrow among his many friends here who join with me in the expression of sincere sympathy for you in your bereavement.

Yours in sympathy,

R. VANDERWATER, Major,
O.C., Canadian Infantry Battalion,
Eastern Ontario Regiment

OURS TO OBEY.

The second gasless Sunday was better observed in this vicinity than the first, and very few motor car parties were observed passing through Belleville on pleasure bent. While there may be difference of opinion as to the necessity and advisability of this method of saving gasoline, it is gratifying to know that so many people realize that in war time it is better to obey than to argue. The Ottawa Journal strikes the right note in the following editorial:

> Let us stand by the Government. It may be that some method of saving gasoline might be better than our voluntarily sacrificing pleasure riding for a few Sundays. But no other method is under way. A correspondent suggests "a card system" of permits. A card system couldn't be put into operation inside of three months, what with devising organization and getting all the registering and printing done. A saving in gasoline is best at once, not some months hence. Anyway, we don't believe a card system or any other device would be as sensible, if one came to argue it out, as the simple, clean-cut, equal-for-all stoppage of Sunday pleasure motoring. We don't believe it because we think the authorities who have made the present request have given the best possible thought to it beforehand.
> We decline to think that the authorities in Britain, and the fuel controller in the United States, and the fuel controller in Canada, are all fools. They all say that gasoline needs to be conserved. We think they are likely to know a darned sight more about that than any private citizen who writes to The Journal or any newspaper intimating that he does not think any real shortage exists. We prefer to think that the governing bodies who have prohibited the use of gasoline altogether in England by passenger cars except on official business, and who ask us in the United States and Canada to stop motoring on Sunday, have thought carefully and intelligently about the thing., and have good reasons back of their course.
> But no debate whether they have acted well or not should matter to any of us anyway. They have acted, and it is our business to follow. One thing is sure, that whether they are wise or not, gasoline will be saved if we follow their advice, and that no gasoline will be saved if we don't, because no other plan is going to be tried—unless, of course, most of us fail to act voluntarily, and so compel the Government to issue a compulsory order.
> So let us all cut out Sunday motoring for pleasure. Do your bit. It is a mighty small thing to ask of anyone, anyway, in comparison with what the people who are our allies in England and France and Italy are sacrificing, and even our new splendid whole-hearted, resolute friends in the United States.

SPRAINS AND BURNS AND GLORY.

Every one who is interested in winning the war knows perfectly well the magnificent manner in which women have filled the ranks vacated by men who have gone overseas. Every one is familiar with the fact that more work has been turned out by the women workers than by their predecessors and every one knows the uniform excellence of this output. But an interesting side-light is cast on this inspiring record by the report of the committee appointed to make a study of the health of munitions workers.

Investigation into the factors concerned in causing industrial accidents shows that women suffer twice as frequently as men from sprains and that in the fuse factory women are peculairly liable to wrist sprain because of the strength required to push the heavy levers on the lathes. In shell factories the women suffer from burns almost four times more frequently than men and these are chiefly from hot metal turnings. Both sprains and burns could be reducd in number by altering the machinery or protecting the hands. Evidently sprains and burns are accepted as necessary evils and are not made the excuse for abandoning the work. Women substitutes put pluckiness and grim determination into their patriotism, two things that are not often counted to their credit by women in sheltered lands.

.·. CRISP COMMENT .·.

The Tweed News says that "a beautiful girl is one who is pretty and doesn't know it." That's pretty good logic but what kind of a girl is it that doesn't know she's pretty. Beauty is only skin deep, perhaps, but a skinful of beauty is not allowed to remain unacquainted with that fact very long.

If Picton can have a fall fair fit to be classed with Toronto and Ottawa Exhibitions, why can not Belleville have one at least as good as Picton? The answer is easy, says a Prince Edward county man, "any community lacking the enterprise to abolish a toll bridge connecting the city with the richest agricultural section of Canada lacks the necessary "pep" to hold a faill fair worth going five miles to see." Think it over, ye business men and live wires generally, and ask yourselves why you have abdicated in favor of the "Let-well-enough-alones" and "stand-patters."

OUR SHARE IN THE WAR

STORY OF THE C.E.F. TOLD IN BRIEF.

How a Nation That Knew Nothing of the Art of Fighting Raised an Army to Aid the Motherland and to Assist In the Protection of the Democracy of the World.

ENLISTMENTS in the Canadian Expeditionary Force of all sorts from the outbreak of the war to June 30th, 1918, were 552,601. This number was diminished by wastage in Canada before sailing. The number who had actually gone overseas by June 30th, 1918, was 385,523.

The movement overseas by years has been as follows:

|---|---|
| Before Dec. 31st, 1914 .... | 30,999 |
| Calendar Year, 1915 ...... | 84,334 |
| Calendar Year, 1916 ...... | 165,553 |
| Calendar Year, 1917 ...... | 63,536 |
| Jan. 1st to June 30th, 1918 | 38,101 |

Of the foregoing 26,537 were recruited by the Military Service Act.

For all practical purposes Canada was without an army before war broke out. In the pre-war months of 1914 there was a permanent force of about 3,000 men, with no reserves; a lightly trained militia numbering about 60,000; and a confidential plan all ready in the army archives for the raising and sending to Europe of a Canadian contingent—if the menace of Germany materialized into a real danger.

All the world knows the story of how the first infantry division was raised and sent across the Atlantic in the early autumn of 1914. A second division appeared in France in September, 1915. The third division was formed in the first two months of 1916; the fourth joined the army in August, 1916, and numerous corps troops and line of communication units were added. In the late summer of 1916 the Canadian Army Corps had reached its full development with four divisions. A cavalry brigade appeared in France in 1915. Since then Canadian effort has been directed towards keeping the existing formation up to establishment.

Maintaining four divisions, corps troops and a cavalry brigade, in France, means that 125,000 seasoned men must be kept in the front line and lines of communication with around 25,000 more men at the advanced base for the purpose of keeping the fighting formations, line of communications, and auxiliary units up to strength. Early in 1918 the number of Canadians in France was near 150,000.

The foregoing outlines the composition of the first of the three main divisions of the present military organization of Canada. It is the Fighting Echelon.

The total casualties sustained by the Canadian Expeditionary Force up to 30th June, 1918, were 159,084. The details are:

|---|---|
| Killed in action ........... | 27,040 |
| Died of wounds ........... | 9,280 |
| Wounded ........... | 113,007 |
| Died of disease ........... | 2,259 |
| Prisoners of war ........... | 2,774 |
| Presumed dead ........... | 3,342 |
| Missing ........... | 384 |
| Total ........... | 159,084 |

Of the wounded and sick between 30,000 and 40,000 returned to France for further service. Between 50,000 and 60,000 have been returned to Canada, wounded, medically unfit, or otherwise unavailable.

By periods the casualties were:

|---|---|
| From beginning to Dec. 31st, 1915 ... | 14,495 |
| Calendar Year, 1916 ....... | 74,648 |
| Jan. 1st to June 30th, 1918.. | 14,043 |

In connection with these sad figures the battle honors won by Canadian soldiers may be given. Omitting all but specifically fighting decorations, the total is: Distinguished Service Order, 413; bar to Distinguished Service Order, 14; Military Cross, 1,368; bar to Military Cross, 59; mentioned in despatches, 1,547; Royal Red Cross, 1st class, 30; Royal Red Cross, 2nd class, 101.

The Second Echelon, in England, comprises the training, equipment, organizing and administering, hospital, evacuation and miscellaneous establishments. Its principal duties are:

(a) To receive recruits forwarded from Canada, and to organize, train and forward them to the advanced base in France.

(b) To harden, train and forward to the advanced base wounded and sick who recover sufficiently to be fit again to go to France.

(c) To return to Canada men who by reason of wounds, sickness or other causes, are unavailable for further service; or who are needed in Canada for instructional or other duties.

(d) To perform certain services in the United Kingdom, such as forestry operations.

(e) To carry on the hospital and other services necessary for (b) and (c).

The Third Echelon, in Canada, is occupied with the procuring of recruits, their equipment and preliminary organization, and their preliminary training. To it also are attached the troops needed for home service and for the instruction of recruits who are being prepared to go overseas. At present the troops engaged in home service number about 12,000 — including the men now garrisoning St. Lucia, W.I.

Large numbers of men have been furnished for the Allied cause outside the C. E. F. The Royal Air Force is a notable example. Military reasons forbid mentioning the actual number of men who have joined alike the Royal Air Force, and its predecessors the Royal Naval Air Service and the Royal Flying Corps. Canadian universities have given several hundred young men who have been given commissions in the Imperial army. The Royal Military College since the war began has furnished 152 officers to the Imperial army, 93 to the Canadian Permanent Force, and 84 to the Canadian Expeditionary Force. One in every four of the 900 cadets from the college who have been at the front have been decorated. Canada has also furnished several hundred doctors and veterinarians, 2,000 nurses and hundreds of motor drivers for the Imperial army. And 200 Canadian officers have been loaned to the United States for instructional purposes. Several thousands of Poles, Serbians and Montenegrins have been raised in Canada by the Military Department and sent overseas to fight with their compatriots.

There were in Canada on June 30th, 1918, Canadian Expeditionary Force troops to the number of 61,143; in addition to these there were 5,900 embarked but not yet sailed from Canada; the men in Canada were being sent overseas as rapidly as ships could be procured to transport them.—Lt.-Col. Vincent Massey.

FIRST BREAK IN CIRCUS.

One Member of Bishop's Squadron Reported Missing.

The first break in the happy comradeship of heroes in the fighting formation and mess room of the Bishop Circus has been made with the report that Lieut. Walter R. Henderson, an original member of this young but celebrated corps, is missing. Lieut. Henderson, R.A.F., was 21 years of age and a son of Mr. and Mrs. J. Henderson, of St. Catharines and Toronto.

The missing aviator was one of the Empire's great stunt flyers, and was attached to the new formation of Major W. A. Bishop, V.C., D.S.O. (with bar), M.C., D.F.C., after that world's champion of the air had seen him in a great competition which was graced by the presence of H.R.H. the Princess Louise. Earlier he had been engaged in piloting machines across the Channel.

That Major Bishop sought merit first of all in selecting the men for his supersquadron, which has swept the western aerial front this season, is evidenced by the career of Lieut. Henderson, whose exact fate is unfortunately unknown.

Enlisting in Toronto in the Mechanical Transport, Lieut. Henderson, then Driver Henderson, spent several months in the neighborhood of Albert in carrying munition to the guns. He was engaged in this work within six weeks of leaving his work as a munitions worker. Later he trained for the flying service in England and became very proficient in stunt work, although his duties in taking new planes to the hangars in France were prosaic enough.

Major Bishop was present at a great field day of the airmen to receive a bronze decoration as a tribute to his air triumphs when he took notice of Lieut. Henderson's skill in competition. Lieut. Henderson was one of a team of two Canadian aviators contesting for first place in the day's honors with two English flying men, the stunts being rather for the benefit of the royal guest and the crowd than for the premier aviator.

The new squadron commander picked his men then and there, and for the past three months Lieut. Henderson has been with the Bishop formation in France, from the very first until missing after the flight of July 15. The disquieting report was sent to his mother in St. Catharines. Hope is still held out that he has fallen safely into German hands, although no particulars have been secured by the parents.

Mr. Henderson, sr., was for a number of years connected with the Polson Iron Works in Toronto and is now superintendent of the McKinnon Dash Co., engaged in munition work. The son was educated at Bishop Ridley College, St. Catharines.

Enlists at 53; Says He's 39.

The July American Magazine has an article about "Foghorn" Macdonald who enlisted as a private in the Canadian forces at 53 and is now a major at 57. The author of the article says:

"By canoe for thirty-one days through the wilderness, by an old tub of a leaky steamboat, by whatever means of travel he could find, including his own feet, he made his way back to Winnipeg, only to find that the troops had left. All right! A machine gun company was being formed and he applied for that.

"The recruiting officer was a friend of his, had helped celebrate Foghorn's fifty-third birthday the previous January. But when in making out the papers he came to the question: 'How old are you?' and Foghorn whipped out, 'Thirty-nine!' he never batted an eyelash.

"Before his official cronies at Ottawa knew it, Macdonald was on his way to England—a private at fifty-three! Two years later he was a major; the only man, in the forces of the Allies, who has risen from the ranks to that grade in the present war."

Spooners Are a Nuisance.

A Windsor citizen writes to the Record of that city: "Would the young lady who lives on the right hand side of Elgin street be so kind as to stop in front of her own home and do her spooning there with the gentleman who brings her home late at night and spoons until two in the morning in a grey-topped automobile, as by so doing she will greatly oblige the residents in the locality, who will get a great deal more sleep."

A Generous Town.

The Town Council of Port Hope is giving a demonstration of municipal Samaritanism, having ordered a remission of fines collected for infractions of the town traffic by-law, explaining that it was passed for the education of the public, not for revenue.

Socks for Soldiers.

Mr. William Homulth, of Aylmer, enjoys the proud distinction of having completed his hundredth pair of hand-knitted socks for the boys in the trenches. He is an octogenarian.

Any Peace Now A German Victory

Bishop Fallon's Address to Canadian Club in London

LONDON, Ont., Sept. 26—A warning to Canadian to beware of peace advocates at this critical time was the feature of a brilliant address by Bishop M. F. Fallon of the Roman Catholic Diocese of London at a crowded session of the Canadian Club Tuesday evening.

His Lordship, who has recently returned from England, told a thrilling story of the activities of the Canadian troops as he observed them both in England and in France. In concluding he asserted that he is not aware whether or not there is any peace party in Canada, but he said there is one in England, a war-weary party, which is ready to listen to peace proposals.

"Against that party, whether in Canada or in any other allied country, it is the duty of every man to raise his voice of protest," declared the Bishop. "This is not time to talk peace. There can be no peace now. I want peace as much as anybody. There is not an officer or man in the trenches but who is longing for the day when he may once more turn his face toward home, but there is not one who does not feel that he must stay there until the task which he has undertaken has been done, and done so thoroughly that it shall never have to be done again. Any peace now is a German victory. Word must now go out from Canada, from the overseas Dominions, and from the Motherland itself, that the war must go on until justice is positively triumphant, and until wickedness and wrong have been cast into the dust. It will cost us something more in lives and money, but it will cost future generations of Canada incalculably more if we do not continue it."

The Bishop's deprecation of peace talk evoked a response leaving little doubt as to the whole-hearted sympathy of his auditors with the course he espoused.

THE CONQUEST OF THE BIBLE.

"So shall my word be that goeth out of my mouth: it shall not return to me void, but it shall accomplish that which I please, and it shall prosper in the thing whereto I sent it."—Isaiah lv:11.

This scripture forces upon us most conclusively that the Bible has come into the world to fulfil a divine purpose, and that the work of its dissemination will not be in vain. The faithful preacher or teacher has great encouragement to present it in all its fulness and never, in the fear of men, to "handle it deceitfully." If preaching of the word of God does not accomplish the design of the Almighty's mercy it will justify Him in the day of judgment by having left the unrepentent without excuse. The command is: "But thou, son of man, speak my word unto them, whether they shall hear, or whether they shall forebear . . . yet shall they know that there has been a prophet among them."

The faithful presentation of Bible truth can not be overrated, though the most valuable results are often hidden from our eyes and senses.

Not now! But a day is coming! The appointed season is not yet! The laborers must wait for the appointed time. That day shall be to the praise and glory of both the Master and the servant. Man may sow the seed, but cannot appoint the harvest. You remember the Saviour's explanation of His first parable: "The seed is the word of God." And of the parable of the tares He said: "He that soweth the good seed is the Son of Man: the field is the world."

May we not take for granted that the good seed in the world is the Bible? It is to us the "word of God." Jesus Christ is the "incarnate word," and is the power ever operating by His Spirit through the written or printed word, for the accomplishing of the Almighty Father's purpose for which both a Saviour and a Bible were sent into the world. At the advent of our Lord the prospect of His successful accomplishment of the purpose of His coming was, from a human viewpoint, not very promising.

The murderous Herod bathed his sword in the blood of the nation's infants in order to destroy Him. His poverty and obscurity bespoke a life of failure. But at the time appointed weakness was made strong. The world's Redeemer had power to rend the heavens and shake the earth. I think we can discover that the sending of the incarnate word and the written word into the world were similar.

Though the Bible was a finished work of revelation for centuries, yet the real "going forth" into the world may be considered contemporary with the birth and progress of the British and Foreign Bible Society. When this society was born the prospects of its success were analogous to the prospects of the Bethlehem Babe becoming the spoiler of the kingdoms, and the Redeemer of the world.

There is an historic record of March 7th, 1804 from which I will quote a few brief paragraphs. "A society was formed for the circulation of the Holy Scriptures, whose object is grand and simple: to promote the circulation of the Holy Scriptures in the principal living tongues.

"In such an object all sincere Christians may cordially unite. The society looks, therefore, with confidence for liberal support, both at home and abroad. In pursuance of the broad and extensive scale on which the society is formed, and which commenced with a very liberal subscription. Three secretaries of different denominations have been appointed."

Then follows the names of the officers elected. Let me remind you of the troubled condition of England when this venture was made, that we may see again God "choosing the weak things of this world to confound the things which are mighty." When this society was born with high and noble purpose, and yet dependent upon voluntary gifts for support, involving large expenditure, the national outlook could hardly have been worse, or more gloomy and menacing. It was a time of great financial distress. In the city of London that morning three per cent. consols stood 56¼. That evening in the House of Commons Mr. Fox and Mr. Canning took part in a heated debate on ::The insurrection in Ireland." Only a few weeks previous Napoleon had proclaimed himself Emperor of the French, and his grand army, for the invasion of England, lay encamped within sight of the Kentish coast.

Gathering from different records of the time, England seemed on the brink of ruin. "Her trade," says one, "was half paralyzed." Says another: "Our poor were half starving."

Wordsworth, the poet, had just written the sonnet which begins:

"These times touch moneyed worldling with dismay;
Even rich men, brave by nature, taint
the air
With words of apprehension and despair."

It was in this climax of distress, amid wars and rumors of war, the fathers of the Bible Society had faith to launch their new venture, which undertook the publishing among all nations the gospel of peace! Not only so, but to incur the enormous expense of translating the scriptures into the vernacular of the different nationalities.

Looking at the immensity of the operations of the Bible Society since its small and troublesome beginning, amid perplexity and peril, surely we cannot but believe that it was born of God and protected by Him as were the person, word and work of Christ the Lord.

To speak of the "conquest of the Bible in the world" involves also a recognition of the conquest of the Bible Society and its ever-widening territorial invasion, and its speaking in new language, till it may well be said: "There is no speech nor language where their voice is not heard."

In our own fair Canada the society is doing a grand and much-needed work. During the past decade the total immigration to this young country has been well over two million—over forty per cent. of which are foreigners, non-English speaking people. This polyglot addition to the population is not because these foreigners love Canada, nor are they obsessed with the desire to become loyal citizens. They have been drawn to this country as honey-gathering bees are drawn to the clover fields. They have come from various European countries, worn, torn, bruised and degraded by a method of oppression past free men's comprehension. Forced militarism, taxation and grinding serfdom have soured them against all civilizing discipline, law and order. These people are not bound together by either blood or tradition. Their tendency is to segregate into little communities and to introduce alien customs, which are not in harmony with Canadian laws and our free institutions. No loyal Canadian can rid himself of the obligation to do what he can to assimilate this heterogenous mass into a homogenous Christian nation. For the accomplishing of this worthy desideratum we believe that there is no greater agency than the Bible Society, with its numerous colporteurs and Bible women who go among these people distributing the word of God in their own language and teaching it where possible.

The society is thus making conquest over degradation, superstition and sin in contributing to the development of a common language and a common religion. There is now circulating in Canada among these people of strange ways and speech, diglot books in about forty different languages, and the scriptures in one hundred and ten translations. The society joins hands with all religious institutions to give to all nationalities constituting the population of Canada the word of Canada's God in their own tongues. Thus does the Bible Society go forth as a sower sowing good seed. "What the harvest be?" Let us all be interested to the extent of our ability in the "conquest of the Bible, ever remembering that there are opposing forces, terrible for evil, at work. There is another sower and another sort of seed. See Matt. xiii:37-43.

I appeal for your sympathetic interest in behalf of the Belleville Branch of the Bible Society in Canada.

Allenby DefeatedA rmy of 100,000 Turks

LONDON, Sept. 25.—Gen. Allenby's remarkable success in Palestine was achieved against a total enemy strength of 100,000 Turks, according to unofficial despatches reaching London Figures as to the number of men in the Turkish army in the Holy Land have hitherto referred merely to rifle strength. The Turkish forces held positions of exceptional strength with three lines of well dug trenches and abundant artillery and machine gun protection The Turks were completely surprised, according to Reuter's correspondent in Palestine. The mobility of the allied forces and the boldness of Gen. Allenby's plan of hitting at the strongest point in the Turkish defences added to the success. The rush of the British cavalry completed the enemy's discomfiture.

German Commander's Narrow Escape

The Turkish reserves consisted of troops which recently arrived from the Caucasus.

Field Marshal Liman Von Sanders, comamnder of the Turkish forces, and his staff escaped capture by only six hours.

Not the least remarkable feature of Gen. Allenby's success lies in the reorganization he effected in his forces since the German offensive on the western front last March necessitated the withdrawal to France of a part of his army.

NO MORE HARD BEDS FOR THE SOLDIERS

TORONTO, Sept. 26—Never again will Toronto troops have to sleep on hard board bunks during winter training. The soldiers at the Exhibition camp are to have beds with real springes to snooze on. It is stated that 5,000 iron beds have been ordered to be installed in Exhibition camp for the troops coming back from Niagara at the end of October. The board bunks are to be abolished. The beds will be fitted with metal standards and shaped up like bunks with one on top of the other, with rubber sheets and woolen blankets as a mattress. In the winter of 1914-15 the men slept on mattresses, but owing to the outbreak of spinal meningitis, Col. Marlow abolished mattress ticks the following winter, and since then the men have slept on board bunks with blankets to ease the hard spots. At the summer camps the men sleep on the floor of their tents.

REORGANIZE ARTILLERY

The system of artillery training in Canada is undergoing reorganization at Ottawa and it is stated that hereafter the artillery units will be operaed on the same lines as the depot battalions. Mother is Well Now

Your Noise Does Not Disturb Me Any More—It is a Pleasure to Hear You Romp and Play.

"IT is like a dream now to think of the long, weary months I spent in nervous helplessness. Some days I would be cheered by feeling better, but only to slip back again, and to be more than ever discouraged.

"I had always been very active. Had a wide acquaintance and did much entertaining. In addition to helping in whatever was going on at the church, there was Red Cross work to be done, and all the time I had my little family to look after and could not get help.

"I suppose I tried to do too much, for I got so I could not sleep at nights and always felt tired out in the mornings. Then I would have headaches and did not seem to care for my meals.

"Instead of the usual ambition and energy I found myself putting off the duties of the day. I got behind with the housework, and this worried me.

"I did not think that I was sick, but only tired. However, the time came when I did not get up in the morning. I simply could not. The doctor came and said, "Nervous Prostration." It seems I had kept on the go until the nervous system was wrung dry of all nerve force.

"Then came the long, weary weeks, and weeks dragged into months, without finding much improvement. I was completely discouraged and almost devoid of hope.

"But one day a friend told me of her experience with Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, and she was so sure that this treatment would do me good that I decided to give it a chance.

"I need scarcely say that there were some dark, discouraging days after beginning the use of the Nerve Food, but as my appetite and digestion improved I felt that I was gradually getting back the old-time vigor. Sleep became more natural and refreshing. The dark days passed and I began to take a more cheerful view of the future. Then I began to plan what I would do when I got around again. The house must be decorated and the children brought home, for I had to send them to my sister's on account of the way their noise disturbed me.

"Now I feel that I am entirely well again, and without hesitation give the credit to Dr. Chase's Nerve Food. I cannot tell you the pleasure it gives me to be restored to my husband and children after the long period of helplessness."

C.P.R. Directors in the West

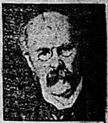
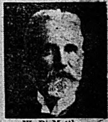
R. B. Angus,

Lord Shaughnessy, President C. P. R.



Sir Edmund Osler,

Sir Herbelt Holt,



W. D. Matthews,

C. R. Hosmer,

Sir Augustus Nanton,

Senator F. L. Beique,

E. W. Beatty, K.C.

ALTHOUGH Montreal is the headquarters of the C. P. R., the interests of the railway lie just as much in the West as in the East, if not more so, and the train which carries the President on his annual inspection trip always carries with it a strong contingent of directors. The names of the directors who accompanied Lord Shaughnessy this year give an indication of the ramifications of the interests which are allied to the great transportation system, for these directors are all powerful also in the world of banks, of light, heat and power, or pulp and paper, of steel, or foundries, of bridge building, of the milling industry, of textiles, of shipping and of insurance. They are representative not of Montreal only, but comprise also leading citizens of Toronto, Winnipeg and Victoria, B.C., and the French-Canadian element is admirably represented in Senator Beique, the President of the Banque d'Hochelaga. The Senator was not actually a traveller on the special directors' train this year, for he was already in Vancouver on a trip of his own when that train left for the West. Mr. R. B. Angus is the doyen of the directors, but in spite of his years he is one of the most active brains controlling the destinies of the C. P. R. At the age of eighty-four he went on a trip round the world, and since that he has been twice across the continent. The great Angus Shops at Montreal are named after him, and the present outstanding position of the Bank of Montreal in the world's finance is due in no small degree to his foresight and ability. Sir Herbert Holt was identified with the early construction of the C. P. R., so far back as 1883. The Royal Bank under his presidency has made phenomenal progress, while he is the moving spirit behind some of the most important power development schemes in Canada. Mr. C. R. Hosmer began life as a telegraph operator, and at one time was manager of the C. P. R. Telegraphs. He still is closely identified with several telegraph and cable companies, but in 1899 extended his interests, so that he is now president of the Ogilvie Flour Mills and is a director of the Bank of Montreal, the Royal Trust Company, the Dominion Textile Company, the Laurentide Paper Company, and many other such representative Canadian undertakings.

Mr. W. D. Matthews is one of the leading financiers of Toronto. He was long engaged in the grain trade, and has been president of the Toronto Corn Exchange and chairman of the Eastern Grain Standard Board. As president of the great Consolidated Mining and Smelting Company of Trail, B.C., he is particularly interested now in mining development.

Sir Edmund Osler is also a citizen of Toronto. As president of the Dominion Bank and head of one of the most powerful brokerage firms in Canada, his financial advice is of great value to the C. P. R.

Sir Augustus Nanton came to Winnipeg in 1884 and remained there to become the leading financial authority in the West. Like Sir Herbert Holt, he has taken a strong interest in the Canadian Patriotic Fund.

Mr. E. W. Beatty, K.C., in addition to being a director is also the legal vice-president of the railway.

The advent of so distinguished a party of visitors naturally created great interest at the cities where the special train made a stop. The itinerary selected has enabled these directors to see not only the country traversed by the Main Line of the C. P. R., but also the more northern areas of the three Prairie Provinces. In this way they have obtained a comprehensive idea of crop conditions in Canada's great West—conditions which are on the whole very satisfactory in spite of rather unfavorable climatic conditions in early summer.

Plan For Next Victory Loan

Most Efficient and Economical Method Settled Upon, Says Minister

OTTAWA, Sept. 26—The Minister of of Finance states that the plan adopted for the campaign for the coming Victory Loan has been discussed exhaustively by representatives of the Victory Loan organization from all parts of Canada, and settled upon as being the most efficient and economical method of handling the loan. A final analysis of the last Veitory Loan shows that the actual cost of floating it, including payment of all organization expenses, advertising, remuneration to bond and stock houses and commissions to canvassers, was not much more over half of one per cent., or, to be exact, .64 per cent. The other expenses were for the services of the chartered banks in receiving subscriptions, keeping account delivering securities at their branches some thirty-five hundred in number throughout Canada, over a period of many months, and paying interest upon coupons, free of exchange during the entire period of the life of the bonds, and for the additional cost of Finance, where a temporary staff numbering more than six hundred were engaged for months in connection with the work of the loan.

BOND AND STOCK EXPERTS

Following the course adpoted last year, the Minister of Finance has practically commandeered for the purposes of the loan the services of the bond and stock exexhange houses of Canada. This insures the active co-operation of a large body of experts, who, through their experience in selling securities, and the placing power which their organations have developed, have rendered invaluable assistance in the floating of all previous war loans. Experts from these investment houses have been already engaged for several weeks in the extensive preliminary work or organization and the preparation of publicity propaganda. From September 7 until early in December all investment houses are precluded from handling new issues and carrying on their usual business, in order that their full energies may be devoted to the work of the loan.

REIMBURSEMENT PROVIDED FOR

Such recognized bond dealers and stock brokers as may be employed on the loan under authority of the Dominion Executive Committee will be reimbursed on the basis of their operating expenses for the time and to the extent that they are actually engaged in the work. The amounts of such payments will be wholly in the discretion of the Minister of Finance, whose decision in each case will be final and conclusive.

COMMISSIONS TO CANVASSERS

In regard to official caanvassers duly pointed under the authority of the several Provincial Victory Loan Executive Committees, they are to be paid commission at the same rates as in the last Victory Loan. This commission does not apply to subscriptions Committee, comprising amount of $25,000 and over, in respect of which no commission is to be paid. In a country of such size and limited population as Canada and with the scarcity of help in all lines of activity, the engagement of skilled canvassers is regarded as indispensable to the success of the loan.

Where it is found necessary to engage other paid workers to assist in organization the remuneration will be on a basis of the remuneration which they would be receiving in their regular occupations. Those who, however, continue to receive their salaries or whose ordinary business continues as usual, will not be paid.

The Minister recognizes that there was a great deal of fine voluntary effort on the part of leading citizens throughout the country connected with the last loan, and he fells that such effort will be available also for the coming loan.

All evidence up to the present indicates a most widespread desire to co-operate in making th loan a complete success.

Winter Rhubarb Can be Produced Cheaply and Conveniently.

Turnips Grown on Dairy Farm Best Fed to Dry Cows, Young Stock and Pigs.

(Contributed by Ontario Department of Agriculture, Toronto.)

SWEET cider is unfermented apple juice, and hard cider is fermented apple juice. To get the juice the apples are either crushed or ground in a cider mill and the juice expressed from the pulp.

The fermentation of apple juice, or any other fruit juice, is brought about by the development in it of yeast. Yeast cells are microscopic plants invisible to the naked eye and are always present on the surface of fruit. When the fruit is crushed to get the juice many of these yeast cells get into the juice and if these are not destroyed they will induce fermentation.

Consequently, in the manufacture of sweet cider we must destroy the yeast cells that are present and prevent others from getting in. The surest way of doing this is to pasteurize the juice immediately after it is obtained from the fruit and store away in well-sealed containers. In the case of cider the pasteurization process means heating the juice to 170F. for ten minutes and then filling into containers that have been scalded and can be tightly corked. Care should be taken not to let the temperature get above 170F. during pasteurization or the character of the juice will be injured. The juice is then stored away at a low temperature to allow it to clear.

Hard cider is produced by allowing the fresh apple juice to ferment in the cask. The fermentation is naturally induced by the activties of the yeast cells that get into the juice from the surface of the apples. As, however, there are various kinds of yeast cells, and also many mold spores liable to be on the fruit which may injure the quality of the cider, spoiling the flavor, it is a good plan to control the fermentation either by first pasteurizing the juice and then adding a good yeast or simply by adding a good yeast to the raw juice as soon as obtained from the apples. —Prof. D. H. JonesG, O. A. College, Guelph.

How Winter Rhubarb Is Produced.

The production of rhubarb in winter has become of considerable value among gardeners. It is easy to do if certain methods are followed. If one is making a permanent business of rhubarb forcing, it is necessary, each year, to set out a new bed as plants once forced are of no further value. In the spring large roots should be dug, split in one bud sections and replaced in rich moist ground. During the growing season they are kept cultivated and free from weeds. In the fall they are covered with manure. Next spring a second bed is planted as before. That fall a large part of the first bed is taken up leaving sufficient to replant another bed the next spring. The roots are taken up the last thing in the fall before the hard, freezing weather comes and are placed in piles in a shed where they can easily be got at during the winter, but will remain frozen. About Dec. 1st take in a sufficient number of roots, place these bud side up on the floor of a warm cellar—about 68 to 70 degrees—and cover with an inch of sand. Be sure to fill in all interspaces. Keep this sand moist. About a week later the buds will begin to swell, and in from four to six weeks, depending upon the heat of the room, the cooler the slower growth starts—you should have rhubarb ready for market. After these roots are exhausted throw them away and put in more. If a constant supply is required make a new bed every two or three weeks during the winter. Be sure to keep all lights dimmed. Put burlap or brown paper over the windows to get the bright pink color so much desired.—A. H. MacLennan, B.S.A., Ontario Vegetable Specialist.

Should Cows Be Fed Turnips?

This is an old question about which considerable difference of opinion exists. If my reader is Scotch, he or she will likely answer the question by saying, "Yes," as Scotchmen, turnips, and good farming are three things usually found together on farms in Ontario.

There was a time when butter buyers were not so particular about the flavor of butter as they are at present. It is common to hear women purchasers on city markets, say to farm butter-makers, "Your butter is turnipy," which is sufficient to cause a loss of the sale. Creamerymen object very strongly to "turnipy cream." While it is doubtless true that some careful feeders are able to feed quite large quantities of turnips to cows giving milk, without causing any serious trouble, there is always danger, which can best be avoided by not feeding these to milking cows. If they are grown on the dairy farm they are best fed to dry cows, fattening cattle, young stock, pigs, etc. However, if they are fed in the stable where cows are milking, and more especially where the root house opens into the stable and where the turnips are pulped in the stable or in a feed-room adjoining, the odor of the turnips fills the air, which is carried into the milk pail at the time of milking and thus the milk, cream, and butter become tainted from the stable air, even though the milk cows may not be fed any of the turnips.

The safest plan is not to grow turnips on a dairy farm. Grow mangels, or sugar beets, and corn for silage. These crops will give as good returns as turnips, are no more expensive to grow, and are much safer.

"Safety first" is a good motto on a dairy farm.—Prof. H. H. Dean, Ontario Agricultural College, Guelph.

Crown Vacant for Five Years.

AMSTERDAM, Sept. 24. — Prince Frederick Charles of Hesse, a brother-in-law of Emperor William, has been urged "by high quarters," according to the Socialist newspaper, Valkstimme of Frankfort, to leave the question of the Finnish throne in suspense and to agree only to accept the office of administrator of the kingdom for five years. REAL ECONOMY BUY FURS

Remember last WINTER'S CHILLY BLASTS, and the fuel shortage, and supply your needs of protection NOW. Do not be misled by the elusive hope that the prices of FURS will decrease after the War. Prices are steadily on the increase and the demand for FURS never so great as it is today. Why pay HIGH PRICES for INFERIOR cloth goods, the increase on which exceeds that of Furs? Our present stock of Skins and manufactured Furs have been bought for Eight months; come early and secure YOURS. Did you ever consider the decidedly INFERIOR cloth goods, with the high prices they demand, in comparison with the Superior wearing qualities of FURS and their comparatively low prices?

Shortage of Wool is the cause of the former and INCREASED EFFICIENCY OF TREATMENT of FURS the cause of the other. Consult us further.

Bleecker; Sec.-Treas., Mr. H. A. Lennox.

MEMBERS ENTERTAINED

On Tuesday evening the members of the Y. W. C. T. U. were entertained at the home of Mrs. H. Holton, Albert street. The society was well represented and a splendid program was given. After the regular opening exercises "A Farewell" was sung by Miss Pearl Campbell, and this was followed by an explanation and discussion of Citizenship. As the franchise has been so lately granted to women, they need to become acquainted with their rights and privileges, and in order to educate our women along this line it was decided to carry on a systematic study of Citizenship and at some later date to hold a mock election. While numbers were being given, the ladies were busily engaged with knitting and the making of trench caps. Before leaving light refreshments were served and a hearty vote of thanks was tendered to the hostess. ### Catarrhal Deafness May be Overcome

If you have Catarrhal Deafness or head and ear noises or are growing hard of hearing go to your druggist and get 1 ounce of Parmint (double strength), and add to it ¼ pint of hot water and a little granulated sugar. Take 1 tablespoonful four times a day.

This will often bring quick relief from the distressing head noises. Clogged nostrils should open, breathing become easy and the mucus stop dropping into the throat. It is easy to prepare, costs little and is pleasant to take. Anyone who has Catarrhal Deafness or head noises should give this prescription a trial.

Military News

Lieut.-Col. (Rev.) H. McCausland, M.C., a returned chaplain, is going to Siberia with the Canadian expedition. He will revert to the rank of major.

A party of ten medical officers is leaving Kingston on Wednesday. Among those included are Capt. Buck, Capt. Michael Kennedy, Lieut. Fletcher Sharp and Lieut. Tichborne.

Capt. C. F. Walt, C.A.D.C., has been granted the rank of major, while employed in connection with the Dental Services M.D. No. 3

Recruiting figures just received from Ottawa show that since the beginning of the war there have been 581,550 volunteers for overseas service in the Dominion, and that the Toronto Military District leads with 126,772, which is slightly better than one-fifth of the whole Dominion. Other Ontario districts have also made creditable showings, N. 2 ,Kingston, giving 48,236, and the London district giving 63,277. This shows that the Province of Ontario has given close to half the volunteers to date.

CHALLENGE

The Ontario baseball team of the city is anxious to meet the G. T. R. team and challenge them to one or three games. The Ontarios are willing for the management of the G. T. R. team to name date and place of game or games.

FOOTBALL

Some good games of rugby are anticipated in the near future between our High School and others in the vicinity, including Peterboro, Kingston, and Napanee Collegiates.

Owing to so many of the bigger boys having deported for overseas, the home team will necessarily be light, and young—the eldest player being 18 years of age.

This weakness in the scrimmage line and a defficiency in heavy punting by the really good tackling and speed of the ends and back field. Among those competing for this portion of the field are Reg. Cooper, the star basketball player; Vernon Weir, all round athlete; John McGie and others of almost equal ability.

There is a marked improvement on the tackling of former seasons, for while the backs lack weight they make up for it by the spirit and viciousness they put into their playing.

As a conclusion we may say that while there may be better teams in the league, we will have every reason to be proud of our youngsters—for if they do not win the pennant, the other teams will known Belleville is well represented by fourteen good, clean sports who will give them a sharp tussle for final honors—Com.

Mine Sinks Swedish Gunboat

COPENHAGEN, Sept. 26—The Swedish gunboat Geinhild has been sunk by striking a German mine in the Skagerack with the loss of the chief officer and 18 men, reports the correspondent of The Politiken at the Skaw, the northernmost point of Denmark.

Persistent rumors, he adds, are current at the Skaw that another Swedish gunboat struck a mine a few days ago, and that a greater part of the crew were killed.

A Limitation For Newspapers Proposed

OTTAWA, Sept. 27—R. A. Pringle, K.C., Paper Controller, is issuing an invitation to the publishers of Canada to attend a meeting at Ottawa on Wednesday, October 16, to consider the matter of conservation of newsprint, including recommendations which have been made by him calculated to reduce the consumption of paper during the war.

The controller suggests the advisability of limiting morning newspapers to one edition and evening newspapers to two editions; also the elimination of comic supplements and the use of newsprint for posters, dodgers, etc.

The advisability of forbidding the starting of new newspapers will also be considered as well as a proposal to standardize the volume of reading matter to be allowed each newspaper.

RAW SKUNK SKINS FETCH RECORD PRICE

NEW YORK, Sept. 27—What is said to be the highest price ever paid in this country for raw skunk skins was obtained at the Fall auction of furs here, when the finest lot offered brought $9 each. A "freak" fox fur, auctioned for the benefit of the Red Cross brought $500.

Total sales for the last three days amounted to $1,750,000. Prices for house cat were 50 cent higher than last Spring and those of ermine 35 per cent higher.

Canadian Got German Sniper

On the British Front in France, Sept. 27—I heard an incident of individual bravery Wednesday that savors of the wild west days in America. A Canadian soldier of an isolated advanced post was under fire from a German sniper. There was duel for several hours during which the German twice wounded the Canadian. Despite his wounds and severe suffering the Canadian partly crawled, partly walked through some trenches until eventually he got on the flank of the German sniper. Before the German could fire again the Canadian threw a hand grenade which blew the German to pieces. Then he slowly crawled back his comraeds.

SERBS TAKE GERMAN MACHINE GUN SECTION

LONDON, Sept. 27— Yesterday's official Serbian statement says:

"An enemy battery which attempted to take up a position in order to come into action was attacked by our machine guns. The men were killed and the guns were captured.

A complete German machine gun section was also made prisoner.

"The Germans complained that the Bulgarians had abandoned them intentionally, and said that the Germans had continually compelled the Bulgarians, by threats of opening fire on them, to return to the fighting line."

Tank Forts, a New Hun Device To Bolster Up Hindenburg Line

With the British Armies in France, Sept. 27—Germany is reported to have prepared a new mechanical construction to supplement her waning morale and man-power.

According to escaped British and German prisoners at certain places in this zone "tank forts" have been built. They are designed to meet the ever-incrasing menace of the allied war banked and well placed gun positions. Their armament includes field guns, trench mortars, tank rifles and machine guns, desinged to operate together.

But it will take something better than "tank forts" to save this line, if a German under-officer captured a few days ago, tells the truth. His picture of conditions behind the enemy lines is striking. "The last blow has opened the eyes of the commonest soldier to the break-up of German military supremacy," he said.

"We are defeated, and know it, I doubt, however, whether the German soldiers yet uncaptured realize how crushing this defeat is. Coming through your lines I saw things I could hardly believe. Such transport, such horses, such men.

Protest Treatment Of Russians Here

TORONTO, Sept. 27.—The following resolution from the delegates to the convention of Russian Councils of Workmen and Peasants, which has just concluded its sittings here, has been sent to the Canadian Government:

"We, the assembled delegates to the convention of the Russian Councils of Workmen and Peasants, after hearing reports from various parts of the country complaining of the repressive measures adopted by the police towards Russian citizens do hereby resolve protest to the Federal Government against this unjust treatment of a law-abiding section of the community. We also contend that many of the arrests of Russians that have taken place are wholly unjustifiable, and are contrary to the spirit of freedom and true democracy. We, therefore, respectfully request the restoration of the pre-war status of Russian citizens in this country; or, as an alternative, that the said citizens be given deportation to their native country, and, whereas, Russia having no responsible representative in Canada, we respectfuly request that the Canadian Federal Government endorse the nominee of the Russian Councils in Canada, whose duty will be to protect the interests of Russian people now resident in Canada."

The resoution is signed by Secretary M. Teamoon and Chairman E. Ardukoff.

Late Telegraph Briefs

Canadian Press Limited

Sir Wilfrid Laurier will be in Toronto on Tuesday, October 8, and not next Monday as was announced in the Queen City.

A light snowfall, covering with a cloak of white the fields and buildings of the town, was the chief novelty of the second day of Newmarket's Fair.

The Germans seemed daze by the ferocity of attacks. One American division took twenty guns and hundreds of prisoners. British troops are still making slight advance and have taken several hundred prisoners between Selency and Chateau wood.

The Bulgarians are still retreating rapidly and it is reported Uskub has been captured. The Serbians have seized Bagana Pass. Twenty thousand prisoners and two hundred guns are reported to have been taken.

J. A. Hewson, who conducts a liquor store on St. Catherine street west, Montreal, was fined $1,000 and costs by Police Magistrate McDougall at Alexandria, Ont., yesterday, for violation of the Ontario Temperance Act. Hewson, who abandoned a truckoad of liquor at Moulinette, near Cornwall, about ten days ago, was arrested in Montreal Wednesday and brought to Alexandria for trial. He paid the fine.

S. B. Ferguson, Fuel Controller for Galt, has announced new regulations with regard to the delivery of anthracite coal. He stated that householders with one ton or more of hard coal in their bin would be allowed no more at present, and that those without coal can secure a general distribution of further supplies. The Controller urges the use of soft coal and wood.

Father Duffy, chaplain of New York's 69th Regiment, and a former Cobourg boy, who is overseas as chaplain with the Americn rmy, has been recommended for the Legion of Honor. Father Duffy put in 117 hours, continuous work on the battlefield during the Franco-American drive, hearing confessions, carrying stretchers and receiving last messages. Father Duffy was raised from the priesthood at St. Michael's Church, Cobourg, in Sept. 1896. Up to the time of the Mexican Rebellion he was pastor of the Church of Our Saviour, New York City.

Sister Basil's Case Reargued on Appeal

R. C. Archbishop and Others Of Kingston Challenge Trial Judgment

TORONTO, Sept. 27—Sister Mary Basil, who sued Archbishop Spratt, Dr. Phelan, Police Constable Naylon, Sister Mary Frances Regis, Mother Superior of the Sisters of Charity at Kingston, and others, alleging persecution, assault and abduction was awarded $24,000 by the jury, $20,000 against the Archbishop, the Roman Catholic Corporation, the Mother Superior Frances Regis, and Sisters of Charity, and $4,000 against Dr. Daniel Phelan.

At Osgoode Hall, today, the defendants began their appeal in the First Divisional Court, composed of Chief justices Sir William Meredith, and McLaren, Magee, Hodgins, and Ferguson, judges.

WHAT ABOUT PRESS RIGHTS!

D. L. McCarthy, K.C., for the Mother Superior, Archbishop and the other defendants, stated that he had objected to certain clauses in the pleadings when the trial began. The statement of claim was published by the Kingston papers.

"Wasn't that improper?" asked the Chief Justice.

Mr. Justice Hodgins: "The papers can get copies."

Sir William Meredith: "But I don't see that newspapers can publish a statement of claim without running the risk."

Mr. McCarthy: "They take the risk, I suppose."

Mr. McCarthy explained to the Divisional Court that Sister Basil had been a troublesome member of the community, not crazy, but troublesome. The Council met, and it was decided to send her to Alberta, where there was a branch hospital.

THOUGHT SHE WAS PERSECUTED

According to Mr. McCarthy, Sister Basil was obsessed by the belief that the Mother Superior was determined to persecute her.

It was resolved to send Sister Basil to Montreal. Action was taken finally in September 1916.

Chief Justice Meredith: "They were sending her as a lunatic?" "As one mentally unbalanced."

W. N. Tilley, K.C., for Sister Basil: "My learned friend told me that it was an asylum."

Mr. Justice Hodgins: "You know by this time, Mr. McCarthy," "I am coming to it, my Lord."

Dr. Phelan stated on the occasion of a hunger strike, that Sister Basil was mentally unbalanced.

Dr. Phelan went to the chief constable and said that the Mother Superior wanted a Roman Catholic Constable.

Sir William.'" "And he's still chief of police?" "So far as I know."

The sisters and the policeman entered Sister Basil's room, and there was some scuffling, and Sister Basil screamed."

Prussian War Minister Resigns

Special Despatch to The Intelligencer

Gen. von Stein had been in command of the 14th reserve army corps after having served as quartermaster-general. Before his appointment as War Minister he was in command of troops on the Somme front in France. General von Stein tendered his resignation as Prussian Minister of War, on July 13, 1917 but it was not accepted.

Special Despatch to The Intelligencer,
Canadian Press, Limited.

GENEVA, Sept. 27.—Emperor William, Field Marshal Duke Albrecht of Wurttemburg and Prince Stephan of Schaumburg-Lippe, were in Mannheim last week when British airmen raided that city. The royal party was staying in the royal palace and the emperor and his staff promptly took refuge in the cellar, remaining there twenty minutes. The palace was not hit, as it had been during a previous raid, but bombs fell in the vicinity.

Great numbers of additional Bulgarians and Germans have been captured by the Serbians, who also have taken an enormous quantity of war material. The Serbians now are west of the Ishtib-Veles road and have captured the heights of Bogoslovets, south of the road. North of Demirkapu, in the direction of the Bulgarian border, the Serbs have captured the ridge of Beli-Kamen.

Unanimous Report on Peterboro' Dispute

Number of Apprentices in General Electric Plant is Stipulated

OTTAWA, Sept. 27—An unanimous report in the appeal of the Canadian General Electric Company from the findings of the Board of Conciliation which dealt with the dispute between the company and its machinists, specialists, and electrical workers has been submitted to the Minister of Labor by the Labor Appeal Board. The Board of Conciliation which dealt with the dispute consisted of Judge Colin B. Snider, Chairman; James . Merrick, representing the company, and Fred G. Bancroft, the men. The members of the Board of Conciliation were unanimous in their report, save on three points, to which Mr. Merrick, representing the company, dissented. Appeal was taken on three similar points.

Mr. Merrick refused to place any limitation on the number of apprentices which the company might engage. With regard to this matter the Appeal Board has decided that "the number of apprentices shall be as follows: One for shop, and one for every five machinists employed." Another point at issue was the date on which the new schedule should go into force. On this point the Appeal Board confirms the report of the Conciliation board, providing that the schedule shall date from the first of last June and remain in force for one year. The third point is dispute is settled by the Appeal Board by striking out paragraph 9 of the schedule, and substituting the following:" During slack periods, before any reduction is made in the number of its employees the total working hours for the week shall be reduced."

Only 12 Escaped Without Injury

6,800 Women Employed in Factory Which Was Blown Up

On the British Front in France, Sept. 27.—The recent terrible explosion of a powder factory at Plauen, Saxony seems to have been even worse than at first rumored. A letter to a German soldier just captured, says: "Our Sunday excursion to Plauen was a complete success. We visited the scene of the catastrophe where, three weeks ago, an explosion took place in the powder factory, where 6,800 women were employed. Nearly all the workers became victims of war; only 12 escaped unhurt. Is not that frightful? The spectacle must have been something terrible. Like burning torches the victims roamed around the building as all the doors and windows were shut, as is usual in powder factories. Only one side entrance was open and the few who found their way out presented a gruesome spectacle. The whole night through 60 vehicles carried away the unfortunates. On Sunday we also visited their common grave in the eastern cemetery at Plauen.

"Notwithstanding the sorry spectacle, our trip went off merrily. Of course, we feel sorry for the unfortunate people, but one cannot always be mourning. Therefore let us look towards the sun. The living have their rights.

Canadians in Big Haig Drive Today

Special Despatch to The Intelligencer
Canadian Press Limited

LONDON, Sept. 27—Canadian forces pushed forward on the northern flank of Haig's attack this morning. Favorable progress was reported on a front of three miles to a depth of a mile and a quarter across the Canal Du Nord.

New British Attack Launched South of the Sensee River

Special Despatch to The Intelligencer,
Canadian Press, Limited.

LONDON, Sept. 27.—(Official)—British troops attacked on a wide front south of the Sensee river this morning, according to a report received here from Field Marshal Haig. First reports indicate that satisfactory progress is being made.

The Sensee river is a small stream flowing to the northeast and paralleling on the south the Scarpe river, which flows past Arras and passes through the important city of Douai, one of the principal German bases on the Artois front in France. It is probable that the British attack is made for the purpose of driving a wedge between Douai and Cambrai, about fifteen miles to the south.

The British lines were advanced slightly north of the Sensee in a local operation during the past night and there were successful local attacks in Flanders.

Armistice Asked for by Bulgaria Germany Was not Consulted

Request for Meeting to Arrange Conditions of Armistice and Eventual Peace— Armistice Refused by French Commander -In Chief— Official Peace Delegates Will be Received

Special Despatch to The Intelligencer, Canadian Press, Limited.

PARIS, Sept. 27.—The French commander-in-chief in Macedonia officially reported today that the Bulgarians have asked for a meeting to arrange conditions of an armistice and eventual peace. The French commander replied refusing to suspend operations but saying he would receive only qualified delegates of the Bulgarian Government.

GERMANY ANGRY.

LONDON, Sept. 27.—Germany intends to send a solemn protest to Bulgaria against Premier Malinoff's request for an armistice, according to Berlin reports received in Amsterdam and forwarded by the Exchange Telegraph Company.

LONDON, Sept. 27.—Premier Malinoff of Bulgaria has made a request for an armistics to the Allies, according to a Berlin message. The message states that the Premier's offer was made without the support of other members of the Cabinet or of King Ferdinand.

AMSTERDAM, Sept. 27.—The Bulgarian Premier's request for an armistice was made to the leader of the Entente troops operating against the Bulgarians, according to a Berlin message received here.

REVOLUTION IN BULGARIA.

The Berlin message says that the Malinoff request has created grave dissatisfaction in Bulgaria and that strong military measures have been taken to support the Bulgarian front.

According to a statement from Sofia by way of Jassy it is added that a counter movement against the action of the Premier has already been set on foot. This would seem to indicate that a revolution is in progress in Bulgaria.

BULGARS WANT PEACE.

PARIS, Sept. 27.—Despatches received here this afternoon state that the appeal of the Bulgarian commander-in-chief in Macedonia for an armistice was made with the consent of King Ferdinand and with a view to eventual peace.

Another Call For Men is Expected

TORONTO, Sept. 27—That the men of the nineteen and twenty-year-old class who registered some time ago under the extension of th Military Srvice Act will be called to the colors in the near future is being persistently rumored in military circles.

"I have heard the matter discussed," said a prominent officer at Military Headquarters who is closely in touch with the authorities at Ottawa, "and I think they will be called soon as the losses at the front have been very heavy and reinforcements must be kept up."

"It is from this class that the reinforcements could be easily obtained," he added.

It is stated that there are from thirty to forty thousand men in Canada who have reached the age of twenty or over since their registration under the M.S. Act, and who would be immediately available for service whenever called upon. It is said to be the intention of the authorities to call up the older men, those who are twenty years of age or over, before the nineteen year-olds."

"Brutal Murder" Says Judge 10-Year Sentence

MONTREAL, Sept. 27—Ten years in St. Vincent de Paul Penitentiary was the sentence pronounced by Mr. Justice Cross upon Almanzar Chaput, found guilty of manslaughter by a jury in the Court of King's Bench. Chaput, together with Albert Delsol, was originally charged with murdering Harry Bowman, whose battered body was found frozen in an alley back of the house on Visitation street. Both men were tried two weeks ago, Delsol being acquitted and a verdict of manslaughter being returned against Chaput.

When asked by the clerk of the Court whether he had anything to say why sentence should not be passed upon him, Chaput asked that he be awarded clemency by the court.

In reply, Mr. Justice Cross said that Bowman's death had been a most brutal one and that he was little inclined leniency.

"You attacked this man when he was lying drunk, and absolutely incapable of protecting himself," he said. "You hit him on the head repeatedly, and not content with that, you dragged the still breathing body out into a lane, where it was afterward found frozen. All this you did to please the keeper of a disorderly house of which you were a frequenter. Your conduct was particularly brutal, and for this offence you are now condemned to be incarcerated for ten years in St. Vincent de Paul penitentiary."

SAME CRIME—TWO MONTHS

Adelard Tardiff, also found guilty of manslaughter, was next led into the dock for sentence. He also asked that he be dealt with leniently. In summing up the case before passing sentence, Mr. Justice Cross, declared that he was disposed to accede to his request, the evidence on which he had been convicted being of such a nature as to warrant the utmost leniency.

"You are therefore condemned to be imprisoned at Bordeaux jail for two months at hard labor," he said

Evidence given at the trial showed that Tardiff had struck Louis Doyer in the mouth of June last, during an altercation over a woman. Doyer fell to the ground and fractured his skull.

Catarrhal Deafness and Head Noises

TELLS SAFE AND SIMPLE WAY TO TREAT AND RELIEVE AT HOME

If you have catarrh, catarrhal deafness or head noises caused by catarrh, or if phelgm drops in your throat and has caused catarrh of the stomach or bowels you will be glad to know that these distressing symptoms may be entirely overcome in many instances by the following treatment which you can easily prepare in your own home at little cost. Secure from your druggist 1 ounce of Parmint (Double Strength). Take this home and add ½ pint of hot water and a little granulated sugar; stir until dissolved. Take one tablespoonful four times a day. An improvement is sometimes noted after the first day's treatment. Breathing should become easy, while the distressing head noises, headaches, dullness, cloudy thinking, etc., should gradually disappear under the tonic action of the treatment. Loss of smell, taste, defective hearing and mucus dropping in the back of the throat are other symptoms which suggest the presence of catarrh and which may often be overcome by this efficacious treatment. It is said that nearly ninety per cent. of all ear troubles are caused by catarrh and there must, therefore, be many people whose hearing may be restored by this simple, harmless, home treatment.

Has Now Spread Over 26 States

WASHINGTON, Sept. 27.—Spanish influenza has spread over the country so rapidly that officials of the public health service, the War and Navy Departments, and the Red Cross conferred Wednesday on measures to help local communities in combating the disease. Calls for assistance already have been received from several cities.

Surgeon-General Rupert Blue, of the public health service, said Wednesday night that latest reports showed that the malady has made its appearance in 26 states from the Atlantic to the Pacific. The disease is epidemic in New England, where it first made its appearance, and officials in that section are considering drastic steps to crub its spread, including the prevention of public gatherings.

Influenza has appeared on the Pacific coast in Washington and California, but is not yet epidemic there. It also has been reported in Minnesota and Iowa, but with few cases. East of the Mississippi, however, there are few states where it has not been found.

The disease continued to spread Wednesday in army camps, 5,324 new cases being reported to the office of the Surgeon-eGneral of the army up to noon.

The total reported from the camps Wednesday was the largest in any one day, and brought the total for all camps to 29,002 cases. The number of pneumonia cases reported among the soldiers since the outbreak of the influenza epidemic September 13, is 2,313, and the number of death since that date is 530.

Throne is Uncertain But His Bride is Sure

AMSTERDAM, Sept. 27—In answer to please that he desert his bride of humble birth, Crown Prince Charles, of Rumania, has replied that thrones are so unstable nowadays that he preferred the certainty of having the wife he wanted to the chance of losing the succession.

The escapade of the Crown Prince in going to Odessa, and marrying Cecilie Lambring, the daughter of a major in the Rumanian army, reopens the question of the Rumanian dynastic succession. When King Ferdinand heard of the marriage he ordered that the Crown Prince be given 75 days solitary confinement for absenting himself without leave from his garrison.

King Ferdinand also sent an emissary to Bender, Bessarabia, where the young couple are spending their honeymoon, with instructions to try and undo the nuptial knot, but to no avail. The bride refused to part with her wedding ring and the Crown Prince refused to leave her.

Crown Prince Charles has not yet voluntarily renounced his rights of succession and the king is reported to be very angry. The Rumanian constitution does not contain a clause barring a morganatically married Crown Prince from succession to the throne.

The present case has a piquant feature in that it recalls that King Ferdinand in his youth had a love affair with Helene Vacaresco, his mother's lady of honor. Premier Catargui threatened to resign if the King did not veto the proposed union, and it came to nothing. Should Crown Prince Charles renounce his rights to succession his brother, Nicholas, would become the heir apparent. Nicholas is 15 years old and physically weak.

There is much excited gossip in Bucharest, acording to a telegraph to the Vossosche Zeitung of Berlin, as to what would happen in the eventuality of Queen Marie, who is strongly anti-German, becoming regent.

ONE-TON LOTS FOR LONDON

LONDON, Ont., Sept. 27—Fuel Controller J. W. McCallum was Wednesday authorized by Provincial Controller Home Smith to take whatever action his judgment dictates in dealing with the local fuel situation. As a result an order will be issued at once to all coal dealers to deliver no further supplies of fuel to consumers who already have a fair supply. All shipments hereafter will be doled out in one-ton lots.

K. of C. Army Hut Drive Success

A Magnificient Success Nearly Double Objective Will be Reached

The Knights of Columbus Army Hut Drive, which began on Sept. 15th to continue throughout the week, has far excelled the most optimistic expectations of the Committee. While the amount sought in this District was $5,000 Belleville alone has far exceeded this amount, and it is expected that when the returns are all in from the outlying places the total will reach nearly $10,000.

While the persons in charge of the campaign are delighted with the large sum realized, there is another point which has been a source of greater satisfaction and that is the spirit that has accompanied the gifts. Never was money given with a better grace. The canvassers and workers report nothing but courteous receptions and cheerful encouragements wherever they went. There was a spirit of comradeship and friendliness throughout the entire campaign. People of all classes and all creeds vied with each other to encourage the work of helping to lighten the burden of our soldiers over there and as our brave boys are fighting shoulder to shoulder without regard to race, creed or color, and as the casualty lists bring the same sad tidings to all homes over here, without distinction of creed or class so also have the workers in the K. of C. Hut Fund Drive shown the same spirit of comradeship. Men and women in all ranks of life and all classes and creeds have gone out and worked to gether for this glorious common cause. This terrible war has changed many things, but there is nothing so remarkable or pleasing as the way the community has been brought together, and it is to be hoped that this result of the most terrible of wars will last forever; that all classes of our community will live together with that same blessed spirit of brotherhod, sacred to the memory of those who lie side by side beneath the waving poppies in Flanders Field.

The ladies are deserving of the greatest praise for the excellent work done on Tag Day, having realized the magnificent sum of $712.15. To Mr. John Lally, the tireless Grand Knight of the local Council Knights of Columbus, Ald. Chas. Whelan, secretary and Mr. L. Hughes, Treasurer, is principally due the success of the Drive. They are to be congratulated, as also are the numerous workers, who gave up their business and pleasure to make this a great success. Ald. Chas Hanna and all the members of the 15th Regt. Band are giving a sacred concert at Griffin's Opera House Sunday night at 8 o'clock in aid of the Fund. A silver collection will be taken at the door.

Mr. John Griffin, President of The Griffin Amusement Corporation, with his usual generosity to anything patriotic or charitable, is donating the theatre free of charge.

CHANCE TO REDEEM THEMSELVES.

An interesting experiment is under way in the United States where 400,000 prisoners in the jails are to be given military and manual training to prepare those physically, mentally and morally fit for service in the army. The plan has been endorsed by the U. S. War Department and it is hoped to develop the plan so that there will be no friction on account of the objection of military officers to the enrollment of felons with other troops. The Canadian authorities could very well give the plan close consideration.

WHY PLATINUM IS NEEDED.

"There has been considerable curiosity in the minds of many why war has created such a demand for platinum on the part of the Government," says the Rochester Democrat and Chronicle. "Those who have tried to supply the answer to the query out of their own minds, and without taking the trouble to secure information, have perhaps concluded that this precious metal is used in the making of some of the endless number of shells or instruments of warfare. That is not the case. It is not included in the composition of the guns nor the shells they fire nor in the structure of airplanes. But it is used, and it is essential in the making of sulphuric acid, and sulphuric acid is essential in the making of high explosives. Sulphuric acid, in addition to being such a factor in increasing casualty lists, is of great importance in textile work, the making of dyes, and is employed in medicine. The way that platinum is linked up with this sulphuric acid may be explained briefly as follows: Sulphuric acid is made from air, water and the fumes from burning sulphur. But when brought together they will not unite without provocation, as the chemists phrase it. Platinum furnishes a sufficient amount of provocation. The mere presence of a trace of it causes the oxygen, water and sulphur dioxide to join hands chemically, then the king of chemicals is born."

DISCOUNTING GERMAN NEWS.

That the frequent reports of internal troubles in Germany allowed to reach the outside world should be taken with the proverbial grain of salt is the opinion of the Toronto News, which says:

> The continuing reports of unrest in Germany which come from Berne or Amsterdam may or may not be important. It is well to remember that practically all such information which reaches neutral cities has been passed by the German censor. There might be a distinct advantage to the enemy in giving the impression that the war was as good as won by the Entente in the hope that military preparations and civilian morale might be affected by such news. For that reason all such neutral reports may be read with suspended judgment.
> More encouragement than that given by Amsterdam is found in the curt announcement from Berlin that Von Capelle has been retired to make room for Admiral Behncke as Minister of the Navy. Von Capelle is a disciple of Von Tirpitz, and an advocate of unrestricted submarine warfare. Under his regime the submarine has been proved an ineffective weapon against armed ships and a political trouble-maker. If the German Government has recognized at last that the submarine cannot win the war the pan-Germans have sustained a tactical defeat. Behncke has always been opposed to "driving through" the rights of neutrals, though we do not pay him or any other German the compliment of believing that his opinion is based on principles of either honor or humanitarianism.
> If the German Government begins to think that frightfulness does not pay, so much the better for the Entente. The task of the Allied armies is to prove not alone to the German people that war does not pay. Foch and Haig and Pershing are administering the only lesson that our foes can understand and the class in International Decency will continue with day and night sessions until the last pupil is fully informed.

OTHER VIEWS

A Contrast in Terror.

Detroit News.

The French Terror, deplore it as we may, was construtive; the Bolshevik Terror appears to be the work of ignorant, selfish, bloodthirsty men at the approach of doom. In France it was absolutely necessary, if the Revolution was to live, to put down provincial rebellion and remove the influence of anti-revolutionists in the capital, that the country might be united against the invading armies of reactionary Europe. In Russia the wholesale executions are the product of fear and exasperation. Having sowed the wind the Bolsheviki are beginning to realize that the whirlwind is the harvest. The Brest-Litovsk treaty gave them the respite they needed to strengthen their control, but either they could not or did not make the best use of their advantage. They neither won over the burgeoise nor suppressed it. They neither controlled their army nor maintained internal peace without it. Province by province, Russia revolted from the power at Moscow, until at last only the regions surrounding Petrograd and Moscow recognized Bolshevik leadership.

Uniform Dates Decided On.

Kitchener Telegraph.

There is a widespread impression that the Daylight Saving period will end in Canada on October 31st, and there has been an agitation in different centres that the clock should be turned back at the same time as has been provided in the United States, on October 27th. It has been learned, however, from an order made by the Board of Railway Commissioners that the change has already been provided for. An order-in-Council made the dates uniform as to coming in force, though at first there was a difference, and also as to the time of its continuance and the Railway Board made an order in which it is stated that "the prescribed time during which the Daylight Saving Act, 1918, shall be in force shall be until two o'clock on the morning of Sunday, the 27th day of October, 1918, the day fixed in the United States for returning to the usual time."

The chinaberry has a "kick" to it that frequently robs the birds of their powers of locomotion and then they fall prey to lurking cats. Surely the way of the transgressor is hard.

The Poet's Corner

"THE LAD OUT THERE"

Oh, powers of love! if still you can,
Above a world so black with hate,
Where yet—as it has eevr been—
The loving heart is desolate,
Look down upon the lad I love,
(My brave lad tramping thro' the mire)
I cannot light his welcoming fire.
Light thou the stars for him above.
Tho' nights are dark and mornings dim,
Let him in his long watching know
That I, too, count the minutes slow,
The sight of death, the sleep forlorn,
The old homesickness vast and dumb.

Amid these things, so bravely borne,
Let my long thoughts about him come.
I see him in the weary file:
So young he is, so dea rto me,
With ever-ready sympathy,
And wistful eyes and cheerful smile.
However far he travels on Thought follows, like the willow wren that flies the stormy sea again
To land, where all delight is gone.
Whatever he may be or do
While absent far beyond my call,
Bring him the long day's march, being through,
Safe home to me some evenfall.

—Mary Webb, in London Chronicle.

Military News

The proclamation calling for the registration of American citizens of Group 1 on September 28th has been changed making the date of registration October 12th. All other groups are required to register within ten days of that date.

No men have been ordered to report in this district for about three months those last called being between the of 20 and 23. Work is progressing however, on the recategorization. Last fall when the tribunals were sitting, a great many secured exemption automatically because the physical standard was very high and minor defects were regarded as sufficient to lower the category. Now minor defects are not regarded as sufficient to lower the category as experience at the front has proved that a slight degree of flat foot, for instance, is no handicap. A medical officer is reviewing the medical history sheet of all categories other than "A" with the result that a larger number of men will be available for service.

IMPERIAL COMMISSIONS

Canadian military headquarters in London state that up to August 1st. 1918, 3,833 non-commissioned officers and men of the overseas military forces of Canada had been given commissions as officers in the Imperial army. This substantial number of recognitions to the rank and file of the Canadian overseas army does not include any individual Canadians who came on their own responsibilty to England and joined the Imperial forces without being taken on the strength of the overseas military forces of Canada.

Orders have come from the officers going with the Siberian Expeditionary force to report at Victoria, B.C., and it is likely they will go forward by the end of the week. Kingston men are Capt. J. H. Box, M.C., Lieuts. J. Munro and H. D. Connell.

Major Phillip de L. Passy, C. R. C.E., and Major S. Thompson, D. A. D. M. S., went to Picton and Cobourg on duty Tuesday.

German Hardware Firm Woundup

MONTREAL, Sept. 27—On a petition presented by Howard Aylmer and Dewitt, acting on behalf of the Hon. Martin Burrell, Secretary of State, for the Dominion of Canada, Mr. Justice Duclos, sitting in the Practice Division of the Superior Court has ordered the liquidation of Hardware, Limited, a business concern with offices at 317 St. James street.

There was no public arguing of the petition before the Court, the attorneys for the Secretary of State simply presenting their pettiion in writing and leaving it to His Lordship to adjudge upon as set forth in the document. A perusal of the record of the case this morning, showed that the petition had been temporarily taken from it, for obvious reasons. From reliable sources conferred by the War Measures Act. It was stated that almost ninety-five per cent of the holdings of Hardware Limited were and are controlled by a German named Schmidt, now in Germany, and that after investigation the Secretary of State saw fit in the national interest to liquidate the affairs of the company, all surplus between the assets and liabilities to revert to the Crown after the business has been wound up.

Frank E. Donovan, accountant, 157 St. James street has been appointed liquidator. It is stated that Hardwar Limited is absolutely solvent and that all creditors will be paid in full.

The city directory gives the name of M. Thivierge, as being the manager of the business here.

There is a rumor that similar action is contemplated by the Secretary of State in the case of other firms whose owners or principals are known to have German affiliations.

There was never a time when the sacrifices and the help of women were more appreciated than at the present time. Women should learn war-nursing and nursing at home. There is no better way than to study the new edition of the "Common Sense Medical Adviser"—with chapters on First Aid, Bandaging, Anatomy, Hygiene, care of the Sick, Diseases of Women, Mother and Babe, Marriage—to be had at some drug-stores or send 50c. to Dr. Pierce, Courtwright St., Bridgeburg, Ontario.

If a woman suffers from weak back, nervousness or dizziness—if pains afflict her, the best tonic and corrective is one made up of native herbs, and made without alcohol, which makes weak women strong and sick women well. It is the prescription of Doctor Pierce, used by him in active practice many years and now sold by almost every druggist in the land, in liquid or in tablets. Send Dr. Pierce, Buffalo, N. Y., 10c. for trial pkg. Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets are also best for liver and bowel trouble.

Stratford, Ont.—"Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription was a great help to me. During an expectant period I became all run-down, weak and nervous and could not eat—was nauseated. I also suffered with backaches. I was a complete wreck and was down sick in bed when I began taking 'Favorite Prescription.' I soon commenced to feel stronger and it finally restored me to health and strength. I could do all my work and felt fine. I had practically no suffering and my baby was strong and healthy.—Mrs. Thomas Burleigh, 366 Erie St.

72 Dead in Boston Of Spanish Influenza

BOSTON, Mass., Sept. 27.—With more than 720 dead from influenza in Boston up to yesterday, and new cases developing here and throughout the State hourly, Dr. Eugene Kelley, State Heath Commissioner, this afternoon appealed for assitance from the Federal authorities in Washington.

Dr. Kelley sent an emergency appeal by long distance telephone for 500 doctors and 1,000 nurses. Tent hospitals will be erected at once at different points in the State.

It is estimated there aer more than 20,000 cases of influenza in Boston, and thousands of cases in other cities and towns.

All theatres, motion picture houses, dancing schools, halls and places of assembly in Boston were ordered closed by the Emergency Health Commission here this afternoon. The order goes into effect at midnight, and will be in force until October 6, or longer, if necessary.

Churches will not be affected by the closing order because they are used only once a week, and are not considered an immediate danger to the public health.

Toronto nurses have gone to Boston in that city's emergency.

Coal Ordered Taken From Citizen's Cellar

TORONTO, Sept. 27—Fuel Commissioner Chisholm means business. The regulation forbidding any citizen raving more than 70 per cent. of his regular winter suppely is apparently not to be allowed to remain a 'dead letter,' at least when definite information is received by the commissioner that such is the case. This was shown yesterday when an order was sent to a certain dealer to remove several tons of coal from the cellar of a residence where more than the allotment had been delivered. The order was imperative to take the coal from the cellar. This is the first time that such drastic action has been taken in Toronto.

NORTH BAY, Sept. 27.—A valuable find was made here Wednesday by some of the officials of the T. and N. O. Railway when a car consigned to a Winnipeg firm from a Montreal pickle firm was investigated and found to contain, instead of pickles, a cargo of liquor valued at twenty-five thousand dollars.

REAL ECONOMY BUY FURS

Remember last WINTER'S CHILLY BLASTS, and the fuel shortage, and supply your needs of protection NOW. Do not be misled by the elusive hope that the prices of FURS will decrease after the War. Prices are steadily on the increase and the demand for FURS never so great as it is today. Why pay HIGH PRICES for INFERIOR cloth goods, the increase on which exceeds that of Furs? Our present stock of Skins and manufactured Furs have been bought for Eight months, come early and secure YOURS. Did you ever consider the decidedly INFERIOR cloth goods, with the high prices they demand, in comparison with the Superior wearing qualities of FURS and their comparatively low prices?

Shortage of Wool is the cause of the former and INCREASED EFFICIENCY OF TREATMENT of FURS the cause of the other. Consult us further.

It's German Leaders Who Taste of Defea

LONDON, Sept. 27.—The French newspapers emphasize that it is the German high command which has been beaten in Palestine and Macedonia, since Field Marshal Von Sanders commanded the Turkish force in Palestine, while the Balkan front was under the direction of General Scholtz and one of the defeated Bulgarian armies was commanded by General Von Steinben. Apparently Scholtz ordered the Bulagrian retreat too late. His failure is calculated, the French critics point out, to markedly embitter the German-Bulgarian relations.

Operators Threaten To Cut Off News

TORONTO, Sept. 27—Demanding a war bonus of $6 per week, ninety per cent of the operating staff of the Canadian Press, Limited, have tendered their resignation to take effect in one week, thus threatening a situation tantamount to a strike which would practically isolate Canada from the world so far as all but local news is concerned. The employers issue a statement asserting that the action would be "in flagrant violation of a solemn agreement with the Commercial Telegraphers' Union of America." Canadian Press Limited, has asked President Konenkamp of the Union "to assure the Canadian Press the protection provided in the agreement, which still has one year to run."

Should the operators cease work the National Wire, which carries the news of Canada an dthe war's progress from coast to coast, would probably be silent, or its service interrupted at the vital points. Newspapers would probably be able to publish any more than local happenings.

According to the statement of the Canadian Press management at the Toronto offices, the wages paid the telegraphers in Ontario and Quebec run from $30 to $33.50 with a great deal of overtime, while in the west the lowest wage is $32 weekly. These rates are said to be higher than United States news distributing associations pay and than the Union scale.

Music & Drama

"SNAP JUDGMENTS"

Big Bill Russell appeared at Griffin's last night in one of the best photoplays that he has ever appeared in here, "Snap Judgment" which concerns a young man who seems to be useless in the eyes of his father, but to a certain young lady that is interested in him very much he is just an ordinary happy-go-lucky lovable chap. Through the many irritable situations he gets his father into he finally goes west to forget his differences with his father and while in the west he discovers that there is a bandit there ho is the eact double of himself and through this very close resemblance he is lead into many awkward situations but eventually he uses his brains and comes down to earth in the way of doing sensible things in a business-like way which is the means of getting him into the good graces of his father again, much to the satisfaction of the one and only girl. The story is typical of the great west, with many outdoor scenes. A very good two-part comedy is called "A Milk Fed Vamp" with a very clever monkey which seems to get a lot of laughs from the audience.

A new chapter of the serial "A Fight for Millions" along with the feature picture "The Keys of The Righteous" with Enid Bennett in the leading part completes a very good program of pictures. At the Palace Charlie Chaplin is here again in a new laugh provoker. "Musty Suffer" in the "Ladder of Fame" and the big picture "Dead Shot Baker" with Wm. Duncan in the leading part completes a very nice program of photoplays.

"THE BIRD OF PARADISE"

Eight successful seasons during which its name and theme have become familiar to all theatregoers, have not been sufficient to dim the charm of Richard Walton Tuly's poignantly beautiful romance of Hawaii, "The Bird of Paradise," which Oliver Morosco, its producer, will present at Griffin's next Thursday night, nor the spell cast by its weird and beautiful Hawaiian music which never loses its haunting strains. It creates the atmosphere of the play and becomes a sort of appropriate musical commentary on the pathetic story of love and sacrifice that the drama tells. "The Bird of Paradise" is one sort of sad play that the public never shuns. When the theme is merely sordid and depressing they have no patience with it, but there is always an appeal in the devotion of a butterfly or the sacrifice of a Luana, or the heart hunger of a Madame X. People do not mind having their mind and then their nobler emotions touched and the audiences who have wept over "The Bird of Paradise," apparently go to see the play again and again.

HIS SALARY BOOSTED; IS NOW $12 MONTHLY

The cost of living is now worrying the inhabitants of Yokahama. The Canadian Trade Commissioner at that point has written to Sir George Foster asking that the salary of one of his native staff be increased from $9.75 to $12 per month. It is pointed out that he has a wife and five children and owing to the increased cost of living is finding difficulty in making ends meet. Sir George has recommended the increase and the Civil Service Commision which even has control of appointemnts and increases of the Trade Commisioners has consented.

Cardinal Farley Funeral Impressive

NEW YORK, Sept. 26—His memory honored by the presence of three surviving North American Cardinals; the Pope's representative in the United States; Catholic dignitaries from all parts of the country, and of the American military and naval forces, Cardinal John M. Farley, was buried beneath the altar of St. Patrick's Cathedral.

At a Pontificial Requiem Mass celebrated by the Most Rev. John Bonzano, Apostolic Delegate to the United States, a final tribute was paid to the venerable head of the New York Archdiocese in a sermon by Bishop Thomas J. Hickey, of Rochester. On the altar were Cardinals Gibbons of Baltimore, O'Connell of Boston, and Begin of Quebec, together with 40 Archbishops and Bishops, and hundreds of priests. The great cathedral was crowded to the doors and thousands of people thronged the streets in the vicinity.

President Wilson sent a message expressing "the nation's loss," while Secretary of War Baker and Secretary of the Navy Daniels were represented by delegates. Gov. Whitman and his staff and Mayor Hylan and a large group of city officials were present. Members of the allied Commissions in this country were in attendance.

Fights With Plane, U-Boat is Beaten

LONDON, Sept. 27—The first case in which it is known that a submarine fought back when attacked by a seaplane resulted in the probable destruction of the submersible by an American aviator, Reserve Ensign J. F. Carson, it was announced by the Admiralty Tuesday.

With shrapnel from the elevated forward gun of the submarine bursting around his seaplane Ensign Carson manoeuvred until he was able to pour machine gun fire into the crew, felling two of them and driving the others inside. The submarine submerged, and as she was diving two bombs were dropped on her.

Within a few minutes the bow of the U-boat appeared on the surface and remained visible about four minutes. More bombs were dropped in this interval, and it is believed the undersea craft was either badly damagd or destroyed.

Ensign Carson's machine, with two others, was on patrol when the submarine was sighted on the surface, and the ensign made for her. As he was getting into position to use his machine gun or to bomb the undersea boat the German fired five shrapnel shells, three of which burst close to the seaplane, doing it some damage. The other seaplanes did not take part in the attack.

Ensign Carson remained over the spot 15 or 20 minutes but the U-boat was no longer in evidence. After going to the base to get another machine he returned to the spot and this tim again there were no traces of the submersible.

Harvey Says He Gained 25 Pounds

Weighs More He Ever Did in His Life Since Taking Tanlac

"To show you what Tanlac has done for me, I gained twenty-five pounds on five bottles and am now twelve pounds heavier than I ever was in my life," said M. Marvey, who is employed by the Grant, Smith-Porter Sarip Building Co., and lives at 410 Fifth Street, Portland, the other da.

"For four or five years," he continued, "I had an awful time with stomach trouble that steadily got worse in spite of all I could do. I didn't relish my food, and what I ate would ferment on my stomach and bloat me up with gas, till I was miserable for two or three hours afterwards. The terrible misery in my stomach would go clear trough to my back, and at times I would belch up much of what I had eaten. I fell off from a hundred and sixty-eight to a hundred and fifty-five pounds, I felt so tired and worn out that it was all I could do to keep going and many a time I felt like I just couldn't hold out another day. I took coudn't hold out another day. I took all sorts of medicines, but nothing did me a bit of good.

"When I heard of so many people taking Tanlac and being helped by it I got me a bottle to try, and it wasn't long before I was feeling like a different person. I eat like a pig now—anything I want and nothing hurts me at all. I never have any trouble with gas or those awful stomach pains and I went up in weight to a hundred and eighty pounds That old worn out feeling is gone. I am working hard every day and never feel tired like I did before. My wife was very much rundown too, and complained of indigestion and nervousness. A few bottles of Tanlac soon straightened her out and now she says that she feels as well as ever."

"Tanlac is sold in Belleville by Ostrom's Drug Store, in Trenton by J. H. Dickey, in Deseronto by W. J. Malley, in Stirling by J. S. Morton, in Frankford by W. J. Lettimer, in Madoc by J. Will Vince, in Marysville by T. F. McAlpine, in Ormsby by Jas. Campbell and in Thomasburg by J. H. Blakely."

WON SCHOLARSHIP

The many friends of Dr. Horace C. Wrinch, founder and superintendent of the Hazleton Hospital at Hazelton, B.C., will be pleased to learn that, at the recent examinations at the King Edward High School at Vancouver, his eldest son, Leonard B., passed Junior Matriculation, winning first place in the province, which entitles him to a scholarship of one hundred and fifty dollars. While Dr. Wrinch was a student at Albert College and identified with all departments of College life, he was superintendent of Holloway Street Sunday School. Later he helped organize the city Y.M.C.A., and was its first secretary. As a missionary to the Indians, during the early years of the existence of the hospital, Dr. Wrinch was supported by the Epworth Leagues of Belleville and Picton districts and the students of Albert College. Now he is well known throughout the northern regions of British Columbia as a most skilful physician, magistrate and influential man.

LONDON, Ont., Sept. 27.—Pte. Geo. Kersey, probationer minister of Howard Avenue Methodist Church, Windsor, who was apprehended by the military poice as a technical defaulter in an interview stated that he is quite satisfied with the action taken in his case. Pte. Kersey philosophically stated that he had been informed that he would learn further of his status when "London would move." London, he says, moved, with such startling suddenness as to shock him. He was medically examined on October 13, 1917, and placed in Category A, but since that time there appears to have been confusion in the treatment of his case. He did not definitely understand his status until he was apprehended as a defaulter.

Soldier Killed Wife Who Liked Germans

PARIS, Sept. 27.—A disabled French soldier named Lestienne, charged with cutting the throat of his wife, who had been familiar with German officers during the occupation of Douai, has been acquitted by the Seine Assize Court. The evidence shows that the husband, a working painter, had been provoked by his wife, who had changed from the modest working girl he had left behind into an overdressed, arogant woman, who was continually singing the praises of German officers.

On one occasion at a family dinner she served coffee in cups with a portrait of the Kaiser at the bottom, part of the service given to her by the Germans on leaving Douai. Her husband learned also that during the dinners at Douai his wife had worn a German officer's uniform. Finally Mme. Lestienne left her husband, then living in another town, saying she "intended to live her own life."

They met in the street and, the woman having refused to return to her husband, he cut her throat with a razor. The crowd in the court room cheered when the acquittal was announced.

PROFITEERING

Profiteering is nothing more or less than robbery camouflaged." That it is rampant throughout the country in nearly all lines of business cannot be denied. Boosting prices seems to be an epidemic among many who before they contracted it were considered far-sighted business men, so much so that their sound judgment foresaw a shortage in many lines, consequently they bought heavily to protect themselves. That is good business. But to our mind, it is the duty of every business man to protect his customers also, especially in these strenuous times. It is his duty to keep the prices of his merchandise as low as possible after allowing a reasonable profit for himself. The firm that betrays its customers' confidence today will surely be looking for customers when normal times again prevail. While not professing to be George Washington, philanthropist saints in disguise, or apostles of a new creed, we do give our customers this assurance, that there is no boosting of prices, no matter what goods are worth, wholesale or any other way, today. The original prices remain, and will do so until sold. Our stock is large and nearly all old quality goods at the old prices. When buying your Fall and Winter Clothing bear this in mind. It is to your advantage both for present and the future.

Act of Stupendous Folly He Declares

MONTREAL, Sept. 28—For" the Government to take over the Grand Trunk would be an act of stupendous folly," was the statement to a press representative here made by Lord Shaughnessy on his arrival in Montreal from his 8,000 mile trip through the west.

"This is a democractic country," his lordship continued, "and if the people say they want to own a railway they must get it. The Grand Trunk is a great international system, rendering important services with its feeders as between the eastern and western provinces and occupying a vital position in the transportation interests of the country. The Government has gone a certain distance towards nationalization of the Canadiar railways and it may feel, that, under pressure of circumstances, it may have to go further. It may feel that it must take over the Grand Trunk Pacific; but to take over the Grand Trunk would, in my opinion, be an act of stupendous folly."

His lordship spoke of the great activity in ship building and lumbering in British Columbia and dwelt upon what he termed "the waste of money in building a railway on Vancouver Island" which he characterized as "serving no practical purpose."

Lord Shaughnessey held that the war would be over before long, the Central Powers recognizing that they were ready beaten and it being mrely a choice between confessin gdefeat or suffring annihilation.

In regard to the period of reconstruction after the war, his lordship thought there might be an interlude when there will be a certain slackness but that it would not last long, and manufacturers will quickly revert their pre-war work. 'There need be no misgivings on that score,' said his lordship.

Ruman Peasants Openly Resist

ROME, Sept. 28—The situation in Roumania, according to information received here, has become alarming for the Central Powers. The Roumanian peasants made enthusiastic by the victories of the Entente countries, are beginning to resist only the German and Austro-Hungarian military.

Local revolts have occurred at a number of places and the Roumanian Government has sent agents to Berlin and Vienna to obtain a mitigation of the Austro-Hungarian rule. The Roumanian Government is reported to have pointed out that if its request is rejected it will be unable to guarantee the maintenance of order or avoid the eventualities of a sanguinary crisis.

Many Youthful Prisoners Were Taken by The French Forces

Thirty Villages in Flames as Germans Are Compelled to Hasten Their Retreat—French Are Now Advancing Over Ground They Have Not Trod For Four Years

With the French Army on the Champagne Front, Sept. 27.—Troops of the French army operating in conjunction with the Americans in a new battle along the Champagne front, have conquered positions that the Germans have been fortifying for four years, positions that they have sacrificed thousands of men to hold. The French losses have been remarkably light, in spite of the fact that the Germans' resistance stiffened this afternoon.

General Gouraud's soldiers, who advanced to those positions three years ago and have been facing them ever since are now enjoying a peculiar satisfaction in being in them.

In the battle of Champagne in 1915, the taking of these positions would have demanded a sacrifice that the strategic advantage to be gained then did not warrant. The situation is changed now. Successive blows administered to the Germans on different parts of the front give a different meaning to the attack.

The number of prisoners taken by the French is increasng steadily. They are filing back by all roads in groups of from a score to several hundred. Among them there is a larger proportion of very young men than heretofore taken. Some of the captives are recruits of the 1920 contingent.

They are leaving behind them scores of burning villages. Thirty had been observed in flames up to noon to-day. Even this additional and unjustifiable devastation can scarcely add to the desolation that has been spread all over this sharply disputed ground.

The ridges are covered with shell holes that touch each other everywhere; all vestiges of vegetation long ago disappeared, the surface of the ground giving the impression that it must have been reduced to a state of mud violently churned and then left to dry. The round is crossed and crisscrossed in every direction by trenches that have been blown out of shape.

A feature of to-day's operations was the activity of the enemy airmen, which furnished several spectacular encounters with French observation balloons and anti-aircraft artillery. White puffs from the trench shrapnel were seen everywhere over the field.

Mary Basil Appeal Case Argued at Osgoode Hall

TORONTO Sept. 28—Mr. D. L. McCarthy, K.C., yesterday finished argument for the appellants and Mr. W. N. Tilley, K.C., opened his reply for the respondent in the appeal of Archbishop Spratt and others in the Sister Mary Basil case, now being heard on appeal at Osgoode Hall by the First Appellate Division, Sir William Meredith presiding.

Opening the second day's hearing, Mr. McCarthy said he would now conclude the argument on the Archbishop's share in the matter. It had been held counsel said, that His Grace was proven responsible by conversations, both before and after the incident complained of.

Two of the conversations occurring before the attempted abduction were ones at which he was not present, and were not evidence at all ,and should not have been heard by the jury, he said. They were given in evidence early in the five-day trial, and a warning concerning them had not been given by the judge until the last day.

One of these, he said, concerned what the Archbishop knew of the plans. His Grace may have known of the Sisters' intentions, and did not prevent them from going ahead on their own responsibilty. On this occasion the Archbishop had accused Father Mea of interfering with " my administration."

Mr. McCarthy reviewed his protest against the admission of the trial of the examination of Sister Mary Regis, Mother-General, discussion arose with the Appellate Bench as to the division of liability between the individual and the officer of the order.

QESTION OF DAMAGES

"My objection really was to the reading and admission of portions of these various examinations for 'discovery without their consent being also allowed in," continued counsel. "I was overruled on the ground that the other side had closed its case before I objected."

Mr. Tilley had also been present at the trial in Kingston and had then taken the ground that His Grace constituted the Roman Catholic corporation of the Diocese and was being sued then in his official, as well as individual capacity. Therefore Mr. McCarthy argued, certain conversations affecting the liability of the corporation should be considered by the court.

Turning to attack the assessment of damages Mr. McCarthy cited and objected to the "statement of claim" as basing all on the Belleville occurrances, the alleged wilful malicious persecution which forced the nun to leave the Orphanage and "go penniless into the world after 29 years' service."

"But the questions," he went on, "deal entirely with the assault, which was only one of the occurrences which made her life unbearable there. These acts cotninued a year after the assault. I objected to this discrepancy at trial."

Mr. Tilley interposed: "My learned friend said then that there was no evidence connecting the Archbishop and Mother General with these acts."

"I objected to asking damages on one ground and getting them on another," said Mr. McCarthy.

"He is really claiming that the jury gave damages as they did because of improper charges by the learned judge, said Mr. Tilley.

MR. TILLEY'S ARGUMENT

An attempt to interrupt Mr. Tilley's closing address at trial was now made. Mr. McCarthy quoting and Mr. Tilley explaining.

After reviewing evidence affecting Dr. Phelan, Mr. McCarthy went on to the arrangements with the police chief for Constable Naylon the forcible removal.

"Phelan could not be responsible for the constable's acts or any assault," he said. "He acted as messenger for the sisters.

"If this were a criminal case Dr. Phelan might be guilty of aiding or abetting abduction," said the Chief

"The sister, so far as he knew, merely anticipated trouble," replied Mr. McCarthy.

At this point Mr. McCarthy closed his argument for the appellants.

Refutation of his opponent's contention that the Archbishop of Kingston could be used in his corporate capacity as the ecclesiastical corporation of the diocese was at once undertaken by Mr. Tilley.

"The person is the corporation," he asserted .

"He is a corporation according to your statute of 1845 only to hold land," declared both the presiding Chief Justice and Mr. Justice Ferguson.

"The corporation has no separate entity and a deed to it when there is no archbishop is void," continued Mr. Tilley.

"Suppose he excommunicates someone and is sued," suggested Mr. Justice Hodgins.

"Then he is sued under title of the corporation," added Mr. Tilley.

"If I were the wrong kind of a man and improperly managed those properties then he could ruin the diocese?" asked Justice Hodgins.

"I see nothing impossible in that," said counsel.

"Well, if it goes on, he is headed that way," replied the Justice referring to the assessing of substantial damages in that present case.

Mr. Tilley then quoted at length the statute of 1845 incorporating the then Roman Catholic Bishops, of Toronto and Kingston as corporations.

"For what purpose isn't it to hold land?" asked Sir William.

"The statute does not define, that is left for the church," replied Mr. Tilley.

"That whole point is—can property so held in trust be assessed for such damages?" said Mr. Justice Hodgins interrupting a long citation of cases by respondent's counsel. "You don't care in what capacity you see him as long as you——

"Get the money," said Mr. Tilley, adding: "I am assuming that the statute gives this corporation all the powers of a natural person."

Canadians Take 400 Prisoners

Apply Pincer Method to Substantial Force of the Enemy

With the Canadian Armies in France Sept. 28.—Tuesday Ontario troops by the application of clever tactics outmanoeuvred a substantial force of the enemy in front of Vis-en-Artois and Cherisy. They appled the pincer method. One party attacked on a flank and another to the front in a strong trench system and pinched off a nose of enemy territory that promised to be a source of nuisance. Wednesday they hit out again, while Manitoba troops on the left charged ahead and captured another 1,500 yards. When the pincers closed a useful strip of ground, with considerable number of machine guns, was in our hands, with over 400 prisoners. In one strongly fortified position the entire garrison was wiped out.

A captured officer complained that whenever his regiment was attacked it was by the Canadians.

IF YOU HAVE THE FLU DON'T TRY TO FIGHT IT

Dr. Hastings Advises Bed When First Symptoms Appear.

Toronto, Sept. 28.—"If you feel any of the symptoms of influenza, whether of the Spanish, American or Canadian types, don't fight it—go to bed."

This was the advice given by Dr. Hastings when asked if he had any message for the citizens, in view of the prevalence of Spanish influenza in some of the cities of the United States, particularly Boston. "The great trouble is they think that they can fight the disease and stay up until symptoms of pneumonia develop." The doctor emphasized the importance of isolating persons suffering from influenza.

Short Shrift For Canadian Bolsheviki

OTTAWA, Sept. 27—Measures will be taken by the Government is is reported, summarily to put a stop to the operations of organizations of pronounced anarchistic or Bolshevist tendencies which seek to discourage or defeat activities arising out of Canada's participation in the war. In the United States action has been taken against such groups and certain of their leaders, among them prominent members of the Industrial Workers of the World, have been sentenced to terms of penal servitude. In Canada, it is understood, an order-in-council will shortly be passed to provide for the trial and punishment of offenders of the same class.

Allies Bivouac by Sea of Galilee

LONDON, Sept. 28—British troops operating in Palestine are extending their occupation about the Sea of Galilee. They have occupied Tiberias and Semakh, on the borders of that sea, and Es-Samra, it was officially announced to-day.

Pushing on to the east of the Jordon, the British have occupied the strategic town of Amman, on the Hedjas Railway.

The British casualties during the offensive were less than one-tenth of the number of prisoners taken from the Turks, the announcement states.

LEAVE FOR SIBERIA

Thirteen men and three officers left the field hospital at Barriefield camp yesterday on the first lap of the long march to Siberia. These will join on the Pacific coast the expedition which is going over to Russia to help overthrow the bloody Bolsheviki and try and bring order out of chaos in Russia. A telegram asking for volunteers for cavalry was received in Kingston Thursday, and a number are applying to join this branch of the service.

Keeping The New Baby in The Oven

Rock-a-bye baby,
Near the fire pot.
When the wood burns.
Baby'll keep hot.

That, presumably, is the revised version of the old nursery rhyme, sung in a Bolton street home. At any rate, there is ground for the assumption, inasmuch as the baby certainly is quartered in the oven of the stove in which a fire is kept going. With a bread tin such as is used for baking individual loaves for its cradle, the wee mite is apparently quite comfortable in its strange surroundings.

The few-days-old subject of the story weighed two pounds when it was born, and those attending the case feared that ordinary measures of keeping newcomers to our population at a proper temperature would not prove satisfactory in the case of the unusually small babe. The stove was going "on low," and with the oven door open, it was considered that this would provide suitable quarters for the new arrival.

So far, the novel procedure seems to have worked out quite satisfactorily, and the two-pound bit of humanity seems to be quite content in its bread-tin cradle located in an oven incubator.—Ottawa Journal.

SURVIVORS OF TURKISH ARMY DRIVEN INTO ARMS OF ARABS

LONDON, Sept. 27.—In Palestine, the southern and western shores of the Lake of Tiberias are generally in our hands. The Turkish garrisons resisted stiffly, but were overcome. Our cavalry occupied Amman and are now driving the enemy up the Hedjas railway in the arms of the Arabs of Deraa. Some of the enemy may escape to Damascus, others going southwards to the Dead Sea, the object being to extricate the garrison which is being hard pressed by the Arabs.

ORDERED TO BE SOLD

WASHINGTON, Sept. 28—Real estate and buildings on Riverside drive, New York City, owned by Mrs. Lily Busch, wife of the late Adolphus Busch, millionaire brewer, of St. Louis, are to be sold by the federal custodian of alien property at private sale. Authority for the sale is given in an executive order of the President, made public Wednesday at the custodian's office. All of Mrs. Busch's property in this country, valued at many millions of dollars, was seized by the alien property custodian while Mrs. Busch was in Germany, but since her return to America, she has filed a petition asking for its return on the ground that she is an American. No action has yet been taken on the petitions, and it was for this reason that the property in New York could not be sold at public auction.

An offer for the purchase of the Riverside drive property was made before the President's order was issued, it is disclosed, and Mrs. Busch consented in writing that the sale be made.

Canadians in The New Breach of Hindenburg Line

With the British Army, Sept. 28—Gen. Byng's army and some of Gen. Hornsby's, including Canadians, participated in the new drive launched yesterday toward Cambrai.

By nine o'clock remarkable progress had been made. They had crossed the enormously difficult canal between Moeuvres and Havrincourt, and 7,000 yards of Hindenburg trenches and deep wire barriers beyond.

At 7.55, the British were advancing on Bourlon spur (four miles directly west of Cambrai), the Germans surrendering in great droves. Tanks had reached Flesquieres (five miles southwest of Cambrai) at 8.25, the infantry pouring in behind them.

SHERMAN SAID IT

John McCormack, the famous tenor, tells a story which he claims graphically illustrates the horrors of war. On returning from a Red Cross concert he was amazed to find his wife laboriously trying to remove the spots from a palm beach suit. "Where's Nora," demanded the amazed songbird. "She's in the kitchen. I thought I'd do this myself, because the poor girl simply can't bear the smell of gasoline since the chauffeur enlisted."

WAITING FOR THE HANGMAN

WINNIPEG, Sept. 28—A hangman's delay has given Frank Sullivan and Phillip Johnson, condemned to death for the murder of Constable Snowdon on April 5, five more days to live. The delay does not mean that there is any chance of reprieve, Judge Metcalfe emphasized, saying that little short of miracle could save the lives of the men now. The fact that Arthur Eliss, the hangman, is unable to leave Quebec until Monday caused the delay.

Another Major Stroke by Foch Starts in West

NEW YORK, Sept. 26—The Associated Press yesterday afternoon issues the following:

French and American troop yesterday stormed the German positions in Champagne and further east in what apparently is another major stroke by Marshal Foch. The new offensive is progressing favorably according to early reports.

On the Macedonia front British troops have invaded Bulgaria as the Serbian and other allied armies pursue the hard-pressed Germans and Bulgarians east and west of the Vardar.

The new allied trust in the west comes on a front which has not been very active since the Germans failed to advance in Champagne in the defeated offensive of July 15 east and west of Rhemis. French soldiers are attacking in Champagne, which runs from Rhemis eastward to the Argonne, west of Verdun. The Americans are moving forward east of the Champagne simultaneously with Gen. Petain's men.

GREAT POSSIBILITIES IN DRIVE

Great possibilities might result from a successful allied advance on the front east of Ahemis as the German communications would be severed and the formidable enemy position from Arras to Laon endangered, with the important southern end outflanked. The length of the attacking front is not disclosed, but it may possibly be from Rhemis eastward past Verdun to southwest of Metz.

In Macedonia the allies are advancing all along the 130-mile V-shaped front between Monastir and Lake Doiran. The Bulgarians first army on the allied left has been placed in a dangerous position by the cutting of the Prilep-Veles road at Izvor, while the Serbians are in the outskirts of Ishtib, 18 miles east of Veles, and one of the bases of the Bulgarian second army. Apparently the Veles-Ishtib line the most formidable for the enemy south of Uskub, will prove untenable.

Northeast of Lake Doiran, British troops have crossed the frontier into Bulgarian Macedonia, threatening the extreme enemy left flank. Enemy territory was invaded A Kosturino is at the head waters of the Trekanya River, which flows through virtually level country to Strumitza. Meanwhile the French and Greeks are pushing eastward from the Vardar River in the direction of Strumitza, which is situated in a valley between two high mountain ranges.

In local operations between Cambrai and St. Quentin, on the western front, the British are pushing further into the Hindenburg line, and capturing points vital to the defence of St. Quentin. The British have advanced in the regions of Salency and Gricourt.

Uncle Sam is a Great Old Spender

WASHINGTON, Sept. 27—America's war debt will reach the nineteen billion mark the day she launches her fourth great loan.

With daily expenditures ranging close to $59,000,000 this month, the war cost will break all records. The nation's burden for September is placed at $1,775,000,000 which, according to unofficial figures, exceeds the monthly expenditure of any other belligerent.

Although Germany's debt has been shrouded with some mystery her, four years of war have piled up a debt said to be $39,000,000,000. This includes maintenance of her armies and running her Government as well. The United States, therefore, has spent nearly half as much in eighteen months as Germany has in forty-nine months. But this Government, of course, has aided her associates in the war to the extent of $6,500,000,000 in actual cash advances and has tendered credits of $750,000,000 more.

The burden of expense borne by America in September exceeds the month of Sept. 1917. There is a surplus besides which is equal to the cost of running the Government in any month of any pre-war year, Treasury Department statistics reveal.

Gas Now Treated As Self-Inflicted Hurt

LONDON, Sept. 27.—German gas does not hold the terrors it did in the earlier days of the war, as British masks provide practically complete protection.

Army scientists are said to be so satisfied with the anti-gas measures that cases of gassing are now treated as self-inflicted. Unless the victim can establish that his hurt was sustained through no fault of his own, he is regarded as suffering from self-inflicted wounds.

Latest German gases are said to be not outwardly unpleasant and have no immediate effects, with the consequence that men are tempted to disregard the warnings and delay putting on the masks.

The Franco American attack on both sides of the Argonne is continuing satisfactory. The total length of the line of attack is between forty and fifty miles The Americans advanced to an average depth of seven miles taking over five thousand prisoners. French troops made a gain of an average depth of four miles taking over three thousand prisoners. An immense amount of booty has been taken.

The Business Woman

To-day, more than ever before, is woman's opportunity. Many new occupations are now opened to her, which, before the war, she was deemed unfitted to fill. And truth to tell she has risen to the opportunity, and now shares many business responsibilities in former times confined to men. But, as women are subject to more frequent fluctuations of health than men, many will be handicapped early, of they regard their health requirements too lightly.

The nervous strain, long hours and prolonged mental or physical fatigue thin the blood and weaken the nerves. Such conditions as women are now called upon to undergo can only be endured by a full-blooded constitution. This is as true for men as for women, only weaker women suffer soonest. The woman worker, in any line, requires her blood replenished frequently. She needs new, rich blood to keep her health under the trying conditions of business life and to fortify her system against the effects of overwork. This applies also to the woman in the home, who, perhaps, has more worries and anxieties than usual. So let all girls and women take heed and renew their blood promptly at the first approach of pallor, lack of appetite, headache or backache. This can be best and most effectively accomplished by taking Dr. Williams' Pink Pills which make new, rich blood and thus help womankind so perfectly. No woman need fear failure of health if they take these pills occasionally to keep them well, or give them a fair trial if they find themselves run down.

You can get Dr. Williams Pink Pills through any medicine dealer or by mail at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50 from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

A HUN ON THE RUN.

The German commander of the Turkish forces in Palestine, one Field Marshal Liman von Sanders, lost no time in burning distance when Allenby made his master stroke. Von Sanders was in Nazareth when the word came that the British troops were coming and Von Sanders immediately started going, leaving his armies to do their own fighting or running as it pleased them. Von Sanders made such a good run that he was reported as passing through Constantinople on Thursday on his way to Berlin. He must have elected himself special messenger extraordinary to carry the news to Bill the Butcher along the Safety First line.

SAVING CANADIAN PAPER FOR U. S. DAILIES.

From Ottawa comes the hint that the question of limiting the size of Canadian newspapers and regulating the reading matter will be considered by Government officials. Canadian demands for newsprint paper are so small in comparison to the Canadian supply that action of this nature would seem to be an effort to conserve Canadian paper on behalf of the export trade. As to regulating the quantity and quality of the reading matter of Canadian newspapers, that would be a task which even the Government might well shrink from.

There is no paper being wasted by Canadian newspapers to any appreciable extent; rather are they saving all they can. In the United States, however, the publishers are past masters in the art of paper-wasting with innumerable editions and many columns of misleading headings in poster type. Let the paper saving start in the United States first, but for heaven's sake, don't try to starve the Canadian newspaper reading public to feed the immense newspaper presses of the Republic!

More brains and less pulp, as Frank Oliver would say, is all right if not carried too far—and Canadian newspapers have never yet even faintly approached the extravagant paper-wasting size of the metropolitan dailies of the United States. An American Sunday paper would keep a corner grocery in bread wrappers for a week.

A BIT OF CANADA IN FRANCE.

The light railways built along the western front by the Canadian army constitute one of the most notable contributions made by this country to the progress of the Allied cause, says the Toronto News. The longest and most spectacular of these railways is that constructed in the Vimy region. This narrow gauge line has been called the Vimy Ridge-Lens-Hill 70-Loos Railway. Though the Canadians are now fighting a little to the south it is still operated for the benefit of the British troops, which today occupy this sector.

This road was built and long operated under the direction of General Lindsey. It has a total trackage of 65 miles. It accommodates 150 trains a day, and can handle many tons of war supplies daily, which otherwise would engage several hundred motor lorries. This frees the wagon roads for other necessary purposes and effects a great saving of gasoline. The line is also used in rushing troops to the front in cases of emergency, and in bringing back the wounded.

The road mounts Vimy Ridge, traverses the plains beyond and penetrates close to the town of Lens, lately evacuated by the Germans. It winds about the battle grounds and graveyards sacred to the memory of gallant Canadians who fell defending their country's cause. The Ottawa Government should retain possession of the railway after the war and use it as a means of carrying Canadians and other Allied visitors to the many points of interest in this region which the valor of the Dominion troops has converted into a bit of Canada on French soil. The French Government would readily consent to such an arrangement.

With every passing day the opportunities of augmenting the coal supply of Belleville become fewer and the danger of suffering from fuel scarcity this winter becomes greater to the families whose coal bins are empty or nearly so. Unless the civic authorities take immediate steps to ascertain just how much additional fuel will be needed to prevent suffering this winter it may be too late for effective action.

Spanish Influenza, according to the English papers, is rife in Germany and at one time thirty-five doctors in Berlin Charity Hospital were laid up with it. This will be encouraging news to those who have suspicions that this disease is but another sample of German frightfulness and the result of careless handling of bacteria in the interests of the Boss Butcher of Berlin.

The Kaiser can generally keep a few laps ahead of any threatened damage to his august person, but he evidently overlooked a bet at Mannheim where he was surprised by an allied air raid. Bill the Butcher beat his staff to the cellar cool when the bombs began to drop in an effort to defer a little longer his departure from the German vale of tears and beers. Bill may dodge his fate for a time, but there will come a day when no cellar will be too deep or too dark to hide his criminal carcase from the retribution which is surely coming to him.

A Toronto boy who joined the soldiers of the soil movement and went to work on a farm in his vacation, returned to his home after a few days farm experience. Asked what was the trouble, he said that the first morning he was awakened by the farmer with a lantern at four o'clock. The next morning the farmer appeared with the call to action at 3.45, so the city boy told the farmer that he hadn't hired as a night watchman and quit the job.

OTHER VIEWS

The Lord's Intentions.

The Outlook.

I was struck with the incident related by John Van Ess of a visit by an American to a school up the Tigris, where he found the teacher instructing the scholars something about the New World. The teacher requested the American to tell them something about his home land. The American, pointing on the map to the Isthmus of Panama, told of the project of uniting two continents; after which the teacher stepped forward and said: "This teaches us how we are privilege to live in a land where Allah is known and feared. Over there they purpose to cross Allah's path by making water to flow where He made land."

How like an incident which happened right here in Maryland! I was born and raised in western Maryland, where the Dunkards are largely dominant as farmers. The Dunkards are opposed to war, do not go to law, and accept the Bible literally. When the project of building the Chesapeake and Ohio Canal was started, there was little trouble in securing the right of way until the committee struck the Dunkard settlement in Washington County, Maryland. Those old, bearded men (they never shave) were obstinate: "If the Lord intended water to be there, He would have put it there." Long months were spent in trying to bring these simple-minded people around to appreciate the value of the enterprise. Finally, in one last effort, the committee called a meeting of the land-owners, when urgent appeals were made to agree to the right of way. One after another met the appeal by saying, "If the Lord intended water to be there, He would have put it there." The case was almost hopeless, when finally one old, long-bearded elder arose and said, "And Isaac's servants digged a well," and sat down. That was a knockout for the literalists. The right of way was granted and the canal was "digged."

Setting Brother Against Brother.

Lord Shaughnessy.

It seems most unfortunate that on too frequent occasions we find a deliberate endeavor to arouse animosity between Province and Province or between the East and the West. It is the duty of every good citizen to leave nothing undone that he can do to prevent that sort of thing and to create in the country such a spirit that we can face the world as a united forceful people. If we can do that, if we can carry out the motto I saw here today, which impressed me very much—"Produce and Save"—if we can produce as we should, on the farm and in the factory, it means a favorable balance of trade and an increase in the country's wealth. It is safe to say that it was the savings of the people that enabled France to recover from the war of 1870. If we can save, we shall have the same experience, in the market, on the farm and in the home.

Hard to Take.

"Can I take this seat, miss?"

"I have no objections, sir," she said in a tone that froze the last smile on his face, "but I think it's nailed down."

Some Argument

Irate Parent—You can get rid of money faster than any men I know.

Son—True, dad, but listen: By getting rid of it quickly I save lots of time, and time, you know, is money.

Have a Heart!

The Poet's Corner

A SOLDIER'S ROUGH RHYMES

A British chaplain, who has won the Military Cross, Rev. G. A. Studdert Kennery, has written a little book of poems, "Rough Rhymes of a Padre," which comes nearer to expressing the soldier's religion than many a pretentious tome. Here are revealing fragments from one Tommy's soliloquy:

Our Padre were a solemn bloke,
We called 'im dismal Jim
It fairly gave ye t'bloomin' creeps,
To sit and 'ark at 'im,
When he were on wi' Judgment Day,
Abaht that great white Throne,
And 'ow each chap would 'ave to stand,
And answer on 'is own.
And if 'e tried to charnce 'is arm,
And 'ide a single sin,
There'd be the angel Gabriel,
Wi' books to do 'im in.
'E 'ad it all writ down, 'e said,
And nothin' could be 'id,
'E 'ad it all—in black and white,
And 'e would take no kid.
And every single idle word
A soldier charnced to say
'e'd 'ave it all thrown back at 'im
I' court on Judgment Day.

By way of illustration, the soldier tells the tale of Billy Briggs, who tripped up in a trench one bad night, while carrying tea to the men, a man with uncommon skill in profanity, and who later was killed by a shell:

But Bill, 'e left 'im standin' still,
He turned the black night blue,
And I guess the Angel Gabriel
'Ad short'and work to do.
Well 'ow would poor old Bill go on,
When 'e stood all alone,
And 'ad to hear that tale read out
Afore the great white throne?
If what our Padre says is right,
'E'd 'ave a rotten spell,
And finish up ov it, I s'pose,
'Ed 'ave to go to 'ell.
And yet 'e were a decent lad,
And met a decent end,
You'll never finish decenter
Than tryin' to 'elp a friend.
But some'ow I can't think it's right,
It ain't what God would do.
This tale of all these record books,
I think it's all napoo.
'Twould let some rotten beggars in,
And keep some good 'uns out,
There's lots of blokes what does no wrong,
As can't do nowt but shout.

Then Tommy dreamed one night that he was dead:

I seemed to stand alone, beside
A solemn kind o' sea,
Its waves they got in my inside,
And touched my memory.
And day by day, and year by year,
My life came back to me.

• • • • • •

And there before be Someone stood
Just lookin' dahn at me,
And still behind 'Im moaned and moaned
That everlasting sea.
I couldn't speak, I felt as though
'E 'ad me by the throat.
'Twere like a drownin' fellah feels
Last moment 'e's afloat.
And 'E said nowt; 'E just stood still,
For I dunno 'ow long.
It seemed to me like years and years,
But time out there's all wrong.
What was 'E like? You're askin' now;
Can't word it anyway—
'E just were 'Im, that's all I knows
There's things as words can't say.
It seemed to me as though 'Is face,
Were millions rolled in one
It never changed, yet always changed,
Like the sea beneath the sun.
'Twere all men's face yet no man's face,
And a face no man can see,
And it seemed to say in silent speech,
"Ye did 'em all to Me,
"The dirty things ye did to them,
"The filth ye thought was fine,
"Ye did 'em all to Me," it said,
"For all their souls were mine,"
All eyes were in 'Is eyes—all eyes,
My wife's and a million more.

• • • • • •

And then at last 'E said one word,
'E just said one word—"Well?"
And I said in a funny voice,
"Please can I go to 'Ell?"
And 'E stood there and looked at me,
And 'E kind o' seemed to grow
Till 'E shone like the sun above my 'ead,
And then 'E answered "No,
You can't; that 'Ell is for the blind,
And not for those that see."

• • • • • •

I's got to follow what I's seen
Till this old carcase dies,
For I daren't face in the land o' grace,
The sorrow of those eyes.
There ain't no throne, and there ain't no books,
It's 'Im, just 'Im, that is the Judge
Of blokes like you and me;
And, boys, I'd sooner frizzle up
I' the flames of a burning 'Ell,
Than stand and look into 'Is face
And 'ear 'Is voice say, "Well?"

All Canned Salmon In Britain Seized

No Private Dealing, as it is Under Complete Control of The Ministry

OTTAWA, Sept. 28.—The Canada Food Board has received from the British Ministry of Food a copy of the canned salmon requisition order, dated September 2, 1918.

Under this order the British Food Controller has seized all canned salmon packed in Canada and the United States arriving in the United Kingdom after September 4, 1918.

Since September 4 no one in the United Kingdom, except under the order of the Food Controller has been permitted to deal in canned salmon packed in Canada or the United States.

Return of shipments of canned salmon enroute to the United Kingdom were made to the Food Controler prior to Septpember 15.

Canned salmon is under complete food control in the United Kingdom. There is no private dealing in it.

To Test New Plan For Producing Gas

OTTAWA, Sept. 28.—To test the practicability of the method of producing gas from straw, devised by Prof. R. D. MacLaurin, of the University of Saskatchewan, and Mr. Harrison, of Moosejaw, a plant will be instaled upon a farm in Saskatchewan and will, it is hoped, be in operation this winter.

The Advisory Council for Scientific and Industrial Research, under whose auspices Prof. MacLaurin and Mr. Harrison made their experiments, has appropriated $1,500 to meet the cost of the retort used for distilling the gas, the "scrubber" for purifying it and the reservoir for storing it. The apparatus wil be erected on a farm near Saskatoon where there is no domestic coal supply and where the operations can be carried on under the supervision of Prof. MacLaurin.

By the system gas, suitable for lighting, heating and cooking can, it is asserted, be derived from ordinary straw by a process of destructive distillation. With a plant which in pre-war times would have cost ony $500, but which is now considerably more, a farmer, it is said, could generate in an hour and a half enough gas for domestic use for three weeks. The invention is of particular importance to the people of Western Canada, where fuel for domestic use is scarce and expensive, and where it is estimated that annually 20,000,000 tons of straw have been destroyed. It may also be of no small value to farmers in other parts of the country.

Prof. MacLaurin's apparatus and process were exhibited at the National Exposition of Chemical Industries of the United States held within the last few days in New York. They will, it is announced, be given a trial in the United States.

150 Shot Every Night in Moscow

WASHINGTON, Sept. 28—A despatch to the Russian Embassy says: With the safe arrival of United States Consul-General Poole of Stockholm from Moscow, additional information concerning conditions in central Russia have reached the State Department. The massacre of Russian citizens in Moscow was continuing September 9, with about 150 executions nightly. More than 1,000 persons had been shot in retaliation for the attempt to kill Lemine, the Bolshevik Premier.

Information also has reached the State Department that on September 15 the most violent elements of the Bolsheviki were in control in Petrograd and were carrying out a cold-blooded terror. People were being arrested en masse and unknown numbers were shot daily at Kronstadt alone. It was reported that 1,700 persons, mostly former officers, were being held as hostages for the lives of the Bolshevik commissars. The population was said to be utterly cowed and there appeared to be little prospect of a change in the situation.

On an order from Moscow, the information said, forty-six Englishmen were imprisoned early this month on the pretense that they had to do with the killing of Uritsky, head of the Soviet Committee for the Suppression of the Counter revolution. There also were 20 odd French citizens in the same prison.

It is stated that prison conditions for Russians and allied citizens could not be worse. The prisoners are crowded in groups of fifteen to twenty in small and very damp cells. Only two or three can lie down at the same time. They are permitted no exercise, have little air, no bedding, and practically no food.

NEW HIGH RECORDS IN RAW FUR PRICES

NEW YORK, Sept. 28—Sales at the close of the fourth day of the fur auction here totalled $2,250,000. For the second time in two days a new high record price for a raw skin in this country was established when the choicest lynx pelts were sold to a local dealer at $55 each. General prices paid for lynx averaged 30 per cent. higher. Marmot also averaged 30 per cent. higher. Hair seal average advanced 20 per cent. All of the other furs sold equalled the April figures. The high prices paid for lynx were attributed to the shortage of existing supplies of this fur and to its growth as fashionable fur this season.

SEIZE $2,000 WORTH OF CHINESE WHISKEY

TORONTO, Sept. 28—With a seizure of $2,000 worth of Chinese whiskey the police claim to have cleaned up the distributing centre of whiskey in Toronto among Chinamen. Two arrests were made and twenty cases of the liquor seized. James Wong of 52 Hamilton Street, east, and Wong Tong of 181 Queen street, east, were taken into custody on charges of committing a breach of the Ontario Temperance Act.

BUY WATCHES TO GET GOLD

Ingenious Scheme of Central Empires to Increase Their Supply of the Precious Metal.

It is an oddity of the world war that the jewelry trade is flourishing. A recent article in the Revue Suisse d'Exportation of Geneva gives an interesting view of this situation and also suggests a method by which the central empires undoubtedly have increased their gold supply—namely, the importation of gold jewelry to be melted into bullion.

In the course of the crisis provoked by the European war we pass from one surprise to another, says the Revue. The belligerent countries, one after another, have imposed measures forbidding the importation of luxuries and watches. In spite of all these difficulties the orders, particularly for gold watches of medium price, are received in increasing numbers by our watchmakers, while those for watches of high and low prices are few.

The jewelry trade has passed through a prosperous period, which is not yet over. In fact, it is at its height. Everything went well so long as there were no abuses, but the time came when jewelry, especially heavy gold chains without much workmanship, began to be exported to the Orient. High prices were paid for these articles. Gold (fine) in Switzerland is valued at about $720 a kilo (2.2 pounds) and in the Orient, or at Vienna, it is quoted at $2,400 per kilo. There is, therefore, a considerable margin which allows a large profit to our manufacturers and their agents, also to foreign merchants. These articles, however, are not all destined for Turkey. A great many of them find their way into the central empires.

When steps were taken to check this trade numerous orders for watches with cheap movements in heavy gold cases came flowing into the watchmaking centers. These orders were destined for Constantinople. The scheme was perfectly apparent, and government authorities took prompt measures to put a stop to the proceeding.

HOW BIG GUN WAS FOUND

French Artillery Officers Made Careful Measurements, and the Rest of the Matter Was Easy.

Careful measurements of two holes made by a single shell in passing through two awnings in a Paris factory enabled French artillery officers to locate the great German long-range gun by a feat of mathematics. The two awnings were several feet apart and the relation of one to the other gave perfect data on the course which the shell had taken as it approached the earth. After the apertures had been measured to the one-thousandth part of an inch and the direction of the shell's fall exactly established, the earlier career of the shell became a problem on paper. By applying the laws governing the flight of projectiles, and allowing for the wind, the state of the atmosphere and other considerations, French artillery officers were able to follow back the course of the shell to the mouth of the cannon in the forest of St. Gobain, after which it was speedily demolished by French artillery.

Wisdom of Daylight Saving.

Who ever thinks nowadays that the sun is an hour behind the clock? Who ever tells himself it "really is five o'clock" when it is six? We go peaceably to bed when the clock tells us to; we arise by the same token; we eat, play and work by the Promethean instrument which, for war and common sense purposes, is stealing 60 golden minutes every day from the sun to benefit the human race. And nary a vulture of any description is tearing at the clock's vitals for filching the same.

Here and there is a little petty thievery such as the beginning of baseball games at 2:30 o'clock that used to begin at three o'clock; but the public is too busy with great work, and at present with the races and golf recreation to worry about that. In general, America is living by the clock as it should do, and the wisdom of the daylight savings law is a thousand times manifest.

Italians Save Wood Ashes.

Increased wood-burning and scarcity of chemical fertilisers are reported by Consul Haven of Turin to be turning attention in Italy to the saving and collection of wood ashes. Of the many constituents, the potash is of importance for fertilizing. The potash in wood ash averages 6 to 19 per cent, and the quantity per ton of wood ranges from one pound from spruce to 2.21 from oak and 8.6 from elm. A ton of wormwood yields 160.93 pounds of potash in 241.73 of ash; fumaria, 174.16 pounds of potash in 482.81 of ash.

Mrs. Styles—You have a wonderful memory for dress, dear.

Mr. Styles—Well, I've seen a lot of it.

"Why, yes; you had a sort of a foolish look on your face."

"Do you take exercise regularly?"

"Yes," replied Mr. Chuggins. "I crank the old flivver three or four times daily and repair a tire at least twice a week."

Solving the Nation's Shoe Problem

A LARGE section of the Canadian public depends upon this company for shoes. Our financial resources and buying power are greater by far than those of any other Canadian manufacturer of shoes; our volume of output is more than twice that of any other. Our sales organization covers the nation from coast to coast, not merely a small section at a time.

Our six branches maintain adequate stocks within the reach of every dealer in Canada, and are now serving more than 5,000 dealers, enabling them to fill orders quickly and to cut down the amount of idle stock on their shelves.

We are making every effort to use this power to help solve the big problem of providing enough good quality shoes to go around. In the face of an actual scarcity of leather, it is difficult; but it can be done if you will co-operate with us. Buy wisely, for service rather than merely for style, and see that the shoes you buy are stamped with the manufacturer's trade-mark.

BIG SHELL CONTRACT FOR BRANTFORD FIRM

BRANTFORD, Sept. 28—A new feature in the matter of shell contracts was announced here to-day when Kerr and Goodwin, a local firm, accepted terms with the United States Government for the construction of 175,000 semi-steel gas shells. The contract is subject to cancelation June 30 next year if the war is terminated by that date; if not, operations will continue until the end of the year. The contract involves the expenditure of $1,500,000 and the erection of a new plant by the firm.

The Missing Symptom Real Spanish Inluenza

THE MISSING SYMPTOM

(F. W. Thomas in London, Eng .Star)

And did everything look green?" they asked me; and when I said I had not noticed it, they smiled a secret sort of smile so that I felt small. As if I had been diddled of my just and awful symptoms.

"Yours must have been quite a slight affair," they said. "Now when we had it, everything looked the greenest sort of green. Most extraordinary! The sky, the breakfast porridge, the military situation, the bacon, the babies; all green. As green as grass. You must have had a very mild attack." Whereas theirs was the real thing, the only genuine Spanish Flu, imported direct from the Old Castile, with a facsimile of King Alfonso's signature in the corner of every packet.

Well, I suppose after all, it was only a bit of a cold. Certainly there were no limelight effects. Nothing looked green that I can remember. Blue, if you like; but not green.

Maybe, I was too busy to notice. There were a lot of other interesting phenomemena to occupy my attention. The Strand for instance. Just by Wellington street the Strand had been converted into one of those Wiggle Woggle side-shows that used to make Earl's Court so exciting. And there was I, trying to climb up the ever-depressing hillocks with large bundles of clock weights tied to my feet.

It was an interesting experience. Inside my hat all the church bells were ringing Grandsire Triples, and there was a Wagner Night with maroon effects going on in my cerebellum. So I went home and crawled into bed.

THE SICK ROOM

And for a space I was afraid I was going to die. And then for another space I was afraid I wasn't. But I didn't see green. A mere chill, I suppose.

According to the picture-books, being laid up isn't at all a bad business You lie in your little downy nest propped up with pillows, and people bring you calves feet jelly and port wine and book and grapes, and ministering angels flutter round your bed and swab your heated brow until you positively dread getting better. But what really happens? What happens when you-ve got the Spanish Flu even without seeing the green limes?

Ministering Angel (without):Are awake? Have you got your head under the clothes? Do you feel as if you're going to sneeze? Are you holding your breath. Oh, then I'll push the bread and milk under the door. (Does so and runs.)

That night I lay in my downy nest which had just been ploughed (and they'd left the plough in the bed.) There came to me two War Office officials and three hundred Army contractors, all with spiked tails and red-hot feet. And the War Office men said:"Build an aerodrome in the small of his back." Whereupon the Army contractors fetched marlinspikes and crowbars and picks and blasting cartridges, and set to work. First they dug a deep foundation in my lumbar region and put in red-hot drainpipes. Then some lai da light railway with cranes all down my spinal column, while others inserted the crowbar between my joints and prised them opened them open slowly, knocking off every ten minutes for dinner.

ON THE RACK

Having got my legs off, they blew out six of my vertebrae with gun-cotton and lit a fire in the hole.

Half an hour lated two more War Office officials came in, looked at the ruin, and said: "That's no good for an aerodrome! Fill it up, and start again somewhere else. Anywhere will do." And it was so, all through the night.

Then the doctor came—one of those big, hail-fellow doctors; and "Um!" he said, and "Ah!" he said, and "Well what have you been doing?" he said. But, worst of all, he said: "Did you notice that everything looked green?"

D'you know, was just about fed up with that evergreen question.

"Not at first!" I said. "But now you mention it, you look a sort of a gamboge yourself, and it's getting darker. In fact, the more I see you the greener you look. "Doctor," I said, "you're going bad."

"Light-headed!" said the doctor. "Quite typical. Give him one of those and two of those, and keep his feet higher than his head. Heaps higher."

So a derrick was rigged to the ceiling and my feet were hauled up and up until they came unstuck, and it all had to be done over again. And they took my eyes and sand papered them, and rasped my brain with a file, tied my solar plexus to a kite balloon, and turned six hungry vultures loose on my liver. So that again I thought I was going to die. Once I was certain I heard the splash of Charon's oar as he came across for me, but it was only the man three doors up sneezing.

"Good!" I said. "I wonder if he saw green?"

REVENGE

But it wasn't Spanish Flu. Oh, no! A mere chill, caught through drinking out of a damp glass.

Next day a bosom friend called to see me, a man I thought would stick to me closer than a gumboil. He stood just outside the door, full of quinine, and surrounded by an aura of eucalyptus.

"How are you going on, old chap?" he bellowed. What is it? Flu? Did you see everything green?"

"Rather!" I yelled. "Everything! The trees were green, and the cabbages, and the green peas and the ha'-penny stamps. Everything! But I'm seeing red now. I'm fed up with being fed up and I'm coming out to sneeze. I'm light-headed and they've left me my razors. So it's polished handles for both of us, old son. Wow-WOW!"

You should have heard him travel!

BULGARIA ON EVE OF TURNING COAT?

NEW YORK, Sept. 27.—The Associated Press yesterday issued the following:

From Paris come reports that a Ministerial crisis is impending in Bulgaria and that there may be a complete change in the foreign policy of that country. The present Premier, M. Malinoff, was favorable to the allies before Bulgaria entered the war as an ally of the Central Powers. It is possible that the allied victory in Macedonia may be reflected in political developments of the most important character in Bulgaria.

4th Liberty Loan Now Under Way

WASHINGTON, Sept. 28.—Nearly ten billion dollars' worth of Government war bonds have been sold in the first, second and third Liberty Loan campaigns, paving the way for the fourth campaign, which opened yesterday. The exact total now outstanding is $9,985,283,000 Liberty bonds, in addition to about $700,00,000 of war savings stamp. Figures on the three previous loans show:

First loan—$2,000,000,000, interest rate 3½ per cent., 4,500,000 subscribers, or one to every 23 of popuation, average subscription $19 for each resident of the United States, campaign from May 14 to June 15, 1917, bonds redeemable in 30 years may be converted any time into bonds bearing higher rate of interest, issued at par.

Second loan—$3,808,766,155, interest rate 4 per cent, 10,000,000 subscribers, or one to every 11 of population, average subscription $36 per capita, campaign from October 1 to October 27, 1917; bonds redeemable in 25 years; may be converted into third Liberty Bonds before November 9; issued at par.

Third loan—$4,176,516,850; interest rate 4¼ per cent.; 18,308,325 subscribers, or one in every six of population; average subscription, $40 per capita; campaign from April 6 to May 4, 1918; bonds redeemable in 10 years; may be converted into any future issue bearing higher rate of interest; issued at par.

More than two-thirds of all war expenses in the last 18 months have been met with proceeds from Liberty Bonds and less than one-third from taxation or other ordinary sources of revenue. From the beginning of the war up to this week, the Government's actual outlay has run to nearly $19,-000,000,000 for war purposes, including loans to allies. Recently expenses have been at the rate of $1,800,000,609 monthly, and are increasing from month to month.

To provide money as it is needed the Treasury has sold billions of dollars of certificates of indebtedness, running usually about three months, and redeemable at times when instalment payments on Liberty Loan subscriptions bring in large sums. This policy, followed for the fourth loan, amounts practically to borrowing from banks and other big financial interests for short terms and refunding these obligations in Liberty Bond money.

The Treasury now plans to float two more Liberty Loans before next July. Probably $16,000,000,000 will have to be raised from the fourth, fifth and sixth loans in this fiscal year, ending July 1, 1919. In addition, the sale of war savings and thrift stamps will continue to draw into the Government coffers a hundred million dollars or more every month, it is expected.

Foch Offensive Had Vital Object

PARIS, Sept. 27.—Marshal Foch launched his offensive by Franco-American forces yesterday on a larger scale than any of his previous offensive efforts. The allied commander's new stroke should be viewed not as an isolated operation, even though it is imporant in itself, but in its relation to the whole campaign. Viewed in this way, the significance of the heavy fighting that has taken place along the outposts of the Hindenburg line from Flanders to the Aisne becomes apparent.

This fighting was not, as a superficial observer might conclude, to wrest from the enemy, by dogged effort, villages of more or less importance. It was primarily intended to force Gen. Ludendorff to keep heavy forces on that part of the front and make it difficult for him to form a fresh strategic reserve, and while keeping things moving along the western Hindenburg positions to let loose another hurricane on either side of the Argonne.

Death Sentence For Draftee at Nigara

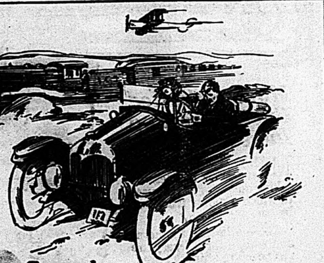
NIAGARA CAMP, Ont., Sept. 28.—The first drafted man in camp to be sentenced to death by the general court martial is John Edward Plane of the 2nd Battalion, 2nd Central Ontario regiment, whose sentence was promulgated yesterday afternoon at a garrison parade. His sentence, however, had been commuted to fifteen years imprisonment in the penitentiary at Kingston, and this was read at the promulgatory by Captain Roy Parks, adjutant of the 2nd Battalion 2nd C. O. R. Plant is a Sinn Feiner and refused to perform military service in any capacity.

Johnston Marks, of the 2nd Battalion, 2nd C. O. R., who is a conscientious objector and refused to put on uniform, was sentenced to penitentiary for ten years

Col. J. I. McLaren, camp commandant, was in charge of the parade for the promulgation of the sentences.



More Speed More Speed More Speed

SPEED UP! Speed up! This is the slogan everywhere. In factory and warehouse, in office and store, at work and at play, it is more speed, more speed.

There are orders to be filled, and the goods must be turned out. Help is scarce, so those who are on the job must be speeded up.

The men at the head are working, yes, and worrying, strenuously. And so it is among the men and women all down the line. They must make more money, and so there are long hours of overtime.

It is this continuous strain that is breaking so many men and women, both mentally and physically. The hours for sleep and recreation are cut short, and so there is little chance for the restoration of the depleted nerve cells.

Nerve force is necessary for the healthful working of the heart, the lungs, the stomach and other digestive and eliminating organs of the body. If the nerve force is consumed in mental and physical work, in worry and anxiety and continuous nervous strain, the action of these vital organs must surely lag.

And so it is that you begin to lose appetite and relish for food. The stomach fails to digest the food because the nerve force is lacking that should control the flow of gastric juices. The liver, the kidneys, the bowels lack vigor and strength to perform their necessary functions.

You are driving the human machine too hard. Energy is being consumed more rapidly than it can be replaced. Physical bankruptcy is certain.

But what are you to do? The cost of living is high. You cannot afford a long rest.

There is a way in which the nervous system can be restored. That is by the use of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food. You can help this treatment by taking things easier. Get all the rest you can. Refuse to be worried and excited. Persist in the regular use of this great nerve restorative, and you will soon find yourself gaining in health and vigor.

If your nervous system is greatly run down a little patience is necessary at the beginning, but once you begin to feel the tingle of new energy and vigor through your system you will be encouraged to keep on with this food cure until your health and vitality is fully restored.

You are protected against imitations by the portrait and signature of A. W. Chase, M.D., the famous Receipt Book author, which are on every box of the genuine Dr. Chase's Nerve Food. 50c a box, 6 for $2.75, all dealers, or Edmanson, Bates & Co., Limited, Toronto.

73 DEATHS FROM "FLU"

GREAT LAKES, Ill., Sept. 28—In announcing that there had been 73 deaths from Spanish influenza yesterday at the Great Lakes naval training station, Capt. Wm. A. Moffat, Commandant, said that these fatalities were among cases which were taken to the hospitals when the epidemic began, and that new cases developing in the past few days show a lower death rate. Coupled with this decrease in virulence there was reported today a diminution in the spread of the disease. Physicians said the outbreak at this station has been brought under control.

Music & Drama

Theatre-goers who look to "The Bird of Paradise" to transport them periodically on the wings of super-melodrama to fair Hawaii, then to give their hearts and sympathies to Luana, the Hawaiian heroine, will have full satisfaction at the presentaton of the play at Griffin's next Thursday night. The tragic love of Luana for Paul Wilson, the young American doctor, who happens to visit her Hawaiian home, needs little explanation. Wilson, marrying the girl, falls into the langorous life of the Kanakas, and becomes daily softer in fibre. He tries to shake off the "flower covered fingers" of sunlight) that are said to steal into one's mind in these islands, but in vain. Reminded of his increasing degredation, Wilson shows the inherent yellow streak by blaming the Kanaka wife, whose love at first so attractive, becomes more and more distasteful to him. Luana, having been cast out by her own people for his sake and having tried her pathetic best to become "white lady," removes herself from her husband's path and atones for her faithlessness to her religion by sacrificing herself in the raging volcano in the hopes of placating its supposed wrath againsa her own people.

TRIPLE STAR PROGRAM

One of the best photoplay programs yet booked for Griffin's will be the triple star program with Mary Miles Minter, Wm. S. Hart, and Charlie Chaplin all on one programme, Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday. Mary Miles Minter is here is a nice picture called "Social Briars," the story of a young girl living in a very small town called "Sleepy Dalton," she becomes very tired of the grind in this very small town, until one day she suddenly discovers that life in a village can be made uite bearable where true love creeps in. The story is one that gives the charming Mary a good chance to show here ability as an actress of emotional roles and like all the Minter stories there is a touch of very human sentiment that creeps into the life of very nearly every wage earner.

Charlie Chaplin apears in a laugh provoker called "The Runabout," and as usual Charlie will give a good account of himself in his funny way.

Wm . S. Hart is here is a new picture called "Riddle Gawne" no picture has yet excelled Hart's latest. "Riddle Gawne" gives Hart the chance that he looks for to do his fine work outside the studio, the settings, all of which Hart supervised himself personally, are made in the great outdoors.

At the Palace Alice Joyce will be here is a life-like story called "The Triumph of the Weak" which takes one hour and a quarter to run and is brimful of surprises. Other good pictures will complete a very good programme of photoplays.

The Strain of Overwork

Your work is heavy, and sore, tired muscles are a common occurrence. Each time your back aches you blame it on your work, and just there the danger lies—for that pain in the back may not be from strain, as you suppose, but the forewarner of Kidney or Bladder trouble.

For your own interest, it is best to be particular and sure, as Kidney troubles inevitably pull you down and destroy your earning power.

Take note of these symptoms. Do you get dizzy and have repeated headaches, painful urination, brick dust deposits, or feel drowsy and, generally, good for nothing? If so, it is your kidneys that are bothering you—not work—and Gin Pills are necessary.

No person can work properly when they feel sick, tired and dizzy all the time. The more they try, the more energy they use up; and this only tends to aggravate their condition, as the kidneys are already tired out with their endeavors to relieve their congested state and perform their function properly.

The kidneys are delicate and vital organs; once they become affected through any cause—you suffer until the congestion is relieved and the cause remedied.

Don't let your system become run down. A box or two of Gin Pills will relieve those kidney complaints and restore your old-time health and strength.

Your health is priceless. Don't risk losing it. Keep your kidneys in order always by taking Gin Pills.

Sold everywhere for 50c a box. Write for free sample to The National Drug & Chemical Co., of Canada, Limited, Toronto, Ont. 172

The value of gifts was $30.02 and the amount of cash contributed $12.00, making a total of $40.02.

It has been found necessary to improve the elevator at the hospital by installing an electric motor, as the water power is inadequate. This will cost nearly three thousand dollars.

The road in the hospital grounds has been improved as the water running down from the main road was undermining the front foundation of the hospital. The city engineer supervised the work at the request of the Board to the Mayor, and it is satisfactory. This will cost about five hundred dollars.

Famous Pass over the Rockies

WHEN Sir George Simpson, in 1841 made his overland journey round the world, in the interests of the Hudson's Bay Company, no region impressed him with its sublimity and wild grandeur more than the ridge of the Rockies between the prairies and the Upper Columbia Valley. The pass by which he crossed this ridge still bears his name and is used by a few of the more adventurous tourists, but still more by Alpine climbers with ambitions to scale Mount Assiniboine, a pyramidal monarch of nearly 12,000 feet high. The description of this pass across the Great Divide is contained in the journal written by Simpson. After crossing the Bow, following one of its tributaries which is evidently Healy Creek near Banff to the southeast of Mount Brett, he says: "We were surrounded by peaks and crags on whose summits lay perpetual snow; and the only sounds which disturbed the solitude were the crackling of prostrate branches under the tread of our horses, and the roaring of the stream as it leaped down its rocky course.

"About seven hours of hard work brought us to the height of land, the hinge as it were between the eastern and western waters. We breakfasted on the level isthmus, which did not exceed fourteen paces in width, filling our kettles for this one lonely meal at once from the crystal sources of the Columbia and the Saskatchewan, while these willing feeders of two opposite oceans, murmuring over their beds of mossy stones, as if to bid each other a long farewell, could hardly fail to attune our minds to the sublimity of the scene.

"But between these kindred fountains, the common progeny of the same snow wreaths, there was this remarkable difference of temperature, that the source of the Columbia showed 40°, while that of the Saskatchewan raised the mercury to 53½°, the thermometer meanwhile striking as high as 71° in the shade.

Line of the Great Divide Separating Alberta and British Columbia.

"From the vicinity of perpetual snow, we estimated the elevation of the height of land to be seven or eight thousand feet above the level of the sea, while the surrounding peaks appeared to rise nearly half that altitude above our heads.

"In addition to the physical magnificence of the scene I here met an unexpected reminiscence of my own native hills in the slope of a plant, which appeared to me to be the very heather of the Highlands of Scotland. I carried away two specimens which, however, on a minute comparison I found to differ from the genuine staple of the brown heaths of the land o' cakes."

The Simpson Pass is now used chiefly by sportsmen, who find this a convenient way of reaching the wonderful hunting grounds of the Kootenay Valley from Banff, the chief outfitting point in the Canadian Pacific Rockies. The route is also being used by the more adventurous tourists who desire to go camping and fishing on a week or fortnight's trip instead of taking their vacation in a more leisurely way near the big hotels. One such party of tourists made the trip last July, finding the pass very much freer from snow than they had been led to believe from Sir George Simpson's description. Indeed, it was an Alpine meadow, on which the horses found sweet and ample pasture. The panorama of the British Columbia mountains was particularly fine. A stone boundary mark signifies the line of the Great Divide between Alberta and British Columbia.

Jim Brewster, the cowboy king of the Rockies, discovered a few years ago, the trunk of a tree on which Sir George Simpson's guide had left their mark. This section of the tree was cut out so as to preserve it from further decay and is now a treasured relic in the Brewster Museum.

TIGHT-WAD BILL

Some people who cannot see the wisdom of having their shoes repaired should think about this tale of Tight-Wad Bill:

Said Tight-Wad Bill to Doctor Jones.
"I've got an aching in my bones."
Said Doctor Jones to Tight-Wad Bill,
"You got wet feet and took a chill'
And ten dollars is my little Bill."

Then Tight-Wad with a heart of lead,
Thought of just what Henley said:
"Our very finest soles of leather
"Will defy the strongest weather,
And Will save you from being ill,
Two dollars only is my bill."

Have your shoes repaired at John Henley's, Shoe Repairer, Foot Bridge-gangway, Phone 609. 23 6t

The Broken Tie

By Clair Ellsworth Kingsley

Gurdon Espey, ringmaster of Silley's Great Circus, flecked the ear of a water boy who had stumbled over a rope with the tip of his long-lashed whip, and gave the urchin a quarter to mend his bawling. He caught a stake man drinking out of a bottle, seized the offending vessel and smashed it against a plank.

"You're discharged, no tippling here!" roared the neat and nifty king of the sawdust circle.

"Ought to have known better," remarked a hustler to the culprit. "He's dead down on the hard drink. They say he goes clear around a block to keep from passing a saloon, he hates them so. Espey is a queer one—bet he's had a history."

Yes, Gurdon Espey had a history, and it had climaxed in making him the odd makeup of humanity he was. [illegible] and severity were strangely mixed with the most generous of instincts. And then he would become angry if the remotest reference was made to these wayward impulses.

"Oh, mister!—can we speak a word with you?" hailed the ringmaster as he came outside of the big tent, and Espey turned, with his habitual scowl, as he confronted by twelve boys ranging in age from eight to twelve years; their leader acting as spokesman.

"What is it?" he snapped out, always on the suspicious alert for applications for free passes, runaways anxious to join the circus, cut-rate nuisances, and the like.

"We want to know if we can hire your clown?"

"Well, that's good!" decided the ringmaster. "What for now?"

"Our circus."

"Oh! a rival in the field, hey?" rallied Espey. "And where may this circus [illegible] be?"

"[illegible] in a lot, next to Mrs. Daniels' house," was explained hurriedly, and with a certain spice of pride. "You see, mister, little Eva Daniels has been sick for a long time. Now she's just [illegible] up. And we all love her [illegible], and it's her birthday, and we want to give her a surprise."

"She's a fairy!" piped up a little fellow [illegible]."

"No, she's just an angel!" supplemented a companion.

"We've made a sawdust ring just [illegible], only a tiny one," went on the spokesman of the party. "We've got quite a program. I swallow a sword. Dick Brown does some somersaults. Ned Bates walks a clothesline tight rope. Of course, they're poor [illegible], so we want to hire your clown for about an hour, to make Eva laugh and feel good."

"Do you happen to know how much clowns cost?" interrogated the ringmaster.

"No, sir, but we've got six dollars and fifty cents amongst us. You see, we [illegible] from our parents to [illegible] your circus tonight, and poor little Eva can't be moved this far, so we put our money together to hire the clown, and give Eva a real good [illegible]."

"[illegible] thing," growled Espey, [illegible] to pass on his way, when out [illegible] that deluged a jolly-faced [illegible].

"Who says it?" rollicked the same. "[illegible], boy friends getting up a show for the little lady? What time does this greatest show on earth come [illegible]?"

"Two o'clock, sir," explained the spokesman of the group. "Oh, I hope you can come!"

"Come? I wouldn't miss it for fifty dollars! I'll be there in regular trim, and my trick donkey, Napoleon Bonaparte, and my little girl—for I've got one, bless her—in her gold chariot, [illegible] two milk-white ponies. I should say it! Don't worry, Espey," [illegible] the clown, waving a reassuring hand to the ringmaster. "It don't cost you anything, and the stunt will be a famous advertisement for our own show [illegible]."

Mrs. Alice Daniels was one of the poorest persons in the town, but everybody liked her and respected the modest, ladylike seamstress who had come to the little village a few years previous. As to little Eva, the widow's child, she was one of those lovely beings who weave themselves closely into the hearts of all on first sight. The [illegible] of her boy friends evidenced the power of witchery and love which the little convalescent universally inspired.

The mother had propped her up in a chair looking out upon the open lawn [illegible] beyond, telling her that her boy friends had got up a show especially for her edification. Eva was all excitement and expectancy. She was kept busy bowing and smiling and throwing kisses as "the actors" finally came into the ring. She clapped her [illegible] hands in the fullness of innocent spontaneous delight as "the star performers" of the group went through their amateur stunts.

Then Eva seemed translated into fairyland. The clown had kept his word. More than that, he had added the feature of music to the entertainment, for just as the lads had performed their share of the function, two members of the circus band, playing cornets, appeared on the scene, and, keeping march time to the march they delivered, the clown's daughter, all radiant with tulle and tinsel, drove slowly into the ring, seated in her gilded chariot, white ribbon lines guiding the two snowy ponies.

And then, the wonder of wonders for Eva, into the ring bounded the clown. Oh, but he was funny! and oh, the rapturous delight of Eva and the outside audience, as Napoleon Bonaparte came upon the scene, the gifted, trick mule who chased his master in a circle, toppled him over the ropes, threw him off his back and danced about him on his own hind feet!.

Never was so much delight crowded into the space of a single hour, and the child wonder of the white ponies came into the room where Eva was, and kissed her, and presented her with a great overflowing bag of peanuts, pop corn and candy, and the clown made a speech to Eva's "actor" friends, and the air rang with the acclamations of the juvenile group.

"So you're back from your grand philanthropic excursion, are you?" hailed the ringmaster, as the clown reappeared on the circus grounds.

"Yes, what's your interest, Espey?" challenged the clown keenly. "Say, you're not by any means the gruff old bear you pretend to be, and if you had seen all the good a little attention to the poor and lowly has worked out, you'd come out of that close shell of yours. Look here, I've given a pass to that odd dozen amateur actors for tomorrow night. See that it's honored, will you?"

"What about the six-dollars and fifty cents? Of course you got that."

"Sure I did," acknowledged the open-hearted clown frankly, "and added as much more to it, and donated the whole of it to buy an invalid chair for the little miss," and then he was quite amazed at the persistency of the ringmaster in betraying an interest in details of the incident of the afternoon, even to the location of the widow's home.

At dusk that evening Gurdon Espey left the circus grounds after carefully placing a bank note in an envelope. He sought out the scene of the amateur circus of the afternoon and the home of Mrs. Daniels adjoining. He was almost stealthy as he advanced up the garden path. The front door was closed, but light streamed broadly across the middle of the porch, although it was in shadow.

Espey crept up the steps on tip toe. He stooped down, drew out the envelope and attempted to push it under the door, but this set so closely shut that the interstices would not admit the envelope.

"What is it, please?" spoke a voice at the shadowed end of the porch, startling Espey quite, and straining his vision, he made out a feminine form rising from a chair.

"I fancy I am detected!" and he half laughed in an embarrassed way. "I am one of the circus men, madam, and we are all so interested in that little tot of yours, that we want to make it easier for her, and I was leaving a trifle—"

There Gurdon Espey paused. There, directly in front of the window, both had come to a halt. The full radiance from the lamplight within flooded their faces. They were stunned at the unexpected confrontment — man and wife!

"Gurdon!" died upon the lips of the woman, and she wavered and was forced to steady herself by grasping the porch rail.

"Alice!" uttered the man, and the habitual cynical expression left his face, and the glowing eyes told of a new soul aroused.

She shrank back. It was under the memory of five years previous when she had fled from this man as from a pestilence, for soul and body were given over to drink until she had feared for her life. She had hidden away from him and now—he had found her.

"Alice!" he said, his tones tremulous, but not uncertain, "since the day of your absence and that of your dear little one awakened me to a realization of my utter unworthiness, no drop of liquor has passed my lips."

"Our little one," she corrected him, for she recognized in him the regenerated man.

"May I come back?" he added, with a longing glance through the window at a little white-robed form lying on a trundle cot.

Her hands clasped, her eyes were suffused, her care-worn, but still beautiful face looked up to him trustingly, hopeful, longingly.

"Oh, Gurdon!" she sobbed, "will you come back to us?"

Dehydrated Food Products.

As food for armies in the field dehydrated products are almost ideal. One of the most important features of the food conservation movement in Germany since the outbreak of the war, a writer states, has been the practice of dehydrating fruits and vegetables and Germany's efficiency in connection with the conservation of that country's limited food resources is strikingly demonstrated by the fact that, after more than three years' isolation from the world markets upon which she formerly depended that nation still manages to feed its inhabitants.

In June, 1914, there were 480 dehydrating plants in Germany, treating annually about a quarter of a million pounds of potatoes alone. In a food conservation campaign organized at the time of Germany's first declaration of war 246 new dehydration plants were added, 190 of which were aided by government funds.

"DON'T IT JEST BEAT ALL!"

Colonel's Orderly Has an Altogether Unflattering Opinion of French Intelligence.

Red, the colonel's orderly, stood in the doorway picking his teeth. Red is six feet two inches tall, and disproportionately narrow. He is a member of a regiment recruited in the Middle West, but he hails from the Panhandle of Texas, and betrays the fact every time he opens his mouth. At the moment of our approach he was addressing an unseen and presumably a sympathetic listener beyond the threshold:

"Me, I'm plum' outdone with these here French people," I heard him drawl. "Here we've been camped amongst 'em fer goin' on four months and they ain't learnt English yet. You'd think they'd want to know how to talk to people in a reg'lar honest-to-God language—but no, seein' seemin'ly not a-tall. I'd be ashamed to be so ignerunt and show it. Course oncet in a while you do run acrost one of 'em that's picked up a word here and there; but that's about all.

"Now f'rinstance you take that nice-lookin' little woman with the black eyes and the shiny teeth that runs that there little store in this here last town we stayed a spell in before we come on up here. I never could remember the name of that there town—it was so outlandish soundin'—but you remember the woman, don't you? Well, there's a case in p'int. She was bright enough lookin', but she was like all the rest—it seemed like she jest couldn't pick up enough reg'lar words to help her git around. Ef I went in her place and asked her fer sardines she'd know whut I meant right off and hand 'em over, but ef I wanted some cheese she didn't have no idea whut I was talkin' about. Don't it jest beat all?"—Irvin S. Cobb

MANY USES FOR SANDBAG

Soldiers Employ It in a Number of Ways Besides What It Is Officially Intended For.

The sandbag is one of the most useful pieces of military equipment found anywhere and the soldier puts it to manifold uses. Their official use, of course, is to be filled with sand or clay and built into ramparts, barricades and trenches. Their unofficial uses are legion.

The infantryman always uses a sandbag for carrying and storing his rations, for patching and re-enforcing his clothing, for lining and curtaining his dugout, for muffling mallets and stakes when putting up wire in No Man's Land. They make excellent gaiters, being tied on over the puttees as a further protection against mud and damp. They make cozy mufflers in bad weather. They are used to cover shrapnel helmets to prevent reflection, and they are frequently in demand for rifle covers.

Many soldiers always [illegible] two sandbags over their feet and legs when going to bed in billets; in other words, the sandbag is Tommy's pajamas. The warmth and comfort of a burlap sandbag when pulled over chilled feet is astonishing.

The postman's mailbag at the front is nothing more than an empty sandbag, and the water carriers also use two sandbags, slung back and front over the shoulder, each containing a petrol tin full of water.

"The war will be over," a soldier wit once said, "when all of Belgium and France has been put into sandbags."

Birds Finally Agreed.

A family of robins and a family of bluebirds are occupying the same house, something quite unusual in bird lore, E. M. Cashman, caretaker of the Altoona (Pa.) reservoir, has reported.

Mr. Cashman has erected a number of bird boxes on the watershed and he watches over his charges lovingly. When Papa and Mamma Bluebird came north this spring they were horrified to find their usual cozy birdbox was occupied. That is, a pair of robins, arriving a week earlier, had started to build a nest on the tiny porch of the house. A wordy battle started, which lasted for several days. The bluebirds wanted the robins to move.

The robins maintained their position. And then, quite suddenly, hostilities ceased. Investigating, Mr. Cashman found the bluebirds were building a nest inside the box, while the robins made themselves comfortable on the porch. Then both mothers sat on a nest of eggs.

Discouraged.

"I've given up trying to keep a hired girl."

"What's the matter?"

"I've come to the conclusion that when it comes to paying wages I can't compete with a munitions factory."

Heat Sufferer.

"Suffer much from the heat?"

"I should say so. Nearly had a sunstroke rushing around to lay in next winter's coal."

Kitchener was right

when he said—

"Either the Civilian population must go short of many things to which it is accustomed in times of peace or our armies must go short of munitions and other things indispensable to them."

NOW, the only way we can possibly live up to that obligation is by going without in order that our soldiers may have. For the money we waste is not money at all—it is equipment, clothing, shot and shell that are urgently needed in France.

By denying ourselves, therefore, we enable Canada to procure to the fullest extent the materials and labor which she and our Allies need for the successful prosecution of the war.

What happens when we fail to save?

A pull on labor by the Government in one direction and a pull on labor by the people in the opposite direction. Hundreds of millions of dollars are of no use to the country if goods and services can be secured only to the extent of eighty millions of dollars. So we must do everything in our power to release both goods and labor for the purposes for which Canada needs them.

WHETHER it be food, coal, wool, steel, leather, labor or transportation, the result in all cases is the same. Whoever competes with the nation by freely satisfying his own desires, selfishly appropriates to his own use that which is so urgently required for our fighting men in France.

For the sake of your country and the boys "over there," spend cautiously. Think of what Lord Kitchener has said, and ask yourself first, "Is this something I really need or can I do without it?"

Pandora Range Reservoir is and does—

One thing a hot water reservoir should do—heat water.
And one thing it should be—easy to clean.
The Pandora flue system does the one—heats the water by carrying a continuous steady volume of heat to and along the length and depth of the reservoir.

The Pandora reservoir is easy to clean because it is seamless porcelain—enamelled white, with round ends. It can be lifted out with ease and washed as readily as a vegetable dish.

Different from the old-time, dark, built-in metal "tank" that had to be emptied with a dipper and cleaned by guess.

But the reservoir of the Pandora Range is modern, convenient, sanitary and good to look at, just like the Pandora is in every other way.

A Benevolent Burglar

By Ruth Alden Hayes

Noiselessly the man with a bent wire opened the gate of a rear court, cautiously he crossed the stone-paved yard. He glanced up at the handsome mansion looming before him. It was dark and deserted looking. The intruder fumbled for a tool in his pocket, pushed back a door and was within the house.

Burglar Bill Dorsey, if you please—reformed. It did not look that way, but, while the old crafty tricks were brought into force and professional skill exerted to the utmost, he was innocent as a child as to the notion and purpose in view in thus breaking into the house of rich Seth Payne.

Bill groped his way without a misstep, down a corridor and up a flight of stairs, for he had pursued that course only a week agone—and had got away with the swag! In his pocket at the present moment lay that same plunder, a diamond-jeweled wrist watch, a pearl necklace, two valuable rings. He could see a light coming through a keyhole.

"Thunder!" Bill expressed voicelessly. Then he took another peep. He could have guffawed, for the man within his view, kneeling in front of a safe, had on the floor beside him a hammer, a chisel and a screw driver. Bill could not refrain a chuckle at the sight of this kit.

"A rival," he muttered—"but an amateur. Being sincerely reformed, it is my duty to lead this novice out of the downward path. Hello, pal!"

With the hearty salutation, Bill pressed open the door and stepped into the room. The other, a young, handsome man of perhaps twenty-five, made a dive for a coat pocket. Bill put up the hand of vigorous remonstrance.

"Don't draw a gun, pardner," he submitted, "I'm a yegg, too."

"But I am not," declared the other.

"What are you doing here, then?" interrogated Bill pointedly.

"I am trying to get into that safe."

"I see—but you won't, with those carpenter's tools."

"Can you?" pressed the other.

"Rather," asserted Bill promptly. "That's nothing but a cheap old box. I can open it on the combination alone."

"Do it and I will pay you any price you ask," urged the young man.

"Do you belong here?" asked Bill.

"Not at all."

"Broke in, like myself?"

"Yes—there was an open window, so you might say that."

"Sorry," said Bill, shaking his head slowly, "but, as I told you, I've reformed. I've promised Kate, the sweetest girl in the world, to never turn a trick again and I mean to keep my promise."

"Then what are you doing here now?" amazedly inquired the other, who was Arthur Ridgely, and a respectable member of society, and an honest man, and free from guile as a child, but he did not tell Bill this—yet.

"Well," exclaimed Bill bluntly, "I came here to return what I took away a week ago," and he exhibited the packet. "It was my last raid. Kate said she'd never marry me unless I put it back where I found it, we'll say as evidence of my good faith in reforming."

"I see, I see," murmured young Ridgely slowly, as if struck by the oddity of the situation. "You are a good man and I see the hand of destiny in my thus meeting you. I came here like a thief in the night, I made myself amenable to the penalty for housebreaking, but influenced by a pure and holy motive."

"I hope so," said Bill dubiously. "Can you prove it?"

"Yes, I can. If you will open that safe, in the left-hand pigeonhole of the upper row you will find a green envelope. It is of no value, but immensely harmful to innocent, suffering victims. To get that paper means the freedom, perhaps the life of a reputable citizen, the happiness of an innocent, beautiful girl just budding into womanhood. Man, glorify the reformation you boast of, by doing a deed that will bring you blessings your whole life through!"

"Well, you talk like a story book," said Bill. "Say, I'm interested. A regular romance."

"And a tragedy—unless I get that paper."

"All right," nodded Bill definitely, after a moment of thought. "I'll help you out. Here's the bargain. I open that safe. I take out a green envelope, nothing more. You are not to touch a single thing. We leave here and you convince me that you need that envelope for a good purpose before I part with it."

"Agreed—oh, gladly! gladly!" spoke the young man with eagerness.

"Stand aside and keep quiet," and Bill got on his knees before the safe. The other watched him with mingled anxiety and admiration. Bill, expert that he was, focused his acute senses of touch and hearing upon the combination disk. Click!—the tumblers grated, the steel door moved, Bill pulled it open. There was bold, bank notes, bulky securities in view, but both passed them by as dross. Bill located the pigeon hole indicated and pulled it open.

"Is that it?" he questioned, drawing out a green envelope.

"Yes, it must be," said Arthur Ridgely.

"Gather up your truck, then, and let us get out of here while the getting is good," observed Bill tersely. He closed and relocked the safe. He placed the restored fruits of his former visit in the cabinet where he had originally found them. Bill led his companion from the place and left no traces of the double nightly visitation behind them.

"Now, then, for a confab," he observed, as they finally reached the street.

"Where shall we go?"

"Oh, some quiet restaurant," said Bill, "anywhere except a drinking joint. Those are the traps that led me to become what I was. Now, then, let's have the dope," he added ten minutes later, as he and the strange new friend he had made were seated in a secluded corner of an eating room.

"I am Arthur Ridgely," spoke Bill's companion promptly, "reasonably well off and engaged to marry a beautiful young lady. The man whose house we visited tonight admired her, demanded her hand in marriage. Her father was an old business associate. The other held a great power over the father of—oh, I will speak her name, Angela. The possession of a document in that green envelope enabled its holder to disgrace, perhaps imprison Angela's father. To evade the same, broken heartedly she turned me adrift, sacrificing herself to save her father."

"The father had gone wrong, eh?" submitted Bill bluntly.

"Not in a criminal sense. In order that a large but failing business might be reorganized, he took upon himself the risk of an irregularity. He saved the business and no real wrong was done. That was years ago. I learned the truth from his lawyer, who has visited the wretch who held the document, saw it, noticed where he put it in the safe. Now his fangs are drawn, and oh! the relief, the happiness for those I love."

"Take it," said Bill impulsively, and handed the green envelope to Arthur Ridgely.

"I want your address," said the latter, fairly trembling with emotion.

"My city one changes tomorrow, for I am going to get married and leave for a pretty little place in the country," and Bill gave the details as to name and location.

One month later Bill was whistling a cheery tune in the rear yard of his new home, and his happy-faced wife was singing as she bent over the washtub under a flowering cherry tree. Abruptly an automobile turned from the road, halted and Arthur Ridgely sprang out.

"Dear friend!" cried the exuberant young man, seizing Bill's hand in a fervor of joy. "We haven't forgotten you."

"My wife," spoke Bill proudly, nodding to the smiling lady at the clothesline.

"Two brides! Angela," called Ridgely, and she alighted from the machine.

"Good friend, indeed!" she cried to Bill. "You darling!" she directed at Mrs. Dorsey, as she threw her arms around her neck and kissed her.

"You look very happy here, Mr. Dorsey," observed Ridgely.

"Happy!" cried his buxom wife. "He's whistling at his work all day long and I have to sing to keep from crying for joy."

"It's just paradise," declared Bill. "We've got a lease on the little place for ten dollars a month and a promise of the use of five acres adjoining."

"You needn't pay any more rent," said Ridgely, and he extended a folded document.

"What's that?" questioned Bill.

"It's a deed to the house and lot and the five acres, free and clear—a belated wedding present, Angela's and mine," was Arthur Ridgely's reply.

Can't Beat the Kiddies.

Children are the original keepers of the shrine of humor, says a writer in the Washington Star.

I have an intellectual friend, who has analyzed h-u-m-o-r from h to r, and knows more about it than real philosophers. He says humor is based on cruelty, or incongruous happenings and a lack of reason.

The reason children are always saying funny things is because they are often cruel and do not reason, he says.

I don't believe all humor is summed up so, but certainly the following scrap of conversation overheard the other day would tend to bear out his statements:

Two small girls were "playing house" in an apartment house hall.

"Good morning, Mrs. Jones. I just came over to see you," said Mrs. Smith (seven years old).

"Oh, I'm so glad to see you," replied Mrs. Jones (eight years old). "How are you?"

"Oh, Mrs. Jones, I'm in such trouble," sighed Mrs. Smith. "Mr. Smith just died."

"That's too bad," commiserated Mrs. Jones. "Poor Mrs. Smith!"

"But the funeral isn't until three o'clock," said poor Mrs. Smith, "so we've plenty of time to go to the movie show."

When He Quit.

A woman having occasion to go to a small cleaning and dyeing establishment, where she had not been for some months, was surprised to find the store occupied by an entirely different line of business. Going inside, she asked the new shopkeeper why Schmidt had moved away and where he could be found. "Schmidt?" he replied. "Oh, he died and went out of business two months ago."

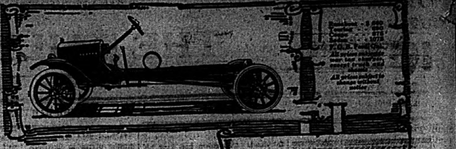
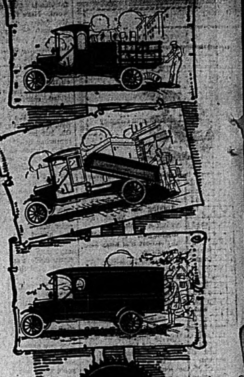
Many a third man gives another credit for his own ideas because he isn't quite sure of their merit.

The trouble with many a young man is that he spends his fortune before he gets it.





More Satisfied Customers and Increased Profits

MANY storekeepers extend their business by taking advantage of the uses to which a motor truck can be put.

Those who use the horse and wagon for delivery are restricted to a limited area. But the merchant who owns a truck can cover many times the area possible by horse and wagon. He is able to increase his list of customers without interfering with the service he renders nearby customers. A rural delivery route can be added or lengthened. His loads can be increased. His service is improved while his costs are reduced.

The Ford One-Ton Truck Chassis fitted with a stake, express, or closed body will fill every requirement of the merchant. The Ford Truck is of service in all weathers.

STRENGTH OF NATION

SOME FACTS SECURED BY COUNTRY'S REGISTRATION.

Figures Show That 94.4 Per Cent. of People Registered — There Is Much Labor Available, and Hundreds of Thousands of Canadians Possess Farm Experience, According to Returns.

A TOTAL registration of considerably in excess of 5,000,000, including several hundred thousand men trained in agriculture, but at present otherwise engaged, are the striking features of the interim report of the Registration Board which, under the direction of Senator Robertson took a man-power registration of Canada on Saturday, June 22.

"Registration," says the report, "has demonstrated beyond question that we have in Canada an abundant supply of labor, experienced in farming and willing, upon request, to devote itself to farming, but which is at present employed in other occupations. In the Provinces of Ontario and Manitoba alone there have been secured and placed in the hands of county committees, by means of registration, the names of over 140,000 men all with some training in agriculture, but for the present otherwise employed, whose services are available as harvest hands, should they be required.

"If the cards from all parts of Canada were thoroughly scrutinized for farm prospects the labor shown to be available would probably prove conclusively that, despite the large number of men who have left the farm for 'overseas' service, we still have a force with which we can maintain our production at its present level or even increase it if necessary."

The report states that as a result of the registration the board could in the national interest mobilize labor quickly towards any form of production.

"Were the unexpected to happen," says the report, "and were the United States to serve notice upon us that in ten days all exports of soft coal to Canada would be asolutely cut off, in less than three days we could furnish the Government with the names and present addresses of every man in the country experienced in coal mining, but not now employed thereat, provided always he had declared to that experience on his registration card."

The following table of unrevised figures gives the total registration by provinces, but not including the registration which has since been effected through post offices:

| | Male. | Female. | Total. |
|---|---|---|---|
| N. S. | 150,075 | 158,514 | 308,589 |
| N. B. | 109,835 | 113,153 | 222,988 |
| P. E. I. | 25,395 | 28,294 | 53,689 |
| Que. | 611,835 | 615,589 | 1,337,424 |
| Ont. | 908,594 | 955,148 | 1,863,742 |
| Man. | 162,096 | 155,351 | 317,447 |
| Sask. | 239,512 | 177,822 | 417,334 |
| Alta. | 180,885 | 136,517 | 317,402 |
| B. C. | 184,527 | 130,892 | 315,219 |
| Ttls | 2,572,754 | 2,471,280 | 5,044,034 |

It will be observed that while the number of females registered exceeds the males in the east, the reverse is the case west of the Great Lakes.

The report contains a table showing the extent to which the law was compiled with on June 22. The estimated population of the Dominion of 16 years and over is 5,426,336, of whom 5,044,034, or 92.0 per cent., registered. In Alberta the registration equalled the estimated population, while in Saskatchewan the estimate was exceeded. By provinces the percentage of registration is given as

Nova Scotia, 86.7; New Brunswick, 90.6; Prince Edward Island, 88; Quebec, 89.1; Ontario, 95.6; Manitoba, 92.5; Saskatchewan, 105.8; Alberta, 100; British Columbia, 81.6.

Substantial registration has been effected through the post offices. Since registration day to August 15 the cards actually received numbered 85,624. Since then further shipments have come in which are not yet counted, but which will easily bring the post office registration up to 115,000.

"This," says the report, "added to the figures reported for June 22, enables us to report a total registration of 5,159,000, or 94.4 per cent. of the estimated maximum, to say nothing of the probability that this will be scaled up still further in view of the fact that for the first half of August the post office returns averaged 3,500 cards per day."

The report states that up to August 15 the number of lost certificates reported was 9,329, and observes that "the law as regards notification of marriage and change of address is probably not being observed as well as it should, due, no doubt, to ignorance."

Dealing with the matter of opposition to registration, the interim report says:

"In portions of Quebec the Board's troubles were of a somewhat more serious character. There the opposition to registration was traceable not so much to ignorance as to false information, and indications were not lacking that in some instances false information was deliberately spread by persons who, if they did not know the truth, could plead ignorance of it only because they had purposely closed their ears to it."

Indians Aid Harvest.

Twenty-five Indians from Ontario, some of whom have never been in a large town or city, have arrived in Regina to aid in harvesting the crop, and are working at the rate of $3 a day for some of their red brethren on the Indian reserves.

Some women's idea of being strenuous is to belong to seventeen different societies for the suppression of things.

GROUP COLONIES.

A Social Danger That Our Young Nation Must Face.

What will be our attitude towards the foreigner when the war is over? Will we continue to encourage the establishment of colonies of foreigners, or will we profit by the experience of the United States and our country? If we continue the policy Canada will assuredly see the day of remorse and regret.

Hark back to the time before the war. Immigrants poured in by the hundreds of thousands annually, and we paid slight heed to them after they came. We did not care whether they lived in colonies, speaking their native language to the exclusion of English, or whether they sunk themselves in the slums of cities, or mingled with the English-speaking peoples.

Our governments, both Liberal and Conservative, encouraged the policy of segregation, and thus over the western prairies we find whole sections of country, the population of which scarce know a word of English. Their schools were employed to perpetuate the traditions and language of the land of their parents. Canada to them meant nothing except a place where they could have free what they could not acquire in their home land in a hundred years—land and the freedom to earn a living unhampered by back-breaking taxes and rents.

The Government or, rather, the politicians making up the Government, encouraged this condition, because each settlement was a pocket of votes for the party in power in that particular province and also for that party's candidates in Federal elections. The foreigner was a sure bet for the politicians, and battles raged around and in those colonies for possession of the vote. The same condition prevailed in the United States, and one section of lovers of a foreign land caused that country the deepest concern and had its politicians on the jump until the true American asserting himself forever put the danger of foreign domination on the scrap heap. The German sympathizers, by every possible means at their command, tried to seize the political fate of the United States and thus give their Fatherland virtual control of the country, for that is what it would have meant had the conspiracy succeeded. But fortunately for the country and the world at large the scheme was not a success.

We do not have to go far from home to bring back recollections of the struggles put forth by politicians to secure the block vote of foreign residents who had been naturalized by the hundreds on the eve of an election. Possibly the danger attending such a condition did not strike us as it will now, when there is cause to consider the situation as it presents itself in war time. One thing is certain: Whatever our immigration policy may be, one of its features should certainly be discouragement of the plan of segregation. There are men and women of foreign birth in Canada who are so closely akin to the native and British-born that they take up their full share of citizenship at the earliest possible moment. They do not nest together, but acquiring the language of the country, hasten to become a part of the life of the nation. Such men and women readily and rapidly absorb the national aims and views, nor lend themselves to forward the personal ambitions of politicians.

Whether the politicians will have learned a lesson and are ready to apply it remains to be seen. — Pat Arthur, News Chronicle.

Lost Effect.

A certain Canadian officer was often teased about a short talk he gave his men one night that did not turn out to his liking. In his little talk he outlined the lives of some well-known men who had risen from the ranks solely by their perseverance and determination. He urged his own men to put more life in their work. He said to them:

"Boys, what you all need is just that little four-lettered word that is on the door you entered by. If you possess that you will succeed. Do you know the word I mean? That's right, 'Push.' Put lots of 'push' in your work, and you are bound to rise."

The boys took the little talk to heart and adopted the word "Push" for their motto, until an observant fellow noticed one day that the door referred to opened in the opposite direction, and consequently the four-lettered word it bore was "Pull." And the captain's little talk was wasted.

Women Keep Lighthouses.

Women are entering in this time of war many occupations hitherto monopolized by men. Miss C. Dixon, of Rosseau, Ont., and Mrs. Leo Melanson, of Church Point, N.S., are the first in Canada, however, to enter the lighthouse service. Miss Dixon, who is 21 years of age, has just been selected by the Civil Service Commission to succeed her father as lightkeeper at Rousseau. Mrs. Melanson, who is a widow, has been appointed lightkeeper at Church Point, N.S. It was found by the Civil Service Commission that the salaries paid in these positions were not large enough to attract men applicants in the present time of labor shortage.

Crooks Worked Scheme.

A brand new get-rich-quick scheme unfolded at Vancouver called for a carpet sweeper as the principal prop. Canvassers represented that for $2 they would transform any ordinary carpet sweeper into a vacuum cleaner. The sweepers were taken away, returned freshly varnished, and the money collected. The injunction was given not to use them for a few days "until the glue had well set." In the two or three days the gang had fled. The vacuum is in the pocketbook of the trustful ones.

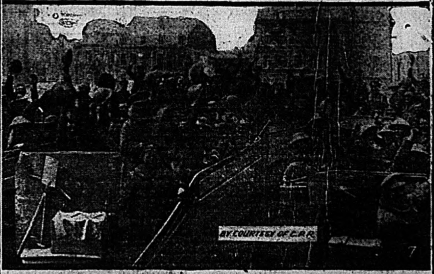
Travelling on a Narrow Gauge in France and Belgium



BY COURTESY OF C.P.R.

British Official Photograph—Crown Copyright Reserved.

THE light railway has contributed greatly to the success of the Allies' operations in France and Belgium.

The narrow-gauge is the "friend" of the tired soldiers coming out of the front line trenches after a long time knee-deep in mud and slime.

The narrow-gauge, in the building of which many Canadian Pacific Railway engineers and "gangers" have contributed, has been a real boon to the armies on the western front.

Every returned soldier speaks in terms of praise of the work carried out by the Canadian railroad troops.

I remember well one particular night travelling over the narrow-gauge because my horse could not be located, to reach the battalion billets. I had been acting as adjutant this trip, and the medical officer and I decided to "go out" of the line after the departure of the men who were to be relieved early in the evening by another battalion of our brigade. Well, we had planned that our horses be at a certain point at the foot of Vimy Ridge at a certain hour. But the Quartermaster's orders to the grooms miscarried—unknown to us.

About two o'clock in the morning we, the medical officer and I, left the trench system and made for the point decided upon, and where our horses were to be waiting for us. But we could find no trace of horses belonging to our battalion.

After waiting around under shell fire for half an hour or so, we decided to "carry on"—to walk to the billets, some 10 miles away.

Well, we dragged our weary limbs along and climbed to the top of Vimy Ridge, hoping to find our horses the other side. But we were surely out of luck that night. Every other battalion had horses there waiting for the battalion staff, but ours could not be located.

There was but one thing to do then—walk! We did not at all relish the idea and curses long and strong were showered on the missing grooms.

But after a time, down in the valley, we struck that wonderful little road—the narrow-gauge. My, our hearts were cheered somewhat, but was there any train running at that hour of the morning? we asked one another.

So, instead of striking the road again, we took a chance and continued along the narrow-gauge tracks towards the junction. After a time, we heard voices and a party of men, marching on the road, struck the track and were soon hurrying along towards the junction we were heading for.

We hailed the officer in charge and we ascertained that they were late for their train, but hoped that a train had been held up. Well, the medical officer and I hurried along behind the party and half an hour's tramp along the track brought us to the junction, and what did our hearts good was the sight of a miniature train still alongside the platform—ready to pull out!

We did not think any more about the horses gone astray, but climbed immediately into the rear truck, where we found some of our own men who had reached the junction after the main body of the battalion had "pulled out" for billets.

We sure did bless the narrow-gauge that night, for a tramp of another eight miles after a tiresome tour in the line with little sleep would not have improved our already very ruffled tempers.

Soon we were away, the little engine "puff-puffing" away in great style along the valley—to rest!

I did not take long to settle down in the truck. All the trucks on these narrow-gauge roads are open, as they carry troops and munitions, and supplies. But a Standard Sleeper on the C. P. R. could not have been more inviting under the circumstances. The night was cold and I was overheated by the tramp over the ridge with all kinds of paraphenalia strapped on to me, but, notwithstanding, I curled up in a corner of the truck and soon was fast asleep! Tired, but happy, and dreaming of loved ones for away across the Atlantic.

When I woke, day was breaking, and I was cold and stiff, but the engine was stiill puffing away. We were out of the valley and rumgling along familiar spots which made us feel good, for we were nearing our place of rest.

At last a dry spot to stretch our legs! All due to the narrow-gauge—built by Canadian railwaymen!—E. C. R.

ARMISTICE ARRANGED WITH BULGARIA ON TERMS SUBMITTED BY ALLIES

BULGARIAN PARLIAMENT RATIFIES REQUEST

DEMOBILIZATION OF BULGARIAN ARMY, COMPLETE RUPTURE WITH [illegible] AND TURKEY AND EVACUATION OF ALL OCCUPIED TERRITORY OUTSIDE OF BULGARIA INCLUDED IN TERMS OF ARMISTICE—BULGARIA ANXIOUS FOR PEACE AND AGREES TO TERMS SUBMITTED BY ALLIES AS NECESSARY PRELIMINARIES TO ANY AGREEMENT.

Special Despatches [illegible] Intelligencer, Canadian Press, Limited.

PARIS, Sept. 30.—An armistice [illegible] concluded between the Allies and the Bulgarians on the Allies' own terms.

THE HAGUE, Sept. 30.—The Bu[illegible] has approved Premier Ma[illegible] for an armistice and delegates were sent to the frontier, according to despatches received here today.

TEXT OF BULGARIAN [illegible]ENT.

LONDON, Sept. 30.—An official Bulgarian statement, dated September 24, announces that Bulgaria has initiated a proposition for obtaining an armistice and peace.

The text of the official announcement reads:

"In view of the conjuncture of circumstances which have recently arisen, and after the position had been jointly discussed with all competent authorities, the Bulgarian Government, wishing to put an end to the bloodshed, authorized the Commander-in-Chief of the army to propose to the Generalissimo of the armies of the Entente of Saloniki, a cessation of hostilities and the entering into of negotiations for obtaining an armistice and peace.

"The members of the Bulgarian delegation left yesterday evening in order to get into touch with the plenipotentiaries of the Entente belligerents."

The Allies' terms have already been sent to Sofia. They include:

Evacuation of all territory outside of Bulgaria as a preliminary to any agreement.

Complete rupture with Germany, Austria and Turkey.

Demobilization of the Bulgarian army.

PARIS, Sept. 30—Bulgarian representatives have agreed to an armistice and probably the first step in the negotiations will be Bulgaria's withdrawal from the alliance with the Central Powers. It is a few days less than three years since Bulgaria entered the war on the side of Germany. It was on October 8th 1915 that Bulgaria issued the manifesto announcing the decision to cast her lot against the Entente alliance. She had been fifteen months in deciding the course in the manifesto issued at the time of her entrance into the ranks of the central powers. The Bulgarian government declared that her trade interests and economic rights were inseperably bound up with Turkey and Germany and Austria. It was added that Germany had offered Bulgaria in return for her neutrality the whole of Macedonia, including Uskub, Monastir and Ochrida, and a still greater territorial expansion at the expense of Serbia was said to have been offered as condition of active military assistance.

Unconditional Surrender

LONDON, Sept. 30.—Reuter's states that Bulgaria's surrender was unconditional. The Serbian legation received announcement of the Bulgarian surrender.

Will Occupy Bulgaria

PARIS, Sept. 30.—It is believed here that one condition of the Allies in granting an armistice to Bulgaria is the complete occupation of Bulgaria by allied troops, with the assistance the Bulgarian Government.

Spanish "Flu" Invades Toronto

Hundreds of Cases Develop, But All of a Mild Form

TORONTO, Sept. 30—The so-called "Spanish influenza" which has been very prevalent in the United States and Eastern Canada for some weeks past, has apparently invaded Toronto in a very mild form. To all appearances hundreds of cases have developed during the past three of four days, but no deaths have been reported from it locally. While the epidemic is very active throughout the city, it is not severe and this fact is thought to be largely due to the measures which people themselves took to avoid getting it. The largest number of cases which have so far been reported are in the Royal Air Force of which unit about 150 men are in the Base Hospital, no less than fifty being admitted yesterday.

OTTAWA, Sept. 28.—Lt.-Col. Fred White, Commissioner of the Northwest Territories, and former Comptroller of the Royal Northwest Mounted Police, which he organized, died here last night in his seventy-[illegible]. Col. White, who retired from the position of Comptroller of the R. N. W. M. P. about five years ago, had been an invalid for the past two years. He was one of the pioneers of the West after Confederation. For some years he was confidential Secretary of the late Sir John A. Macdonald.

Capt. W.N. Graham's Services Recognized

Military Cross Posthumously Granted For His Gallant Leadership

BROCKVILLE, Sept. 30—Posthumous recognition of the services of the late Captain Wm. N. Graham, Canadian infantry, only son of Hon. Geo. P. Graham, has come with the granting to him of the Military Cross, a decoration awarded to officers and warrant officers for gallantry in the face of the enemy. Official announcement to this effect appears in the latest issue of The London Gazette. Captain Graham died of wounds the 22nd of May. He was severely wounded while leading a party of his battalion in a raid upon the enemy's trenches, a duty for which he had volunteered. At the time his Company Commander, Major F. S. Doughty, wrote that prior to learning of his death he had recommended Captain Graham for distinguished conduct. "The party he was in charge of," wrote Major Doughty, "unexpectedly met with strong resistance, and at one time his entire party was nearly cut off from our trenches. Captain Graham, fearless and with daring leadership, personally led his party against the enemy, and after a very hard fight successfully disposed of them. It was entirely due to his daring leadership and fearless courage that the raid was so successful.

MONTREAL, Sept. 28.—One of the liquor, 20 gallons of whiskey and 500 here, with a plant valued at $1,000, was raided by the police last night at 577 St. Urbain Street, and as a result Max Auerbach, a tinsmith, appeared in court to-day and was given a month's imprisonment and fined $200, while the plant was confiscated. The haul included 1,200 galoins of fermenting liquor, 20 galoins of whiskey and 500 pounds of sugar.

BELGIANS LED BY KING ALBERT SCORE GREAT VICTORY OVER HUNS

CAPTURE PASSCHENDAELE RIDGE AND DIXMUDE

CAPTURING 11,500 PRISONERS AND ADVANCING THEIR LINE FIVE MILES ON TWENTY-MILE FRONT—BRITISH SECOND ARMY C-OPERATING WITH BELGIAN TROOPS—ALL THE DOMINATING RIDGES IN FLANDERS CAPTURED—HUN POSITIONS ON BELGIAN COAST NOW MENACED BY THE ALLIES AND ALL ENEMY DEFENSIVE POSITIONS WHICH PIVOT ON LILLE.

Special Despatches to The Intelligencer, Canadian Press, Limited.

LONDON, Sept. 30.—(Noon)—In the capture of Passchendaele Ridge and Dixmude by the Belgians, led by King Albert personally, they captured eleven thousand five hundred prisoners and advanced their line from four to five miles on a twenty-mile front.

BELGIAN VICTORY COMPLETE.

HAVRE, Sunday.—The Belgian official statement today says:—Messines-Wytschaete ridge has been occupied by British and Belgians and the Germans have been defeated in their efforts to defend the approaches to the river. British and Belgian troops on Saturday and Sunday took more than 9,000 prisoners. They also captured more than two hundred guns, some of a heavy calibre, as well as a very considerable quantity of other war material. King Albert's forces at dusk this evening were attacking the Germans at St. Pieter, on the Roulers-Menin road, and Colliemolenolk, two and a half miles west of Roulers.

LONDON, Sept. 30.—In two days we, with the aid of the gallant little Belgian army under the supreme direction of King Albert, have accomplished more than was gained in two months of bloody fighting in the battle for Passchendaele Ridge last year. We hold the whole of the Flanders ridges and dominate the plains of southern Belgium. This achievement is of vast importance, for we both threaten the enemy's hold upon the Belgian coast and we menace all his defensive systems which pivot on Lille. The enemy cannot neglect this new danger, and pressed though he is almost from the sea to Verdun, he must find the troops to meet it. Therefore it is not surprising to learn that he is abandoning the Chemin-des-Dames, and we may well see another considerable withdrawal if the bad weather does not impede our progress.

Many Prisoners.

Reuter's correspondent, dealing with the advance of the Belgians and the British Second Army in Flanders, says: The Belgians have entered Staden, (an important railway centre) and recaptured Houlthulst village. We now hold the entire West Roosebeke-Passchendaele ridge system. Thence the line of the Second Army this morning ran near Zonnebeke, Kersceiare, Zanvoorde and possibly through Houthem to Wytschaete and Messines. Up to the present the Belgians have taken over 5,000 prisoners and we have over 4,000.

Owen Sound Girl Killed When Motoring

OWEN SOUND, Sept. 30—Miss Margaret Pringle, aged seventeen, the twin daughter of the late J. C. Pringle of the Taylor-Pringle Co., of this town, was the victim in a fatal automobile accident near Markdale, Friday afternoon. With a companion, Miss Mary Mercer, daughter of Mr. Thos. Mercer, a widely-known stock breeder she left the home of the latter in an auto to go to an adjacent farm. The road was slippery from the effect of the heavy rains and the rear wheels slewed, causing the car to overturn. The top held the weight up for a few moments, but before the two occupants could release themselves it fell, crushing the life out of Miss Pringle.

BERLIN STOCK PANIC OVER BULGARS' MOVE

French Troops Resumed Attack In Champagne at Daybreak

GIGANTIC BATTLE IS RAGING OVER ENTIRE WESTERN FRONT—BRITISH TROOPS ENTER SUBURBS OF CAMBRAI—BIG BAG OF PRISONERS AND GUNS NORTH OF ST. QUENTIN.

Special Despatches to The Intelligencer, Canadian Press, Limited.

PARIS, Spt. 30.—French troops in the Champagne sector resumed their attack at daybreak today, the war office announced. The Germans violently counter attacked last night south of St. Quentin in Urvillers region in an attempt to recapture Hill 88. All these efforts were broken up by the French defence.

MANY PRISONERS AND GUNS TAKEN.

LONDON, Sept. 30.—British, American and Australian forces pushed forward last night on the front between Bellicourt and Gonnelieu in the face of the severest opposition.

Four thousand prisoners were taken by Allied forces yesterday to the north of St. Quentin and forty guns were captured there.

SUBURBS OF CAMBRAI ENTERED.

British forces have entered the northern suburbs of Cambrai.

HUNS REGAIN GROUND IN COUNTER ATTACKS

LONDON, Sept. 30.—On the front southeast of Douai the British have withdrawn from Arleux and Aubencheul-au-Bac. On the front northwest of Le Catelet German counter attacks pressed the British back to the outskirts of Villers-Guislain, while to the southwest of Le Catelet similar pressure sent Field Marshal Haig's troops back to the edge of the village of Bony.

FRENCH DRIVE PROGRESSING.

LONDON, Sept. 30.—Pushing the Germans on the front north of the Aisne, French troops today have reached the Oisne-Aisne Canal, reports from the battlefront show. They are progressing along the Chemin-des-Dames toward the east and the enemy is retreating behind the Ailette.

MAGNIFICENT ATTACK

LONDON, Sept. 29—An English division crossed the Scheldt Canal on lifebelts, mats, rafts and improvised bridges and stormed the main Hindenburg defenses around Bellengliz and captured the whole German position. Canadian troops have fought their way into the outskirts of Cambrai and beaten off heavy attacks.

American troops attacked the Hindenburg lines on a front of nearly 3 miles to-day capturing Bellicourt and Nauroy.

During the past three days the British have taken over 22,000 prisoners and over 300 guns on the Cambrai-St. Quentin battlefront.

Music & Drama

THREE STARS

Tonight at Griffin's three of the highest class movie stars will appear on the one program, Mary Miles Minter, Charlie Chaplin, and William S. Hart. Seldom has there been such a line-up of stars on one program as this one, the first picture is Mary Miles Minter in "Social Briars" dealing with the experiences of a poor girl in high society. This story is a novel one in asmuch as it does not criticise society, but endeavors to show the faults of society, not in a criticising tone, but more in a humorous way, thereby causing laughter of the wholesome sort; such laughter coming from the many funny antics of the present day members of society, and their rather odd ways of living as seen from the view point of a poo[illegible] girl. The story is a home-like one dealing with the lives of the poor and the rich in exactly the way all are living at the present time, and pointing out the many oddities of both poor and rich alike.

That funny fellow Charlie Chaplin, and it is enough to say nowadays that Chaplin will be on the program and that is a guarantee of a good half hour of fun for old and young alike. There will be the usual News Film full of news from all parts of the world.

The special picture of the evening William S. Hart in "Riddle Gawne," a western picture with plenty of western scenery and the usual amount of excitement.

STORY OF A WOMAN'S SOUL

"The Bird of Paradise" is highly skilled melodrama, elaborately staged and presented by a typical Morosco cast. The weird Hawaiian music, as usual, a feature and is rendered by the five native Hawaiians supposed to have inspired the vogue of the Sandwich Island melodies that are so popular in the United States to-day. In the present company Mr. Morosco maintains the high standard that has marked the presentation of "The Bird of Paradise" from its very beginning which no doubt accounts for its phenomenal record of capacity houses throughout the country for the past seven years. It makes a strong appeal to women as well as men, being the "story of a woman's soul laid bare" and is certain to attract the largest audience of the season. Miss Rita Romilly who plays the part of Luana, is an attractive young actress and her artistic interpretation of the princess quickly wins the sympathy of her audiences. She is ably assisted by Mr. Guy Harington, Mr. Brandon Evans, Mr. John Milton, Mr. Taylor Carroll, Mr. Royale Thayer, Mr. Charles Douglass, Mr. Edward Currier, Mr. Joseph Guttenburg, Miss Jane Haven, Miss Elba Chanler, Miss Margaret Thayer, Miss Blanche Douglas and the balance of the parts are taken admirably, so that the results are a perfect performance.

Harvest Festival Service at St. Thomas

Interesting Harvest Festival services were held in St. Thomas Church yesterday with four services at 8 a.m., 11 a.m., 3 p.m., and 7 p.m. all largely attended. In keeping with the spirit of harvest thanksgiving the church was beautifully decorated with grain, fruit, flowers and palms. The grain was the gift of the churchmen of Huff's Island, ministered to by the Rector of St. Thomas.

Communion service was held at eight o'clock followed at eleven o'clock by choral communion and sermon, Ven. Archdeacon Beamish conducted the service and the preacher was Rev. R. A. Hiltz, M.A., General Secretary of the Sunday School Commission of the Church of England in Canada. Harvest anthems and hymns were sung, the solo parts being taken by Mrs. Wheatley. The communicants numbered 205.

In the afternoon at three o'clock a union children's service was held participated in by the Sunday School scholars and teachers of St. Thomas and Christ Church, over four hundred being present. Brief and interesting addresses were given by Rev. Mr. Hiltz and Rev. Ralph S. Mason with short service and hymns.

In the evening a choral evensong service with harvest anthems and hymns was largely attended. The offerings for the day amounted to $805 and there were 205 communicants.

THIS WOMAN ESCAPED AN OPERATION

By Taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. Many Others Have Done the Same.

Troy, N. Y.—"I suffered for more than seven months from a displacement and three doctors told me I would have to have an operation. I had dragging down pains, backache and headaches and could not do my housework. My sister who had been helped by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound asked me to try it. I have taken several bottles and am now entirely well—so I do all my work—and not a trace of my old trouble. I have told many of my friends what wonderful results they will get from its use."—Mrs. S. J. SEMLER, 1650 5th Ave., Troy, N. Y.

Women who are in Mrs. Semler's condition should not give up hope or submit to such an ordeal until they have given Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound a trial.
